PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 102th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, September 17, 1992

The House met at 8:30 a.m.

O gracious God, as You have called us to be good stewards of our lives and devoted to the welfare of the people, may we be faithful to that calling and steadfast in our responsibilities.

On this day we remember the diligent work and service of our colleague and friend, WALTER JONES. We recall with appreciation his long devotion to the people that he represented and to this institution, and for his friendship and his good will toward those about him.

May Your blessing, O God, be with him and his family and may Your benediction be ever with us. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] please come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance?

Mr. DERRICK led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. After consultation with the minority, the Chair announces it will receive no 1-minute requests.

WAIVING ALL POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST S. 12, CABLE TELEVISION CONSUMER PROTECTION AND COMPETITION ACT OF 1992, AND AGAINST CONSIDERATION OF SUCH CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 571 and ask for its immediate consideration.

H. RES. 571

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (S. 12) to amend title VI of the Communications Act of 1934 to ensure carriage on cable television of local news and other programming and to restore the right of local regulatory authorities to regulate cable television rates, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read when called up for consideration.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 571 waives all points of order against the conference report on S. 12, the Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act of 1992 and against its consideration. The resolution also provides that the conference report will be considered as read.

Mr. Speaker, the Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act of 1992 protects consumers by preventing unreasonable rates, by improving the cable industry's customer-service practices, and by sparking the development of a competitive marketplace.

Briefly, the conference agreement requires cable operators in areas where there is no effective competition to provide a basic level of service at rates determined by the Federal Communications Commission to be reasonable. The FCC would also have the authority to prosecute cable providers that charge unreasonable rates.

The legislation promotes competition by prohibiting a local franchising authority from refusing to grant additional cable franchises in the local community. In addition, it prohibits cable programmers who are affiliated with cable operators from granting exclusive contracts to cable operators if the FCC determines such contracts not be in the public interest.

The legislation also requires the FCC to set certain minimum customer-service standards. Local authorities, however, would be allowed to require stricter customer-service standards if they were part of a franchise agreement.

Overall, the conference agreement on S. 12 is fair and balanced legislation that will provide increased consumer protection and promote increased competition in cable television and related markets.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 571 will allow the House to consider this conference agreement. I urge my colleagues to support the rule and the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from South Carolina for yielding me half of his time.

Mr. Speaker, I see five Members on the floor here. We are about to sock it to the users of cable television across this country, and I would advise Members if they are anywhere around their offices to turn on their TV sets and find out what is in this conference report. Nobody knows what is in this legislation except perhaps the five Members here on the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to this rule, the rule for the highly controversial Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act. This rule waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I am well aware of the strict time constraints that we are all under as the target adjournment date for the 102d Congress draws near. I think if we get out of here by October 2, there are only 8 legislative days left.

I realize that in certain circumstances it may be necessary to waive some points of order against conference reports in order to expedite matters, and I am willing to go along with that. But I have to warn my colleagues wherever they are right now at 8:30 in the morning that this conference report on the cable bill is loaded with scope violations and germaneness problems. To bend the House rules, and to rush this terribly important legislation through, is going to have dire consequences.

At the meeting of the Committee on Rules last Tuesday we had a very distinguished and very engaging panel testify on the pros and cons about this conference report. I must admit I was very impressed with what the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY], had to say in support of the rule and the conference report. They have both done an incredible amount of work on this legislation and they deserve a lot of credit. As matter of fact, they did such a good job that I voted for this bill when it was passed by the House a few weeks ago.

I was also impressed by the arguments against the conference report as conveyed by the ranking member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, my good friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], who is retiring, and the second ranking member of the committee, the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD]. But I was especially moved by the testimony of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], who I see has come to the floor.

The Committee on the Judiciary was unjustly bypassed on the highly controversial issue of retransmission consent. To add insult to injury, under this rule no debate time has been set aside for the Committee on the Judiciary, no debate time on this very, very important issue. Their testimony reaffirms my opposition to what I believe is a concerted effort by a select few around here to skirt and evade the rules of this House.

Last July, the House passed a good cable bill, and, as I just said a minute ago, I supported that cable bill, which did not contain this contentious retransmission consent provision. I supported the bill because it would reregulate the cable industry and control rates. That bill was passed with over 300 votes for it and only a handful against.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] was concerned about infringing on the Judiciary Committee's jurisdiction, and he personally went to great lengths to leave the retransmission consent provision out of his bill when it was passed by the House in July.

The Senate version, however, did include this retransmission consent provision. And now we learn that the conference report also includes this extremely controversial language.

Mr. Speaker, this is a dangerous precedent and one that I absolutely must oppose in trying to defend the committee structure that we have operated under for 200 years. The House needs to study the implications of this retransmission consent provision which, by the broadcasters' own admission, listen to this, will bring them revenues of over $1 to $3 billion. And I can tell my colleagues, if the broadcasters admit that this provision is going to bring in revenues of up to $3 billion, we can bet it is going to be double that.

I ask my colleagues, who is going to pay for that cost? Who is going to pay for that, whether it is $1 billion or $3 billion or $6 billion? I am betting my colleagues right now it will be $6 billion. Who is going to pay for it? Is the cable industry going to pay for it? No. They are not going to pay for it. The costs will be passed on to the American family that uses cable service. And I hope my colleagues are as aggravated about what has been happening as I am.

I have in my district an expanse of 10,000 square miles with 187 little villages and towns. Many of them are nestled back in the mountains. Many of them cannot get broadcasts from stations other than on cable.

I believe we need to have some regulation over the cable industry because the cable companies are a licensed monopoly. So they have to be regulated, and that is what we did in July. We passed a bill to reregulate them.

But by the same token, the broadcasters are a licensed monopoly as well who are already paid by their advertising clients, whether it is Anheuser-Busch or Ivory Soap or whomever. They have tremendous revenues coming in, revenues that pay the huge salaries of Dan Rather and Tom Brokaw in millions of dollars. They already have their revenue coming in from the monopolistic franchise issued to them by the FCC, which gives them the license to send out that signal, a legal monopoly.

I cannot go into competition and put up a television station right next to theirs, because they have the franchise. They have the monopoly. To allow them to charge a mandatory fee to the cable companies who will then pass it on to the consumers, my colleagues, is dead wrong. But we are not even going to have a chance to debate and vote on this particular issue.

This is a frightening prospect to every Member of this body, to all five of us on the floor right now. It is dangerous to set a precedent which would allow this House to pass this kind of important legislation without the remotest semblance of proper legislative procedure.

The gentleman from Texas, Chairman BROOKS, is a member of the Democrat Party, and a very respected member. He is a former marine. That is why I like him.

But the gentleman from Texas, Chairman BROOKS, came to the Committee on Rules, requesting that at least 1 hour of debate be given to his committee, the Committee on the Judiciary, so that it could alert Members about the problems retransmission consent will cause. Why would the gentleman from Texas, JACK BROOKS, come up to the Rules Committee and almost beg us for time, an additional hour to present his side of this? Because a debate time extension is consistent with the rule we adopted on the family and medical leave conference report. In that rule, we allowed 90 minutes, equally divided between three committees of jurisdiction. Remember that? That is what we did.

In this instance, while the Committee on the Judiciary was not a party to the conference, the retransmission consent provision included in the conference report is within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. And had the provision either been reported from the House Committee on Energy and Commerce or at least adopted on the floor of the House, the Committee on the Judiciary would have clearly been included as a party to the conference.

To not grant the Committee on the Judiciary the courtesy of 1 extra hour of debate, is just an outrage. It really is. We ought to be ashamed of ourselves.

It means that Members of this House are going to be voting on this legislation without the slightest idea of what it may do. An increase in monthly cable rates by as much as 20 to 30 percent is possible. That is the $6 billion I was talking about. Somebody is going to pay for that.

I have a memo distributed by the Parliamentarian's Office listing the scope violations in this bill. There are two egregious violations on pages 80 and 81. I think we all ought to read this, if we have time. Of course, there will not be any time because we do not have adequate debate time. I think every Member should think carefully, Mr. Speaker, before voting in favor of this rule that protects major violations such as those I have just mentioned. And I would just hope that if we defeat the rule, we will come back here with a rule that at least is going to allow the customary 1 hour of debate given to the Committee on Energy and Commerce and another 1 hour of debate given to the gentleman from Texas, JACK BROOKS.

Let the American people know what we are voting on. But even more important than that, let us know what we are voting on ourselves. I do not believe there are 10 Members out of 435 who know what is in this conference report.

I spent most of the night reading everything I could, and I am still confused myself. Imagine what the rest of the Members are.

Mr. Speaker, I now include for the RECORD the memo by the Parliamentarian's Office to which I referred.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY].

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I thank the Committee on Rules, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] for giving us the opportunity to debate this important issue out here on the floor in such a timely fashion.

This is without question one of the most important issues that will be before the Congress this year. It will be the most important consumer protection issue that is debated on the floor of the Congress in 1992.

As a result, the Members should pay very careful attention to the debate and to the arguments which are made from both sides of the aisle.

The Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO, the American Association of Retired Persons want a "yes" vote on the cable reregulation bill. They know that there has been an annual overcharge of $6 billion on the part of the cable industry, which has been shouldered by consumers across this country.

A vote for the cable bill today has the effect of giving a $6 billion tax cut to Americans across this country. And make no mistakes about it, when the Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO, and every elderly group in America are on one side and the cable industry is on the other side, there is no question as to whether or not rates are going to be lowered, whether or not the consumer is going to be given a break, if this legislation passes.

We accomplish a number of very important things in this legislation. We first of all create a formula which puts tight controls over the basic rates of cable in this country. We also ensure that local communities will be able to do something about the renegade cable operators in this country that take the upper tiers that consumers across this country are so familiar with and double, triple, and quadruple the rates year after year for those upper tiers.

We give now, finally, since 1984, some opportunity for local communities to appeal those rate increases. The 1984 Deregulation Act stripped local cities and towns of that right. We reinvest authority with them in order to protect consumers.

As well, we also impose for the first time since 1984 tough service standards on the cable industry. People across this country are just fed up with calling their local cable company and having that phone just ring and ring and ring. And once it is answered, waiting days and days for the cable repairman to do something about their system, about their own home set.

This bill reinvests the authority and will make it possible for consumers to have some accountability from their local cable system.

Second, what we do as well is to ensure that there will be some competition in the cable industry. Since 1984, when the Act was passed, we have been operating under a presumption that at some point in time cable companies would begin to compete against another cable company. So if we had a cable company in our town, our city, and many, many people were unhappy with it, our thought was another cable company will move into town and if we are unhappy with cable company A, cable company B would be there.

However, in 99 percent of the communities in America that have cable, there is only one cable company. Cable companies do not compete against other cable companies. If we do not buy from one cable company, that is it. We will not have cable in our local community. That is not competition.

What we do in this legislation is, we build in competition. We build in the guarantee that over the next half a decade, no longer, that there will be a massive introduction of competition at the local level so that if we are unhappy with the local cable company, we would be able to find another way in which to gain access to cable.

Third, what we do is, we ensure that local broadcasters, the same as HBO, the same as ESPN, the same as CNN, the same as any other cable programming, will be compensated from the cable industry for the use of their signal.

Remember this, every time we turn on the cable TV set right now we are paying, we are paying for the local broadcasting channels, except the money goes to the cable industry. It does not go to the local broadcasters.

What we do now is, we make sure that within that set of revenues that already exists, that revenues will now flow to the local broadcaster. The free over-the-air television that 40 percent of all Americans—and remember, 40 percent of all Americans do not even subscribe to cable, and we are seeing a constant diminution in the overall quality of that programming.

We will not continue to see the undermining of that quality at the same rate that we have seen over the last decade when this legislation passes, because we will have shored up their ability to have local news, to have locally originated programming, to have public affairs programming, to have children's programming at the local level that will go to the lower socioeconomic part of our economic spectrum that does not subscribe to cable.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARKEY. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman knows, I have great respect for him and for the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], and for the hard work they did on the bill. I agree with just about everything the gentleman said, and that is why I supported the bill that he drafted, which was passed by this House overwhelmingly a few weeks ago.

However, if what the gentleman says is true, if this conference report, with the retransmission provision in it, will reduce rates, what would happen if we took out retransmission? Would that not reduce rates even further?

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman, that is not necessarily so.

Mr. SOLOMON. If the gentleman would continue to yield, if there is a new charge put in, somebody has to pay for that.

If we take out retransmission, which creates a cost of $3 billion, that should mean a saving. That is why the gentleman does not support retransmission; he would rather see it out of this bill because he did not put it in the first place; is that right?

Mr. MARKEY. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I would say again, because there is a lot of misinformation on this subject, what we do is we ensure that no longer will the consumers of America have to rent their clicker every single month for $4 or $5. If we multiply that by 12 months, multiply it by 10 years, we are paying $600 to rent this clicker over a decade.

The same thing is true of the converter box. We ensure that we are always protected against rate gouging on the converter box. We go down this whole list, and what we do is, we dramatically reduce the cost, up to $6 billion of charges to the consumer.

What we do on the other side is, we say that the broadcasters should be compensated the same way the sci-fi channel or the comedy channel or any of the other new channels that we are trying to introduce, Nashville, all the way down the line, are reimbursed.

If they have to pay Nashville a little bit less, to pay the sci-fi channel a little bit less, to pay some of these other channels a little less in order to get revenues over to Channel 4, 5, 7, and 9 so that the local children's programming, the local news and public affairs programming that the rest of us watch on free television is there, fine.

It is meant to be within the same existing pool of money; no additional moneys that are going to the cable industry or to the broadcasters; it is the same pool of money.

There is a complete misunderstanding about this. In the course of the morning I think it is going to be quite clear that the consumers are benefitted, or else the Consumer Federation of America would not want a "yes" vote on this bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. In yielding to the gentleman from Texas, let me just read a paragraph that was in the New York Times yesterday. It quotes my good friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY]. The article says:

> The reality is probably less dramatic than either side portrays it. Representative Edward J. Markey (Democrat) of Massachusetts, the bill's sponsor in the House, said today that, "Rates would merely go up less than they would if we had no legislation altogether."

If we took out retransmission, that means they should go down. That is what we are arguing about today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON], a member of the committee.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, we are here today to debate an issue, quite frankly, that should have died in subcommittee or full committee earlier this year. The rhetoric is that we are here to try to protect the cable consumer and lower their rates. That is the rhetoric, but that is not the reality. I am on the Subcommittee of Telecommunications and Finance, and I am on the full Committee on Energy and Commerce. I have been involved with this issue for over a year.

Let me tell the Members that this bill is not about lowering cable rates, and it is not even about freezing cable rates. What the issue is really about is an economic tug-of-war between our cable owners and our over-the-air broadcasters on something called retransmission consent "Must carry."

Retransmission consent is the issue that says a television broadcaster has created a product—that is, local news—and they should have the right to negotiate with the cable system to retransmit that signal and should receive some remuneration, either financial remuneration or a special channel position or something of this kind.

"Must carry" is an idea that says if one owns a television station, the cable system must carry the signal. The Federal courts have twice ruled that "Must carry" is unconstitutional, so "Must carry" is going to be kicked out at some point, anyway.

Retransmission consent is an idea that really does need to be debated as a stand-alone issue, and I think, quite frankly, that the broadcasters have quite a bit of merit on their side. However, we do not need to reregulate the entire cable industry again to get the retransmission consent.

The facts are that since we deregulated cable in the early 1980's, the average cost per cable channel has remained constant, at about 50 cents a channel. However, the average cable system, instead of having 10 or 12 or 13 cable channels, now has 30 or 40 or 50 or 60. There has been an explosion is cable programming: TNT, CNN, the Discovery Channel, the Weather Channel, to name just a few examples. However, the average cost per channel has not gone up. It is still about 50 cents a channel.

The average cable bill today, if we do not take premium channels, such as HBO or Cinemax, is a little under $20 a month.

Mr. Speaker, the bill before us today, it is estimated, would raise rates somewhere from $2 a month to as much as $6 a month to the average cable subscriber. There is a very good article about this in yesterday's Washington Times, and I would encourage the Members of this body to read that article.

Another point: If we vote for this bill, in my opinion we are going to be in the same situation that we were 2 or 3 years ago when we had the great hue and cry to protect our senior citizens with catastrophic health care insurance. The Members of the body that were in the Chamber at that time remember how that was pitched as a proconsumer senior citizens issue. We just had to do it. So a majority of the House voted for it. Within a year the senior citizens were raising holy cain. We came back and we repealed it.

These are the letters and cablegrams that I received in my office the last day and a half from people saying, "Do not vote to reregulate cable. Do not vote to raise my cable rates." This is just 1½ days' sample.

I would encourage every Member of this body, before we vote on this bill today, to read their mail, to study the issue, and to vote "no."

□ 0900

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER].

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and in support of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to engage in a brief colloquy with the manager of this bill, the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. MARKEY.

It is my understanding that under this bill, local television stations may elect to have the right to grant retransmission consent of their signal to local cable operators or the right to signal carriage "Must carry," but not both. Is this true?

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLKMER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Missouri has an absolutely correct understanding of the legislation's intent.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield whatever time he might consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], who is the senior ranking member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, let me just say that I want to second the remarks of the previous speaker, the gentleman from Texas, when he said that this is going to drive up the costs of cable rates.

I am just going to take a minute to quote from a number of America's great newspapers on what they have to say about this particular conference report.

The Wall Street Journal today says:

> The cost of two tickets to a Broadway show is more than $100. The $5 movie ticket is a thing of the past in most cities. But is anyone calling for Federal price controls on Broadway or the movies? There just isn't anyone.

And we do not regulate the price of baseball tickets, and here we are going to be regulating now the price of what people pay for MTV, for ESPN, for Showtime and for HBO.

The Chicago Tribune looks at this legislation and says:

> Congress is wielding such a heavy hand that instead of reducing rates, it could end up costing cable subscribers.

The Cincinnati Post:

> Public discontent with cable prices hardly justifies the quasi-nationalization of a whole industry.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press:

> * * * this bill still includes provisions that are anything but consumer protection. They are, in fact, requirements that consumers subsidize cable television's competitors.

The Atlanta Journal:

> The cable reregulation bill has become a consumer's nightmare.

The Boston Globe:

> With cable companies likely to pass through any charges, consumers would be the ultimate victims of the Senate plan.

The New York Times:

> The threat is that costly regulations will force local authorities to grant large rate hikes, or force cable companies to cut service and put off investment in new service.

Colleagues in the House, we have had many experiences with regulation and deregulation and reregulation. We all remember the ICC was one of the biggest organizations in the Government. We finally deregulated the railroad industry, and we shrunk down the cost of maintaining the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the railroad industry took off and is a very successful industry today.

We had rate regulations on natural gas. We finally got rid of them, and the price of natural gas has come down.

Here we are doing exactly the kind of thing that Boris Yeltsin is eliminating in the Soviet Union: intense over-regulation of an industry. And we are going in exactly the opposite direction, and we are reregulating an industry that has been doing very well. And I think it is the wrong way to go.

The FCC tells us they do not want this responsibility. We are going to have to triple the budget of the FCC in order to give them the manpower in order to regulate every single cable station in America.

I think it is the wrong way to go. I know it is election time. I know we are all out there looking and hungry for votes. But I think the voters are in an ugly mood. There is no question about it. But this is not the way to try to get votes, because I think the voters are smart enough to recognize that reregulating this entire industry is going to raise, not lower, their cable rates.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend from South Carolina for yielding me the time. I rise in support of the rule and I rise in support of the bill. I think the conferees, with one exception, did an excellent job. That exception is the retransmission consent, which I will speak about momentarily. But otherwise, the bill is a good, solid, procosumer bill and ought to pass.

Among the reasons I support the bill, and announced my support of the bill earlier in debate here on the floor a few months ago, and also back home in Louisville and Jefferson County before the cable commission, is because this bill reintroduces local government into the ratemaking business. Since 1984, when the cable industry was deregulated, local government has been sort of, to use that term, a potted palm alongside of the table. It does not really do anything, and it cannot.

This bill gives them power to oversee the ratemaking function and to protect cable consumers.

This bill spurs competition. There is no more exclusive franchise. No longer can a local authority grant a cable operator exclusive coverage of the area.

Under the Tauzin amendment there is access to cable-originated programming, on an equal basis, given to cable's competitors. This does also open up the possibility down the line of allowing telephone companies into the cable business so that there would be further competition which generally yields better service and lower prices to the consumer.

Consumer service and consumer protection for cable subscriber are provided for in this bill. The FCC establishes these standards. Local government can make these standards tougher, but at least our people will from now on have their phone calls answered and have their billing procedures explained to them by cable companies.

The negative in the bill is retransmission consent. It could possibly be that this will lead to additional costs to the consumers because the local broadcasters could, in fact, demand payment for the cable company to carry that signal. I do not think this is a wise move. I think we will have to revisit this in the years ahead.

But on the whole, this is an excellent piece of work. I support it, and I hope this House will.

The conference report before us today is very similar to H.R. 4850, the cable reregulation bill which passed the House—with my full support—on July 23 except that it includes the Senate's retransmission consent provision language about which I have serious reservations.

The conference report allows broadcast stations to choose either that their signals be carried by the cable system under the must-carry provision, or to negotiate with the cable system over the terms and conditions under which the station's signal will be retransmitted.

In the end, retransmission negotiations between broadcast stations and cable franchise may mean the cable subscriber will pay higher fees for the signals. This goes against the spirit of the rest of the bill, which is to promote competition among and between cable, broadcasters and noncable carriers so that subscriber and viewer prices will be reduced even as quality and range of programming improves. Accordingly, Congress may have to revisit the retransmission consent provision at a later date.

But, for now, Mr. Speaker, this conference report is worthy of passage by this Congress and worthy of the President's signature into law. I hope the President does not veto this bill. But, if he does, we need to pass this reasonable and responsible consumer legislation into law over his veto.

Lastly, I wish to include in the RECORD a statement I made recently before the Lousiville/Jefferson County Cable Television Commission which I hope our colleagues find of interest.

STATEMENT OF CONGRESSMAN RON MAZZOLI BEFORE THE LOUISVILLE-JEFFERSON COUNTY CABLE TV COMMISSION

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Commission: This is the third time I have appeared before your distinguished Commission—in person or by representative—to discuss cable legislation pending in Congress and cable activities here at home. I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for according me these opportunities.

Since my last appearance much has happened at the federal level affecting cable television. But, before I discuss these activities, let me say a few words about the Louisville/Jefferson County Cable TV Commission.

Since the cable industry was deregulated by Congress in 1984, prices have soared nationally and in the Louisville and Jefferson County area. The Cable Deregulation Act was aimed at relieving the cable television industry—a fledgling industry at the time—of the conflicting, confusing, hodge-podge, crazy-quilt pattern of local government control of cable franchises.

In its place was to be a more harmonized monitoring by the Federal Communication Commission (FCC) of local cable franchises both for rates charged, programming offered and service provided to the customers coupled with vigorous enforcement of federal antitrust laws to protect cable's subscribers and the local franchising authority from anti-competitive and monopolistic market and pricing practices by the cable operators.

But, that has failed to work. The Justice Department and the FCC allowed the 1980's to be a time of frenzied, highly-leveraged (debt laden) takeovers and buyouts and mergers of cable systems. Many industry observers argue that today's cable rate increases result not from increased programming costs, but from heavy costs of overhead and debt-service.

As we know, the Louisville/Jefferson County Cable TV Commission was created by Ordinance in 1980 and, until the federal law became effective in 1985, the Commission awarded franchises and ruled upon proposed cable rate increases. The remaining powers of the Commission—now composed of both elected officials and citizens—were ably outlined by Chairman Magre in a letter to the editor which appeared in the Sunday, August 16, Courier-Journal.

Despite the fact that local Boards of Aldermen and Fiscal Courts and City Councils can no longer regulate cable system rates structures, the Commission—to its great credit—is doing a good job in representing cable subscribers and all the residents of Louisville and Jefferson County.

For example, I commend and applaud the Commission for initiating this year a survey to ascertain customer attitudes concerning Storer's service and programming, and Storer's handling of customer telephone calls.

The findings, which this Commission well knows, were:

More than half of the respondents "strongly agree" that cable television should be reregulated;

Approximately 70% of the respondents who canceled service said they had done so because of increased costs;

While approximately 80% of the respondents were satisfied with Storer's service, more than half of these respondents were only "somewhat" satisfied

It is precisely these expressed concerns—cost of cable signals and customers service—which drive the several cable reregulation proposals now before House and Senate.

A tide of consumer dissatisfaction with cable has washed across Capitol Hill in the last few years. Each year the tide rises higher and the dissatisfactions become more profound.

In both the current and the last two Congresses cable legislation has been introduced, debated and acted upon by one or both Chambers. No final action, however, has been taken so far, though such action is possible this year despite the President's expressed opposition to cable legislation.

In January, the Senate overwhelmingly passed its cable bill, S. 12. By a resounding vote of 340 to 73—and with my strong support—the House passed its cable bill, H.R. 4850. The House bill is similar in many respects to S. 12 and incorporates elements of both H.R. 1303 and H.R. 3560, other cable bills I have co-sponsored this Congress. House and Senate Conferees have been appointed and they soon will start work readying a final cable bill which can then go to the President for his action. (Incidentally, were the President to veto the bill, I believe the veto would be overridden, and I would work to that end.)

Placing Local Franchise Authorities Back Into The Rate-Making Process.—The Federal Communications Commission would be permitted to regulate cable rates where there is no "effective competition" defined as situations in which: (1) fewer than 30% of local households subscribe to cable service; (2) at least two multichannel video programming distributors offer services to 50% of local households and whose services are subscribed to by at least 15% of local households; or (3) a multichannel video operator, owned by the franchise authority, offers services to 50% of local households. The local franchise authority would not set rates but would oversee the rates set by the cable operator and could appeal to the FCC any rate increases or charges felt to be unreasonable. The FCC would make the final decisions of unreasonableness.

Affordable Basic Cable Service.—Under H.R. 4850 the FCC would establish a formula for determining the maximum rates cable operators could charge for a basic tier of cable service. The basic tier of service would include—at a minimum—all over-the-air broadcast stations and all public access channels. Local governments would enforce the cable operators' implementation of these FCC standards.

Enhanced Consumer Protection.—FCC would establish uniform customer service standards and set maximum permissible rates the cable system could charge for installation, additional hook-ups, converter boxes and remote controls. Local governments would be permitted to enact additional and enhanced customer service and consumer protection requirements which the cable system would then have to meet.

Enhanced Local Competition.—Local franchise authority would be prohibited from granting exclusive cable franchises and local governments would be permitted to establish and operate competing cable systems. H.R. 4850 also includes language added during debate on the House floor—language I supported—requiring cable systems to offer cable-originated programming, at affordable prices, to competing systems such as direct broadcast satellite (disk antenna) and microwave. I also feel allowing telephone systems to add television signals to their wiring would add to the competition and would likely reduce subscriber costs and increase program offerings.

Continued Carriage by Cable Systems Of Local Signals.—Cable franchises would be required to reserve up to one third of their channel capacity to carry local commercial broadcast channels as well as noncommercial educational television signals. This is the "must carry" rule.

H.R. 4850 is a good bill but it falls short in one respect, however. It does not provide local cable authorities with as much authority over cable television operations within their jurisdictions as I feel they should possess.

I continue to favor the approach taken in H.R. 3560—which I have co-sponsored—which empowers local governments to regulate cable rates but allows cable operators to appeal what they feel to be unreasonable local rate regulations to the FCC. The bill now in Conference places the burden of challenging unreasonable rates on the local authority.

I anticipate a successful House-Senate cable Conference this autumn. I should also add this caveat, however. A successful Conference may not be possible unless Congress can beat back the hoards of cable, broadcast, entertainment and sports lobbies who, for one reason or another, do not want a cable bill or want to twist it to their special liking.

This argues for the passage of campaign finance reform legislation to reduce the stranglehold the special interests have on Congress by reducing the money they can contribute to political campaigns. This would serve to return government and the political process to the people where they belong.

I again thank you, Mr. Chairman and Members of the Commission for inviting me to testify and look forward to working with you in the future.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the legislation. I, too, wish to have a colloquy with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY].

Section 624A(b)(1) of S. 12 requires that the FCC, in consultation with representatives of the cable industry and the consumer electronics industry, report to Congress and issue regulations to assure compatibility between televisions and video cassette recorders and cable systems. A major purpose is to ensure that consumers reap the benefits of new and innovative technologies. Does the committee intend for the Commission also to consult with representatives of franchising authorities, who are on the frontline in ensuring that cable subscribers receive quality consumer friendly service, in preparing the report and drafting the regulations?

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield. Yes. In addition to such consultations, we expect the Commission to institute rulemaking and inquiry proceedings that give all interested parties the opportunity to express their views on these compatibility issues.

Mr. SCHUMER. Section 617(e) of S. 12 governs the time period that a franchising authority may consider a cable operator's transfer request, stating that the authority has 120 days to act on such a request that, "contains or is accompanied by such information as is required in accordance with Commission regulations and by the franchising authority." By this, is it the committee's intent that the time period not begin to toll until the transfer request is accompanied by information required by both the FCC and the franchising authority?

Mr. MARKEY. If the gentleman will yield. Yes. In addition, it is the committee's intention that this 120-day clock not start ticking until a franchising authority has received all requested information, regardless of whether this information is required by the FCC regulations. Otherwise, it would be possible for the 120-day period to expire and the transfer deemed granted under this section before a franchising authority even had received the information it requested from the operator regarding the transfer.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN].

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report. This is not a perfect bill, but it is a good bill for consumers and it merits our support.

While we were home over the August recess, our cable operators launched a full scale assault against the cable bill. Ironically, they enlisted in this fight the very same people who have been clamoring for reregulation for years—cable subscribers.

In recent monthly bills across the country, the cable companies advised customers that Congress was poised to pass legislation that would raise cable rates. This charge from the champion of rate increases is another irony. It is a red herring and it just is not true.

The cable companies do not want to be regulated and that is understandable. Customers who are tired of unwarranted and uncontrollable increases want us to provide some regulation. The conference report addresses consumer interests in two ways. First, it controls unreasonable increases in basic cable rates. Second, it allows for competition to the cable industry.

These are not the features the cable industry is citing to customers. For the most part, cable companies are pointing to retransmission consent as a sure-fire price increase. Even if retransmission consent were taken in a separate context and not included with the regulatory provisions, it is questionable that rates would rise. But it is in this package and any increases will be fully offset by rated regulations.

I would also urge our constituents and my colleagues to remember what local broadcast stations provide. They give us local news and related community services that are very expensive to produce. In a society that receives most of its news from television, it is frightening to think of the day when our access to the news is limited to the network anchors' interpretation of events.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the conference report.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN].

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, there is a lot of confusion unfortunately created by the cable monopoly on this issue. Let me help clear it up just a bit today.

If you do not know what upper tears and lower tears are, let me explain to you. Upper tears are the tears we shed over those high premium channel rates and those pay-per-viewer rates that we increasingly have to pay for programs that we used to get for free. And lower tears are the tears we shed over basic cable rates that have gone up three times the rate of inflation, because monopoly cable has been unrestrained for 8 years.

The bill we have before us today is a bill to give consumers a break. Make no mistake about it. It is a bill to save in communities where there is no competition. We are going to restrain the appetite for monopoly cable to gouge us the way they have been doing for 8 years. In the communities where competition does come, the regulations will go away.

The second part of the bill says that there will be competition in America, that cable can no longer refuse to sell its programs to the satellite distributors, to microwave distributors, who are struggling to bring competition to the marketplace.

Sixty-five communities in America have competition out of 11,000. Guess what our General Accounting Office found in a study when it looked at those 65 communities, and do not let the monopoly cable companies lie to you, in those 65 communities, cable rates fell 35 percent.

You want cable rates to go down? This is your bill. You want satellite television in rural areas? This is your bill. You want competition over regulation? This is your bill. This is the kind of bill America has been waiting for. We ought to pass it.

Let me assure you that those who take this floor in opposition to this conference report want to vote for the monopoly cable position. They will use the retransmission-consent provision as an excuse. It does not amount to a hill of beans. Retransmission consent only says that your local broadcaster, if he wants to, can tell the cable company, "You have been carrying my program. You have been charging people for it. I want some of those revenues."

Now, which of your local broadcasters is in a position that he can tell the cable company, "I do not want to be carried on your cable; I insist that you pay me to carry me"? Which of them has that kind of clout? Which of them could afford not to be on cable? The answer is very few.

This retransmission-consent thing is not a big deal. It is certainly not the kind of big deal anybody can hide behind, but there will be people coming to this floor hiding behind retransmission consent, because they want to vote for the monopoly cable position.

If you want to vote for consumers, vote for this bill. Vote for the resolution to bring it up. Give consumers a break. Give them some restraint on cable rates. Give them some competition. Give American consumers what they have been begging for.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, before yielding to the next speaker, let me just point to the title of this bill which reads, "The Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act." I just heard some talk about competition.

Yet when I spent half the night trying to read the conference report, I was looking for the Senate provision that allows telephone companies in municipalities of less than 10,000 people, and I represent over 100 of them, to compete with the cable companies. That provision is missing. I would hope somebody on the majority side of the aisle would explain why that is not in this conference report.

That provision would truly promote competition.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD], the distinguished dean of the California delegation and the ranking subcommittee member.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule.

I regret to have to oppose the rule being requested by my chairman, but I do so for two reasons. One is procedural in that the proposed rule would waive all points of order.

Second, this conference report has a serious copyright repercussion, and the Committee on the Judiciary has been denied the opportunity to have any input into it.

If the committee system means anything at all, this requested rule should not pass.

This proposed rule is defective in that we need additional time to determine the actual costs to the taxpayer and to the consumer. I believe that is pretty basic.

The conference bill reregulates the cable industry. It does so at a substantial cost to the Federal Government and the State government.

But I support the bill as it originally came out of the House of Representatives. I believe that we need reregulation of cable. I think we have to have controls on the prices that cable charges.

But during the conference committees, this bill was hijacked by the broadcast industry. They are spending millions and millions of dollars on radio and television, each and every hour you turn the radio on at the present time, because they know the billions of dollars they will get out of this bill in its present form if it is passed.

We have heard a lot of rhetoric about retransmission consent meaning nothing. Why then are the broadcast industries spending so much money in fighting for it? Of course it means billions of dollars to them. It is important to them that they get it.

I do not care really what we do to reregulate cable. They deserve whatever we do. But this cost is going to the general public, the people that buy cable programming.

As we reregulate cable, we give cable the right in the reregulation of the price they charge to recoup whatever cost their costs are from the public. Their prices will be raised as they have to pay more money for their programming, and if, as has been said by a previous speaker, there will be no cost to them, why in the heck are they fighting so much for it? Of course there is cost, and it is going to cost the public $1 to $3 billion.

I want this bill, but I want it without the retransmission consent.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES].

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, first, let me thank my friend and distinguished colleague for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule and in opposition to the conference report.

I want to congratulate the gentleman from Massachusetts. I think overall he did a very good job, and I supported the bill when it left the House.

But it came back from conference with provisions that are just totally unacceptable. My colleague, the gentleman from California, ranking Republican on my committee, says that the broadcasters are spending billions of dollars on this bill. So are the cable people; I mean, they have ads on every hour, because there is billions and billions of dollars at stake.

Let me tell you, this will go down, I think, in history as the broadcasters' great train robbery because it was hijacked in conference. What is at stake is anywhere from $1 to $8 billion that the consumer is going to pick up.

My colleagues, $1 to $8 billion.

That is why you cannot turn on the tube or listen to the radio and not hear some advertising about this bill.

I have no sympathy for the cable industry. They have monopolized, they have conspired basically to take advantage of their unique position as a local distribution company, and they need to be regulated. That is why I supported this bill.

Retransmission consent, however—and, unfortunately, we are not going to have time to explain it in any detail because we were not given the time, just 1 hour of debate—retransmission consent gives the broadcasters an open-ended right to demand basically what they believe the market will bear, what they want, with somebody else's product. You do not turn on the television to look at a signal, you turn on the television to look at programming.

That is the copyright owners that produce the programming that we all watch. They have been left out of this equation. Frankly, not only are we going to suffer domestically but internationally; we are going to suffer because if we do not put any value on that creativity, that creativity that we get copyright for, what do you think the international community is going to do?

You know, the broadcasters want open competition, but this bill does not do that. What it does, it provides basically deregulation for them, for the broadcasters, but they want to keep the cable systems under regulation, under compulsory license, where they are paid—copyright owners are paid—perhaps a fraction of what the value is because we set rates through a mechanism to reward the copyright owners.

So, what we have, in essence, is deregulation for the broadcasters, but regulation for the cable systems. We are going to regret the day that we voted to pass this out of this House, believe me.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the rule, send it back, and vote against the conference report.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], a very distinguished member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER of California. I thank my friend for yielding, and I would like to join in congratulating all the hard-working members of the Committee on Energy and Commerce who clearly do want to bring about a solution to what is obviously a problem.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me incredibly ironic that as we observed over the past 3 or 4 years the crumbling of the Berlin Wall, the demise of communism, the emergence of democracy and freedom, that we are here, following that, reregulating an industry which clearly played an integral role in that expanded communication of freedom throughout the world. We have seen a wider range of choices provided to the American consumer. It is obvious that we all recognize that there is a problem.

There are some of us who believe that the best way to deal with the problem that exists, that of increased costs, is to encourage competition. Tragically, the retransmission fee, the one thing that is actually mandated in this bill, increases by billions of dollars the fee that will be charged to that cable subscriber.

We see the opportunity for people to enjoy 40, 50, 60 channels, and we also see the opportunity for our broadcasters to advertise for thousands of dollars a minute on commercial over-the-air television.

So, why should this fee be imposed, not on the cable industry, but on the cable subscriber? It seems to me that we should oppose this rule and we should oppose this legislation and we should come back with a bill which can, in fact, bring about a greater degree of competition for the American consumer.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART].

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, let me briefly thank my colleagues for this opportunity. There has been a lot of misinformation here. I feel it is a little bit like a candidates night, for those of you who can identify with and understand that experience. You have heard a lot of things that you just do not recognize.

My colleague from New York, Mr. LENT, quoted three newspapers' positions on the cable bill. What he did not tell you was that those three newspapers are owned by companies that own cable television systems.

Are we surprised they editorialized against it? Of course not.

My colleague from New York, Mr. LENT, quoted the New York Times. He did not tell you, though, that the New York Times embraced the bill and urged the Congress to support it.

The fact of the matter is that there is a disturbing trend here of disinformation and misinformation about this bill and what it will cost.

I noted with a great deal of interest the comments by my other colleague from New York, Mr. SOLOMON, claiming that there was no debate, no vote on retransmission consent. And the Committee on the Judiciary's objections that their concerns were not made part of the bill.

The fact of the matter is that retransmission consent was solely referred to the Committee on Energy and Commerce; the fact of the matter is that the Committee on the Judiciary asked the Rules Committee that it not be discussed; and the Committee on Rules did not make retransmission consent in order, Mr. SOLOMON. So do not come out here and complain that we did not get a chance to vote, when the gentleman from New York would not give us a chance to vote.

I begged for an opportunity to present this case. I demanded an opportunity to debate it and was willing to measure my position against the Committee on the Judiciary's position, and was denied that opportunity.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Ohio yield to me briefly, and I will yield him some extra time, since my name was mentioned?

Mr. ECKART. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I just want the gentleman to know that I introduced the motion for an open rule, which would have allowed the gentleman from Ohio to do exactly what he wants. So, please do not point fingers over here. I was for the gentleman from Ohio. It was the other side that denied him his rights, his own party's members on the Rules Committee.

Mr. ECKART. Well, the fact of the matter is that the Committee on Rules did not make in order a position that the Committee on Rules now asserts is the reason why you should defeat this rule on this bill. That is just inconsequential when it comes to me.

Now, as to the debate on the substance, my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS], and I were prepared to stand in contrast to copyright reform; in fact, I think it may be needed and necessary. But we were not given the opportunity. Unfortunately, the consumers will be protected—Mr. Speaker, do I have time remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART] has expired.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, if I might, I would yield 1 minute to the gentleman so that he may yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS].

Mr. ECKART. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I yield to my friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS].

Mr. FIELDS. First of all I want to compliment the gentleman in the well on the work that he has done on this issue. But going back to the history of this issue, the issue really goes back to 1927, when Congress gave broadcasters control over their signal, a proprietary right. In 1959 the FEC made an exception for a fledging cable industry. Today we have a $2 to $3 billion cable monopoly.

So what I wanted to ask the gentleman: What we are talking about in retransmission consent is basically a restoration of Congress' original intent. That was one of the motivating reasons that got me involved in this issue, me working with the gentleman, for the concept of retransmission consent.

Mr. ECKART. The local broadcaster is, the gentleman correctly asserts, the neighborhood, the front porch. It is the local broadcaster whose signal tells the folks about whether schools will be open tomorrow, or the flood or the hurricane. It is the local broadcaster who really is the competition in the marketplace. It is a signal which the cable companies say they stole fair and square. They are paying for it as a consumer now. All we are saying is that the local broadcaster has the right to protect their property as any other property right in America should be protected.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HARRIS].

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I am disgusted with the latest round of cable propaganda on television.

I guess the most misleading part of the ads that we have seen is the deep concern the cable industry is displaying for consumers, the very ones they have been gouging for the last 8 years, as we have seen the rates increased 3 times more than the rate of inflation.

If they are so concerned about rates, where have they been?

Do not be fooled. They are not interested in protecting the cable television watching public from higher rates. They are afraid of regulations which will put an end to their runaway rate hikes.

This cable bill is exactly as it is named. It protects consumers and it encourages competition.

If your constituents call you, misled by these ads, you tell them to consider the source of their information. It will be printed on their cable bills right next to the latest rate increase.

As evidence of what I am speaking, in Birmingham, AL, in an article in the Post-Herald on Wednesday of this week, it says that on the outside of your Birmingham cable bill, it tells them, their constituents, or consumers, to fight national legislation or face increases in your cable charge.

On the inside, however, they are telling the consumer that they are raising the price of their service.

I ask you to support the rule and support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I include the article from the Birmingham Post-Herald, as follows:

CONGRESS READIES FOR CABLE TV VOTE

(By Nancy Bereckis)

On the outside of your Birmingham Cable bill, the company tells you to fight national legislation or face increases in your cable charge.

On the inside, however, Birmingham Cable tells you it is raising the price of your service.

It would seem the cable company is failing to practice what it preaches.

But Birmingham Cable Communications president Michael D'Ambra said yesterday there is nothing contradictory about lobbying against raising rates while raising them.

"These are two separate and distinct issues. Our price increase is justifiable because we need the money to pay for a new station (Video Hits-1) and other operational costs that have gone up," he said of the hike in the charge of basic service from $18.95 to $20.35 per month.

"If the bill in Congress passes, the price of cable will increase three or four dollars a month and it won't be justifiable."

That bill, which Congress has scheduled a final vote on tomorrow, would reregulate cable television, giving cities like Birmingham more power in deciding how much cable companies can charge customers.

And depending on whom you talk to, it will either result in much higher rates or much lower ones.

Industry experts, including D'Ambra, say a provision in the bill requiring cable companies to pay fees to carry commercial TV stations that are now carried for free would result in higher bills for customers.

But the other side, which includes the National Association of Broadcasters, and Birmingham City Councilman Roosevelt Bell, say the passage of the federal bill will result in rates dropping by up to 30 percent.

"When the cable industry was regulated before 1986, we kept rates down," Bell said. "But now our hands are tied. We raise hell every time they raise rates, but that's about all we can do."

When the cable industry was regulated, the city council would vote on whether Birmingham Cable could raise rates.

Now the city has a non-exclusive franchise agreement with Birmingham Cable. The agreement requires Birmingham Cable to pay 5 percent of its profits for use of the city's right-of-ways, such as streets and alleys. It gives no power to the city to regulate rates.

If another cable company wanted to compete with Birmingham Cable, theoretically it could. But another company would have an uphill fight for two reasons, Bell said.

First, Birmingham Cable already has recouped its initial loss for installing the actual wires. Second, Birmingham Cable has an advantage because it is owned by the multimedia giant Time Warner Inc.

For fiscal year 1991, Time Warner reported that its cable companies brought in $872 million, an increase of $103 million from the year before.

D'Ambra said Birmingham Cable does not add substantially to Time Warner's cable profits, although he refused to disclose how much money his company has made.

"I can say that we are very price sensitive because we realize that we need to keep prices low or our customers won't be able to afford cable," he said.

But Bell said Birmingham Cable's price hikes are evident that the company is abusing its growing and largely unregulated monopoly on the city's cable television market.

"We have a cable commission but it has no power," he said. "Just look at how much rates have increased since deregulation (in 1986) and you'll see."

When Birmingham Cable began operating in the city in 1976, the charge for basic services was $7. In 1985, the year before then-President Ronald Reagan successfully pushed through the bill to deregulate the cable industry. Birmingham Cable charged $10 for basic service.

In the six years since, Birmingham Cable has raised its rates almost yearly. D'Ambra said the company did not raise rates one year. The last rate increase was in October 1991.

The new rate hike, which goes into effect with the October billing, will go to pay not only for the new music video channel but will also pay for an increase in Alabama Power's charge to Birmingham Cable for use of its poles.

"I don't think there is a more cost-efficient form of entertainment than cable television," D'Ambra said.

But despite his claim, the city of Birmingham's law department confirmed it is looking at ways to bring another cable franchise into the city to compete with Birmingham Cable.

CABLE COSTS

The price of cable varies greatly depending on where you live. Here is a sampling of monthly cable costs in the Birmingham area. (The prices listed are excluding specials. The cost of basic service is the price for all cable stations except movie channels.)

BIRMINGHAM CABLE COMMUNICATIONS

Serves—Birmingham and Irondale.

Basic service—$20.35 (as of October billing)

Installation—$25

One movie channel such as Home Box Office—$10.95

Extra fees—remote control, $4; additional outlet, $3.75

BESSEMER CABLE COMMUNICATIONS

Serves—Bessemer and some unincorporated Jefferson County

Basic service—$18.49 inside city limits; $18.85 outside city

Installation—$25

One movie channel such as HBO—$10.95

Extra fees—converter box, $15; remote control, $4

CENCOM CABLE TELEVISION

Basic service—$22.95

Installation—$50

One movie channel such as HBO—with basic cable, $32.90; installation drops to $30 when ordering with one movie channel

Extra fees—None

MOUNTAIN BROOK CABLEVISION INC.

Serves—Mountain Brook

Basic service—$25.45

Installation—$35, apartment; $45, house

One movie channel such as HBO—$12.95

Extra fees—Remote control, $4; remote control without volume control, $2; other outlets, $7.50

SHELBY CABLE INC.

Serves—North Shelby County along the U.S. 280 corridor from Interstate 459, including Inverness, Meadow Brook and Brook Highland subdivision

Basic service—$24.90

Installation—$35, apartment; $45, house; $65 for new house that has never had cable

One movie channel such as HBO—$12.95
Extra fees—Remote control, $4; remote control without volume control, $2.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN].

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, Abraham Lincoln used to say that calling a tail a leg does not make it one.

We keep hearing about cable being a monopoly and the need to regulate monopolies, but no one in support of the conference report deals with the fact that a proconsumer bill that passed this House and the conference committee all of a sudden put in a provision totally unregulated, with no price protection for the consumers, that totally defied the whole logic of copyrights law, that provides the broadcasters with a major loophole, a proconsumer bill for strategic advantage only, was turned into an anticonsumer bill to help one particular industry at the expense of another industry.

It is a deal, pure and simple. While there is nothing untoward about this kind of a deal, there is something about the sanctimonious nature of the proconsumer arguments from people who came back from a conference committee having accepted a provision that never should have been in this legislation in the first place, which weakens its proconsumer protection, which provides an unregulated potential price increase to the consumers of cable televisions, and which essentially, as I mentioned earlier, makes an arrangement with one particular industry at the expense of another particular industry.

The key impetus for this bill was a widely accepted notion that it was time to remove some of the exemptions and protections earlier enacted by Congress to prop up a fledgling cable industry; but retransmission consent by allowing broadcasters to withhold their signals from cable, but not permitting copyright owners to do likewise with their programming, in essence repeals the cable compulsory license for broadcasters, but not for program owners.

It is inequitable. It is both unfair to an industry and unfair to the consumers, and I urge the conference report on this bill be defeated.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER], a distinguished member of the committee.

Mr. RITTER. Mr. Speaker, I think we have heard a good deal about the way the rule does not allow the House to vote on a very important addition to this conference report, one that will cost consumers considerably. The rule essentially muzzles the House on this issue of retransmission consent, which adds to the cost of the bill. There are no two ways about it.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] both have stated that the costs to consumers from this bill would rise.

The economy is suffering from an overdose of taxation, regulation, and litigation, and we have a highly regulatory bill here. We have a bill that goes into micromanaging one of America's more successful stories of the last decade.

You know, people talk about increases in the costs of cable and they talk about multiples of the inflation rate, but the reality is that on a per-channel basis the costs have essentially been level with inflation and probably somewhat less.

The reality is that we have C-SPAN. We have CNN, and we have the Discovery Channel. We have Arts and Entertainment and we have so much added to our platter since 1984.

You know, in a sense, this bill is a punishment bill. This bill punished cable for being successful. We need more success stories like the cable industry in our economy.

From 1978 through 1990, jobs increased in this industry from 23,000 to 100,000.

We could have a much more limited approach. We could stimulate "Must carry." We could stimulate some more competition, and we could maybe do something positive, but this bill is negative to the American people.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. First of all, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my good friend, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK], for having yielded me this time.

Second, I want to commend him and the Rules Committee for the way they have crafted this rule expeditiously to allow the House properly to consider the business before it.

Third, I want to urge my colleagues in the strongest way possible to vote for the rule.

You have heard a number of complaints about the copyright laws, and it is quite possible that the copyright laws are not working. Those are not within the jurisdiction of the Commerce Committee.

I would urge that my good friends from the Judiciary Committee put those matters before us at an appropriate time.

I would point out to my colleagues that Hollywood has not been hurt by this legislation. Indeed, had the Judiciary Committee accepted the three conferees they were offered, they would very successfully have achieved active participation in a conference. They could very well not only have achieved what they wanted, but could have achieved deadlock had they so desired.

I would point out to my colleagues something else that is very important, and that is that we should listen to the people, not to the special interests.

Look at the list of those who support the legislation and then look at the list of those who oppose it.

The American people are fed up with rapidly escalating and outrageous cable television bills, bills from an unregulated monopoly that has one purpose, to maximize its profits at the expense of the American consumer.

Look at the roster of those who support the bill, those in opposition to the views of Hollywood and the cable people.

The Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO, the UAW, the American Association of Retired Persons, and the rural electric co-ops, the League of Cities, the attorneys general of the States, and of course, the satellite broadcasters who will achieve a measure of competition.

I urge my colleagues to vote for the rule and for the conference report.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, let me just call your attention to a time back in December 1980. Do you know what we did in that lameduck session? We just about ruined America.

Do my colleagues remember when this House overwhelmingly passed a bill in the middle of the night, in a lameduck session, with no hearings? We raised the Federal deposit insurance guarantee from $40,000 per individual up to $100,000 per account. In effect, we said to multimillionaires across this country: "You can gamble on every deadbeat financial institution across this country because the Federal Government is going to guarantee every one of your deposits, not just your first $40,000." We are faced with a similar procedure here today. We are being compelled to vote on a very important concept with far-reaching implications, without any benefit of hearings or debate.

Mr. Speaker, I just want my colleagues to remember something. When 5 years go by, I want their constituents to call them every time cable rates go up, because they are going to go up. We have not dealt with that problem. Nobody knows what this bill is going to do.

And, Mr. Speaker, as soon as this debate time is over, I am going to ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], be given 1 hour to enlighten this House on just how bad this bill really is and what it will do to the cable users of America.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, most of us think that it is better to keep the Federal Government out of as much regulation as we can, but I think we all further understand that there are times that it is in the best interests of the consumer that we do regulate. We certainly learned that about the S&L situation during the 1980s.

As my colleagues know, when the cable business started out, and they were an infant industry, and they needed some help, and that help was not to regulate them at the time until they could gain a foothold; well, they have gained a foothold, and they are in 60 percent of the homes in this country today, and it is a monopoly, just like the telephone company was a monopoly and other things are a monopoly. And it is time for the Congress to do something for the consumer.

I do not criticize the cable people. They have done exactly what they were supposed to do, and they have been very successful at it. But, just from a personal stand, look at my rates in South Carolina and Washington, and they do go up without any sort of notice to me particularly or without any reason.

As my colleagues know, I think the bottom line on this is to look at who supports this legislation and who does not. The cable industry is against it. That is for sure. But the AARP, the largest organization to represent the elderly in this country, and the elderly people are the ones that look at so much of our cable TV, and the elderly people on fixed incomes are those that really have a hard time paying those cable bills, not only to mention most of the major consumer groups in this country, support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, we hope that this is going to bring cable rates down, or at least not allow them not go up as fast as they have in the past, so I advocate our voting for the rule and for the passage of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet asking to be recognized before the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] moved the previous question on the resolution. I think a little fairness is in order here.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LUKEN). The gentleman from South Carolina has moved the previous question, which takes precedence.

The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 263, nays 134, not voting 35, as follows:

Mr. GUNDERSON and Mrs. PATTERSON changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. EARLY. Mr. Speaker, during rollcall vote No. 397 on House Resolution 571, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 4551. An act to amend the Civil Liberties Act of 1988 to increase the authorization for the Trust Fund under that Act, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2532), an act entitled the "Freedom for Russia and Emerging Eurasian Democracies and Open Markets Support Act," agrees to the conference asked by the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints from the Committee on Foreign Relations: Mr. PELL, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. CRANSTON, Mr. LUGAR, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, and Mr. PRESSLER; from the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry for matters solely within their jurisdiction: Mr. LEAHY, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. LUGAR; from the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, for matters solely within their jurisdiction and for matters within the shared jurisdiction of that committee and the Foreign Relations Committee: Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. SARBANES, and Mr. GARN; to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. MONTGOMERY submitted the following conference report and statement on the Senate bill (S. 2344) to improve the provision of health care and other services to veterans by the Department of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 102–871)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2344), to improve the provision of health care and other services to veterans by the Department of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Veterans' Medical Programs Amendments of 1992".

TITLE I—HEALTH CARE

PART A—GENERAL HEALTH CARE

SEC. 101. INCREASE IN LIMIT ON CERTAIN GRANTS FOR HOME STRUCTURAL ALTERATIONS FOR DISABLED VETERANS.

(a) INCREASE.—Section 1717(a)(2) is amended by striking out "$2,500" and "$600" and inserting in lieu thereof "$4,100" and "$1,200", respectively.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to a veteran who first applies for benefits under section 1717(a)(2) of title 38, United States Code, after December 31, 1989.

(c) APPLICABILITY.—A veteran who exhausts such veteran's eligibility for benefits under section 1717(a)(2) of title 38, United States Code, before January 1, 1990, is not entitled to additional benefits under such section by reason of the amendments made by subsection (a).

SEC. 102. SUBMISSION OF REPORTS OF GERIATRICS AND GERONTOLOGY ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

"(2) Whenever the Committee submits a report to the Secretary under paragraph (1), the Committee shall at the same time transmit a copy of the report in the same form to the appropriate committees of Congress. Not later than 90 days after receipt of a report under that paragraph, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report containing any comments and recommendations of the Secretary with respect to the report of the Committee.".

SEC. 103. AUTHORITY TO HOLD JOINT TITLE TO MEDICAL EQUIPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Chapter 81 is amended by adding at the end of subchapter IV the following new sections:

"§8157. Joint title to medical equipment

"(a) Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary may enter into agreements with institutions described in section 8153(a) of this title for the joint acquisition of medical equipment.

"(b)(1) The Secretary may not pay more than one-half of the purchase price of equipment acquired through an agreement under subsection (a).

"(2) Any equipment to be procured under such an agreement shall be procured by the Secretary. Title to such equipment shall be held jointly by the United States and the institution.

"(3) Before equipment acquired under such an agreement may be used, the parties to the agreement shall arrange by contract under section 8153 of this title for the exchange or use of the equipment.

"(4) The Secretary may not contract for the acquisition of medical equipment to be purchased jointly under an agreement under subsection (a) until the institution which enters into the agreement provides to the Secretary its share of the purchase price of the medical equipment.

"(c)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may transfer the interest of the Department in equipment acquired through an agreement under subsection (a) to the institution which holds joint title to the equipment if the Secretary determines that the transfer would be justified by compelling clinical considerations or the economic interest of the Department. Any such transfer may only be made upon agreement by the institution to pay to the Department the amount equal to one-half of the depreciated purchase price of the equipment. Any such payment when received shall be credited to the applicable Department medical appropriation.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may acquire the interest of an institution in equipment acquired under subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that the acquisition would be justified by compelling clinical considerations or the economic interests of the Department. The Secretary may not pay more than one-half the depreciated purchase price of that equipment.

"§8158. Deposit in escrow

"(a) To facilitate the procurement of medical equipment pursuant to section 8157 of this title, the Secretary may enter into escrow agreements with institutions described in section 8153(a) of this title. Any such agreement shall provide that—

"(1) the institutions shall pay to the Secretary the funds necessary to make a payment under section 8157(b)(4) of this title;

"(2) the Secretary, as escrow agent, shall administer those funds in an escrow account; and

"(3) the Secretary shall disburse the escrowed funds to pay for such equipment upon its delivery or in accordance with the contract to procure the equipment and shall disburse all accrued interest or other earnings on the escrowed funds to the institution.

"(b) As escrow agent for funds placed in escrow pursuant to an agreement under subsection (a), the Secretary may—

"(1) invest the escrowed funds in obligations of the Federal Government or obligations which are insured or guaranteed by the Federal Government;

"(2) retain in the escrow account interest or other earnings on such investments;

"(3) disburse the funds pursuant to the escrow agreement; and

"(4) return undisbursed funds to the institution.

"(c)(1) If the Secretary enters into an escrow agreement under this section, the Secretary may enter into an agreement to procure medical equipment if one-half the purchase price of the equipment is available in an appropriation or fund for the expenditure or obligation.

"(2) Funds held in an escrow account under this section shall not be considered to be public funds.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 81 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 8156 the following new items:

"8157. Joint title to medical equipment.
"8158. Deposit in escrow.".

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the Secretary's plans for implementation of this section. The report shall include an identification and discussion of—

(1) the instructions the Secretary proposes to issue to medical facilities to guide the development of proposals for procurement of medical equipment under this section, including instructions for ensuring equitable arrangements for use of the equipment by the Department and the co-purchasers of the equipment;

(2) the criteria by which the Secretary plans to evaluate proposals to procure medical equipment under this section;

(3) the means by which the Secretary will integrate the process of procuring equipment under this section with the policies and procedures governing health care planning by the Veterans Health Administration; and

(4) the criteria by which determinations to transfer title to equipment under section 8157(c) of title 38, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), would be made.

SEC. 104. QUALITY ASSURANCE ACTIVITIES.

Effective on October 1, 1992, programs and activities which (1) the Secretary carries out pursuant to section 7311(a) of title 38, United States Code, or (2) are described in section 201(a)(1) and 201(a)(3) of Public Law 100–322 (102 Stat. 508) shall be deemed to be part of the operation of hospitals, nursing homes, and domiciliary facilities of the Department of Veterans Affairs, without regard to the location of the duty stations of employees carrying out those programs and activities.

SEC. 105. ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON PROSTHETICS AND SPECIAL-DISABILITIES PROGRAMS.

(a) STATUS AND NAME OF COMMITTEE.—The Federal advisory committee established by the Secretary and known as the Prosthetics Service Advisory Committee shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known as the Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs and shall operate as though such committee had been established by law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Committee may, upon the enactment of this Act, meet and act on any matter covered by subsection (b) of section 543 of title 38, United States Code, as added by subsection (b) of this section.

"§543. Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs

"(a) There is in the Department an advisory committee known as the Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Committee').

"(b) The objectives and scope of activities of the Committee shall relate to—

"(1) prosthetics and special-disabilities programs administered by the Secretary;

"(2) the coordination of programs of the Department for the development and testing of, and for information exchange regarding, prosthetic devices;

"(3) the coordination of Department and non-Department programs that involve the development and testing of prosthetic devices; and

"(4) the adequacy of funding for the prosthetics and special-disabilities programs of the Department.

"(c) The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, consult with and seek the advice of the Committee on the matters described in subsection (b).

"(d) Not later than January 15 of 1993, 1994, and 1995, the Committee shall submit to the Secretary and the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the effectiveness of the prosthetics and special-disabilities programs administered by the Secretary during the preceding fiscal year. Not more than 60 days after the date on which any such report is received by the Secretary, the Secretary shall submit a report to such committees commenting on the report of the Committee.

"(1) spinal-cord-injured veterans;

"(2) blind veterans;

"(3) veterans who have lost or lost the use of extremities;

"(4) hearing-impaired veterans; and

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 5 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"543. Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs.".

SEC. 106. PROSTHETIC SERVICES REPORT.

Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing—

(1) the Secretary's evaluation of the reasons for the backlog that occurred in the procurement of prosthetic appliances in fiscal year 1989, and for the failure to furnish prosthetic appliances in accordance with the priority established in section 1712(i) of title 38, United States Code; and

(2) a description of the actions that the Secretary has taken and plans to take to prevent a recurrence of—

(A) the accumulation of a significant backlog in the procurement of prosthetic appliances; and

(B) the failure to furnish prosthetic appliances in accordance with such priority, including a schedule for any such planned actions.

SEC. 107. SERVICES FOR HOMELESS VETERANS.

(a) PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary shall assess all programs developed by facilities of the Department of Veterans Affairs which have been designed to assist homeless veterans. To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall seek to replicate at other facilities of the Department those programs that have as a goal the rehabilitation of homeless veterans and which the Secretary has determined to be successful in achieving that goal by fostering reintegration of homeless veterans into the community and employment of such veterans.

(b) ASSESSMENT AND COORDINATION.—(1) In carrying out subsection (a), the Secretary shall require the director of each medical center or the director of each regional benefits office to make an assessment of the needs of homeless veterans living within the area served by the medical center or regional office, as the case may be.

(2) Each such assessment shall be made in coordination with representatives of State and local governments, other appropriate departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and nongovernmental organizations that have experience working with homeless persons in that area.

(3) Each such assessment shall identify the needs of homeless veterans with respect to the following:

(A) Health care.

(B) Education and training.

(C) Employment.

(D) Shelter.

(E) Counseling.

(F) Outreach services.

(4) Each assessment shall also indicate the extent to which the needs referred to in paragraph (3) are being met adequately by the programs of the Department, of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government, of State and local governments, and of nongovernmental organizations.

(5) Each assessment shall be carried out in accordance with uniform procedures and guidelines prescribed by the Secretary.

(c) PLANNING.—In furtherance of subsection (a), the Secretary shall require the director of each medical center and the director of each regional benefits office, in coordination with representatives of State and local governments, other Federal officials, and nongovernmental organizations that have experience working with homeless persons in the areas served by such facility, to—

(1) develop a list of all public and private programs that provide assistance to homeless persons or homeless veterans in the area concerned, together with a description of the services offered by those programs; and

(2) seek to encourage the development by the representatives of such entities, in coordination with the director, of a plan to coordinate among such public and private programs the provision of services to homeless veterans.

(d) SERVICES.—In furtherance of subsection (a), the Secretary shall require the director of each medical center or regional benefits office, in carrying out such director's responsibilities under title 38, United States Code, to take appropriate action to—

(1) meet, to the maximum extent practicable through existing programs and available resources, the needs of homeless veterans that are identified in the assessment conducted under subsection (b); and

(2) attempt to inform homeless veterans whose needs the director cannot meet under paragraph (1) of the services available to such veterans within the area served by such center or office.

(e) AUTHORITY TO ACCEPT DONATIONS FOR CERTAIN PROGRAMS.—The Secretary may accept donations of funds and services for the purposes of providing one-stop, non-residential services and mobile support teams and for expanding the medical services to homeless veterans eligible for such services from the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—As used in subsections (a) through (e):

(1) The term "medical center" means a medical center of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(2) The term "regional benefits office" means a regional benefits office of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(3) The term "veteran" has the meaning given such term in section 101(2) of title 38, United States Code.

(4) The term "homeless" has the meaning given such term in section 103(a), as limited by section 103(c), of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302(a)).

(g) EXTENSION OF CERTAIN PROGRAMS FOR HOMELESS VETERANS.—Section 801 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Amendments Act of 1988 (Public Law 100–628; 102 Stat. 3257) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking out "to the Veterans' Administration" and all that follows through the period and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "to the Department of Veterans Affairs $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 for medical care of veterans. Funds appropriated pursuant to this section shall be in addition to any funds appropriated pursuant to any other authorizations (whether definite or indefinite) for medical care of veterans."; and

(2) in subsections (b) and (c), by striking out "Of the amount appropriated pursuant to subsection (a), 50 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "The amounts appropriated pursuant to subsection (a)".

(h) Extension of Program for Mentally Ill Homeless Veterans.—Section 115(d) of the Veterans' Benefits and Services Act of 1988 (38 U.S.C. 1712 note) is amended by striking out "1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "1994".

(i) Report.—Not later than February 1, 1993, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing an evaluation of the programs referred to in subsections (a) and (e).

Part B—Mental Health Provisions

SEC. 121. MARRIAGE AND FAMILY COUNSELING FOR PERSIAN GULF WAR VETERANS.

(a) Requirement.—Subject to the availability of funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization in subsection (g), the Secretary shall conduct a program to furnish to the persons referred to in subsection (b) the marriage and family counseling services referred to in subsection (c). The authority to conduct the program shall expire on September 30, 1994.

(b) Persons Eligible for Counseling.—The persons eligible to receive marriage and family counseling services under the program are—

(1) veterans who were awarded a campaign medal for active-duty service during the Persian Gulf War and the spouses and children of such veterans; and

(2) veterans who are or were members of the reserve components who were called or ordered to active duty during the Persian Gulf War and the spouses and children of such members.

(c) Counseling Services.—Under the program, the Secretary may provide marriage and family counseling that the Secretary determines, based on an assessment by a mental-health professional employed by the Department and designated by the Secretary (or, in an area where no such professional is available, a mental-health professional designated by the Secretary and performing services under a contract or fee arrangement with the Secretary), is necessary for the amelioration of psychological, marital, or familial difficulties that result from the active duty service referred to in subsection (b) (1) or (2).

(d) Manner of Furnishing Services.—(1) Marriage and family counseling services shall be furnished under the program—

(A) by personnel of the Department of Veterans Affairs who are qualified to provide such counseling services;

(B) by appropriately certified marriage and family counselors employed by the Department; and

(C) by qualified mental health professionals pursuant to contracts with the Department, when Department facilities are not capable of furnishing economical medical services because of geographical inaccessibility or are not capable of furnishing the services required.

(2) The Secretary shall establish the qualifications required of personnel under subparagraphs (A) and (C) of paragraph (1) and shall prescribe the training, experience, and certification required of appropriately certified marriage and family counselors under subparagraph (B) of such paragraph.

(3) The Secretary may employ licensed or certified marriage and family counselors to provide counseling under paragraph (1)(B) and may classify the positions in which they are employed at levels determined appropriate by the Secretary, taking into consideration the training, experience, and licensure or certification required of such counselors.

(e) Contract Counseling Services.—(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (4), a mental health professional referred to in subsection (d)(1)(C) may furnish marriage and family counseling services to a person under the program as follows:

(A) For a period of not more than 15 days beginning on the date of the commencement of the furnishing of such services to the person.

(B) For a 90-day period beginning on such date if—

(i) the mental health professional submits to the Secretary a treatment plan with respect to the person not later than 15 days after such date; and

(ii) the treatment plan and the assessment made under subsection (c) are approved by an appropriate mental health professional of the Department designated for that purpose by the Under Secretary for Health.

(C) For an additional 90-day period beginning on the date of the expiration of the 90-day period referred to in subparagraph (B) (or any subsequent 90-day period) if—

(i) not more than 30 days before the expiration of the 90-day period referred to in subparagraph (B) (or any subsequent 90-day period), the mental health professional submits to the Secretary a revised treatment plan containing a justification of the need of the person for additional counseling services; and

(ii) the plan is approved in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (B)(ii).

(2)(A) A mental health professional referred to in paragraph (1) who assesses the need of any person for services for the purposes of subsection (c) may not furnish counseling services to that person.

(B) The Secretary may waive the prohibition referred to in subparagraph (A) for locations (as determined by the Secretary) in which the Secretary is unable to obtain the assessment referred to in that subparagraph from a mental health professional other than the mental health professional with whom the Secretary enters into contracts under subsection (d)(1)(C) for the furnishing of counseling services.

(3) The Secretary shall reimburse mental health professionals for the reasonable cost (as determined by the Secretary) of furnishing counseling services under paragraph (1). In the event of the disapproval of a treatment plan of a person submitted by a mental health professional under paragraph (1)(B)(i), the Secretary shall reimburse the mental health professional for the reasonable cost (as so determined) of furnishing counseling services to the person for the period beginning on the date of the commencement of such services and ending on the date of the disapproval.

(4) The Secretary may authorize the furnishing of counseling in an individual case for a period shorter than the 90-day period specified in subparagraph (B) or (C) of paragraph (1) and, upon further consideration, extend the shorter period to the full 90 days.

(5)(A) For the purposes of this subsection, the term "treatment plan", with respect to a person entitled to counseling services under the program, must include—

(i) an assessment by the mental health professional submitting the plan of the counseling needs of the person described in the plan on the date of the submittal of the plan; and

(ii) a description of the counseling services to be furnished to the person by the mental health professional during the 90-day period covered by the plan, including the number of counseling sessions proposed as part of such services.

(B) The Secretary shall prescribe an appropriate form for the treatment plan.

(f) Cost Recovery.—For the purposes of section 1729 of title 38, United States Code, marriage and family counseling services furnished under the program shall be deemed to be care and services furnished by the Department under chapter 17 of such title, and the United States shall be entitled to recover or collect the reasonable cost of such services in accordance with that section.

(g) Authorization of Appropriations.—There is authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1993 and 1994 to carry out this section.

(h) Report.—Not later than July 1, 1994, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the program conducted pursuant to this section. The report shall contain information regarding the persons furnished counseling services under the program, including—

(1) the number of such persons, stated as a total number and separately for each eligibility status referred to in subsection (b);

(2) the age and gender of such persons;

(3) the manner in which such persons were furnished such services under the program; and

(4) the number of counseling sessions furnished to such persons.

(i) Definitions.—For the purposes of this section, the terms "veteran", "child", "active duty", "reserve component", "spouse", and "Persian Gulf War" have the meanings given such terms in paragraphs 101 (2), (4), (21), (27), (31), and (33) of section 101 of title 38, United States Code, respectively.

SEC. 122. POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER RESEARCH AND REPORTS.

(a) Research Priority.—In carrying out research and awarding grants under chapter 73 of title 38, United States Code, the Secretary shall assign a high priority to the conduct of research on mental illness, including research regarding (1) post-traumatic stress disorder, (2) post-traumatic stress disorder in association with substance abuse, and (3) the treatment of those disorders.

(b) Updates of Reports Under Section 110(c) of Public Law 98-528.—(1) Not later than October 1, 1992, and October 1, 1993, the Special Committee on Post-Traumatic-Stress Disorder established pursuant to section 110(b)(1) of the Veterans' Health Care Act of 1984 (38 U.S.C. 1712A note) shall concurrently submit to the Secretary and the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing information updating the reports submitted to the Secretary under section 110(e) of the Veterans' Health Care Act of 1984, together with any additional information the Special Committee considers appropriate regarding the overall efforts of the Department of Veterans Affairs to meet the needs of veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder and other psychological problems in readjusting to civilian life.

(2) Not later than 90 days after receiving each of the reports under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the committees any comments concerning the report that the Secretary considers appropriate.

SEC. 123. POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER PROGRAM PLANNING.

(a) Plan.—The Secretary shall develop a plan—

(1) to ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder related to active duty are provided appropriate treatment and rehabilitative services for that condition in a timely manner;

(2) to expand and improve the services available for veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder related to active duty;

(3) to eliminate waiting lists for inpatient treatment and other modes of treatment for post-traumatic stress disorder;

(4) to enhance outreach activities carried out to inform combat-area veterans of the availability of treatment for post-traumatic stress disorder; and

(5) to ensure, to the extent practicable, that there are Department post-traumatic stress disorder treatment units in locations that are readily accessible to veterans residing in rural areas of the United States.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In developing the plan referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the numbers of veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder related to active duty, as indicated by relevant studies, scientific and clinical reports, and other pertinent information;

(2) the numbers of veterans who would likely seek post-traumatic stress disorder treatment from the Department if waiting times for treatment were eliminated and outreach activities to combat-area veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder were enhanced;

(3) the current and projected capacity of the Department to provide appropriate treatment and rehabilitative services for post-traumatic stress disorder;

(4) the level and geographic accessibility of inpatient and outpatient care available through the Department for veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder across the United States;

(5) the desirability of providing that inpatient and outpatient post-traumatic stress disorder care be furnished in facilities of the Department that are physically independent of general psychiatric wards of the medical facilities of the Department;

(6) the treatment needs of veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder who are women, of such veterans who are ethnic minorities (including Native Americans, Native Hawaiians, Asian-Pacific Islanders, and Native Alaskans), and of such veterans who suffer from substance abuse problems in addition to post-traumatic stress disorder; and

(7) the recommendations of the Special Committee on Post-Traumatic-Stress Disorder with respect to (A) specialized inpatient and outpatient programs of the Department for the treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder, and (B) with respect to the establishment of educational programs that are designed for each of the various levels of education, training, and experience of the various mental health professionals involved in the treatment of veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the plan developed pursuant to subsection (a). The report shall include specific information relating to the consideration given to the matters described in subsection (b).

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section:

(1) The term ''active duty'' has the meaning given that term in section 101(21) of title 38, United States Code.

(2) The term ''veteran'' has the meaning given that term in section 101(2) of such title.

(3) The term ''combat-area veteran'' means a veteran who served on active duty in an area at a time during which hostilities (as defined in section 1712A(a)(2)(B) of such title) occurred in such area.

TITLE II—HEALTH-CARE PERSONNEL

SEC. 201. CAP ON CERTAIN RATES OF PAY.

Section 7455(c) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(c)'';

(2) by inserting ''by two times'' after ''exceed'' the first place it appears; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) Whenever the amount of an increase under subsection (a) results in a rate of basic pay for a position being equal to or greater than the amount that is 94 percent of the maximum amount permitted under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall promptly notify the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives of the increase and the amount thereof.''.

SEC. 202. MINIMUM PERIOD OF SERVICE FOR SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENTS.

(a) MINIMUM SERVICE REQUIREMENT.—Section 7612(c)(1) is amended by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof '', but for not less than two years.''.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to scholarship agreements entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 203. AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE ITEMS OF NOMINAL VALUE FOR RECRUITMENT PURPOSES.

''(f) The Secretary may purchase promotional items of nominal value for use in the recruitment of individuals for employment under this chapter. The Secretary shall prescribe guidelines for the administration of the preceding sentence.''.

SEC. 204. SPECIAL PAY FOR CERTAIN PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS BASED ON BOARD CERTIFICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 7437(e) is amended by striking out ''only for the special-pay'' and all that follows through the period in paragraphs (1)(C) and (2)(C) and inserting in lieu thereof ''for no special-pay factors other than primary, full-time, length of service, and specialty or board certification.''.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply as if enacted with the amendment made by section 102 of the Department of Veterans Affairs Health-Care Personnel Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–40; 105 Stat. 187).

(c) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Expenses incurred for periods before October 1, 1991, by reason of the amendments made by subsection (a) may be charged to fiscal year 1992 appropriations available for the same purpose.

SEC. 205. AUTHORITY TO APPOINT NON-PHYSICIAN DIRECTORS TO THE OFFICE OF THE UNDER SECRETARY FOR HEALTH.

Section 7306(a) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (7) as paragraph (8); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph (7):

''(7) Such directors of such other professional or auxiliary services as may be appointed to suit the needs of the Department, who shall be responsible to the Under Secretary for Health for the operation of their respective services.''.

SEC. 206. EXPANSION OF DIRECTOR GRADE OF THE PHYSICIAN AND DENTIST PAY SCHEDULE.

Section 7404(b)(2) is amended in the first sentence by inserting '', or comparable position'' before the period.

TITLE III—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 301. AUTHORIZATION REQUIREMENT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF NEW MEDICAL FACILITIES.

(a) AUTHORIZATION REQUIREMENT.—(1) Paragraph (2) of section 8104(a) is amended to read as follows:

''(2) No funds may be appropriated for any fiscal year, and the Secretary may not obligate or expend funds (other than for advance planning and design), for any major medical facility project or any major medical facility lease unless funds for that project or lease have been specifically authorized by law.''.

(2) Paragraph (3)(B) of that section is amended—

(A) by inserting ''new'' before ''medical facility'' the second place it appears; and

(B) by striking out ''$500,000'' and inserting in lieu thereof ''$300,000''.

(3) Subsection (c) of section 8104 is amended by striking out ''resolution'' both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof ''law''.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to any project for which funds were appropriated before the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 302. REDESIGNATION OF CERTAIN POSITIONS WITHIN THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS.

(a) REDESIGNATION OF POSITION OF CHIEF MEDICAL DIRECTOR.—The position of Chief Medical Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs is hereby redesignated as Under Secretary for Health of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(b) REDESIGNATION OF POSITION OF CHIEF BENEFITS DIRECTOR.—The position of Chief Benefits Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs is hereby redesignated as Under Secretary for Benefits of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(c) TITLE 38 CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Title 38, United States Code, is amended by striking out ''Chief Medical Director'' and ''Chief Benefits Director'' each place they appear (including in headings and tables but not including the sentences added by paragraphs (2) and (3)) and inserting in lieu thereof ''Under Secretary for Health'' and ''Under Secretary for Benefits'', respectively.

(2) Section 7301(a) is amended by adding after the last sentence the following: ''The Under Secretary for Health may be referred to as the Chief Medical Director.''.

(3) Section 7701(b) is amended by adding after the last sentence the following: ''The Under Secretary for Benefits may be referred to as the Chief Benefits Director.''.

''Chief Medical Director, Department of Veterans Affairs.

''Chief Benefits Director, Department of Veterans Affairs.''; and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

''Under Secretary for Health, Department of Veterans Affairs.

''Under Secretary for Benefits, Department of Veterans Affairs.''.

(e) REFERENCES IN OTHER LAWS.—Any reference in any Federal law, Executive order, rule, regulation, or delegation of authority, or any document of or pertaining to the Department of Veterans Affairs—

(1) to the Chief Medical Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs shall be deemed to refer to the Under Secretary for Health of the Department of Veterans Affairs; and

(2) to the Chief Benefits Director of the Department of Veterans Affairs shall be deemed to refer to the Under Secretary for Benefits of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

SEC. 303. ATTORNEY FEES IN CONNECTION WITH CERTAIN DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS PROCEEDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5904(c) is amended—

(1) By striking out ''In'' at the beginning of paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof ''Except as provided in paragraph (3), in''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) A reasonable fee may be charged or paid in connection with any proceeding before the Department in a case arising out of a loan made, guaranteed, or insured under chapter 37 of this title. A person who charges a fee under this paragraph shall enter into a written agreement with the person represented and shall file a copy of the fee agreement with the Secretary at such time, and in such manner, as may be specified by the Secretary.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Paragraph (3) of section 5904(c) of title 38, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall apply with respect to services of agents and attorneys provided after the date of the enactment of this Act.

And the House agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the Senate and the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2344) to improve the provision of health care and other services to veterans by the Department of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the Senate and House in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House with an amendment which is a substitute for the Senate bill and the House amendment. For each provision of the conference report, the differences between the provisions of the Senate bill, the House amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below (followed by a statement showing changes made in existing law) except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

TITLE I—GENERAL HEALTH

Part A—General Health Care

INCREASE IN LIMIT ON CERTAIN GRANTS FOR HOME STRUCTURAL ALTERATIONS FOR DISABLED VETERANS

Current law

Section 1717(a)(2) of title 38, United States Code, authorizes VA to furnish, as part of medical services furnished to a veteran under section 1712(a) of title 38, improvements and structural alterations as necessary to assure the continuation of treatment for the veterans' disability or to provide the veteran access to the home or to essential lavatory and sanitary facilities. The cost of (or reimbursement for) the improvements and alterations may not exceed (a) $2,500 in the case of medical services furnished under section 1712(a)(1) of title 38, i.e., services furnished (1) to a veteran for a service-connected disability, (2) for any disability of a veteran who has a service-connected disability rated at 50 percent or more, or (3) to any veteran for a disability for which the veteran is in receipt of compensation under section 1151 of title 38; or (b) $600 in the case of medical services furnished under any other provision of section 1712 of title 38.

Senate bill

Section 202, effective on the date of enactment, would (a) increase the maximum amount of reimbursement for such home modifications to $5,000 in the case of medical services furnished under section 1712(a)(1) of title 38; and (b) $1,200 in the case of medical services furnished under any other provision of section 1712.

House amendment

Section 101 would amend section 1717(a)(2) to increase, as of the date of enactment, the maximum amount of reimbursement for such home modifications to (a) $3,300 in the case of medical services furnished under section 1712(a)(1) of title 38; or (b) $1,200 in the case of medical services furnished under any other provision of section 1712.

Conference agreement

Section 101 would (a) increase the maximum amount of reimbursement for home modifications to (1) $4100 in the case of medical services furnished under section 1712(a)(1); (2) $1200 in the case of medical services furnished under any other provision of section 1712; (b) provide that the new rates would be effective in any case of a veteran who first applies for the grant benefit on or after January 1, 1990; and (c) clarify that a veteran who, prior to January 1, 1990, received the maximum amount of reimbursement authorized under the current limits of section 1717 is not entitled to additional monetary benefits by reason of the amendments.

SUBMISSION OF REPORTS OF GERIATRICS AND GERONTOLOGY ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Current law

Section 7315 of title 38(a) requires the Secretary to establish a Geriatrics and Gerontology Advisory Committee (GGAC); (b) sets forth the GGAC's duties; (c) requires the GGAC to submit to the Secretary, through the Chief Medical Director, such reports as the GGAC considers appropriate; and (d) requires the Secretary to transmit any GGAC reports, together with the Secretary's comments and recommendations thereon, to the House and Senate Committees on Veterans' Affairs not later than 90 days after receipt from the GGAC.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 103 would amend section 7315 to add a requirement that any reports issued by the GGAC be submitted simultaneously to the Secretary and the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs.

Conference agreement

Section 102 follows the House provision.

AUTHORITY TO HOLD JOINT TITLE TO MEDICAL EQUIPMENT

Current law

Section 8153(a) of title 38 authorizes the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to make arrangements, by contract or other form of agreement, for the sharing of specialized medical resources, including medical equipment, between VA health-care facilities and non-VA facilities for the mutual use, or exchange of use, of specialized medical resources when such an agreement will obviate the need for a VA health-care facility to provide a similar resource, or when specialized VA medical resources, while justified on the basis of veterans' care, are not utilized by VA to their maximum effective capacity. This section does not contain a specific authority for the joint procurement of medical equipment.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 105 would amend chapter 81 to add new sections 8157 and 8158 which would (a) permit the Secretary to enter into agreements with non-VA institutions described in section 8153(a) of title 38 for the acquisition of medical equipment where (1) the Secretary pays not more than one-half of the purchase price of equipment acquired, (2) the Secretary procures the equipment, (3) the Secretary and the chief executive of the non-VA institution arrange by contract, before the equipment is used, for the exchange of use of the equipment, and (4) the Secretary does not contract for the acquisition of such equipment until the non-VA institution provides its share of the purchase price of the equipment to the Secretary; (b) permit the Secretary, notwithstanding any other provision of law, to (1) transfer VA's interest in equipment acquired through a joint agreement to the non-VA institution holding joint title to the equipment if (A) the Secretary determines that the transfer would be justified by compelling clinical considerations or the economic interest of VA, and (B) the institution agrees to pay VA one-half of the depreciated purchase price of the equipment, and (2) acquire the interest of the non-VA institution in the equipment if (A) the Secretary determines that the acquisition would be justified by the considerations specified in (b)(1), above, and (B) VA pays no more than one-half of the depreciated price of the equipment; (c) permit the Secretary to enter into an escrow agreement with the non-VA institution which would (1) require that institution to pay to the Secretary the funds necessary to make a payment under a joint-funding acquisition agreement, (2) require the Secretary, as escrow agent, to administer those funds in an escrow account, and (3) require the Secretary to disburse those funds to pay for the equipment upon its delivery or in accordance with the procurement contract and disburse all accrued interest or other earnings on the escrowed funds to the non-VA institution; (d) permit the Secretary, as escrow agent, to (1) invest the escrowed funds in obligations which are insured or guaranteed by the Federal Government, (2) retain in the escrow account interest or other earnings on the investments, (3) disburse the funds pursuant to the escrow agreement, and (4) return undisbursed funds to the non-VA institution; (e) permit the Secretary, if the Secretary enters into an escrow agreement, to enter into a joint-funding acquisition agreement, if one-half of the purchase price of the equipment is available in an appropriation of funds for the expenditure or obligation; (f) require that funds held in an escrow account not be considered public funds; and (g) require the Secretary, not later than 45 days after the date of enactment, to submit to the House and Senate Committees on Veterans' Affairs a report on the Secretary's plans for implementation of this provision, along with identification and discussion of (1) the instructions the Secretary proposes to issue to medical facilities for the development of proposals for jointly funded procurement of medical equipment, including instructions for ensuring equitable arrangements for use of the equipment by VA and the non-VA sharing partner, (2) the criteria the Secretary plans to use to evaluate proposals, (3) the means by which the Secretary will integrate the process of procuring equipment with policies and procedures governing health-care planning for VHA, and (4) the criteria by which determinations regarding the transfer of title to equipment would be made.

Section 103 follows the House provision.

QUALITY ASSURANCE ACTIVITIES

Current law

Section 7311 of title 38 (a) requires the Secretary to (1) establish and conduct a comprehensive program to monitor and evaluate the quality of VA health-care services, and (2) delineate the responsibilities of the Chief Medical Director with respect to the quality assurance program; (b) specifies the types of information that the Chief Medical Director must evaluate as part of the quality assurance program; (c) requires the Chief Medical Director to make such recommendations as the Chief Medical Director considers appropriate on the basis of evaluations conducted pursuant to the quality assurance program; (d) requires (1) the Secretary to allocate sufficient resources (including sufficient personnel with the necessary skills and qualifications) to enable the Veterans Health Administration to carry out its responsibilities under section 7311 of title 38, and (2) the Inspector General to allocate sufficient resources (including sufficient personnel with the necessary skills and qualifications) to enable the Inspector General to monitor the quality assurance program.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 106 would require that, effective October 1, 1992, all quality assurance programs and activities carried out by the Secretary within the Veterans Health Administration be deemed to be part of the operation of hospitals, nursing homes, and domiciliary facilities, without regard to the locations of the duty stations of the employees carrying out those programs and activities, and thus would be funded through the Medical Care account.

Conference agreement

Section 104 follows the House provision.

Current law

On September 4, 1991, the Secretary administratively established a Prosthetics Services Advisory Committee with twelve members.

Senate bill

Section 205 would require the Secretary to establish an Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs with membership including representatives of veterans-prosthetics users, recognized experts in the field of prosthetics engineering, and individuals engaged in prosthetics research, rehabilitative medicine, and relevant clinical treatment. The function of the Committee would be to advise the Secretary on all matters related to prosthetics and special-disabilities programs administered by the Secretary; the coordination of programs of the Department for the development and testing of, and for information exchange regarding, prosthetics devices; the coordination of Department and non-Department programs that involve the development and testing of prosthetics devices; and the adequacy of funding for the prosthetics and special-disabilities programs of the Department. The Committee would be required to submit concurrently to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs and the Secretary three annual reports beginning on June 15, 1992. Not later than 30 days after receiving each report, the Secretary would be required to submit a report to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs commenting on the Advisory Committee's report.

House amendment

Section 107 is similar to the Senate provision with amendments such that the provision would (a) require the existing VA Prosthetics Services Advisory Committee—the charter of which was filed on September 4, 1990—to adhere to the objectives and scope set forth in the Senate provision; and (b) with respect to the Advisory Committee annual reports (1) require the reports on January 15 of 1993, 1994, and 1995, and (2) require that the Secretary submit commentary on the Advisory Committee's annual reports to the Committees not later than 60 days after the date on which any such report is received by the Secretary.

Conference agreement

Section 105 follows the House amendment.

PROSTHETIC SERVICES REPORT

Senate bill

Section 209 would require the Secretary to submit to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs by July 15, 1992, a report containing (a) an evaluation of the reasons for the accumulation of the backlog in VA's provision of prosthetic appliances that grew to $10.6 million in FY 1989 and for the failure to observe, in connection with the provision of prosthetic appliances, the statutory priorities established in section 1712(i)(1) of title 38, and (b) a description of the actions that the Secretary has taken and is planning to take to prevent such a recurrence of these problems.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 106 follows the Senate bill with an amendment which changes the due date of the report to six months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SERVICES FOR HOMELESS VETERANS

Assessment of the needs of homeless veterans and available services

Senate bill

Section 203(a)(1) would require each VA medical center (VAMC) or regional benefits office (RO) (in consultation with all VA facilities serving veterans in the appropriate service area and with existing community-based organizations that have experience in working with homeless persons) to make an assessment of the needs of homeless veterans in that facility's catchment area for health care, education, training, employment, shelter, counseling, and outreach services and the extent to which these needs are being met by VA programs, other government programs, and private programs.

Section 203(a)(2) would require each VAMC, in conjunction with the appropriate RO and the Director of Veterans Employment and Training in the State, to develop a plan for each of FYs 1993, 1994, and 1995 for the provision of outreach and other comprehensive services to homeless veterans in that VAMC/RO catchment are and, in developing such a plan, to attempt, to the maximum feasible extent to meet, within existing authorities and available resources, needs identified in the assessment as unmet and to coordinate with other Federal, State, and local programs that provide services to homeless persons or homeless veterans. Each plan would be required to include a list of all local, private, and governmental programs that offer assistance to homeless persons or homeless veterans and identify the services offered by those programs.

Section 203(a)(3) would require the director of each VAMC to be responsible for carrying out the plan for that VAMC's catchment area and taking appropriate steps to seek to inform each homeless veteran, and each veteran who is at risk of becoming homeless, of the services available to the veteran within that area.

Section 203(a)(4) would require each VAMC director to disseminate to all other government agencies, local governments, and private entities that provide services to homeless veterans information regarding services provided to homeless veterans by the VAMC or other VA facilities.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 107 generally follows the Senate bill with amendments such that the compromise agreement would require the Secretary to (a) assess all programs developed by facilities of the Department which have been designed and established to assist homeless veterans; (b) to the maximum extent practicable, seek to replicate at other facilities of the Department those programs which have as a goal the rehabilitation of homeless veterans and which the Secretary has determined to be successful in achieving that goal by fostering reintegration of such veterans in the community and the employment of such veterans; (c) require directors of VA medical centers and regional benefits offices, in coordination with non-VA organizations with experience working with local homeless persons, to develop lists of all programs assisting homeless persons and encourage the cooperative development of local plan for coordinating services for homeless veterans and (d) require directors of VA medical centers and regional benefits offices to meet, to the maximum extent practicable through existing programs and available resources, the identified needs of homeless veterans and attempt to inform homeless veterans whose needs cannot be met of services available in the area.

Under section 115 of Public Law 100–322, the Veterans' Benefits and Services Act of 1988, VA was required, in FYs 1988 and 1989, to conduct a pilot program to provide care, treatment, and rehabilitative services (directly or by contract) in halfway houses, therapeutic communities, psychiatric residential treatment centers, and other community-based treatment facilities to homeless chronically mentally ill (HCMI) veterans who are eligible for care under section 1710(a)(1) of title 38. Public Law 100–628, the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Amendments Act of 1988 (McKinney Act II), authorized appropriations of $30 million for each of FYs 1989 and 1990 and required that 50 percent of the funds so appropriated in each of those years be available for the HCMI program and 50 percent be available for the Domiciliary Care for Homeless Veterans (DCHV) program (discussed below). Public Law 101-237 extended the authority for the HCMI program through FY 1992, and Public Law 101-645 authorized appropriations of $31.5 million for FY 1991 and $33.075 million for FY 1992 to be divided equally between the HCMI and DCHV programs.

Senate bill

Section 203(e) would (a) extend through FY 1993 the authorization of HCMI appropriations and increase the authorized levels of appropriations to $35 million for FY 1992 and $40 million for FY 1993; and (b) extend the HCMI program's authority by two years, through FY 1994.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 107(g) extends the HCMI program's authority through FY 1994 and increases the authorized level of appropriations for the HCMI and DCHV programs to $50 million for FY 1993, with funds appropriated in that year to be allocated between those two programs at the Secretary's discretion.

Extension of domiciliary care for homeless veterans (DCHV) program

Current law

Public Law 100-71, the Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1987, authorized VA to implement the DCHV program and appropriated $15 million for the conversion to domiciliary-care beds of underutilized space located in facilities in urban areas in which there are significant numbers of homeless veterans. Subsequent authorizations of appropriations of $15 million for FYs 1989 and 1990 were enacted in McKinney Act II, and authorizations of $15.75 million for 1991 and $16.54 million for FY 1992 were enacted in Public Law 101-645.

Senate bill

Section 203(e) would extend through FY 1993 the authorization of DCHV appropriations and increase the authorized level of appropriations to $22.5 million for FY 1992 and $25 million for FY 1993.

House amendment:

No provision.

Conference agreement

As noted above, section 107(g) authorizes the appropriation of $50 million for the HCMI and DCHV programs for FY 1993, with funds appropriated in that year to be allocated between those two programs at the Secretary's discretion.

Authority to accept donations for certain programs

Current law

Section 8301 of title 38 authorizes the Secretary to accept devises, bequests, and gifts with respect to which the donor has indicated a desire that the property be used for the benefit of veterans or a veterans' hospital or home. The Secretary may also accept, for use in carrying out all laws administered by the Secretary, gifts, devises, and bequests which will enhance the Secretary's ability to provide services and benefits.

Senate bill

Section 203(c) would authorize VA to accept donations for the purposes of establishing one-stop, non-residential service centers and mobile support teams and expanding the health services available to homeless veterans eligible for VA benefits and services.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 107(e) follows the Senate bill.

Report

Senate bill

Section 203(f) would require the Secretary to submit by February 1, 1994, a report of an evaluation of certain programs relating to homeless veterans, specifically the assessment of the needs of homeless veterans, the pilot program for contract domiciliary care for homeless veterans, and the authority to accept donations for certain programs for homeless veterans.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 107(i) follows the Senate bill, with a modification to limit the evaluation to the Secretary's replication of homeless veterans programs at other VA facilities and the authority to accept donations for certain programs.

Part B—Mental Health Provisions

MARRIAGE AND FAMILY COUNSELING FOR PERSIAN GULF WAR VETERANS

Current law

Under sections 1701(6)(B), 1712(b)(2), and 1712A(b)(2) of title 38, VA has limited authority to provide counseling services to family members of eligible veterans. Counseling of family members may be provided only if it is either necessary for the effective treatment or rehabilitation of a service-connected disability of a veteran, part of a necessary follow-up treatment of a veteran, part of a necessary follow-up treatment of a veteran who has been hospitalized, or essential to the effective treatment or readjustment of a veteran receiving mental health services under VA's readjustment counseling authority.

Senate bill

Sections 131 through 134 include provisions that would establish a program of marriage and family counseling for certain veterans of the Persian Gulf War and the spouses and families of such veterans, as follows:

Basic requirement

Section 131(a) would require VA to establish, within 30 days after enactment and subject to the availability of appropriations, a program of marriage and family counseling for certain Persian Gulf War veterans and their families. The authority for this program would expire on September 30, 1994.

Persons eligible for counseling

Section 131(b) would authorize VA to provide, either directly or by contract, marriage and family counseling to (a) veterans who were awarded campaign medals for active-duty service during the Persian Gulf War and their spouses, children, and parents, and (b) veterans who are or were members of reserve components—including the Reserve and National Guard forces—who were called to active duty during the war and their spouses, children, and parents.

Counseling services

Section 131(c) would permit VA to provide only marriage and family counseling that the Secretary determines—based on an assessment by a mental-health professional designated by the Secretary—is necessary for the amelioration of psychological, marital, or familial difficulties that resulted from the veteran's active duty service.

Manner of furnishing services

Section 131(d) would (a) require that the marriage and family counseling be furnished either (1) directly by VA personnel, including marriage and family counselors employed by VA, whom the Secretary determines are either appropriately certified or otherwise qualified, or (2) through contract arrangements with mental health professionals whom the Secretary determines are appropriately qualified; and (b) authorize VA to employ certified marriage and family counselors to provide counseling under the program and pay them at the rates prevailing for such counseling among non-VA professionals in the same locality.

Contract counseling services

Section 131(e) would in the case of contract counseling (a) require the provider to submit to VA within 15 days of the start of the treatment, on a form prescribed by the Secretary, a treatment plan which includes how many visits are expected. In a case in which a treatment plan is disapproved, require VA to reimburse the mental health professional for the reasonable cost (as determined by the Secretary) of furnishing counseling services to the person for the period beginning on the date of the commencement of such services and ending on the date of the disapproval; (b) provide that, when counseling is provided under a contract with VA, no care may be provided more than 90 days after the counseling was initiated (or after the end of a previously approved period of care) unless approved by the Secretary on the condition that counseling is needed as a result of active-duty service and is provided pursuant to an updated treatment plan submitted not more than 30 days before the end of the 90-day period (or before the end of the previously approved period of care); and (c) provide that, in the case of contract counseling, if a non-VA mental health professional determines that counseling is needed to ameliorate psychological difficulties resulting from active-duty service, that same mental health professional generally may not provide the services. The Secretary would be authorized to waive this prohibition for locations in which the Secretary is unable to obtain the assessment by a mental health professional other than the one with whom the Secretary contracts for the furnishing of counseling services.

Cost recovery

Section 131(f) would provide that the third-party reimbursement provisions in section 1729 of title 38, United States Code, under which VA is authorized, under certain circumstances, to collect from insurers the cost of care provided by VA, would apply to services provided under the pilot program.

Authorization of appropriations

Section 133 would authorize the appropriation of $10 million for each of fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

Reports

Section 134 would require the Secretary to submit (a) by April 1, 1993, an interim report describing the number of individuals who have received care under the program and the numbers of visits that the individuals made, with breakdowns showing the numbers who were reservists, other veterans, spouses, children, or parents and the numbers of individuals who received direct VA services as opposed to contract services; and (b) by January 1, 1994, a report that includes updates of those data and a description and evaluation of the program and any recommendations that the Secretary considers appropriate.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 121 follows the Senate bill with amendments that (a) change the due date of the Secretary's initial report on the program to July 1, 1994, and eliminate the January 1, 1994, final report requirement; (b) strike the 30-day requirement for implementation of the program; (c) change the program expiration date to September 30, 1994; (d) exclude parents from eligibility for counseling under the program; (e) authorize VA to establish a personnel classification specifically for marriage and family counselors; and (f) clarify that any contract arrangements are subject to the same provisions as set forth in section 1703 of title 38 which permits VA to contract for medical and rehabilitative services only when VA facilities are not capable of furnishing economical services because of geographic inaccessibility or are not capable of furnishing the required services.

POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER RESEARCH AND REPORTS

Senate bill

Section 106(a)(6)(B) would require the Secretary, as part of the reporting requirement in section 106, to provide information on the Secretary's efforts to give research relating to PTSD a high priority in the allocation of funds available to VA for research related to mental health.

House amendment

Section 109 would require that the Secretary in carrying out research and awarding grants under chapter 73 of title 38, assign a high priority to the conduct of research on mental illness including research on PTSD, PTSD in association with substance abuse, and the treatment of those disorders.

Conference agreement

Section 122(a) follows section 109 of the House amendment.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER

Current law

Under section 110(e) of the Veterans' Health Care Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-528), the Secretary is required to submit to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs annual reports, not later than February 1 of 1986, 1987, 1988, and 1989, regarding the Department's efforts regarding PTSD and to include in such reports the views of the Department's Special Committee on PTSD. Section 210(e) of the Veterans' Benefits Amendments of 1989 (Public Law 101-237) required the Special Committee to submit concurrently to the Department and the Congressional Committees by February 1, 1990, a report updating the earlier reports. Section 204 of the Department of Veterans Affairs Nurse Pay Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-366) requires the Special Committee to submit a report concurrently to the Department and the Congressional Committees by February 1, 1991.

Senate bill

Section 107 would (a) require the Special Committee, not later than January 1, 1994, to submit its evaluation of the 1988 study on the postwar psychological problems of Vietnam veterans and (b) extend for two years, through January 1994, the reporting requirements of VA's Special Committee on PTSD and require the reports to be submitted concurrently to VA and the Congressional Committees.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 122(b) requires the Special Committee to submit two additional reports, not later than October 1, 1992, and October 1, 1993, updating earlier Special Committee reports.

POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER PROGRAM PLANNING

Senate bill

Section 105 would require that, not later than June 1, 1992, the Secretary (a) devise and initiate implementation of a plan to increase, to levels commensurate with the needs of veterans suffering from PTSD related to active-duty service, PTSD treatment provided in specialized inpatient and outpatient treatment programs, including PTSD/substance abuse programs, and in Vet Centers; and (b) enhance outreach activities to combat veterans and encourage such veterans to participate in treatment.

In developing this plan, the Secretary would be required to consider (a) the level and geographic accessibility of inpatient and outpatient care for veterans suffering from PTSD, (b) the desirability of furnishing inpatient care in facilities that are physically independent of general VA psychiatric wards, and (c) the treatment needs of veterans with PTSD who are women or who are members of ethnic minorities.

In implementing the plan, the Secretary would be required to (a) prescribe a schedule for implementation, (b) prescribe appropriate criteria for the selection and training of staff necessary to increase the availability of treatment and enhance outreach, and (c) provide facilities, personnel, funds, and other resources necessary to carry out the plan.

Section 106 would require that, not later than 90 days after the date of enactment, the Secretary submit to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs a report on the plan described in section 105. The report would be required to include (a) a description of the plan; (b) a description of the resources necessary to increase treatment availability for PTSD and enhance outreach; (c) a description of VA's efforts to make such resources available; (d) an estimate of the availability of community-based residential treatment for PTSD and the impact of such availability on the increased availability of such treatment by VA; (e) an assessment of the need for, and potential benefit of, providing scholarships or other educational assistance to improve the training of individuals providing PTSD treatment; (f) recommendations to improve the availability of PTSD treatment; (g) a description of the efforts by the Secretary to implement the recommendations of the Special Committee on PTSD with respect to (1) establishing educational programming directed to each of the various levels of education, training, and experience of the various mental health professionals involved in the treatment of veterans suffering from PSTD, and (2) giving PTSD-related research a priority in VA mental-health research funding; and (h) any other proposals and recommendations that the Secretary considers appropriate to increase the availability of PTSD treatment.

House amendment

Section 110 would (a) require the Secretary, in consultation with the Chief Medical Director's Special Committee on PTSD, to assess the need for treatment and rehabilitative services for veterans with PTSD and develop a plan for delivery of PTSD treatment and rehabilitation based on (a) the Secretary's estimate of the numbers of veterans who suffer from PTSD who are likely to seek care from VA and are entitled by law to such care; (b) the current and projected capacity to provide services; and (c) the Secretary's evaluation of existing programs.

Section 110(c) would require that, not later than August 30, 1993, the Secretary submit to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs a report on the needs assessment and plan as described in section 110(a) and (b).

Section 123 requires the Secretary to (a) develop a plan to (1) ensure to the maximum extent practicable that veterans suffering from PTSD related to active duty are provided appropriate treatment and rehabilitative services for that condition in a timely manner, (2) expand and improve the services available for veterans suffering from PTSD related to active duty, (3) eliminate waiting lists for inpatient and other modes of treatment for PTSD, (4) enhance outreach activities to inform combat-area veterans of the availability of treatment for PTSD, and (5) ensure, to the extent practicable, that there are Department PTSD units in locations readily accessible to veterans residing in rural areas of the United States. The Secretary would also be required to consider, in developing the plan described above, (1) the numbers of veterans suffering from PTSD related to active duty, as indicated by relevant studies, scientific and clinical reports, and other pertinent information, (2) the numbers of veterans who would likely seek PTSD treatment from the Department if waiting times for treatment were eliminated and outreach activities to combat-area veterans with PTSD were enhanced, (3) current and projected capacity to provide appropriate treatment and rehabilitative services for PTSD, (4) the level and geographic accessibility of inpatient and outpatient care for veterans suffering from PTSD across the United States, (5) the desirability of providing inpatient and outpatient PTSD care in Department facilities that are physically independent of general psychiatric wards at the Department's medical facilities, (6) the treatment needs of such veterans who are women, of such veterans who are ethnic minorities (including Native Americans, Native Hawaiians, Asian-Pacific Islanders, and Native Alaskans) and of such veterans who suffer from substance abuse problems in addition to PTSD, and (7) the recommendations of the Special Committee on PTSD with respect to specialized inpatient and outpatient programs of the Department for the treatment of PTSD and the establishment of educational programming that is directed to each of the various levels of education, training, and experience of the various mental health professionals involved in the treatment of veterans suffering from PTSD. The Secretary would be required to submit to the Congressional Committees on Veterans' Affairs and report on the plan as described above not later than six months from the date of enactment.

TITLE II—HEALTH-CARE PERSONNEL

CAP ON CERTAIN RATES OF PAY

Current law

Section 7455 of title 38 (a) authorizes the Secretary to increase the minimum, intermediate, or maximum rates of basic pay for certain health-care personnel and VHA police officers on a nationwide, local, or other geographic basis; (b) requires that increases in rates of basic pay pursuant to this authority be made only in order to (1) provide salaries competitive with, but not in excess of, salaries paid to the same category of personnel at non-Federal facilities in a VA facility's local labor market, (2) achieve adequate staffing at particular facilities, or (3) recruit personnel with specialized skills; and (c) provides that (1) the amount of any increase under this authority in the maximum rate of basic pay for any grade may not exceed (except in the case of nurse anesthetists and licensed physical therapists) the amount by which the maximum for that grade exceeds the minimum rate of pay for that grade, and (2) the maximum rate as so increased may not exceed the rate paid for individuals serving in the position of Assistant Chief Medical Director.

Senate bill

Section 222 would amend subsection (c) of section 7455 so as to (a) authorize the Secretary to increase the maximum rate under the special rates authority for any grade to two times the difference between the minimum and maximum rate of pay for that grade and (b) require the Secretary to notify the two Committees on Veterans' Affairs whenever an increased rate is equal to or greater than 94 percent of the maximum rate authorized.

House amendment

Section 201 contains the same provision.

Section 201 contains this provision.

MINIMUM PERIOD OF SERVICE FOR SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENTS

Current law

Section 7612 of title 38 sets forth criteria for participation in the Health Professional Scholarship Program, established pursuant to section 7611 of title 38, which include a requirement that an agreement between the Secretary and a scholarship recipient include (a) the Secretary's agreement to provide the recipient with a scholarship for a specified number (from one to four) of school years, and (b) the recipient's agreement to serve as a full-time VA employee for one calendar year for each school year or part thereof for which the recipient participated in the scholarship program.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 202 would amend section 7612(c)(1)(B) so as to require participants who enter into scholarship agreements after the date of enactment to serve as full-time employees in VHA for a minimum of two years.

Conference agreement

Section 202 follows the House provision.

AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE ITEMS OF NOMINAL VALUE FOR RECRUITMENT PURPOSES

Current law

Under current law, VA has no specific authority to purchase promotional items of nominal value for use in the recruitment of individuals for employment.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 203 would (a) authorize the Secretary to purchase promotional items of nominal value for use in the recruitment of individuals for employment in VA health-care positions, and (b) require the Secretary to prescribe guidelines for the administration of the procurement and use of such items.

Conference agreement

Section 203 follows the House provision.

SPECIAL PAY FOR CERTAIN PHYSICIANS AND DENTISTS BASED ON BOARD CERTIFICATION

Current law

Section 7437(e) of title 38 requires (a) that, in the case of a physician or dentist who was employed in the Veterans Health Administration (VHA) on a full-time basis on July 13, 1991, the day before the effective date of the Department of Veterans Affairs Physician and Dentist Recruitment and Retention Act of 1991, title I of Public Law 102-40, and on that date was being paid only for the special-pay factors of primary, full-time, and length of service, that physician or dentist shall continue to be paid special pay at a rate not less than the rate of special pay paid to him or her on that date; and (b) that a physician or dentist who was employed in VHA on a part-time basis on July 13, 1992, and on that date was being paid only for the special-pay factors of primary and length of service shall continue to be paid special pay at a rate not less than the rate paid to the physician or dentist on that date.

Senate bill

Section 225 would amend section 7437(e) to require that a physician or dentist who was employed in VHA on July 13, 1991, and who was being paid special pay for no special pay factors other than primary, full-time, length of service, or specialty or board certification shall continue to be paid special pay at an annual rate no lower than the rate at which the physician or dentist was paid on that date.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 204 follows the Senate provision.

AUTHORITY TO APPOINT NON-PHYSICIAN DIRECTORS TO THE OFFICE OF THE UNDER SECRETARY FOR HEALTH

Current law

Section 7306(a) of title 38 authorizes the Secretary to appoint individuals to positions in the Office of the Under Secretary for Health and, pursuant to section 7404 of title 38, pay such individuals under the title 38 authority.

Senate bill

Section 226 would amend section 7306(a) to authorize the Secretary to appoint all non-physician directors of clinical support services within VHA under the title 38 personnel appointment authority.

House amendment

Section 204 contains the same provision.

Conference agreement

Section 205 contains this provision.

EXPANSION OF DIRECTOR GRADE OF THE PHYSICIAN AND DENTIST PAY SCHEDULE

Current law

Section 7404(b) of title 38 (a) establishes pay schedules for physicians and dentists, registered nurses, and clinical podiatrists and optometrists employed by the Veterans Health Administration; (b) limits the use of the director grade of the physician and dentist schedule to physicians and dentists serving as directors of hospitals, domiciliaries, centers, or independent outpatient clinics; and (c) limits the use of the executive grade of the physician and dentist schedule to physicians and dentists serving as chiefs of staff at a hospital, or independent outpatient clinic, or in a comparable position.

Senate bill

Section 227 would amend section 7404(b)(2) to authorize the use of the director grade of the physician and dentist pay schedule for a physician or dentist serving in a position comparable to that of a director of a hospital, domiciliary, center, or independent outpatient clinic.

House amendment

Section 205 contains the same provision.

Conference agreement

Section 206 contains this provision.

AUTHORIZATION REQUIREMENT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF NEW MEDICAL FACILITIES

Current law

Section 8104(a)(2) of title 38 provides that it is not in order in the Senate or in the House to consider a bill, resolution, or amendment that would make an appropriation for any fiscal year for a major medical facility project or a major medical facility lease unless (a) the bill, resolution, or amendment specifies the amount to be appropriated for that project or lease, (b) the project or lease has been approved in a resolution adopted by the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of that House, and (c) the amount to be appropriated for that project or lease is no more than the amount specified in that resolution for that project or lease for that fiscal year. Section 8104(a)(3) defines a "major medical facility project" as a project for the construction, alteration, or acquisition of a medical facility involving a total expenditure of more than $2 million and a "major medical facility lease" as a lease for space for use as a medical facility at an average annual rental of more than $500,000.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 301 would amend section 8104(a) to provide, with respect to projects as to which no funds have been appropriated before the date of enactment, that (a) no funds may be appropriated for any fiscal year, and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs may not obligate or expend funds (other than for advance planning and design), for any major medical project or any major medical facility lease unless funds for that project or lease have been specifically authorized by law; (b) a "major medical facility lease" is a lease of space for use as a new medical facility; and (c) a covered lease is one with an average annual rent of more than $300,000.

Conference agreement

Section 301 follows the House provision.

REDESIGNATION OF CERTAIN POSITIONS WITHIN THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Current law

Sections 305 and 306 of title 38 designate the heads of the Veterans Health Administration and the Veterans Benefits Administration of the Department of Veterans Affairs as the Chief Medical Director and Chief Benefits Director, respectively.

Senate bill

No provision.

House amendment

Section 302 would redesignate the positions of Chief Medical Director and Chief Benefits Director as the Under Secretary for Health and the Under Secretary for Benefits, respectively.

Conference agreement

Section 302 follows the House provision.

CLARIFICATION OF PROHIBITION ON PAYMENT OF ATTORNEYS' FEES

Current law

Section 5904(c)(1) of title 38 provides that, in connection with a proceeding before VA with respect to benefits under laws administered by VA, a fee may not be charged, allowed, or paid for services of agents or attorneys with respect to services provided before the date on which the Board of Veterans' Appeals first makes a final decision in the case.

Senate bill

Section 401 would amend section 5904(c) to clarify that the prohibition against the payment of attorneys' fees for representation in a proceeding before VA relating to VA benefits does not apply in the case of a veteran or other person involved with an administrative debt-collection proceeding brought by VA or in other situations in which no claim for benefits is involved.

House amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Section 303 follows the Senate bill with an amendment containing the language of section 2 of H.R. 939, as passed by the House on March 3, 1992, to permit attorneys to represent veterans and charge a reasonable fee only in connection with any waiver or debt collection proceeding before the Department in a case arising out of a loan made, guaranteed, or insured under chapter 73 of title 38.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE CONFERENCE AGREEMENT ON S. 2344

SUBCHAPTER III—ADVISORY COMMITTEES

* * * * *

§543. Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs

(a) There is in the Department an advisory committee known as the Advisory Committee on Prosthetics and Special-Disabilities Programs (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Committee").

(b) The objectives and scope of activities of the Committee shall relate to—

(1) prosthetics and special-disabilities programs administered by the Secretary;

(2) the coordination of programs of the Department for the development and testing of, and for information exchange regarding, prosthetic devices;

(3) the coordination of Department and non-Department programs that involve the development and testing of prosthetic devices; and

(4) the adequacy of funding for the prosthetics and special-disabilities programs of the Department.

(c) The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, consult with and seek the advice of the Committee on the matters described in subsection (b).

(d) Not later than January 15 of 1993, 1994, and 1995, the Committee shall submit to the Secretary and the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the effectiveness of the prosthetics and special-disabilities programs administered by the Secretary during the preceding fiscal year. Not more than 60 days after the date on which any such report is received by the Secretary, the Secretary shall submit a report to such committees commenting on the report of the Committee.

(1) spinal-cord-injured veterans;

(2) blind veterans;

(3) veterans who have lost or lost the use of extremities;

(4) hearing-impaired veterans; and

(5) other veterans with serious incapacities in terms of daily life functions.

Such a fee may be charged, allowed, or paid in the case of services provided after such date only if an agent or attorney is retained with respect to such case before the end of the one-year period beginning on that date. The limitation in the preceding sentence does not apply to services provided with respect to proceedings before a court.

* * * * *

(3) A reasonable fee may be charged or paid in connection with any proceeding before the Department in a case arising out of a loan made, guaranteed, or insured under chapter 37 of this title. A person who charges a fee under this paragraph shall enter into a written agreement with the person represented and shall file a copy of the fee agreement with the Secretary at such time, and in such manner, as may be specified by the Secretary.

§8104. Congressional approval of certain medical facility acquisitions

[(2) It shall not be in order in the Senate or in the House of Representatives to consider a bill, resolution, or amendment which would make an appropriation for any fiscal year which may be expended for a major medical facility project or a major medical facility lease unless—

[(A) such bill, resolution, or amendment specifies the amount to be appropriated for that project or lease,

[(B) the project or lease has been approved in a resolution adopted by the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of that House, and

[(C) the amount to be appropriated for that project or lease is no more than the amount specified in that resolution for that project or lease for that fiscal year.]

(2) No funds may be appropriated for any fiscal year, and the Secretary may not obligate or expend funds (other than for advance planning and design), for any major medical facility project or any major medical facility lease unless funds for that project or lease have been specifically authorized by law.

(3) For the purpose of this subsection:

(A) The term "major medical facility project" means a project for the construction, alteration, or acquisition of a medical facility involving a total expenditure of more than $2,000,000, but such term does not include an acquisition by exchange.

(B) The term "major medical facility lease" means a lease for space for use as a new medical facility at an average annual rental of more than [$500,000.] $300,000.

* * * * *

(c) Not less than 30 days before obligating funds for a major medical facility project approved by a [resolution] law described in subsection (a)(2) of this section in an amount that would cause the total amount obligated for that project to exceed the amount specified in the [resolution] law for that project (or would add to total obligations exceeding such specified amount) by more than 10 percent, the Secretary shall provide the committees with notice of the Secretary's intention to do so and the reasons for the specified amount being exceeded.

SUBCHAPTER IV—SHARING OF MEDICAL FACILITIES, EQUIPMENT, AND INFORMATION

* * * * *

§8157. Joint title to medical equipment

(a) Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary may enter into agreements with institutions described in section 8153(a) of this title for the joint acquisition of medical equipment.

(b)(1) The Secretary may not pay more than one-half of the purchase price of equipment acquired through an agreement under subsection (a).

(2) Any equipment to be procured under such an agreement shall be procured by the Secretary. Title to such equipment shall be held jointly by the United States and the institution.

(3) Before equipment acquired under such an agreement may be used, the parties to the agreement shall arrange by contract under section 8153 of this title for the exchange or use of the equipment.

(4) The Secretary may not contract for the acquisition of medical equipment to be purchased jointly under an agreement under subsection (a) until the institution which enters into the agreement provides to the Secretary its share of the purchase price of the medical equipment.

(c)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may transfer the interest of the Department in equipment acquired through an agreement under subsection (a) to the institution which holds joint title to the equipment if the Secretary determines that the transfer would be justified by compelling clinical considerations or the economic interest of the Department. Any such transfer may only be made upon agreement by the institution to pay to the Department the amount equal to one-half of the depreciated purchase price of the equipment. Any such payment when received shall be credited to the applicable Department medical appropriation.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may acquire the interest of an institution in equipment acquired under subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that the acquisition would be justified by compelling clinical considerations or the economic interests of the Department. The Secretary may not pay more than one-half the depreciated purchase price of that equipment.

§8158. Deposit in escrow

(a) To facilitate the procurement of medical equipment pursuant to section 8157 of this title, the Secretary may enter into escrow agreements with institutions described in section 8153(a) of this title. Any such agreement shall provide that—

(1) the institutions shall pay to the Secretary the funds necessary to make a payment under section 8157(b)(4) of this title;

(2) the Secretary, as escrow agent, shall administer those funds in an escrow account; and

(3) the Secretary shall disburse the escrowed funds to pay for such equipment upon its delivery or in accordance with the contract to procure the equipment and shall disburse all accrued interest or other earnings on the escrowed funds to the institution.

(b) As escrow agent for funds placed in escrow pursuant to an agreement under subsection (a), the Secretary may—

(1) invest the escrowed funds in obligations of the Federal Government or obligations which are insured or guaranteed by the Federal Government;

(2) retain in the escrow account interest or other earnings on such investments;

(3) disburse the funds pursuant to the escrow agreement; and

(4) return undisbursed funds to the institution.

(c)(1) If the Secretary enters into an escrow agreement under this section, the Secretary may enter into an agreement to procure medical equipment if one-half the purchase price of the equipment is available in an appropriation or fund for the expenditure or obligation.

(2) Funds held in an escrow account under this section shall not be considered to be public funds.

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 12, CABLE TELEVISION CONSUMER PROTECTION AND COMPETITION ACT OF 1992

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 571, I call up the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 12) to amend title VI of the Communications Act of 1934 to ensure carriage on cable television of local news and other programming and to restore the right of local regulatory authorities to regulate cable television rate, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the conference report is considered as having been read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Lent] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1½ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the cable industry is a monopoly. That is why we are here today. It has absolutely no competition across this country. As a result, Mr. Speaker, consumers are left to the mercy of the cable industry, which has resulted in a three times the rate of inflation increase in their rates every year for the last 8 years in a row. This bill puts an end to that.

The Consumer Federation of America, the American Association of Retired People, the AFL-CIO, argue that we will save $6 billion a year for consumers in this country, a $6 billion tax cut, for consumers across this country, that goes into the pockets of ordinary people, a $6 billion tax cut for ordinary people.

Mr. Speaker, the FCC says that if there was competition for the cable industry, that it would reduce rates by $5.3 billion. This bill gives real competition to the cable industry. As a result, it will reduce rates by $5.3 billion, even using the FCC's arguments.

The debate is really between whether it is going to be a $5 billion or a $6 billion benefit. The real argument is whether we are going to have a $5 billion or $6 billion benefit for the consumers of this country.

For the cable industry to be arguing now, at this late moment, with their crocodile tears that they are concerned about the consumers of this country, is to engage in the most disingenuous of arguments.

This is a very simple debate. A yes vote is for the consumer, a no vote is for the cable industry, make no bones about it. That is how the voters of this country are going to use this issue in November.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the conference report to S. 12, the so-called Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act. This is a truly misleading title for this legislation, because if there is anything this bill lacks it is consumer protection and competition. The saddest irony is that we had an opportunity to pass legislation that would have provided cable subscribers with some protection and would have increased competition in the cable industry.

But that opportunity has long since passed. Unfortunately, the bill before us today perpetrates a cruel hoax on the American people; it is a cable rate-raising measure masquerading as a cable subscriber cure all. Mark my words, if this bill is enacted, it will raise cable rates and subscribers will be screaming that the remedy is far worse than the disease. And they will know who to thank for this supposed gift.

Mr. Speaker, when we first considered legislation to examine an essentially deregulated cable industry 4 years ago, we focused narrowly on the key consumer concerns: rates and services. And we passed a bill in 1990 that addressed those problems. I would have hoped that bill would have been our starting point this year. But that was not to be.

Instead, we were told that things have changed—that is, the cable industry's record has been so dismal over the last 2 years that a more stringent and regulatory bill is appropriate. Never mind that no record was ever developed in the Energy and Commerce Committee to justify such a bill. Sadly, we have come to understand exactly what was meant by things have changed—politics.

In the Energy and Commerce Committee and on the House floor, I have previously urged my colleagues to support a moderate, responsible approach to the cable rates and service issues. But we have consistently seen the triumph of politics over substance. This leads me to the conclusion that I must oppose the cable legislation before us today.

Mr. Speaker, there has been a raging debate over whether this bill will save or cost cable customers money and how much. On that score, let me simply point out that the method of establishing cable subscribers rates under the bill is essentially a traditional cost plus formula. Thus, the cable operator will simply total up the costs of providing a basic tier of cable service, and pass these costs on with a reasonable profit.

The structure of the basic tier under this bill, the cable equipment compatibility requirements, and the excessive prescriptions and regulations in this bill—all add up to an expensive price tag. It has been estimated that the cost of reregulation could be up to about $3 billion annually. Assuming all of this cost is passed onto cable subscribers—which it would be under this bill—it could add over $50 annually to the cable bill of America's 55 million cable subscribers.

Even key proponents of the bill have publicly stated that this bill could very well end up raising, not lowering, customer rates. On behalf of the thousands of cable subscribers who have contacted Congress to express concern about this bill, let me say the following: Thanks, but no thanks.

This bill microregulates the cable industry. As a colleague and good friend recently observed, we regulate just about everything but where the subscriber places the television set in the home. And to what end? Not to help consumers, that's for certain. Onerous regulation will lead to a very natural reaction from the industry: less cable programming, fewer cable packaging options, and less investment in equipment upgrades to provide new cable services. In sum, less consumer choice.

What will this legislation mean for one of the crown jewel industries in this country? One that invests over $3.5 billion annually in new programming and directly and indirectly employs nearly one-half million people? Suffice it to say, this bill is not good news—jobs will both not be created and will be lost at home, and our trade balance will also be harmed. The cable industry has consistently provided a net trade surplus, but we are placing this in jeopardy as well.

The bill that emerged from the House-Senate cable conference has adopted some of the most onerous and regulatory features of both bills. Consequently, we are today considering a conference report that demonstrably and unavoidably will raise cable subscriber rates and diminish future consumer choice.

I mentioned earlier the irony of the word "competition" in the title of the bill. We had an opportunity to create meaningful competition to cable in rural communities covering a significant portion of this country. The Senate bill included a provision to allow telephone companies to provide cable in communities up to 10,000 people. But that provision, probably the most procompetitive feature of the cable legislation, was unceremoniously dropped in the conference. So much for any real competition in this bill.

For all these reasons, I urge my colleagues to adopt the only responsible course of action available, and reject this conference report and the threat it poses of higher cable rates.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR].

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report on S. 12, the Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act of 1992. It is my view that the root of the complaints about cable rates and cable service is the consumer's lack of competitive alternatives to cable television. I support this conference report because it promotes competition in the cable industry, especially in the key area of providing fair access to television programming.

The conference report stops cable operators from denying competitors unfettered access to the full range of cable programming. This is critical in a rural district like my own where many of my constituents rely on satellite dishes for their television programming. Right now some cable programmers refuse to even sell programming to home satellite dish distributors and those that do charge the distributors an average of 500-percent more than they charge cable operators for the exact same programming. Cable programmers get away with this because they have no real competition. But when this bill goes through, the people in my district will have better cable television because cable operators won't be allowed to restrain their competition from providing the programming consumers want.

The major change from the House-passed bill is the conference report's inclusion of retransmission-consent provisions. These provisions trouble me because they conflict with my notions of intellectual property rights. However, the bill provides a 1-year phase-in period for retransmission consent during which time Congress can revisit the issue.

I urge my colleagues to adopt the conference report and promote real competition in the cable industry.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO], the distinguished ranking member of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. RINALDO. Mr. Speaker, the conference report before the House of Representatives this morning is the culmination of literally years of work by Members of the House and Senate.

I want to note the work of the subcommittee chairman, Representative ED MARKEY, on this legislation. He and I first put together a cable bill over 2 years ago, and we were able to gain strong, bipartisan support for that bill. In the last few months, we have disagreed on several issues, but throughout the process he has been fair, he has been committed to helping consumers, and in the view of this Member he has distinguished himself and done credit not only to the Energy and Commerce Committee but to this Chamber.

We enacted the Cable Communications Policy Act in 1984, and rates were deregulated in 1986.

Since then, the Telecommunications Subcommittee has carefully examined the cable industry, the complaints of customers, the recommendations of consumer groups and competitors to cable, and we have compiled an extensive record on both the failures and the successes in the industry.

That record provides clear evidence that there have been numerous instances of abusively high rates and poor customer service.

After 1986, some cable operators took advantage of deregulation to raise rates above what was justified.

Unfortunately, in far too many instances, cable TV customers had no other cable company to turn to. It was all or nothing with the only franchise in town.

What we really need is additional competition, and the way to do it would be to allow Telco entry into cable.

At the same time, far too many cable operators were not ready for the number of homes who signed up.

Customer service was woefully poor in many areas. And it was far below the minimum level that rising cable prices demanded.

There have also been repeated complaints from other industries—including DBS, MMDS, TVRO and others—that the cable industry was refusing to provide programming to potential competitors.

On the one hand, cable operators were given freedom from price regulation, and on the other hand they were stifling any potential competition by locking up programming.

Nearly 3 years ago, I laid out a challenge to leaders of the cable industry. I told them the facts of life in Congress, and I said that if they were unwilling to clean up problems in their industry, Congress would do it for them.

I laid out a six-point plan for customer service, which included a restraint on rises in cable TV rates, hiring more customer service representatives, adding additional telephone lines if necessary. In short, I told them to do the job they should have been doing all along.

Not long after that, Chairman DINGELL, Chairman MARKEY, Congressman LENT, and I put together a responsible piece of legislation. It had broad, bipartisan support and it passed the House of Representatives overwhelmingly 2 years ago.

Today, just as 2 years ago, we were guided by one simple principle:

Deregulation was not an unqualified failure. In fact, it brought tremendous success to the cable TV industry.

Approximately 90 percent of American homes now have access to cable TV, and more than 60 percent now subscribe.

In many areas throughout the country, cable customers have access not just to dozens but to scores of cable channels.

C-SPAN and CNN have literally changed the way Americans receive information about politics, government, and local, national, and international events.

The goal of the committee was not to undermine that success. It was to build upon it. In essence, we had three goals:

First, we wanted to address the primary concerns of consumers—rates and service.

Second, we wanted to reinstate the must carry rules in a fair manner that would pass constitutional muster.

Third, we wanted to inject a greater degree of competition to the industry.

My goal, and the goal of my colleagues, has not been to bash the cable industry. It has been to stimulate competition, to hold down excessive rate increases and to improve service for cable TV consumers.

The conference report now under consideration accomplishes those goals, but it is also true, as its critics point out, that it does more.

The language in this legislation on access to programming is much stronger than approved by the House 2 years ago.

The provisions on rate regulation are much more extensive than the bipartisan bill of 2 years ago.

In fact, this conference report embodies a whole host of recommendations that were approved by the Senate in January that I view as objectionable and not in the best interest of the consumer.

We tried to deal with these issues in conference, and in fact we were rejected several controversial proposals.

We did not include language blacking out baseball games on superstations when those same games are broadcast on superstations.

We moderated the buy-through provisions to lessen the impact of the bill.

We removed the foreign ownership restrictions.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a perfect bill.

This is not the legislation I would prefer. I have underscored my concerns and objections to my colleagues, and I have worked as hard as possible to have the legislation reflect those concerns.

But this is the final vote: This is the last chance in this Congress to address excesses in the cable industry.

While I still have serious concerns about the measure, I believe that on balance it does deal with demonstrated problems in the industry, and I intend to vote in favor of the conference report.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT].

(Mr. SWIFT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, consumers have endured increasingly high cable rates and increasingly bad cable service ever since cable was deregulated in 1984. This bill will do something about it.

But there are those who say that this bill will raise rates. Who says that? Why, the cable industry does.

What are we to make of that? I would like to share with my colleagues portions of an article written by columnist Don Hannula of the Seattle Times in responding to the bill-stuffer campaign of the cable industry. Mr. Hannula said:

He continues:

> If cable television was interested in holding down rates, it would have done it on its own—and there wouldn't have been a consumer clamor for Congress to reregulate the industry.
>
> Rates for the most popular cable service rose 61 percent nationwide in the 4 years > after deregulation became effective in 1986. That was triple the rate of inflation over the same time span.

And Mr. Hannula points out:

> A Consumer Report survey also showed cable satisfaction was the lowest it had found in 16 years of rating service industries. The magazine lamented that cable operators had been able to get away with poor service because they had a captive audience.

He concludes:

> If you think cable companies are losing sleep over rising rates, believe the green flyer of the National Cable Television Association. If you don't, don't.

I think Mr. Hannula has it right. If you believe in the tooth fairy, Elvis sightings, and cable's newfound concern for their long-suffering customers, then vote against this conference report. If not, then take cable's propaganda and put it with the grapefruit rinds.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this cable reform legislation.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON], a member of the committee.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill.

I rise today in opposition to the cable bill conference report. Quite simply, this bill will not do what the authors of the bill allege.

This bill is not proconsumer. It is my belief and that of others who are experts in this field that this bill will at best keep cable rates relatively flat. That is right, just keep cable rates flat, but at what cost? This bill's regulatory scheme will unquestionably adversely affect the quality and quantity of programming available to consumers. Simply, it will restrict choice. At a time when the American consumer is looking for greater program choices, we do not need to be restricting choices with excessive regulation. Lastly, and most perversely, this bill will raise rates. I can tell you that my constituents do not want this bill because it will raise their rates. I urge Members to read their mail and to listen to what their constituents say about this bill. Under this bill the FCC would have to set cable rates. I can tell you that it does not want this responsibility, does not think it is required and furthermore thinks the cost of regulating the cable industry would be so much it would eclipse its other responsibilities. The FCC estimates that this regulation will cost between $22 million and $54.7 million per year.

This brings us to the second fatal flaw of S. 12. It is not procompetition. It is not procompetition because the cable policy envisioned in this bill refuses to acknowledge the potential benefits to American consumers of real competition in the cable industry. One aspect of competition that is not addressed in this bill is the prospect of local exchange telephone companies owning and delivering cable programming, under appropriate regulation, in their respective service areas. Ironically, the only provision in either bill dealing with telephone competition and enfranchising of many potential small town and rural customers—by expanding the rural exemption from 2,500 to 10,000 people—was eliminated by the conferees.

Congress can not ignore the issue of telco-cable entry and video programming any longer. Beyond that, the key competitive element of encouraging telephone companies to provide fiber optic highways, or other modern broadband technology is greatly lacking in the proposed legislation. What is more, if this wrong-headed legislation does not become law, we will probably not be in a position to deal with the issue of true competition for another decade or so.

Let us not act precipitously and pretend the future is not already at hand. Let us not pass this conference report which is, unfortunately, both anticonsumer and anticompetition.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, there is a great deal of confusion surrounding what the conference report does on equal employment opportunities for minorities and women. I want to set the record straight on this issue.

When H.R. 4850 passed the House in July, it had a strong EEO provision. The House put its support behind a policy that strengthened EEO rules on the cable industry and extended these standards to the television broadcasting industry. That was good policy. That policy had the support of the Energy and Commerce Committee and the full House because we decided to do something finally about the under-representation of minorities and women in the mass media area.

The House now has before it, in this conference report, a very different EEO policy. In fact, it has two EEO policies. Minorities and women get one set of EEO rules if they work at a cable company, and they get a different set of EEO rules if they work at a television broadcast station.

The conference report has a solid EEO policy with respect to cable. It will subject the cable industry to new requirements and tougher FCC enforcement. This change is a much needed improvement to existing EEO cable rules, and I strongly support these additional measures.

The conference report, however, severely weakens the EEO policy with respect to the broadcast industry. Instead of agreeing to the House-passed version on EEO, conferees choose to simply codify the FCC's existing rules on equal opportunity in employment.

There's a big difference between the House-passed EEO provision and just simply codifying what is already required by FCC regulation. Codification is simply putting the status quo into the Federal statute. The conference report has stripped away important requirements that would have:

First, directed the FCC to annually certify broadcaster compliance with EEO obligations.

Second, instructed the FCC to review broadcaster performance as part of the license renewal process.

Third, encouraged broadcasters to take affirmative steps to do business with minority and female entrepreneurs.

Fourth, expanded the listing of job categories on the annual statistical report to 15 categories in an effort to better define the representation of minorities and women who really work in decisionmaking positions.

Members of the House should know that all we are doing on broadcast EEO is putting existing FCC rules into the statute. There will be no change in the EEO policies and programs of television broadcast stations. None.

Mr. Speaker, as a legislator, I recognize the need to compromise. But we should not accept compromises when they really serve as nothing more than an excuse. Supporters of the conference report are going to try and assuage those House Members who are upset about the changes made on broadcast EEO with the usual talk about the need to compromise. Some are going to make the following argument to us, "well, at least we got something. The Senate wanted to do nothing, but we fought to get you what you already have and put the existing broadcast EEO rules into the statute."

Mr. Speaker, I would respond to that by saying it is ironic that in a bill where the broadcasting industry has refused to compromise on all their top priorities—retransmission consent, one-third set-aside for must-carry stations, no minimum viewing standards, channel positioning—that the House is asking minorities and women to compromise on something that is a priority for them: meaningful equal employment opportunity [EEO] rules for minorities and women who work in the broadcast industry.

Mr. Speaker, the House normally adheres to a different standard. When the House passed the 1984 Cable Act, we told the cable industry that if it wanted the benefits of legislation, then it would have to accept social responsibilities of adopting detailed and meaningful EEO policies. That was the correct standard and it led to the creation of EEO statutory requirements.

Now, in 1992, we have legislation that will clearly benefit the broadcasting industry. For all the talk about consumers, the real engine behind this bill is the broadcasting industry, not surprising, since this legislation gives the broadcasters virtually everything they have ever asked for. So I think it is only fair and consistent for the House to tell the broadcasting industry the same thing it told the cable industry in 1984: "If you want the benefits of legislation, then you have an obligation to accept a meaningful EEO policy."

Mr. Speaker, there is no policy justification to maintain, much less to put into the Federal statute, this double standard on EEO. This conference report is saying it's OK for cable operators to play by one set of EEO rules and for television broadcast stations to play by a different and much weaker set of EEO obligations.

The whole reason behind the adoption of equal employment opportunity policies in the media industry is that Congress and the courts consider the participation and the employment of minorities and women in decisionmaking positions to be integral to the larger principle of diversity of views in electronic media. That is the public policy justification for EEO, and it has been upheld by the courts.

If we are fully committed to achieving that goal of diverse views and viewpoints in the cable industry, which by the way reaches just 60 percent of the homes in the country, then why is it that Congress is less committed, in this conference report, to those principles when they apply to the broadcast industry, which reaches every home in the country and thus has a much larger impact of the expression of viewpoints and the shaping of public opinion.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the following letters be inserted into the RECORD. They shed some light on this important debate and about what happened in the conference committee.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF
BLACK OWNED BROADCASTERS,
Washington, DC, September 15, 1992.

Re Cable Television Act of 1992.

Hon. ERNEST HOLLINGS,
Senate Russell Office Building,
Washington, DC.

Hon. DANIEL INOUYE,
Senate Hart Office Building,
Washington, DC.

Hon. JOHN DINGELL,
Rayburn House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

Hon. EDWARD MARKEY,
Rayburn House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

GENTLEMEN: NABOB thanks you for the hard work and dedication you have shown in developing the Cable Television Act of 1992, which will be going to the floor in both chambers in the immediate future.

We have read that the President is threatening to veto the legislation. Therefore, we feel that it is important that we go on record in support of your efforts.

As you are aware, NABOB was particularly concerned with the must-carry provisions of the bill. Without must-carry rights African American owners of television stations would find it virtually impossible to compete against larger television stations and cable systems. We are pleased to see that the bill will provide must-carry rights for most African American owned television stations immediately, and should lead to the remaining African American owned television stations being carried in the near future, after the FCC completes its investigation of commercial matter carried by television stations.

This portion of the legislation is important, and we commend the conferees for including it in the bill.

We are aware, however, that the House version of the bill contained provisions concerning EEO enforcement which were more extensive than those which were adopted. We fully understand and support the reasons which led to adoption of the House EEO amendment. As African American broadcasters, we are acutely aware of the gross underrepresentation of minorities in the management ranks of the broadcast industry. Most minorities in the industry must look only to minority owned stations for an opportunity to enter the ranks of management. We, on the other hand, can rarely look to the ranks of the majority station owners to find minorities who have gained management experience which they can bring to our stations. The problem is not a lack of qualifications on the part of the minority employees, but a lack of commitment on the part of the majority station owners to promote them to management level positions.

Thus, we appreciate and agree with the ideals and objectives of the EEO amendment which was in the House bill. However, we do not agree that the bill should be rejected because all of those proposals were not carried over into the final bill.

The conference bill includes a codification of the FCC's EEO rules. Codification of the FCC's EEO rules has been a legislative objective of NABOB for many years. Up until now, aggressive enforcement of the FCC's EEO requirements has been a discretionary policy decision of the FCC. With this legislation, aggressive enforcement by the FCC will be statutorily required. This is a significant addition to the Communications Act.

Additionally, the bill imposes new EEO requirements on the cable industry. The cable industry has not been subjected to the degree of FCC enforcement in the EEO area which has been imposed on the broadcast industry. The application of new EEO requirements to the cable industry is another positive accomplishment of the bill.

Therefore, NABOB supports the bill's overall accomplishments in the areas of must-carry and EEO. We hope that the Senate and House will pass the bill with a large enough majority to override the threatened veto.

We thank you again for your efforts.

Sincerely,

JAMES L. WINSTON.

To: INTV members.
From: David L. Donovan.
Date: September 1, 1992.

I trust you had an enjoyable summer. The wheels of government have been churning in August, albeit slowly. Unfortunately, as a result of a deal with Senator Bob Dole and the Republicans, the Senate did not appoint members to the conference committee until the day Congress adjourned for the summer. However, the staff of the House and Senate Communications Committees met in an attempt to iron out differences between S. 12 and H.R. 4850.

At this point, there are several major issues which remain unresolved. First, there has been no formal agreement to add retransmission consent to the final bill. Frankly, I believe Chairman John Dingell is using this as a bargaining chip for other issues. Ultimately, retransmission consent will be added to the final bill.

Another point of contention is EEO. As you know H.R. 4850 added new and tougher EEO requirements. We have been working with members of the Conference Committee, especially the Senate to have these provisions deleted from the final bill. Nevertheless, I expect some EEO requirements to be included in the final bill. Our fall-back position is to simply codify the existing FCC regulations.

At this point in time the must-carry and channel positioning provisions have been non-controversial. The Senate is expected to accept the additional channel positioning option (carriage on the channel and occupied on January 1, 1992) contained in H.R. 4850.

There is a significant difference between the rate regulation provisions in S. 12 and H.R. 4850. This issue has not been resolved.

While we are not entirely sure of the exact provisions of the final conference cable bill, you should begin your lobbying efforts now? In July we sent you a list of key Senators. The cable industry has targeted the same Senators. Cable knows that these Senators hold the key to both final passage and the potential for a presidential veto. If the conference bill passes by a sufficient margin, President Bush will have a difficult time vetoing the legislation.

If your Senator appears on this list, I strongly urge you to contact his office. Tell your Senator to vote for final passage of the joint House/Senate conference cable bill. Follow up the letter with a telephone call.

We will be meeting with these Senators in the next two weeks. It would be very helpful if they already received your letters. Enclosed you will find a list of key Senators and a draft letter.

We are almost over the goal line. However, cable has launched a massive media campaign and is bringing in the heavy guns to lobby. We must counteract this effort.

Please contact me if you have any questions. Also, please send me a copy of the letters you send to the Senators.

BLACK ENTERTAINMENT TELEVISION,
Washington, DC, September 16, 1992.

Hon. BILL RICHARDSON,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN RICHARDSON: There are several reasons to vote against the conference report on S. 12, such as the must carry provision which gives broadcast stations preferential carriage over black-owned cable networks like BET. However, my primary reason for opposing this legislation is the double standard which it promotes for the treatment of minorities and women in two of our nation's leading media industries—cable and broadcasting.

The cable and broadcasting industries currently operate under two completely different EEO standards. For cable, Congress imposed statutory EEO requirements with the passage of the Cable Act in 1984. However, Congress has not extended similar statutory EEO obligations to any other media industry: the broadcasters' only specific EEO obligation to enhance the employment of women and minorities stems from Federal Communications Commission rules.

There are a number of significant differences between the cable industry's statutory EEO obligations and the broadcasters' FCC rules. For example, cable operators are required to: (1) disseminate their EEO programs to subcontractors; (2) encourage minority and female entrepreneurs to do business with cable operators; and (3) annually certify compliance with the EEO laws. The broadcasters' EEO rules do not contain any comparable provisions. Similarly, cable operators are expressly barred from discriminating against any person on the basis of age; broadcasters are not. Consequently, the Senate's position that Congress should merely codify existing FCC rules for broadcasters does not guarantee women and minorities in that industry the same opportunities for advancement and employment as the cable industry.

To accomplish the goal of promoting diversity of ownership and the expression of different voices in our nation's media, it is necessary for Congress to enact the same statutory EEO requirements for both the cable and broadcast industries. The House bill, H.R. 4850, accomplished these goals. Sadly, the conference report on S. 12 does not, since conferees agreed to weaken statutory EEO obligations for broadcasters while expanding them for cable companies. This creates an indefensible double standard and runs counter to the broadcasters' argument that they need S. 12 to "level the playing field" with cable companies.

The conference report on S. 12 undermines Congress' commitment to creating equal employment opportunities for all Americans. I urge you to repudiate the EEO language in S. 12 and to vote against the conference report.

Sincerely yours,

President.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MINORITIES IN CABLE,
Cerritos, CA, September 16, 1992.

HON. BILL RICHARDSON: We are deeply disturbed in reference to the changes made by the House and Senate conferees to the equal employment opportunity (EEO) section of the cable bill. These changes are a step back. Meaningful EEO guidelines do work. . . .

The Conference Report S. 12 eliminates the single positive aspect of H.R. 4850 as passed by the House of Representatives in July. To literally cancel out the positive strides in EEO for the Broadcast Industry that H.R. 4850 established, and dilute The Conference Report is beyond our comprehension.

Minorities should be treated equitably, and equal opportunity in the Broadcast Industry in hiring, and promotions, and contracting serves the public interest. If EEO is good in one industry, then why isn't it good in another.

We cannot allow the Congress to enact this bill and its double standard. A strong message must be heard in the best interest of minorities, and women who have a need for professional advancement, and representation in the Broadcast Industry.

We urge you to vote no on the Conference Report on S. 12.

Sincerely,

DOUGLAS V. HOLLOWAY,
President, NAMIC Board of Directors.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, as we decide how to vote on this very important legislation, I hope we do so with one basic fact in mind, and that is what has happened to cable rates in this country over the last 5 to 6 years. As Members have heard here today, cable rates in this country have been increasing at three times the rate of inflation.

The question before us today, my friends, is are we prepared to do something about that, yes or no.

Is this legislation perfect? No, it is not, and there are some provisions in it that this gentleman does not particularly care for. But I will say this, I think we have a fundamental obligation to try and slow down the rate of increase in cable rates across this country, and this legislation will do that.

And I have to tell Members that I categorically reject the claims of the cable television industry that our constituents are being exposed to on commercials all across this country. Those commercials would lead our constituents to believe that with the passage of this legislation their rates are going up dramatically. That is absolutely wrong. The fact is that rates are going to probably go up a little bit with or without this legislation. The question is how much are they going to go up, and I contend they are going to go up much less with the passage of this legislation.

And for those who may be worried about the regulatory burden that we are going to place on small businesses, those small businesses in this country that own small cable systems, keep in mind we have an exemption in this legislation for systems with 1,000 subscribers or less. And that will significantly reduce the regulatory burden on those small systems all across the country.

Last of all, every Member of this body that cares as I do about the future of rural America should be supporting this legislation, and supporting it enthusiastically. This legislation requires the vertically integrated monopolies in this country, the cable television operations, to market their programming to other individual businesses like satellite owners. Without this legislation, my friends, those constituents of ours, those Americans who live in areas that do not have cable television are not going to have access to the programming that people have in the urban areas of this country that do have cable service. So my friends, if you care about rural America, if you care about competition, if you care about keeping consumer costs down in this country, support this conference committee report enthusiastically.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RITTER], a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. RITTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

When last we debated this legislation, I cautioned my colleagues that, in our zeal to reregulate the cable industry, we should be careful not to lose the opportunity to pass meaningful and lasting cable legislation that would both protect consumers and preserve the record of growth and innovation which the cable industry had forged since 1984.

I stand before my colleagues today to report that we have squandered our opportunity. And it is our constituents who will pay the price for our failure.

Once again, the Congress has chosen the heavy hand of regulation over true competition. It is true that this bill expresses the preference for competition and that is good. But the substance behind the claim is much more illusory than real.

For instance, the conference committee could have provided for quick competition by allowing phone companies to provide competitive cable service in rural areas with populations under 10,000. That proposal was defeated.

This bill is a vortex of unintended consequences, the most significant of which, of course, is an increase in basic cable rates. There have been claims and controversies on this issue. There have been massive ad campaigns. Many of our constituents simply do not know what to believe. And once again, our constituents are absolutely right.

No one who takes a good hard look at this bill knows what to believe—because no one knows just how this legislation will affect rates or service. Rates will go up.

Even the proponents of the bill, as quoted in Broadcasting magazine, say that the cable industry may be right when it says the rates will go up. Mr. MARKEY was quoted in the New York Times as saying that consumer rates will go up under this bill. Some studies say that the rates will go as high as $3 billion.

The regulatory burden of this bill is a nightmare. Eighteen rulemakings in 180 days. A cost to Federal and local governments of $100 to $300 million over 5 years, which will be passed on to the taxpayers and the cable subscribers. There will be other expenses, like fees for the attorneys who will argue the cable rate cases—and more litigation is the last thing we need in this country.

The Lehigh Valley is one of the few areas in the Nation that today has competitive cable service, even as it is denied under this act.

And it is precisely because the Lehigh Valley has competitive cable that it is important to this debate. For it is a minilaboratory of what is to come for the rest of the country should the avowed goal of this bill—cable competition—ever come to pass.

Under this legislation, a cable system is no longer subject to rate regulation once it is subject to effective competition. Presumably, at that point, rates are set by market forces and that is generally good.

But this bill now contains the so-called retransmission consent provision, which would require a cable operator to pay a broadcaster who had opted out of must carry for the right to retransmit the television station's signal.

I don't care how you cut it, this is an extra cost which, when paid by the cable system, will be passed on to the consumer through a higher rate.

But this is only one marketplace result. A cable company could elect not to pay the retransmission consent and not carry the station's signal. Or one cable company might start a bidding war with its competitor for the exclusive right to retransmit the station's signal, either because it wants the signal for itself or because it simply wants its competitor to pay a ruinous price for it.

In the first instance, there is a diminution of service; in the second, rates may go even higher as the result of a bidding war. Neither result benefits the consumer. And so, through an act of Congress, free television will no longer be free simply because a subscriber chooses to view it over the local cable system. Explain that one to your constituents.

So rates will go up because of payments to broadcasters, and rates will also go up because the buy-through provisions require additional equipment so that different levels of service can be provided. These costs will be passed on to the consumer, and in the Lehigh Valley, the consumer will suffer.

And so, in conclusion, I repeat those questions which I posed to you back in July: In the last analysis, what benefit would the consumer receive from this bill? Lower rates? Emphatically, I say no.

The consumer will experience higher rates and the thing that will gall him or her the most is that they will have received no value for their money. They will not have received new programming. They will not have received new or better services.

They will, however, have received the protection of a new and unseen bureaucracy which they never sought and which they do not need.

I supported reregulation of the industry through the Lent substitute because I believed it protected consumers and promoted competition in the cable market. This bill, I fear, does neither for the cable subscribers of the Lehigh Valley and I urge my colleagues to reject the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Harris].

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I am here to express my strong support for the conference report on S. 12. I believe that this conference is an even better product than even the House or Senate bills. It answers all of the complaints I have received from my constituents over the past 8 years of deregulation.

This bill contains adequate rate regulation of the basic tier of service; it provides a means to rein in renegade cable operators from charging excessive rates in the upper tiers of cable service; it guarantees an acceptable level of customer service; it prevents cable operators from making consumers pay a hundred times over for remote control channel changers and other equipment; and provides incentives for cable operators to upgrade their systems. The bottom line is it ensures that the cable programming that viewers want to watch will be available at reasonable prices.

I believe that most of you will agree with me that genuine competition in the marketplace is always preferable to regulation. Regulation of cable rates will never adequately substitute for it. For that reason, I am particularly pleased that this conference report contains the program access language that our colleague BILLY TAUZIN worked so hard to make possible. The program access provisions of this bill prohibits cable programmers from discriminating in price, terms, and conditions in offering their programming to other multivideo providers. In other words, meaningful program access promotes competition in the video marketplace so that television viewers will have the opportunity to choose among competing cable companies, wireless cable providers, C-band satellite, direct broadcast satellite, and any other new program distribution technology. Rural Americans will soon be able to fully participate in the information age and not at grossly inflated prices.

Finally, I would like to address the campaign of disinformation that the cable industry has embarked on about retransmission consent. Retransmission consent is not a surcharge on cable ratepayers as the industry claims. Instead it merely gives local, and I emphasize, local broadcasters the right to negotiate in good faith for their sole product—their broadcast signal. This is a basic right that local broadcasters have been denied since cable was in its infancy and nothing more than an antenna service. Well, cable is now a $21 billion industry which creates and owns much of the programming which goes out over its wires. It no longer deserves the subsidy which local broadcasters have been providing it and local broadcasters can no longer afford it. If this inequity is not corrected soon, local broadcasters may be forced to cut back further on locally originated programming in news, weather, public affairs, and service—that is certainly not in the best interest of our communities.

Despite the deceptive mailing your constituents may have received or the misleading ads they may have seen, this bill does exactly as its title claims. It protects the viewing public from cable rate hikes and promotes competition in the multivideo marketplace. Support S. 12 and take home a cable bill that groups like the AARP, the Rural Electric Cooperatives, the Consumer Federation of America, and the AFL-CIO have endorsed.

Vote "yes."

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS], a member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot of emotionally charged rhetoric about the cable legislation we will vote on today. And while compelling arguments will be made as to whether the bill will or will not lead to lower rates for cable customers, I would like to spend the brief time I have addressing the gross misrepresentation that is being made by opponents of S. 12 on the issue of retransmission consent.

In all my years of serving in Congress, I have never, ever seen such a calculated and deliberate effort to distort any single issue. I deeply regret that opponents of this cable bill are so desperate that they have taken the most competitive, proconsumer provision in the bill and used it as the scapegoat for killing this legislation.

Oftentimes, when we debate legislation in the House the facts get distorted and we confuse rhetoric with reality. Let me underscore the facts on the issue of retransmission consent.

First, retransmission consent will not drive up rates. Nothing in the legislation requires the cable company to pay the local broadcaster. The bill simply requires that the cable operator negotiate with the broadcaster on the terms and conditions of carrying the broadcaster's signal. Under this scenario, many broadcasters will negotiate for an additional channel to program a 24-hour news, sports, or weather service. Retransmission consent does not force the cable operator to pay the broadcaster for use of his signal. Further, under the legislation, the FCC is directed to ensure that retransmission consent will not have a significant impact on rates. And finally, what is probably most offensive about cable's charge that retransmission consent will effect rates is the fact that cable currently only pays abut $3 a month for its programs, but charges the cable customer $20 month—and they claim that they won't be able to absorb the additional costs of retransmission consent.

Second, retransmission consent has absolutely nothing to do with copyright law. This legislation is designed to recognize the value of the broadcaster's signal. Hollywood program producers are already fully compensated when they sell their programs to broadcasters. Hollywood and the Judiciary Committee have no legitimate place in this debate. Ironically, they have tried to kill retransmission consent at every turn, yet they have been unsuccessful in their efforts to win approval for their own measure. They even turned down the opportunity to participate in the cable conference. In my opinion, their arguments are shallow and totally unfounded.

Finally, retransmission consent is a marketplace, procompetitive approach to the competitive imbalances which exist today between the local broadcaster and the local cable operator. If we fail to address this issue, then we may very well see the demise of the only real competitor the cable operator has today, the local broadcaster. If this happens, then those who cannot afford cable—the poor, the elderly, and the unemployed—will be denied a viewing alternative. Simply put, without enacting some kind of corrective measure, we risk having a two-tier society of information haves and have nots.

Mr. Speaker, I hope my colleagues won't be swayed by the crocodile tears of those who oppose retransmission consent. Enactment of retransmission consent is essential if we are to ensure the future of free, quality, community-based television programming.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, the consequences of this debate for the C-SPAN audience are enormous as well as for other cable programming that we enjoy watching. The consequences are also enormous if you have a satellite dish, because in the 97 percent of American TV markets which have no competition, basic cable rates are about $20, but in the 3 percent of American cable markets which do have competition, where if you do not like cable company A, you can pick cable company B, guess what, rates are more likely to be in the $10 a month range.

If you aggregate the savings we could achieve nationwide, the Wall Street Journal and the Consumer Federation of America estimate we could be saving as much as $6 billion a year of our taxpayers' money, of our consumers' money, of the money of the folks back home, if we do this right.

Now, I will have to admit this conference report is good, but it is not a perfect measure. I would like to see it go farther. I am for cable telco entry. I think that we need telephone companies in the cable TV business, and I think we need cable companies in the telephone business, but this before you is a great bill that we should still support. It will offer our consumers relief, much-needed relief, long-overdue relief.

There is another issue at stake in this debate today, and that is the integrity of this body. We have witnessed one of the most unscrupulous lobbying campaigns of modern times. Every cable customer has gotten a misleading flier, and there have been countless cable ads that are terribly misleading. We need to stand up for the truth in this body. We need to stand up for competition. We need to stand up for the conference report.

I would urge my colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle to follow the lead of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL] and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO], follow their lead, and on the Democratic side, follow the lead of the chairman, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY], and the chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

This is legislation we need to pass today.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], a member of the committee.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I stand in opposition to this legislation as I have been consistently through the process.

This bill is about two things: Politics and money. The politics are quite obvious as to what we are trying to do or what the proponents are trying to accomplish here. But the deep, hidden secret behind this whole thing is a thing called retransmission consent, something that the House did not have a chance to work its will on. It was inserted back into the conference committee.

Hardly anybody other than my friend, the gentleman from Texas, who spoke immediately before me, hardly anybody said that this is actually going to save money. The chairman of the subcommittee in testimony before the Committee on Rules, the chairman of the full committee, in testimony before the Committee on Rules, said, yes, retransmission consent is going to cost money. We are not sure how much, but it is going to cost money. The argument is not about whether we are going to save the consumer any money or not. The question is how much higher the rates are going to go because of retransmission consent.

Why do you think Hollywood is so interested? They can smell the money; they know how much money is going to be raised by this. So they come in and lobby against the bill because they understand exactly what this means. It essentially means that my consumer constituent who has cable is going to have his pocket picked to make certain that CBS does not lose too much money on some of the terrible business decisions they made, like major league baseball, for $1 billion, so they can pay banjo-hitting shortshops half a million dollars a year to sit on the bench. That is essentially what it is all about. It is about money.

I for one think it is impossible to try to explain, for the proponents, to go back to their constituents and say, "Hey, we saved you a lot of money," when in fact it is just quite the opposite.

Make no mistake about it, Mr. Speaker, the President of the United States, in a letter that was dated today, sent to all Members of Congress, made it very clear that he will veto this legislation. He talks about his vision for the future, which includes competition. Competition is the answer.

I would suggest, when we come back here next session after this bill is vetoed and we sustain that veto, that we get with it and talk about a competitive mode, that we take away the cable-telco crossownership ban and really get at competition instead of overregulation, which is what we have got in this particular piece of legislation.

So I urge the defeat of the conference report and a vision in the future, next session, to look at the competitive mode, the Oxley-Boucher bill, as a starter. I think that we can save the consumer money and at the same time provide competition in this industry.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds at this point just to remind the House that the legislation we are dealing with right now is the Senator from Missouri, JACK DANFORTH's, a Republican, his legislation. This is not a bill which is a Democrat or a Republican bill, this is a bipartisan piece of legislation produced in the House and the Senate. The Senate, Senator DANFORTH working with Senator HOLLINGS and Senator INOUYE, put it together; on our side, Mr. DINGELL and I with Mr. RINALDO, working with many other minority Members, put it together. It is a bipartisan piece of legislation, not Democrat or Republican.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. COLLINS].

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation which includes many of the important consumer protection provisions in H.R. 4850, the House version of the cable bill which passed in July.

In spite of what the cable industry has proclaimed, this legislation could lead to greater competition in an industry that has had a virtual monopoly and lower cable rates. Since 1987, cable rates have skyrocketed and the industry has been without monitoring by a public body.

In July, I was successful in getting strong equal employment opportunity language in H.R. 4850, the House cable bill which could lead to increased opportunities for minorities and women. This bill does exactly that. This conference report also has minority programming provisions that will increase access for qualified minority programming services.

I am, however, deeply disappointed that the conference report does not include the strong equal employment opportunity rules that were approved for cable television for broadcast television. Anyone who feels as I do would have to consider this a mistake.

Some would have you believe this bill does not go far enough to remedy the underrepresentation of minorities and women in the mass media, but I am confident that this bill will assure improved equal employment opportunities in both the cable and broadcast television industries, and definitely leaves the door open so that in the near future we will get EEO requirements to cover broadcast television.

As the National Association of Black-Owned Broadcasters said in a recent letter:

> We appreciate and agree with the ideals and objectives of the EEO amendment which was in the House bill. However, we do not agree that the bill should be rejected because all of those proposals were not carried over into the final bill.

This bill expands from 9 to 15 the job categories for which employee information is required—corporate officers, general manager, chief technician, comptroller, general sales manager, and production manager. These are all top management positions.

The FCC will be mandated to prescribe the methods by which entities are required to compute and report the number of minorities and women in these job categories.

Further, the report codifies the FCC-EEO rules for the first time. That is a good step forward. I, for one, will continue to fight to have stronger EEO regulations extended to the broadcast industry. The bill will create an FCC Mass Media Bureau program of mid-license term review of television broadcast stations' work force employment profiles.

The FCC will compare the station's work force data with its area labor force but for those who see quotas behind every EEO effort, they should understand that this procedure is not intended in any way to establish a hiring quota.

I realize there are those who would have you believe this is not a strong bill and doesn't go far enough to remedy the underrepresentation of minorities and women in the mass media, but I am confident that this bill will assure that equal employment opportunities are afforded by cable television and will lead to improvements in broadcast television.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON], a member of the committee.

Mr. UPTON. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is not perfect, but it does a whole number of things, which will cap rates, which have gone up three times higher than inflation since 1987. People are sick and tired of rate increases. This bill will allow people to pay for what they watch. And what is wrong with that? My household watches C-SPAN, ESPN, CNN, WGN, and a bunch of other local stations. Why should households that watch other stations pay for what I watch? And vice versa. It is sort of like when you go to the grocery store to get only skim milk, you do not buy every single dairy product on the shelf—eggs, whole milk, half-and-half, margarine. No. If you did, you would go broke.

That is what the consumer is mad about. And that is why virtually every consumer group in the country is in favor of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to do something about cable rates. I urge my colleagues to vote for this bill.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS].

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I support this conference report.

Years ago State and local governments gave away cable franchises creating government-sanctioned regional monopolies and making millionaires out of cable franchise owners.

Then Congress decided, in 1984, to deregulate those regional monopolies, making cable franchise owners multimillionaires. They were able to become multimillionaires because they have no competition and no regulation. Unchecked, prices went up significantly. And they will keep going up unless we do something about it.

This bill will do something about it. It will encourage competition and provide for modest regulation. Now, wireless multichannel TV and satellite multichannel TV will have access to the same programs cable companies have access to so they can compete with cable on an equal basis.

Republicans want competition; this bill does it. But it also will provide some regulation to make sure in the shortrun prices do not go up too much more.

I salute the committee on the work it has done and I urge my colleagues to vote for this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LUKEN). The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] has 17 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT] has 14 minutes remaining.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SCHAEFER].

Mr. SCHAEFER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I yield briefly to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, many of the same people were here with me 8 years ago when we deregulated the cable industry. We deregulated it because most local franchising authorities had placed rates at such an unbearably low level that it was impossible for the industry to invest in upgraded equipment and technology and to improve its programming.

We deregulated the industry because the American consumer wanted more. So we crafted legislation that freed the industry to invest and the result has been 8 years of rapid growth in programming choices and a tremendous increase in the number of living rooms in which cable television is now available across the country.

Yet as these opportunities increased, we began to start hearing from our constituents about spotty service and rapidly rising rates in the cable industry. Many of us are cable subscribers and have witnessed these rising rates ourselves. But as we consider this bill today, I urge my colleagues to keep in mind that where these rates have risen, there has been a direct reflection in the quality and variety of programming we, the consumer, have been able to receive in our living rooms.

Since the 1987 effective date of the deregulation of cable, the General Accounting Office has conducted three studies on cable rates and services. These studies found that the price of basic service has increased, but has done so hand in hand with a similar increase in the number and variety of programming choices available to the consumer. GAO found that the average price per basic channel increased from 44 cents in 1986 to 53 cents by 1991. This 20-percent increase may seem surprising at first glance, yet becomes less startling when one finds that the Consumer Price Index, during the same period, increased 22.5 percent. Further, the GAO report seems to indicate that the catch-up period following deregulation seems to have come to a halt. In 1990, the average cable consumer's bill rose 4.2 percent while inflation during 1990 rose almost 2 percentage points more; by 6.1 percent.

While cable rates have been rising, however, cable programming has improved significantly. We can all agree that the quality, creativity, and diversity of cable programming has improved dramatically. In 1984, for example, cable programmers spent about $300 million in basic cable programming; today that figure is over $1 billion and has led to the availability and quality of such networks like Discovery Channel, Nickelodeon, ESPN, CNN, and Black Entertainment Television, to name only a few. This is a direct result of one of the central features of the Cable Communications Policy Act put in place in 1984: rate deregulation.

There are those here today who will make the argument that the rising cable prices and spotty customer service are a result of the monopolistic situation in which the industry finds itself. There are those who will also state that the solution to this monopolistic situation is not through more needless regulation. I certainly agree.

The legislation before us today would only work to stifle the creativity and diversity that have come with deregulation. We would be unwise to saddle the industry at this point with more needless regulation, unprecedented restrictions in the sale of their products and the use of their technology. I ask my colleagues to consider that the issues which led us to deregulate cable in the first place are still relevant today. For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to keep these thoughts in mind as we consider this legislation.

Mr. SCHAEFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the conference report, and in doing so I take great relief from the fact that I need not defend it, if enacted.

We are talking about an industry that has only been deregulated for 5 years, and now we are talking about an industry that we have to come back and reregulate again. I think it would be extremely difficult to explain to our constituents our higher cable rates resulted from a bill promising to lower them. Or why legislation intended to benefit cable consumers actually led to fewer programming choices. And why a measure with competition in its title did little or nothing to bring it about.

Thankfully, by voting against this conference report, I will not have to face these questions in the future.

Instead, opponents of this legislation can speak of lost opportunities where consensus was sacrificed for political gain. How we knew all along that the regulatory overkill and Government micromanagement put forth by this bill would indeed stifle investment and plant operations and equipment improvements.

In that we were right in arguing that not only competition could bring about the promises made by the conference report, but lower cable rates and a vibrant video marketplace. It was not too long ago that this body remembers we passed what was called the catastrophic health care bill. I was proud to have voted against it.

What happened? We came around and repealed it shortly after because the American people rose up against it.

I predict that is what is going to happen if this particular piece of legislation passes.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. SANDERS].

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the committee chairman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, Reaganomics has failed. The deregulation of the television industry has failed. And the time is now to protect our consumers against a cable TV industry which has raised its rates nationally by 61 percent in the last 5 years—three times as high as inflation.

Mr. Speaker, in my own State of Vermont, cable rates since 1986 have gone up by 58 percent in Bennington, 123 percent in Montpelier, and 110 percent in St. Johnsbury, among other towns. This is not a perfect bill, but it finally tells the cable TV monopolies that they cannot simply raise their rates to any level they wish.

When consumers deal with a monopoly, and have no choice with regard to competition from another company, it is appropriate and it is right for the Government to regulate cable TV rates, channel tiers, and equipment fees—and that is what this bill does.

Mr. Speaker, the cable TV industry has been running an extremely dishonest ad campaign in opposition to this bill. They are using bogus figures in order to defeat it. Understandably, they want to be left alone so that they can continue to raise their rates as high as they want, no matter what impact this has on the consumer.

Tragically, President Bush is once again defending the big money interests and is threatening to veto this bill, which has the support of every major consumer organization, the largest senior citizens' organizations, and the U.S. Conference of Mayors, among many other groups.

Mr. Speaker, we were sent down here to represent ordinary Americans and not the big money interests. Let us pass this conference report, and override the veto when it comes.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], the distinguished second ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, first let me thank the gentleman from New York for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this bill.

My colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY], I thought, did a good job overall. I had some problems with the bill when it left the House, but I voted for it because the cable industry has enjoyed a monopoly. They have exercised that monopoly power. The service has been arrogant, and we need to regulate. There is no question about that.

But what happened in conference was the bill was bushwhacked by the broadcasters, broadcasters who see the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Retransmission consent, my colleagues, if you vote for this, is going to come back to bite you, because it is going to cost consumers billions and billions of dollars.

The President of CBS, Larry Tisch, acknowledges it might be $1 billion. He does not think it is going to be $3 billion.

Let me tell you, friends, we do not know. Nobody can tell you what it is going to cost.

Retransmission consent basically says this: The broadcasters will be able to demand from the cable systems whatever they feel the market will bear for somebody else's product. We do not buy a signal. We buy a program. That is what we buy when we turn on the television set. We look at a program or programs.

The copyright owners are left out of the equation. What we have in this bill is the right of the broadcasters to demand whatever they want to demand for their signal, but we are going to continue to regulate the cable industry under compulsory license. That means what we are going to have is not a free marketplace. We are going to have a regulated marketplace for some, for the cable systems, but we are going to have a deregulated system for the broadcasters. It is going to cost us billions and billions of dollars, and it is unbalanced.

We did not work our will in conference on the copyright issues that would have given this balance, and that is unfortunate. You cannot fix the problems without doing that. It is going to cost us domestically.

It is going to cost us internationally because we are net exporters of film and everything else, signals, movies. What we are saying to the international community is that really what the broadcasters are selling, our programs, are not worth anything really in the international marketplace.

I urge you to vote against the conference report.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I salute him and the gentleman from Michigan on a job very well done.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, I support this bill because it gives cities like Louisville and Jefferson County a chance to reregulate and to reintroduce themselves into the ratemaking functions for cable activities.

I also support the bill because it spurs competition. No longer can the local authority give out an exclusive franchise to a cable operator. There is cable programming access provided by the Tauzin amendment. There is the possibility, later of letting telephone companies get into the cable operations, delivering a cable signal over phone lines.

This bill also sets a minimum standard of consumer service and customer protection. How often do we hear from people who cannot get their telephones answered or the billing procedure described.

I am not happy with the retransmission provision, but there is a 1-year transition period before the full effects of that will be noted.

I just do not think it is rational or responsible to drop overboard this excellent piece of consumer protection legislation because we happen not to agree with one provision. Let us revisit that provision. Let us make all the changes we need in retransmission consent, but let us not kill this bill today. It is too important.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that this House supports S. 12 by a very, very wide and large margin.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON], a distinguished member of the committee.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, let us tell the whole truth about this bill. Much has been made of the fact that rates have gone up since cable has been deregulated, and that is a true statement; but let us tell the rest of the story. The rest of the story is that the average number of channels per cable system has gone from 6 to 35. That is a 600-percent increase.

The average basic service rate, basic tier one service rate for cable today is $18.84 a month. That is not a cable number. That is a GAO study report. We have gone from six channels to 35 and the average tier one basic service rate is $18.84 a month.

People want to get more than that, so they then subscribe to HBO, Cinemax, maybe an all-sports channel or whatever. That is a discretionary decision on their part. That is not something they have to do.

Rates are not going to go down under this bill. The proponents of the bill do not say rates are going to go down, because they know they are not. Rates are going to go up.

According to a story in the Washington Times yesterday, at a minimum rates are going to go up somewhere between $2.50 a month to $6.48 a month.

This is an entertainment medium. This is not a public necessity. As the Wall Street Journal pointed out this morning in an editorial, we do not regulate the price of Redskin football tickets. We do not regulate the price of Broadway plays. We do not regulate the price of a movie ticket at your local theater.

Under existing FCC regulations, if you are in a market that has less than six over-the-air television stations, your cable system is subject to rate regulation today.

If the local franchise authority feels that those rates being charged are unfair, why is not the FCC being beseiged with petitions to regulate? Because in point of fact the rates are not unfair. The quality of service has gone up, the quantity of service has gone up, and people are basically happy.

Mr. Speaker, vote no on this bill.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. AUCOIN].

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Speaker, there is no stronger endorsement of this proconsumer bill than the millions of dollars cable monopolies have spent to try to defeat it. Their slick ad campaign, my colleagues, complete with scare tactics, has played fast and loose with the facts and with the truth. Consumers are not buying those scare tactics, and neither should this House. Since 1986, price gouging cable monopolies have hiked their rates more than twice the rate of the national inflation, and that is only the national average. For some Oregonians increases have surpassed 130 percent. If someone on that side wants to say consumers are happy with that, they ought to come out and talk to the people in Salem, OR, where that regulation has occurred.

Mr. Speaker, cable deregulation is a snapshot of the Reagan-Bush economic debacle. The big cable companies are cash cows, and consumers are the goat. It is time we dump those policies. It is time we voted yes on this conference report and gave consumers real protection against price gouging monopolies.

Vote yes on this conference report.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield one-half minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SIKORSKI].

Mr. SIKORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

I rise in support of the conference bill and to recognize the conferees for their diligent efforts. I am particularly pleased with section 19, the program access provision, that increases the availability of programming to all multichannel video program distributors, while providing to them no lesser rights to exclusivity than are afforded cable operators with regard to the programming covered under that section.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN].

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I want to speak first to the conservatives in this body, particularly my friends on the Republican side who, in a large majority, voted for this bill when it left the House. There are two things that happened to it in conference committee neither one of which ought to trouble them.

The first thing that happened to it was that the conference committee adopted the procompetition features that we won after a good fight on this House floor, the Tauzin amendment. It is now part of this conference report.

The second thing that happened in the conference committee, too, is that some of the regulatory features of the House bill were changed so that the bill is less regulatory, more competitive, than when the bill left the House.

So I say to my colleagues, "Those of you who are conservative and believe in competitive market forces rather than regulation, whether you're a conservative Democrat or Republican, this is a good bipartisan improvement of the bill since it left the House."

Second, the conference committee adopted this thing called retransmission consent. Now for those out there in the audience who believe that consumers in a fair marketplace ought to have a say-so about what they see, and how they see it, and when they see it, I want them to think about the net effect of this retransmission consent provision. What it says, in effect, is not that the cable companies are all of a sudden going to start charging for broadcast programs. They are already doing that. They are currently taking the broadcast signal from the local broadcaster who is going out into the marketplace and bidding to cover sporting events, for example, and they are taking those signals, putting them on that cable and reselling them to us. In effect we are paying for them twice. We are paying for them commercially in the products that we buy; that is, the commercially sponsored broadcast programs. We are paying for it again when cable charges us a basic cable rate. But without this provision in the bill called retransmission consent we are paying for those programs, but cable keeps all the money. It does not share any of that money with the broadcasters.

Now my colleagues say, "Well, why has that been allowed?" That has been allowed because broadcasters wanted to be on that cable. They were willing to put that signal for free on that cable because they need to be on that cable. That does not change. They still need to be on the cable.

But the question should be not whether we are going to pay for the programs, but who gets the money and who pays for it. If we do not change the law soon, as the conference committee has recommended we change it, the money stays with the cable company. What does it do with that money? It goes out into the marketplace and bids against the broadcaster for the same sports that we have enjoyed on basic cable for all this while that we have enjoyed on the network signal. They take that sports programming and bring it back to the cable, and guess what? They elevate it to pay per view. So, we not only pay for it once and twice, we are now paying for it three times.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest to my colleagues both of these changes: less regulation, more competition, and this fairer treatment for these broadcast signals are in the interest of consumers in a good marketplace.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART].

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, there has been a lot of anger expressed at cable TV today on this floor. I do not think we should be angry. After all, they are a monopoly, and what they are doing is the American way. They are doing what monopolies do. They are gouging their customers. They are digging deep into their subscribers' pockets, and their political tactics reflect the political tactics of monopolies. They do not want a change because a change for them means more competition and less profits.

One of my colleagues said a few moments ago, "This is about money. Why can't we really just pass a modest bill?

Let's just expose that fallacy for what it is.

Let me remind my colleagues that in 1990, on a voice vote coming from this Chamber on the Suspension Calendar, we passed a modest cable bill. It was agreed to here by the cable industry, and then it went to the Senate, and the cable companies killed it. We tried a modest bill, and cable said, "No."

We have tried a vigorous bill. Cable still says no because the monopolists want to continue to line their pockets.

This debate is Orwellian. Up is down, peace is war, and the fact of the matter is that what we stand for is local broadcasters having the right to control their programming, local government having a say in the contracts in which they participate and the opportunity for subscribers to have a say in something for them that has become a necessity.

Now this bipartisan bill, organized in the Senate by Mr. DANFORTH, and supported by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. RINALDO], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON], the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS] who spoke very eloquently about retransmission consent, really is about a bipartisan effort to address the real problems that customers and consumers face. It is about an effort to say that this Congress is not out of touch, that this Congress is not in the pocket of the special interests, that this Congress has heard the cries of consumers all across America and is willing to stand up and be counted.

As my colleagues know, Time Warner, one of the big cable giants, really does not want this bill to be passed. They make a lot of money from their cop-killer lyrics, and they will make more money off of their bill-killer tactics. If this Congress caves in to the monopolists, if this Congress caves in to those who seek to deprive real opportunity for local government and local broadcasters to have their say about the kinds of entertainment and information that goes into their communities, then it is a shame on this House.

Mr. Speaker, I think the bipartisan effort that we have assembled here is truly based upon the recommendations of a wide variety of individuals that will continue rural opportunities, that will create real competition, will tell the folks that this Congress has heard its wakeup call, this Congress respects the people, this Congress stands for competition.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCMILLEN].

Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 12, the cable conference report, and commend both Chairman MARKEY and Chairman DINGELL for their efforts on this legislation.

Let us be clear, the bill we pass today provides protection for cable consumers. The bill also gives greater power to regulatory authorities to ensure that service is responsive and prices reasonable.

While I have strong concerns over any increased regulation, the bill only regulates the cable operator in the absence of effective competition.

> Until the day that customers can pick and choose among multi-channel providers, reregulation is needed.

I would briefly like to comment on two provisions which were adopted as amendments in committee and which are in this bill.

The first amendment increases the amount of educational programming offered by cable companies. It allows cable operators to substitute high-quality educational programming for unused channels currently set aside for public or leased access.

Many of these access channels currently are underutilized. The provision in the conference report will ensure that there is sufficient access for educational programming, while at the same time alleviating the problem of wasted channel space.

Television has been described as a wasteland. To offset this trend, it is important that positive, educational programming is available to everyone and be as accessible as possible.

The second amendment calls for a study to review the migration of sporting events from over the air to pay TV. The amendment requires the FCC to study the migration of programming, taking into consideration the economic and social consequences of this movement. The study will determine the effect of pay-per-view sports programming on the consumer as well as the various sports organizations. This study is an important first step toward assuring the accessibility of televised sports—especially local sports on broadcast stations.

Again, I commend both the chairman of the full committee and the chairman of the subcommittee for all their efforts in developing this legislation.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY], a member of the committee.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, the supporters of this legislation say that this legislation is needed to bring reasonable cable subscription rates and better service to the consumer. Now I am all for that goal. In fact, I strongly supported a bill that would have done that by establishing a system in which abuses in the cable industry could be corrected. Unfortunately the first time around the House passed a bill that was too heavy-handed that would actually have raised cable rates and stifled innovation and creativity. But if you think the first attempt is bad, this conference report is worse. If the first bill was petty theft; this bill is tantamount to a carjacking.

This conference report has the distinction of choosing the most extreme measures from both the House and Senate bill. What we have before us is a regulatory Christmas tree that has been trimmed with countless number of unnecessary items. The result—higher prices, less innovation, less creativity. And the kicker in the conference report is the direct tax on cable subscribers to help prop-up the broadcasters. Retransmission consent is nothing but a transfer of wealth from the poor cable subscriber to the Larry Tisch's of the world. Ladies and gentlemen, the supporters of this bill are talking about regulation, equity and the public good. But as Senator Russel Long once said: "It doesn't matter what they are talking about, they are talking about money." This is not a cable subscriber protection bill—this is about taking money from the consumer and giving it to the broadcasters.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN].

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am voting for the conference report on regulation of cable television today because I agree that something must be done to stop some unwarranted rate increases that have occurred in some parts of this country.

I have also supported and will continue to support the program access provisions of this legislation which will help customers in rural America who rely on satellite dishes for their programming to get that programming at nondiscriminatory costs.

However, even though I am voting for the bill, I do have some concerns about how the bill will treat cable operators in the smaller markets, and especially in rural States. Many of these cable operators have not abused their market positions, they have not increased rates above inflation, and they have delivered quality services to their customers.

Some of the regulations that might make perfect sense for urban areas where you have large cable operations may not be fair to a rural cable system, and I want to be sure that we are not going to impose an undue regulatory burden upon these smaller systems.

I am concerned about provisions in the legislation that will get down to the detail of even prescribing certain office hours for cable systems. I don't think that makes much sense for the smaller system where there's never been a problem in those areas.

Also, unlike the House bill that we passed, this conference report allows cable subscribers to challenge rates. That might be acceptable for large cable systems with larger budgets and staffs, and they might easily be able to absorb the time and money needed to defend themselves from those challenges, but I don't think that's the case with the smalltown cable providers.

I'd like some assurances that these smaller cable providers, whose rates have not risen in any unreasonable way during recent years, will not have to spend most of their time justifying their rates through costly and expensive processes.

In the area of regulatory burden, there is one independent cable operator in North Dakota who serves 9,000 subscribers in 8 different communities. In one community, for example, he has told me he has only 34 subscribers. The question is, Under the customer service standards in this legislation, will this cable operator be forced to open a service office with hours, staff, telephones, and other facilities in the community in which he has only 34 subscribers, even though it would not be economically feasible for him to do so? One would expect the regulations not to include that, but when Federal regulators get their arms around this bill, you never know what's going to happen and that's my concern.

I've talked to the subcommittee chairman and asked that we in Congress hold oversight hearings on the regulatory burden to determine how this might or might not affect smaller systems. He has given me a commitment to do that, and I just wanted to say that while I'm going to vote for this conference report because I think it's needed, I am concerned about some provisions of it, and I'm going to push very hard on behalf of the smaller cable systems that they not be subjected to unreasonable and unwarranted and unjustifiable regulatory intrusions.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HALL].

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the conference committee which completed its consideration of this legislation last week, I rise in support of the final agreement. This is not to say that I'm an ardent supporter of increasing the regulatory burden on the cable industry—I'm not. When Congress approved the Cable Act of 1984, many Members, including myself, took for granted that deregulation would foster competition in cable services, with consumers being the ultimate beneficiaries. Eight years later, however, most communities in America are still waiting for that promise of competition.

The legislation before us today would reregulate cable services in those communities which continue to have only one cable provider. As soon as effective competition in cable services develops in any given community, then cable operators in that community would once again be deregulated, and the cost and quality of service would be determined by the marketplace. I should note that the programming access amendment put forward by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN] would go a long way toward ensuring that real competition has a fair chance to develop.

I want to assure my colleagues and my constituents that it is my belief this legislation will not cause rates to increase—rather, this bill is designed to reintroduce some local government control over cable rates. With respect to the retransmission consent proposal in the bill, this simply gives a local broadcast station the option to negotiate for carriage of its signal on a cable system.

I would remind my colleagues that it was Congress that, in 1976, created the so-called compulsory license which allows cable operators to use local broadcast signals without prior consent from the broadcast station, and without compensation to that broadcast station. Congress established the compulsory license in order to give the infant cable industry a chance to grow and compete. That was 16 years ago and it did work—no one can now say that the cable industry is still a small, struggling entity requiring a special protection in the law.

This legislation gives broadcast stations a choice of two options when dealing with a local cable operator. The station can either elect to operate under must carry, in which case the station is automatically carried on the cable system for a 3-year period without compensation, or the broadcast station can choose retransmission consent, and enter into negotiations with the cable system. Nothing in this bill sets the terms for these negotiations, and nothing requires a cable system to accept the demands of a broadcast station that elects retransmission consent. If an agreement cannot be reached between the two parties, then the broadcast station is off the cable system for a 3-year period. Despite the various cost figures being offered today which suggest that cable rates will increase by $1 to $5 billion per year as a result of this legislation, no one knows with any real certainty how these negotiations between broadcast stations and cable systems will play out. This is because each negotiation will be unique—just like any other business negotiations. Many broadcast stations, in fact, are interested in arrangements that go beyond simple financial compensation—such as joint ventures, joint advertising, good channel positioning, et cetera. Without any further governmental interference, the cable industry and the broadcasters can and, I hope, will make this basic idea of business negotiation work in the marketplace.

Mr. Speaker, my point is simply this—any entity should be entitled to maintain control over who uses its own product. I strongly support the idea of retransmission consent, and I sincerely hope this Congress will turn this proposal into reality. I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire how much time is remaining on both sides?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LUKEN). The gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT] has 6 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] has 6½ minutes remaining.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, before yielding that time, I would ask unanimous consent that statements by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] and I be placed in the RECORD next to each other with the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts following mine.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, those statements which are not in the form of a colloquy may be inserted in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

Mr. LENT. I ask for clarification on four issues from the distinguished Congressman from Massachusetts about the new provisions in the bill reported by the conference affecting home shopping stations. H.R. 4850 contained a provision which would deny mandatory must carry to those stations which are utilized predominantly for sales presentations or program length commercials, a provision which I and a number of my colleagues opposed as discriminatory and of questionable constitutional merit. I draw attention now to new provisions on this issue contained in the bill reported by the conference. The issue of whether these stations serve the public interest is now referred to the Federal Communications Commission for appropriate proceedings and the earlier discrimination against these stations applies only pending the completion of this proceeding which the FCC is required to complete within 270 days after the date of enactment of this section.

I ask my distinguished colleague now for some clarifications of this amended provision. First, it is correct, is it not, that the revised section leaves to the FCC the authority to determine the nature of the proceeding it conducts as long as the Commission meets the section's requirement for appropriate notice and opportunity for public comment?

Second, I would also like to ask about the effect of the 270-day deadline established in the conference report. It is my understanding that the new provision means that the FCC can decide this issue, assuming it meets the public comment requirement, whenever it feels it has completed its analysis as long as it does not take more than 270 days for the process. In other words, it can complete its proceeding in a much shorter period of time if it so decides.

Third, let me seek assurance on another critical point. I understand that under the terms of this provision, when the FCC makes its determination, whether in 270 days or less, those stations which it decides serve the public interest will be promptly certified as local commercial television stations and will be treated the same as other local commercial television stations under the mandatory must carry provisions of the act, provided they meet the other must carry requirements of the act.

Finally, under the new provision, it is my understanding that if the FCC determines that a station does not serve the public interest, it will have a reasonable period within which to provide different programming. In addition, such stations will not be denied a license renewal solely because their programming consists predominantly of sales presentations or program length commercials. In other words, the new proceeding on public service for these predominantly sales stations is undertaken solely for determination as to qualification under the mandatory must carry provisions, and for no other purpose.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I have examined the statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT] and the gentleman's four interpretations are correct.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, it is with great reluctance that I rise in opposition to the conference report on S. 12, the Cable Television Protection Act. I was pleased to vote in favor of this bill when it was approved by the House in July. The House version offered the promise of providing well-deserved relief from skyrocketing monthly bills to cable subscribers across the Nation.

But, something happened to a good piece of legislation in conference. The conferees decided to tack on to this bill a concept called retransmission consent, a matter that is inextricably linked to the Judiciary Committee's jurisdiction over copyright matters. Mr. Speaker, this is an issue with far-reaching economic and legal consequences. Yet, it has not been subject to 1 single minute of debate on the floor of the House. At every step of the process in this body, a conscious effort was made to keep retransmission consent away from the cable bill. Then, lo and behold, the conferees magically rediscovered retransmission consent, just in time to tuck it into the conference report and send it back here to the floor of the House. So now the Members of this body are being asked to swallow retransmission consent on the basis of the assurances of our conferees that it will be good for us and our constituents. On that, I have some doubts.

Mr. Speaker, the sole purpose of the concept of retransmission consent is to provide broadcasters with what they call a new revenue stream. One of the most ardent proponents of the concept has estimated that this stream will in fact be a rushing river of revenue for the broadcasters, to the tune of $1 to $3 billion. You don't have to be a Nobel laureate in economics to figure out that it will be the cable subscribers who will be forced to pay the passed-on cable costs. I am afraid that it will take a flight of rhetoric worthy of William Jennings Bryan for us to explain to our cable-using constituents how a bill that started out as a measure to lower cable fees somehow came back to the floor of this House with this billion-dollar transfer of wealth attached to it.

Another very disturbing aspect of retransmission consent is its effect on the rights of the holders of copyrights to television programming. These legally vested rights aren't going to vanish into thin air simply by waving the magic wand of retransmission consent. As a result, what we will be doing if we enact the bill in this form is to set the stage for interminable and inevitable litigation.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that there is a way that the principles of both retransmission consent and copyright can be harmonized, and that it can be done in a way that protects the interests of cable subscribers. This bill doesn't do the job. If we defeat this conference report, we can come back in the future and work on a bill that does the job right. For these reasons, I have to urge my colleagues to vote "no" on this conference report.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time, 6½ minutes, to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I begin by paying my greatest respect and affection to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], my dear friend, who is one of the finest men that I know, and a man with whom I have had great pride in serving.

I wanted to say that I am reminded today, as I speak, of the mighty Achilles, who sulked in his tent outside the walls of Troy and did not participate in the battle which took place. Never would I say that my dear friend from Texas had sulked in his tent, but I think it is time for us to recognize that he awakes from a rather deep sleep in a somewhat ill mood, because he had a full opportunity to name three conferees. He chose not to do so.

Had those three conferees appeared, together with the four Republican conferees, the matter would have been deadlocked and the result would have been very, very different than that which we see before us.

So I would urge my colleagues to not think that there was anything done in the dark of night here. The harsh fact of the matter is that retransmission consent has been reviewed by everybody in sight. As my good friend from Texas has observed to the House, he would anticipate that Hollywood will have full opportunity to have this question reviewed and certainly the copyright laws are within the purview of the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. I fully anticipate, my dear friend, to look to those laws as this matter develops.

The cost estimate has been made on this bill with retransmission consent. Consumers Federation of America recognizes and says, in a study which I would show my colleagues here, that there will be a savings to American consumers of $6 billion, if this legislation is passed. The FCC recognizes that the savings to consumers is going to be $5.3 billion. That is big money. That includes retransmission consent.

Let us look then at some of the other things. This legislation passed the House by a vote of 340 to 73. It passed the Senate by 73 to 18. It is very clear that there is strong support for this legislation, and I would urge my colleagues to recognize that.

Let me tell my colleagues about something else we are finding. This is a year when people are concerned about the special interests running the Congress of the United States. Listen to those people. They are telling us that they are dissatisfied with service, which is so bad that the city of New York had to amend the charter of the cable company which serves them to assure that that cable company would simply answer the phone.

Look at who opposes this bill: The cable industry, an unregulated monopoly. They want to stay an unregulated monopoly. Is that surprising? No; there is enormous economic advantage for them. Hollywood, which sees an opportunity to increase their revenue stream.

Who favors this bill? The Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO, the UAW, the American Association of Retired Persons, the League of Cities, the mayors of the communities that we serve, the National Association of Rural Co-ops, the Association of State Attorneys General, and Consumers Against Special Interests.

The answer here is to listen to the people that we serve, and if we do not listen to them in an election year, listen to our pollsters. They are telling us, the people are fed up with these special interests pressuring the Congress into unwise legislation that does not serve their interests.

Control prices, assure improved service, and put reasonable restraints on monopolists.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, let us make no bones about what this debate is over. The Committee on the Judiciary had plenty of opportunity to bring that amendment out on the floor to help Hollywood and get more revenues for Hollywood back in July. They chose not to bring the amendment out on the floor.

I do not know why they did not want to defend Hollywood in the well of the House.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, they chose not to participate in the conference, where they had an opportunity to have conferees appointed to carry out their views.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, again the gentleman from Michigan is correct. Judiciary conferees were named to the conference committee, and yet they never showed up to fight for Hollywood to get them more revenues.

Do my colleagues know what this debate is over? This is as though Hurricane Andrew hit every consumer in America. Now we are building a tent to protect the consumers, and the broadcasters are inside. Hollywood wants to get inside, too, so they can get more revenues. In order to ensure that they get inside the tent and get more revenues, Hollywood producers are going to blow down the whole tent and give no protection to the consumers of our country against the $6 billion overcharges which the cable industry imposes every single year.

If we want to make sure that this bill is killed so that Hollywood can go back and get more of the money which they think is going to the broadcasters, more than they think they deserve, but it will still go into their pocket, not back to the consumers, then, fine, vote no. But if we want to protect the consumers in this country, make sure that we vote yes on this bill because that is the only way we are going to protect the consumers.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, we have a simple choice here. The consuming public of the American people want this bill. The cable industry, an unregulated monopoly, does not. The Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO, the League of Cities, the Attorneys General, they want this bill.

Why? Because they know it is going to save them money and improve the service. The result of passage of this bill is that the consumers will receive needed protections. Defeat of this bill assures that the special interests will profit, will enjoy increased revenues and will, of course, be very grateful to all of those who have provided them this needed assistance.

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to vote for passage of S. 12, the cable television agreement.

By now all of us are familiar with the litany of woes arising from deregulation of the cable industry in 1984. While this action was supposed to promote competition to cable, and keep rates reasonable, it had the opposite effect. The General Accounting Office [GAO] reports cable rates rose 61 percent during this period—more than three times the inflation rate. The Justice Department found price hikes were approximately 50 percent more than they would have been in a genuinely competitive market. Perhaps most telling of all, the Consumers Federation of America [CFA] estimates the cable industry overcharges subscribers $6 billion a year.

The rate hikes, it should be emphasized, are not a result of Government action. In my view, they are due, in part, to Government inaction on behalf of consumers.

Enough is enough. The agreement before us today would restore much needed balance to the cable industry by reregulating rates and promoting competition in a meaningful way.

At least 95 percent of the cable systems operating today have little to no competition from other multichannel sources of video broadcasting. The cable agreement takes effective steps to stabilize prices. Under the conference bill, the Federal Communications Commission [FCC] must develop a procedure to determine the maximum rate allowable for the basic tier of cable service. This rate must be reasonable for subscribers, and cannot surpass what would be charged if cable systems faced real competition. The CFA estimates this provision will lower monthly rates at least 30 percent. In addition, cable operators who continue charging excessive rates would be forced to refund the overcharge amount to subscribers, and lower rates. It should be noted that once a cable system faces meaningful competition, FCC rate regulation would no longer apply.

Another key feature of the agreement would, for the first time, limit what cable operators may charge for remote control devices, converter boxes, and the installation of other home cable equipment.

The agreement does require cable operators, also for the first time, to obtain permission from local broadcasters to retransmit their programming to cable subscribers. Broadcasters, however, are not required to charge them a fee to retransmit these programs. The conference bill is flexible, allowing broadcasters to ask for benefits on the cable system, rather than forcing them to demand fees. During House and Senate hearings on cable reregulation, many local broadcasters indicated they would ask for benefits on the cable system, instead of charging fees.

While the provision is not a perfect solution to the thorny problem of retransmission, I seriously doubt it will have the effect of raising cable rates, as critics predict. If monthly bills do indeed rise, I suspect the cable companies will be doing so simply to ensure a self-fulfilling prophecy.

The cable television agreement is a responsible policy. It would rein in unfair price hikes for basic service and open the industry to competition, driving rates still lower. I urge my colleagues to vote for passage of this important proconsumer bill, and to override a veto if the need to do so arises.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I will not support legislation that increases cable rates for my constituents.

I agree that Congress needs to address the problems facing cable television customers. However, I do not agree that this legislation is the right answer.

In many areas of my congressional district, my constituents do not have a choice between cable television and so-called free television. Instead, the choice is between cable television, usually from only one source, or virtually no television at all. In other words, many of my constituents have no choice at all.

In considering this legislation supposedly aimed at consumer protection and competitiveness, we must ask ourselves these important questions: Does this legislation create any more choices for the cable customer? Will this legislation protect cable customers from higher rates, or will it actually cause rates to increase? Does this legislation increase competition in the cable industry?

Clearly, the retransmission provisions of this conference report will increase the costs of doing business for cable operators. However, in the absence of effective competition among cable operators, these increased costs will get passed directly to cable customers. That means higher monthly bills and still leaves cable customers with nowhere else to turn.

I urge my colleagues to join me in rejecting this legislation that increases regulation and rates, and instead, work for the passage of a bill that increases fairness and choice for cable customers.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on S. 12, the Cable Television Consumer Protection Act of 1992.

I believe that the cable operators in my region of Kentucky have been trying to provide the best possible service for the lowest possible cost. They generally deliver a good product and they care about their customers.

In other cases, however, I have been the recipient of many complaints from those who object to increasing rates, limited channels, or poor service. I also know that in many other parts of the Nation, these problems are more severe.

S. 12 will hopefully address those cases in which unfair rates or inadequate service are standard operating practice. The Federal Communications Commission will ensure that rates for basic cable service, as well as for the equipment used, are reasonable for the customer. Minimum service standards also will be written, so customers can count on phone calls being answered and problems solved promptly. Good cable operators—like many of mine—should not be harmed by the cable bill or the regulations which implement it. Those that fail these price and service tests will have to measure up.

Mr. Speaker, this is a tough measure, to be sure. It will require companies to control rates that have risen dramatically since deregulation. At the same time, it generally requires cable operators to carry local commercial and public television signals. Another provision prevents cable systems from forcing customers to buy a whole tier of service in order to get one or two premium channels. So the terms are tough, and I would overall favor a milder version. In fact, I supported the Lent substitute when the House first considered this issue in July. But when the Lent substitute failed, I felt compelled to support the bill on final passage.

In response to this bill, the cable industry has recently, and suddenly, expressed concerns about the higher rates it might be forced to charge customers. But there is little question that without this bill, rates would definitely increase. With this bill, we can expect the price trend to reverse, and our constituents to pay less.

The rural impact of this bill is an important consideration. Like the House version of the cable bill, the conference report requires that the FCC reduce the impact of its regulations on small operators. I would have preferred even milder treatment for very small cable operators; however, the bill does require the FCC to write rate regulations which reduce the costs of compliance for operators with 1,000 or fewer customers.

Finally, many of my constituents cannot receive cable service at all; their homes are too remote to be wired by the local cable franchise, leaving those who can afford it to purchase a home satellite dish. S. 12 helps satellite dish owners by making sure that video program producers do not overcharge satellite delivery systems for programs they provide to cable operators.

Television is an important source of entertainment and education in eastern Kentucky. Our elderly, our homebound, and our children all should be able to receive cable television, affordably and without constant service headaches.

I support this bill because, on balance, it will bring some long needed relief and an important product to cable customers, throughout Kentucky and across the Nation.

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, in July, when the House considered its cable reregulation legislation, H.R. 4850, I supported that bill because it contained a number of meaningful consumer protection provisions and opened the door to competition, which in turn should result in lower rates and greater choices for consumers.

Today, we are considering a much different piece of legislation—one which will result either in rate increases or a reduction in community services now provided by our local cable companies.

The difference is a provision, known as retransmission consent, which places an unfair burden on every cable customer by requiring payments to broadcast stations and/or contractual agreements that run counter to the original intent of our legislation.

The consumers of this country have made their priorities quite clear. They want reliable service at reasonable rates. Our senior citizens and individuals on fixed incomes are particularly concerned.

I have heard from hundreds of my constituents—many of them seniors—over the last 2 weeks, urging me to vote no on this conference report.

They are opposed because they see retransmission consent for what it is—an anticonsumer provision that will cost them money in the long run.

Once again, Congress has taken a good idea and has turned it around. As a result, a proconsumer proposal has become a bill that consumers fear, because they have lost faith in Congress to do what it promises to do.

Mr. Speaker, I support meaningful consumer protection, but this conference report is not proconsumer.

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report on S. 12, I do so reluctantly, because I strongly support many of the provisions of this bill.

There is little question that reregulation of the cable industry is in the public interest. While many exciting technologies hold great promise for injecting some meaningful competition into the cable business, those technologies are still in their infancy and are not yet ready to go toe to toe with the existing cable systems.

Far too many cable companies have taken advantage of the monopolies they hold to raise rates and offer shoddy service. Hardly a day goes by without my office being contacted by a constituent to complain about one of the cable companies which serve my district.

As much as I would like to support S. 12 I cannot, because of a glaring inequity in the conference report.

During conference the conferees added retransmission consent provision which will allow local broadcasters to charge cable companies to carry their signal. It has been estimated that this will result in a windfall profit of up to $1 billion for broadcasters. In fact, it has been estimated that this provision alone will raise cable rates by as much as $6 a month.

Yet, the networks are little more than a conduit and a compiler for programming. They are not the creative force behind the programs, nor do they take the financial risks involved with developing a series. The way this legislation is drafted only the networks will derive any money from the retransmission consent section.

Yet, the bill, as written, does not allow copyright holders to share in these revenues. This means that the broadcasters, who merely deliver the programming, are the only parties who will profit from the work of the thousands of men and women in my home State of California who earn their living in the television production industry.

Not only is this blatantly unfair, it could also complicate trade negotiations in Europe and elsewhere. How can our trade negotiators demand that European broadcasters compensate American copyright holders for programming when we do not do so ourselves?

Exports of television programs and movies make a significant contribution to reducing our international trade deficit. Loss of this revenue could be devastating to television studios and add to a rapidly increasing imbalance of payments abroad.

Legislation was pending before the House Judiciary Committee which would have solved this inequity while limiting cable rate increases to 20 cents a month. Unfortunately this alternative was not considered by the conference committee.

I am deeply disappointed that I am not able to support this legislation. However, this bill, in its current form is fatally flawed and must be fixed before it is allowed to become law.

I urge my colleagues to join with me and oppose this conference report and I hope that Congress can pass an equitable consumer protection bill during the current session.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I reluctantly oppose the conference report before us.

The Cable Television Consumer Protection Act that we are considering today contains many important provisions which, if enacted, would improve the level of service provided by individual cable companies. Rate regulation, the promotion of competition within the cable industry, and consumer protection provisions are vitally important, and I am certainly not opposed conceptually to regulating the cable industry to make improvements in delivery. In fact, in July, I voted for the House cable bill because I, like so many of my colleagues, feel that it is time to put some constraints on cable operators.

My colleagues on the House Energy and Commerce Committee crafted a bill that would help cable consumers and give a boost to some potential competitors to cable. But the conference report that is before us today differs in a significant respect from the cable bill that the House passed this summer. It contains a provision known as retransmission consent, which I believe changes the balance that had been struck in the House legislation.

Retransmission consent is intended to provide a second revenue stream to broadcasters. But that revenue stream would have to come from somewhere—and I fear it might very well come from the pocketbooks of the same consumers this bill is intended to protect.

I am also concerned by the way the conference report values television signals without recognizing the value of the programs that give those signals their appeal. The reality of the modern television marketplace is that when we turn on the television set, our focus is the program, not the carrier. Viewers' allegiance is to "Cheers" and "The Cosby Show," not the station on which that program is being carried.

Yet retransmission consent allows the local broadcaster to negotiate with cable for the right to negotiate with cable for the right to carry the TV signal, but does not give the copyright owner the same opportunity. The copyright owner will continue to be compelled to give his show to cable without compensation.

I believe such a policy decision would skew the reality of the TV marketplace and send a horrible message to our trading partners overseas. U.S.-made TV shows are one of our strongest exports. America's production community generates $3.5 billion trade surplus. If this provision becomes a model all over the globe, retransmission consent revenues will flow to foreign broadcasters instead of to the copyright owners who created the programs enjoyed by foreign audience. It could cost this country millions of dollars that would flow straight to the bottom line of the U.S. trade balance.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I must oppose the cable conference report. It is my hope that we will have the opportunity to revisit the issue of cable regulation either this session of Congress or early in the next session so that we can pass meaningful legislation that will not be unnecessarily injurious to consumers and our trade posture.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I am a strong supporter of efforts to enact proconsumer legislation to protect cable television subscribers from unreasonable rates and poor customer service. I voted for the House of Representatives' cable rate regulation bill 2 months ago, and voted for similar legislation in 1990. There is no doubt that in the absence of real competition in the cable industry, consumers need protection to ensure they are not taken advantage of by cable monopolies.

However, it is with regret that I must oppose the conference report on S. 12. When the conference committee met on this bill, a controversial provision was added which could have a devastating impact on a major industry based in my home State of California. This provision has nothing to do with bringing about reasonable cable rates or improving service. This issue was never even debated on the House floor.

The conferees agreed to a retransmission consent language, a provision which would require cable operators to negotiate with local braodcasters in order to retransmit their signal. There is indeed some merit to the arguments that broadcasters deserve compensation for the use of their broadcast signals. However, under the provisions of this conference report, the people who produce television programs would not even have a seat at the bargaining table while their copyrighted product is bought and sold.

In its current version, this provision would seriously threaten one of our biggest industries in California and the tens of thousands of Californians who earn their living in television production. At a time when our State is struggling with record high unemployment rates and an increasing budget crunch, this legislation deals one of our key industries a low blow.

This precedent could have serious repercussions worldwide. The motion picture and television industry provides us with one of our countries biggest exports, showing one of the largest positive trade balances. The current cable bill would give foreign governments the green light to disregard U.S. copyright owners rights, resulting in the potential loss of tens of millions of dollars annually in foreign cable royalties. Our unique cultural trade asset would suffer a severe blow, ultimately damaging our State's economy and our Nation's balance of trade.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat, I will continue to support legislation to protect cable consumers. But I believe we can develop a cable bill that will be fair to both consumers and an industry so vital to the well-being of California.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, when this House voted on July 23 overwhelmingly in support of H.R. 4850, the Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act, we voted for the consumer, we voted for reasonable rates, and we voted to promote competition in the industry. It is important to keep in mind that we are being asked to vote for the very same principles today without allowing the sideshow between the cable industry and the broadcasters to steal the spotlight from the true issues.

I had my reservations in July, when I voted to reregulate the industry, and I still have my reservations today because normally I oppose Government regulation. But my vote reflects the grave concern of my constituents that without effective competition and local control against abusive practices, some elements of the cable industry will never exercise self discipline. Customers have reason for concern—over the years, there have been instances of excessive rate hikes and unresponsive customer service. Opponents to this measure argue that costs associated with reregulation will eventually drive up the cost of cable service. Depending on the source, the predictions regarding rate increases vary drastically. At this point, no one really knows what kind of increases we are talking about, if any. It is all based on hypotheses. But one thing we do know for sure is that without this measure we have every reason to believe some cable operators will continue a history of heaping unannounced and unreasonable rate increases on the consumer.

The threat of reregulation came as no surprise to the cable industry, and perhaps cable's biggest mistake was not taking the threat seriously. In my opinion, the cable industry had ample opportunity to corral its bad operators and prove to the consumers that it had the inclination and the ability to regulate itself. But the industry as a whole did not live up to this challenge. Because of this and the strong message of my constituents, the cable industry has left me no choice but to vote for the conference report.

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, the cable bill has brought about strong emotions and expensive advertising. I supported the bill. The cable bill can be broken into two issues: Price and access. This legislation, I hope, will make prices more competitive. It will provide cable programming, at reasonable rates, for rural residents who now have access to cable.

A little bit of background. Cable rates were deregulated by Congress, in 1984, to help cable companies produce a reasonable return on their significant investment. As a result, the cable companies were allowed to set their own prices with no Government intervention. But this was a solution to only half the problem. Congress did not take the second step. It did not provide a competitive alternative, or access for others to enter the market.

My preference is and will continue to be to open the market. This is the proven American way to restrain price excesses. But that was not to be. The bill that emerged is far from perfect, but it is a step forward, tc correct certain features from the 1984 bill—allowing cable companies to operate with no oversight.

This bill asks the cable programming companies to share programs at a reasonable price. This will help those people in rural areas of the southern tier and Finger Lakes regions where cable is not available, since their only alternative is to install a satellite dish.

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report because this is not the bill I voted for 2 months ago.

The bill I voted for protected consumers, this bill does not. The bill voted for encouraged competition, this bill discourages competition. The bill I voted for lowered cable rates for cable customers, this bill will raise rates.

A Detroit Free Press article quotes the bill's sponsor, Congressman MARKEY as saying the bill will not lower rates, but that "rates would only go up less than without this legislation."

What has happened over the last 2 months is the classic bait-and-switch tactic. This bill as advertised 2 months ago was a good bill. But suddenly, the bill we will vote on today isn't what we bargained for.

Now we have a bill that will force consumers to pay for programs they now get for free. Now we have a bill that has become a Washington bureaucrat's dream, and nightmare for rural cable consumers.

This bill, by failing to provide regulatory relief for small, rural cable companies, and by imposing retransmission consent, will force cable consumers in rural America to pay much more for cable service or receive none at all.

Even worse, retransmission consent will drive small cable companies out of business, leaving huge cable operators to step in and buy them out.

In my rural mid-Michigan district, consumers in rural counties and townships like Isabella, Broomfield, and Woodland are served by cable companies that provide service to less than 100 customers.

But that's what this bill will do. It will drive out of business small cable firms that can't pay retransmission consent or keep up with the regulatory paperwork blizzard this bill will create.

My friends, retransmission consent will do to cable what slotting allowances have done to air travel, kill competition and allow a few huge companies to drive up costs and buy out smaller competitors.

Again, that's not what was advertised 2 months ago.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this conference report. Defeat this defective bill, send it back to conference, and send a message to the conferees that we won't stand for bait and switch, we want what every consumer wants—the product that was advertised 2 months ago.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 280, nays 128, answered "present" 1, not voting 23, as follows:

☐ 1149

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Riggs for, with Mr. Barnard against.

Mr. Hayes of Louisiana for, with Mr. McCrery against.

Mr. WILSON changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I have recently entered into a contract, which will be effective January 4, 1993, with a broadcasting company which has a substantial interest in both the broadcasting and cable industries. For this reason I have voted "present" on the conference report for S. 12, the Cable Television Consumer Protection Act in order to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will entertain 1-minute speeches.

NEBRASKA VERSUS WASHINGTON CONTEST WILL DISAPPOINT CORNHUSKERS

(Mr. DICKS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased and honored to join my great friend and colleague from Nebraska, PETER HOAGLAND, in apprising the House of an important athletic rematch that will be taking place this Saturday evening in Seattle. The co-national champion University of Washington Husky football team will be hosting the Nebraska Cornhuskers this year, following the Husky's stunning 36 to 21 win last fall in Lincoln. I know that it's been a long year in the Cornhusker State since the humiliating fourth-quarter collapse that the team suffered against the Huskies. And I know that the team has come to Seattle single-mindedly for revenge in this nationally televised contest. I accept Congressman HOAGLAND's contention that his team has grown in character and experience through its defeat last year, but I am afraid that more growth is in store for the team this Saturday night. The University of Washington Huskies, well on their way to a repeat national championship, will generously provide another character-building lesson in humility and send the men from Lincoln back to the flatlands emptyhanded. My confidence in my alma mater is unwavering, moving me to offer to my friend from Nebraska the wager of a bushel of the world's best and the most nutritious Washington State apples to match his ill-advised, though well-intentioned, offer. The Nebraska State motto is "Equality Before the Law," but I just want to warn my colleague that at Husky Stadium the motto is "There Are No Equals." Mr. Speaker, I thank the Chair for providing me with the opportunity to apprise and advise the Members of the House of Representatives about this important upcoming event.

NEBRASKA VERSUS WASHINGTON CONTEST WILL DISAPPOINT HUSKIES

(Mr. HOAGLAND asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I am more than pleased to be here today and to enter into this agreement with my great friend, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS], about the football game.

Now, the Huskers are going to Washington Saturday night to beat the Huskies. Last year they beat us in Lincoln, but this year we are going to even the score in the State of Washington.

I will tell you, I am so confident the Cornhuskers are going to win this game that even if NORM DICKS himself suited up again as a middle linebacker as he used to years ago, I know that we would still win the game.

What we have decided to do is wager a crate of oranges against a bushel of apples. The reason we are wagering a crate of oranges is because we are confident we are going to go to the Orange Bowl to represent the Big Eight this year. As a matter of fact, last night I visited with a member of the selection committee from the Orange Bowl and have some information for Tom Osborne, Coach Osborne, about that conversation.

But let me tell you that comparing the Huskers with the Huskies this year is like comparing apples and oranges. There is really no comparison. Just this morning the Associated Press predicted that Nebraska would prevail on a score of 27 to 24. Personally I think that is too conservative. I think we are going to prevail by a much wider margin than that.

In any event, I am pleased to accept the challenge. We look forward to the game, the televised game, Saturday night.

PRIORITY REFORMS FOR A NEW HOUSE

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, considering the debacle that just took place on this floor, you might be interested in this statement.

Madam Speaker, in a bipartisan spirit of overhauling the antiquated and gridlocked legislative machinery of this body, I yesterday introduced the Priority Reforms for a New House Resolution of 1992.

This is a series of some 14 amendments to House rules designed to make the legislative process in this body more orderly, accountable, and deliberative.

Let us face it, Madam Speaker, we are partly responsible for the problem of legislative gridlock because of the archaic procedures and bureaucracy that have built-up like barnacles in this body.

We can hardly oversee and control the executive bureaucracy when we remain enmeshed in our own legislative bureaucracy of tangled jurisdictions, multiple referrals, multitudinous subcommittees and staff, and a duplicative and a topsy-turvy process of authorizing, appropriating and budgeting.

The time has come for us to resolve to do the people's business in a more business-like manner of orderly scheduling, focused responsibilities, and deliberative legislating.

Among other things, my reforms would—

Reduce the number of subcommittees, member assignments and staff;

Abolish proxy voting, one-third quorums, and multiple referrals;

Abolish select committees;

Require a clear legislative schedule each year and early committee organization;

Require the adoption of committee oversight agendas; and Require the reporting of authorizations by May 15.

I appeal to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle: Let us make the new House work from the start. Adopt my priority reforms for a new House.

If you do not, the voters are liable to clean House.

INTRODUCTION OF THE PROFESSIONAL TRADE SERVICE CORPS LEGISLATION

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Madam Speaker, today the U.S. trade deficit again rang in at over $7.82 billion in the red, the worst performance in over 20 months, another flood of imports coming onto our shores and only a trickle of U.S. goods made here sent abroad.

Those numbers represent a loss of another 180,000 jobs in this country.

One key reform essential to stemming the hemorrhage in our U.S. marketplace is to upgrade the skill level of our U.S. trade negotiators to move our products into foreign markets and to assure that our trade negotiators are trustworthy.

The bill I am introducing today, the professional trade service corps, would accomplish these goals by creating an elite professional body of American trade negotiators. Just like diplomats in our Foreign Service, our trade representatives are America's conveyors of our Nation's economic and political interests.

We would not allow graduates of West Point to lead foreign armies against our country. We should not allow trade negotiators trained at taxpayer expense to leave Government service and represent foreign interests against the best interests of our Government. We must treat this situation as seriously as any international conflict.

Please join me in cosponsoring the Professional Trade Service Corps of 1992.

INTRODUCING A RESOLUTION CALLING FOR AN ETHICS PROBE

(Mr. COMBEST asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks, and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. COMBEST. Madam Speaker, it is my intention on Friday to call up as a question of privilege pursuant to rule IX (rule 9) of the rules of the House, a resolution calling for an investigation by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct into possible unauthorized disclosures by Banking Committee Chairman HENRY GONZALEZ of classified information in violation of the rules of the House. This resolution updates House Resolution 539, introduced on August 4, by the minority leader, BOB MICHEL. This update was necessitated by Chairman GONZALEZ' latest disclosure on September 14.

It is my hope that the majority leadership will allow a full and open debate on this question, which I consider to have both national and international ramifications. Madam Speaker, I am inserting a copy of my resolution for the RECORD at this point, as follows:

H. RES. —

Whereas on March 2, 1992, Representative Henry B. Gonzalez knowingly and willfully inserted in the Congressional Record documents of the Executive Branch bearing markings indicating that they were classified for reasons of national security;

Whereas on July 7, 1992, Representative Gonzalez willfully disclosed information from a purported Central Intelligence Agency intelligence document which he publicly acknowledged at that time to be classified;

Whereas on September 14, 1992, Representative Gonzalez willfully disclosed information from a Central Intelligence Agency document classified as "Secret" in its entirety, which he acknowledged is still classified;

Whereas the Director of Central Intelligence, Robert M. Gates, has indicated in writing that Representative Gonzalez's "statement in the Congressional Record on 7 July 1992 included information from a TOP SECRET compartmented and particularly sensitive document" to which the Central Intelligence Agency had given his committee staff access;

Whereas the Director of Central Intelligence further stated in writing to Representative Gonzalez, regarding his July 7, 1992, statement in the Congressional Record, that, "Because of the sources and methods underlying that information, I will ask for a damage assessment to determine the impact of the disclosure. I regret that you chose to discuss information from classified documents without attempting to determine if we could work out a way to satisfy . . . our need to protect intelligence sources and methods";

Whereas the Acting Director of Central Intelligence, Admiral William O. Studeman, has confirmed in writing to Representative Gonzalez that portions of statements in the Congressional Record by Representative Gonzalez on July 21 and 27, 1992, "were drawn from classified intelligence documents, some of which are Top Secret, compartmented, and particularly sensitive";

Whereas the Acting Director of Central Intelligence has stated in writing to Representative Gonzalez, regarding his statements in the Congressional Record of July 21 and 27, 1992, that, "I have asked the Office of Security of the Central Intelligence Agency to undertake a review of your statements in order to determine the impact of the disclosures of intelligence information on intelligence sources and methods";

Whereas the Department of State has confirmed in writing that, over a number of days, Representative Gonzalez "inserted into the Congressional Record the full text of at least fourteen classified documents generated by the Department of State," and the Department of State indicated further that those documents "contain classified information involving sensitive diplomatic discussions";

Whereas the Treasury Department has indicated in writing "very serious concerns" over Representative Gonzalez's "disclosures of classified information in the Congressional Record" which included information from a classified Treasury Department document;

Whereas on numerous other occasions Representative Gonzalez has knowingly and willfully disclosed in the Congressional Record information from Executive Branch documents which are apparently classified for reasons of national security;

Whereas the classified documents in question were apparently made available to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs by Executive Branch agencies in good faith cooperation with a committee investigation and with the expectation that access would be restricted to persons with appropriate security clearances;

Whereas the public disclosure of information from the classified documents in question was not necessary for legitimate legislative oversight, and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs apparently has not voted to disclose publicly those classified documents;

Whereas the public disclosure of the contents of the classified documents in question appears to be detrimental to the national security and foreign policy interests of the United States;

Whereas the conduct of Representative Gonzalez raises serious questions of possible violations of Clauses 1 and 2 of Rule XLIII (Code of Official Conduct) and possibly of Clause 2(k)(7) of Rule XI (Rules of Procedures for Committee) of the House;

Whereas the knowing, unilateral and unauthorized disclosure of classified information by Representative Gonzalez seriously imperils the spirit of mutual cooperation and trust between the Congress and the Executive Branch so critical to effective legislative oversight;

Whereas the nature and gravity of the conduct of Representative Gonzalez is such that the reputation and dignity of the House as an institution and the integrity of its proceedings, especially its oversight activities, may well be adversely affected;

Whereas Representative Gonzalez willfully continues to disclose publicly information from classified documents; and

Whereas in the interest of a prompt and fair resolution of the serious questions raised regarding the apparent unauthorized disclosure of classified information in seeming violation of the Rules of the House of Representatives: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct is directed to investigate whether Representative Gonzalez has, during the Second Session of the One Hundred and Second Congress, publicly disclosed classified information in the Congressional Record, and in so doing violated the Rules of the House of Representatives or any duly constituted committees. All other committees, and all Members, officers, or employees of the House who may have information relevant to this investigation are directed to cooperate promptly with the Committee on Standards subject to procedures the Committee shall adopt necessary to protect from unauthorized disclosure classified information which may be transmitted to the Committee pursuant to this investigation. The Committee on Standards of Official Conduct shall promptly report its findings and any recommendations to the House.

PRESIDENT BUSH SHOULD NOT VETO THIS CABLE LEGISLATION

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Madam Speaker, today the House, with a large majority, finally admitted that it made a mistake in the 1980's when it accepted the arguments of the Reagan administration and totally deregulated the monopoly cable industry. Rates skyrocketed, service deteriorated, and the promised era of competition never happened.

This cable bill will restore local authority to control cable rates in 95 percent of the television markets where they now have a monopoly power, it will promote multichannel competitors to cable television, and let the market take over once real competition exists.

The bill has been opposed by the cable companies, who actually lied in inserts enclosed in the bill to all of their customers. This bill explicitly gives local government the authority to lower cable rates, and rates will be lowered in the future if this bill is signed by the President.

That is the big question mark: Will the President admit that he too made a mistake, that he should side for once with the consumers and not the special interests; or will he side with his son, the same one who bankrupted the savings and loan in Colorado, who is now a special consultant for the cable television industry, who is whispering in his father's ear, "Veto this bill. You don't care about consumers. These people will fill your coffers with money come the election."

This is a vote for the American people, a proud day in the House of Representatives, and we have a chance to stand the President down on this issue.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO PEGGY C. SAMPSON

(Mr. YOUNG of Alaska asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, listening to my colleagues and to all the sadness in this great world of ours and in this Nation, today is a happy day, it is a day where we can wish a happy birthday to Peggy Sampson.

Peggy, as you know, is one of our great workers on this floor, who not only takes care of each one of us in our trials and tribulations, delivers our phone messages, and takes care of our pages, she is the protector of those pages and does an excellent job. In fact, she could be called "mom."

She provides guidance to us many times as to what is going on on this floor. She is a great help to us, and I just wanted to wish Peggy Sampson a happy birthday today.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. HORN). Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 16, 1992, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair. Bells will be rung 15 minutes before the House reconvenes.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 2 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. GEPHARDT] at 6 o'clock and 5 minutes p.m.

PERMISSION TO PASS OVER SENATE AMENDMENT NO. 57 TO CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5373, ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1993

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Senate amendment numbered 57 be passed over and that at that time the House proceed to the disposition of the final amendment in disagreement, amendment numbered 58, and further that consideration of Senate amendment numbered 57 be in order when subsequently called up by the manager.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GEPHARDT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection .

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report on the bill, H.R. 5373, as well as the Senate amendments reported in disagreement, and that I may include extraneous material and tables.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5373, ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1993

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the unanimous-consent agreement of Wednesday, September 16, 1992, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 5373) making appropriations for energy and water development for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 16, 1992, the conference report is considered as having been read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the conference committee report in its present form, and I request the time be apportioned to an opponent of the conference report under clause 2 of rule XXVIII.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] opposed to the conference report.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I am not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In that case, each Member will be recognized for one-third of the time of 60 minutes. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present the conference report on the fiscal year 1993 Energy and Water Development appropriations bill for your favorable consideration. Our colleagues will recall that debate on this bill occurred in the House on June 17, and the bill was passed by a vote of 365 to 51. The Senate passed the bill by voice vote on August 3.

Mr. Speaker, our conference committee meeting was held on Tuesday, September 15. I wish to compliment our friends from the other body, particularly the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], the chairman of the Senate subcommittee, and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD], the ranking minority member, for the fine spirit of compromise displayed in the conference meeting. I also wish to thank my colleagues, the House conferees, for their support and their valuable contributions during the conference deliberations.

Now I would like to comment on various aspects of the conference agreement.

Mr. Speaker, for the various agencies and programs under the jurisdiction of the Energy and Water Development Subcommittee, the committee of conference recommends $22,079,547,000 in new budget authority. This amount is $386,391,000 below the budget request, $681,579,000 above the House bill and $197,000 above the Senate bill.

For defense programs, the funding is just $4,000 less than the budget request of $12,131,629,000. For domestic programs, the bill is $386,387,000 below the budget request of $10,334,309,000.

The conference agreement we present to you today is the culmination of many months of effort on the part of the House committee and the same review by the Senate committee. During this period we have heard testimony from hundreds of witnesses—contained in eight hearing volumes of thousands of pages.

The House considered the energy and water development appropriations bill on the floor in 1 day. The Senate had a total of 59 numbered amendments to the bill. But, within those 59 amendments, there were over 400 individual items in disagreement. The conference agreement represents the best efforts of the House and Senate conferees to achieve consensus on each of those items. Many items had to be reduced or changed to accomplish agreement with the Senate. In addition, we had to keep in mind the need to have a bill that was acceptable to the administration.

Your House conferees did their best to maintain the House position. However, to bring back a conference report that is within the budget allocation for the energy and water development programs, a great many items had to be compromised.

We would like more money for energy and the water projects. But, we have only limited funds for these items, and therefore, we cannot provide all of the funds for all of the programs and projects to the extent we would like.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement contains $3,667,133,000 in title I for the Army Corps of Engineers. This is $3,463,000 higher than the bill as passed by the House and $34,603,000 more than the Senate-passed bill. These funds will finance 510 water resources projects in the planning or construction phase, and provide for urgently needed operation and maintenance activities at completed projects.

For title II, the Bureau of Reclamation, the conferees recommend a total of $816,715,000 which is $9,110,000 less than the House-passed bill and $9,384,000 more than the Senate-passed bill. This will fund 116 water resources projects in the planning or construction phase and provide funds for operation and maintenance of 37 projects.

In my view, the conference agreement provides for a financially prudent and environmentally sound water resources development program.

The conference agreement contains $17,158,759,000 for the Department of Energy programs in title III. This includes $3,015,793,000 for energy supply, research and development activities; $384,529,000 for power marketing administrations; $275,071,000 for the nuclear waste disposal fund; and $1,417,784,000 for general science and research activities. The energy accounts include $254,000 for solar, geothermal, hydropower, and electric energy systems and storage; $311,454,000 for nuclear energy; $339,710,000 for magnetic fusion; and $859,700,000 for basic energy sciences. In addition, funding of $517,000,000 has been provided for the superconducting super collider. The conference agreement provides a total of $12,118,625,000 for atomic energy defense activities. Within this bill, $5,541,241,000 is provided for defense and nondefense environmental restoration and cleanup activities which is an increase of $1,258,074,000 over the fiscal year 1992 funding level.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement includes $363,036,000 for eight independent agencies and commissions in title IV, including the Appalachian Regional Commission, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Mr. Speaker, there is also a provision in this bill pertaining to a nuclear weapons test ban. It provides for a short moratorium in fiscal year 1993, limits the number of tests which can be conducted over the next 4 years, permits congressional disapproval of the President's annual test plan, limits testing after September 30, 1996, unless another country has conducted a nuclear weapons test which is counter to the security interests of the United States, and outlines a process by which the President could propose to the Congress to conduct a nuclear explosive testing after 1996 if it is in the urgent national interest for the purpose of safety only.

The administration has not yet agreed to the nuclear weapons test ban provision included in the conference agreement. We will continue to work on this issue to arrive at a compromise which is agreeable to both the Congress and the administration.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge the Members to support the hard work of my subcommittee and pass the conference report and amendments which will be presented to the House.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I would like to insert a table in the RECORD which summarizes the financial aspects of the conference agreement.

I would like to call the Members' attention to several minor printing errors in the conference report printed in the September 15, 1992, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

On page H8518, column one, under amendment No. 37, "$3,105,739,000" should be "$3,015,793,000".

On page H8573, column three, under amendment No. 57, the word "reaction" in subparagraph (h) should be "section".

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this Energy and Water Development appropriations conference agreement. It's a good agreement. I want to pay tribute to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS], and my other colleagues on this subcommittee for the great job they have done.

This bill takes care of our real health, our country itself. It is a national bill. This subcommittee and those who worked with it have shown good, sound judgment in investment in our own country on which all the rest depends.

This is a major bill for looking after the physical resources of our country itself—which is our real wealth. Along with the bill for agriculture, it is the foundation of our economy. Not only does this bill provide for such worthwhile programs as the Appalachian Regional Commission and the TVA, but it also funds various Corps of Engineers projects and takes care of our waterways and the many flood control projects.

Mr. Speaker, in my district and State, there are many national projects which are sound investment expenditures for our Nation.

For the Foothills Joint Demonstration Erosion Control Program, funds are included for work on Batupan Bogue, Otoucalofa Creek, Hotophia Creek, Hickahala and Senatobia Creeks, Long Creek, Black Creek, Burney Branch, Town Creek-Charleston, Sherman Creek, Abiaca Creek, Toby Tubby Creek, Pelucia Creek, Cane-Mussacuna Creeks, Hurricane-Wolf Creeks, and the Coldwater River.

For other ongoing construction, funds are included for the Nonconnah Creek project, the Sardis Dam—dam safety assurance, the Tombigbee River and tributaries project, the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway—purchase of mitigation lands, the Horn Lakes Creek and tributaries project, and the Gulfport harbor project. Funding is also included to continue the Jackson metro area study, and for the East Fork and Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway operation and maintenance. Language is also included providing that operations and maintenance funding for Yazoo basin lakes shall be available for maintenance of roads and trails.

For the Yazoo basin, funding is provided to continue construction on the big sunflower project, the demonstration erosion control projects, the tributaries project, the Upper Yazoo projects, and for backwater mitigation lands. The reformulation study—Yazoo basin projects—is also funded as well as operation and maintenance for all completed Yazoo basin projects.

For the Tennessee Valley Authority, rural development activities are funded at $135 million. Efforts are directed at helping to eliminate the economic hardships in the valley's rural areas.

The agreement provides $190 million for the Appalachian Regional Commission for its highway program and for economic development. Within this amount for the Appalachian Regional Commission is $5 million for an access road in Holly Springs for the local industrial park.

Funding in this conference agreement also continues a cooperative agreement between Jackson State University, Lawrence Berkely Laboratory, and Ana G. Mendez Educational Foundation, an ongoing program.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good agreement, and I urge that it be adopted.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as usual our chairman, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], has done an excellent job of explaining this conference report. As the chairman has said, it was 3 months ago today that the House passed this Energy and Water appropriations bill.

Since that time we have been working with the other body. They passed their version of this in August. We went to conference the day before yesterday.

It was not an easy conference. It seems that each year the conferences get more and more difficult. But through the fine work of our staff, which has already been explained, the staff, headed by the very capable Hunter Spillan, and the other fine staff members, and each member of this subcommittee working with the other body, after many hours of deliberation, give and take both ways, we do have a conference report that I think is acceptable to all.

Especially this year I think we should show our appreciation to three members of our conference who we now know will not be back next year: Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. THOMAS of Georgia, and Mr. PURSELL of Michigan, three Members who have already announced their retirement and will not be returning.

The committee, the House, the country will miss the services of these three very valued members of the Committee on Appropriations and also members of this Subcommittee on Energy and Water.

Mr. Speaker, the chairman has very well presented this. But the bill, the conference report that we do bring, of that $12 billion is for national defense. This is something many Members of this body do not realize, that a large proportion of this Energy and Water Development appropriations bill is for national defense, research for national defense, particularly in the nuclear field. Only $9,900,000,000, or $10 billion roughly, is for nondefense items.

The increase in the conference report over the House-passed bill is $437 million in domestic discretionary and $244 million in defense function 050.

Of the funds in this bill, $4.5 billion is for America's water projects. We have more than 25,000 miles of inland waterways and major deep ports in our country which are provided funds to maintain and operate in this bill; $4.5 billion is provided for these functions.

The remaining $17.5 billion is for many programs, science, research, energy for the future, and research for development of medical devices, particularly in the nuclear field.

Many projects which are in research which could be developed to make America more competitive in the future are in the programs in this field.

The bill is not on the President's list of possible vetoes. As the chairman has said, there is one area where the President does disagree. This has to do with the nuclear weapons testing moratorium. We hope in the meantime over the weekend, when our Secretary of Defense gets back, that we will be able to work out the differences that we have with the White House on this particular item.

By then maybe we can bring this bill in its complete form and send it on to the President. As we all know, there is only 1 bill of the required 13 that has gone to the President and has been signed. We hope this will be the second one, early next week.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition and yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, let me say that it is never fun to come to the floor and oppose my good friend, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], who is chairman of the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], acting chairman of the full committee, a man for whom I have a great deal of respect.

But on this occasion I do not have any other choice.

Mr. Speaker, I must inform my colleagues that the conference includes $517 million for the superconducting super collider. This is $34 million more than even the Department of Energy said that they needed to continue the project in the upcoming fiscal year.

But as you will recall, this body, on June 17 of this year, voted to terminate funding for the super collider by a vote of 232 to 181.

Mr. Speaker, the House-passed version of this bill contained only $34 million for shutdown costs of the SSC. The 232 Members of this body who voted as I voted might be surprised to learn that not one of the members of the conference committee voted with the House majority on the SSC vote, not one, my friends.

In other words, the House majority position was not defended at the conference committee. Needless to say, Members like myself, who spent countless hours trying to save the taxpayers $10 billion by terminating the super collider, do not find this operation very humorous.

Sadly, the people's will and the taxpayers' will—and I would observe that the taxpayers in this country are angry these days—was freely expressed in the earlier 232-to-181 vote in this body. And that view was totally ignored in this conference.

Mr. Speaker, the Members of this body should reject this conference committee report. We should demand that the taxpayers' position be represented and defended in the conference consistent with the position that this body took.

With regard to the merits: We thoroughly debated this issue earlier this year. Nothing of substance has changed. Absolutely nothing of substance has changed, except that the deficit is much larger.

For those who want to cut spending and reduce the deficit, I would say this is one of the big votes of the year. We are talking again about $10 billion. If we stand our ground and do not cave in to the other body and the President, we can save the taxpayers this year about $500 million, and as I have just said, $10 billion over 10 years. This is a lot of money and it is darn sure worth fighting over and it is worth fighting to defend the position of this body that was not represented in the conference.

Let us not forget that money spent on the super collider is money that will not be available for other very important practical and urgently needed research that is going unfunded.

Think about this. With $500 million a year, which we are talking about with the super collider, we could make available to all 50 States $10 million a year to fund scientific research at colleges and universities all over this country.

This kind of support for small science projects might lead to a cure for Alzheimer's disease or AIDS or cancer or heart disease. It may help us develop the technology necessary to compete in this global economy with new alternative energy sources and new alternative fuel vehicles.

The bottom line also is that when we have a $400 billion deficit, we cannot afford this kind of extravagant spending.

For those who say, well, how in the world can we say no to this project at a time when the economy is depressed and there are 6,000 jobs at stake, I concede that; but let us look at the other side of the picture. The other side is, what are these jobs costing us?

If you do just a little bit of math, you will see that even if you take $500 million divided by 6,000, you are talking about an annual cost per job of $80,000 per year.

This is a ridiculous jobs program if you are concerned about jobs in this country.

So my friends, I urge you to join me in rejecting this conference report. I intend to offer a motion to recommit with instructions to the conference that it stick to the position that this body so responsibly took earlier this year.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FROST].

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Energy and Water appropriations conference report.

I am particularly pleased that the conference report contains $517 million for the superconducting super collider. We have made significant progress in the last few months on the SSC—magnets have been successfully tested, support facilities have been completed, and excavation has begun. It is critical that we continue funding in order to maintain this progress and keep moving forward to the time when the SSC will be completed and operational. Terminating this important project now would have been a major mistake, and I am glad that the conferees agreed to fund it.

Let us be clear about what the SSC means for America. It is a symbol of our Nation's commitment to scientific leadership in this century and the next. It is an investment in the future, as it will enhance our Nation's competitiveness by yielding exciting discoveries and technological innovations. Finally, it will serve as a training ground for the next generation of scientists, engineers, and physicists, men and women who will lead the way in helping improve our quality of life through advances in science medicine. At a time when fiscal constraints require prudent spending decisions, this is precisely the type of investment that merits our support.

Chairman BEVILL and all the House conferees did an outstanding job, and they should be commended for their hard work in completing the conference and bringing this bill to the House floor. Chairman BEVILL has always displayed strong leadership in guiding the Energy and Water appropriations bill in the past, and this year is no different.

The SSC is no longer merely a dream, but is now in fact a concrete and steel reality. Buildings are going up, dirt is being moved, and developmental work is advancing at a steady clip. Let us continue the progress on this investment in America's future. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for this conference report.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE], the distinguished ranking Republican member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MCDADE. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Indiana, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in very strong support of this conference report which the conferees have labored long and hard to bring back to the House and the Senate so that it can be enacted into law.

I want to pay strong commendation to my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Alabama, for the manner in which he conducted the procedure on this bill. He has done a superb job, as has my dear friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS], the ranking Republican.

I want to say to my colleagues, by any test, whether you lay down the 602(b) allocation for domestic, this bill is within it. If you lay down the 602(b) for defense, this bill is within it, and if you lay down the other tests, that is to say the newest recommendations that came up from the President with respect to spending levels, this bill fits within that test. By any measure, Mr. Speaker, this bill deserves our strong support.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], who has been tireless on this project.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, for years the Supreme Court of the United States has been wrestling with the definition of obscene. They have not succeeded, but the conferees have. It is obscene that we are being asked today here in this Chamber to vote for funding $517 million, just one installation for the superconducting super collider.

Let me give you some reasons why we should not do it.

Reason No. 1. It is not a high-priority science project. It is a good project; cannot quarrel with that, but it is not a high priority science project.

Mr. Speaker, this is a time that demands that the Congress consider only priority projects.

Reason No. 2. This is taking away money from other very important science projects. We now have at the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation the highest percentage of unfunded worthy applications in a generation. Scientists across America who have a good idea and are coming to their Government for a modest grant to continue very important research, cancer research, AIDS research, a whole wide range of very important research activities, and the scientists with outstanding credentials are saying to our Government, "Give me $100,000 as a research stipend so that I can make some progress, and hopefully find a better, safer way for all Americans to live."

Reason No. 3. This Chamber by an overwhelming margin of 232 to 181 voted to terminate funding for the superconducting super collider.

Reason No. 4. This body by overwhelming previous votes has said the Federal taxpayers should not be expected to go one penny beyond $5 billion in the Federal contribution for this project.

Now, that is not small potatoes. We are not nickeling and diming it. We said $5 billion and no more. Well, it is well beyond that in terms of the Federal contribution.

As a matter of fact, this project started out with a projected cost of $4.4 billion. Do you know where we are now, Mr. Speaker? We are up to almost $12 billion. If you think we are going to get it for one penny less than $15 billion, I have got a bridge in Brooklyn that I will offer to sell to you.

The next reason. We have been told not to worry. The American taxpayers are not going to foot the whole bill. This is an international project.

Mr. Speaker, we are told that people come from all around the world to get a piece of the action. They are all excited about this. Guess what, my colleagues? We do not have the first dime yet from any nation around the world.

Oh, I have been told, "Wait until the Japanese cough up their contribution." Well, that was a very appealing argument.

So, I went to Japan, and I met with the leadership of the Government, including the president of Japan's science council, including members of the Diet, including key people in the Ministry of Science, Culture, and Education. They are not interested in participating. They are having a study group take a look at it.

Mr. Speaker, there no compelling reasons for proceeding at this juncture with this project at this cost to the American taxpayer. But there are good and sufficient reasons to say no here and now. We simply cannot afford to continue the way we are. We have a $4 trillion national debt. We are spending every single day $866 million just in interest on that debt.

My colleagues, now is the time to stop. Here and now.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] for yielding this time to me, and I congratulate him and my friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MEYERS], on the excellent work they have done on the bill.

I will talk about two or three matters which are included in the bill, but I think very important to note is that by whatever calculation one applies to this bill, it does fall within the approved guideline. The 602(b) allocation for domestic or for defense; the bill fits within that. It also fits the President's expressed mandate or expressed wish of what our appropriations bill should look like. Now whether the President should be permitted that leeway can be argued, but the bill fits within his figure.

There are four programs involving our community in Louisville in Jefferson County, KY, which are included in this bill, and I thank the chairman for finding room for them.

There is $1.9 million for preconstruction and engineering for the eventual construction of a 1,200-foot lock at the McAlpine Dam where currently an outmoded, archaic 600-foot lock exists. And, eventually, in 1995, we will have twin 1200-foot locks at the McAlpine Dam in Louisville.

In this bill also is $534,000 for a reconnaissance study for the Bear Grass Creek flood control project, as well as $364,000 for completion of the engineering and the economic study for the Pond Creek flood control project. Both Pond Creek and Bear Grass Creek are very important projects for the protecting of homes and businesses in Louisville.

And last, but not least, Mr. Speaker, there is a half million dollars, $500,000, for a study of the Ohio River Greenway, which is to improve access to the Ohio River attractions, which would include the McAlpine Dam, which would include the Falls of Ohio, that great rock formation, the Devonian rock formation which is becoming such a tourist attraction. It would also include access to the skyline of Louisville, and also our several bridges.

So, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] for their excellent work. I rise in very strong support of this conference report.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE], a distinguished member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the fiscal year 1993 energy and water appropriations bill. Facing severe budget constraints, the subcommittee has produced a fair and responsible bill.

The bill is $414 million below the President's request, and falls within the subcommittee's 602(b) allocation. To get to this point, the subcommittee had to make some painful decisions.

Many important projects were not funded in the bill, including a number in my home State and district. The bill, however, does include funding for the Central Arizona project and needed safety of dams work, as well as other important water resource and energy projects in Arizona and the country.

The conferees hammered out a tough compromise on nuclear weapons testing. I urge my colleagues to support the conference report and to defeat any attempt to adopt the more restrictive Senate version. The need for nuclear weapons is—thank God—less today than any time since the invention of this horrifying weapon. But we still have nuclear weapons, and as long as we do, we must test them for their safety. The Senate version is too restrictive and was rightfully discarded by the conferees. I urge my colleagues to do the same.

This has been a difficult process for the subcommittee members.

What has emerged from that process is a bill that is fiscally responsible and fair. At a time when the country is calling out for leadership, this subcommittee has shown it. I commend the chairman, Mr. BEVILL, and the ranking member, JOHN MYERS, for their leadership and the entire subcommittee for their work. This is only the second fiscal year 1993 appropriations conference report to be considered by this body, and I am hopeful that it will serve as a model for how to make the tough, fiscally responsible, and fair decisions dictated by our severe budget constraints. I urge my colleague to support it.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. SANDERS].

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose the conference report on the energy and water appropriations bill. I am pleased that the conference report includes a moratorium on nuclear weapons testing, and I will support the motion to accept the stronger moratorium language which was passed by the Senate. But in other respects, this report falls far short of the change in priorities which we should be making, now that the cold war is over.

The Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact, our enemies for almost half a century, have disintegrated. Russia is now asking for foreign aid. And yet over half the money in this bill—$12 billion out of $21 billion—still goes for nuclear weapons activity. Some of this money is to clean up the dangerous mess at our nuclear weapons plants, but almost $5 billion is to develop and produce new nuclear weapons, even though we no longer have an enemy to fire them at.

The bill also spends over half a billion dollars on that enormous boondoggle, the superconducting super collider. Just a few months ago, when we voted to cut out the money for the SSC, it was hailed as a sign that Congress had finally decided to stand up against pork-barrel spending and set some real priorities. But now, that victory has silently evaporated.

Mr. Speaker, this bill represents a budget for the cold war, not for the economic crisis of the 1990's. I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on it.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. PURSELL], a member of the subcommittee who will not be returning next year.

Mr. PURSELL. Mr. Speaker, I do not know if the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] was saying that with appreciation or sincerity, but I say to him, "Thank you, JOHN."

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] has been my leader on this committee for so many years, and I have appreciated his personal leadership and his personal friendship, and I wish him and his wife the best of health and know what he has gone through the last couple years.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] and the staff of the committee for their great leadership. I think it is one of the most respected staff groups that I have ever had the opportunity to work with.

My first love is with my great chairman, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] who is my ranking on Labor-HEW, and, as the ranking Republican on that committee, Mr. Speaker, I have had the honor to serve there. I say to the gentleman from Kentucky, "My heart is in your committee, BILL."

But I have also enjoyed the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

This bill is only 1 percent over last year. It is practically at a freeze level. So I think, regardless of which side my colleagues are on in terms of the super collider, I happen to support it. I supported it for Michigan, and I am not going to flip-flop because it is going to Texas.

But I think, in all due respects to my colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], if it was good enough for the international community, whether or not they finance it or not, and they anticipate that we will take the leadership, I am glad that the Nation is taking the national world leadership in high energy physics. It is not a military project. It is not for defense. It is for the best in terms of collegiate, and university and academic research that will bring about new science research in the civilian application process which we desperately need throughout the world.

I want to thank the committee personally. It has been an enjoyable committee to serve on over the years. I wish them the best. I think one of the great future problems of this committee is going to be how do we maintain our water civil engineering projects. We have some new projects in this bill, not very much, but I think the long-range problem of maintaining our infrastructure is going to be a severe, serious problem in financing, and maybe our committee should hold some hearings on that next year to look at the opportunity to be able to maintain our great bridges and harbors and infrastructure that is desperately needed.

So again, thank you. It has been a pleasure serving on this committee, and I wish the best to all of you. Thank you very much.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE].

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I have enormous respect for the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], and his ranking member, the member from Indiana [Mr. MYERS], and for the conferees that were involved in this particular discussion. But I must say there is absolutely no way that the outcome of this conference can be justified before the House.

We had a very full and thorough debate about the merits of the super collider project, and the consequence of that debate before this House was an overwhelming rejection of the super collider by a vote of 232 to 181.

The product that has come back before us does not sustain the House position. But even more remarkably, not only did the House conferees fail to represent the House position, which was one of opposition to the SSC, but they agreed to even more SSC funding than they had originally proposed before the House voted to cut the program. There is simply no way that that can be justified as a rational or fair outcome of this conference agreement.

In the course of that debate a number of points were made about the super collider: It has been a terribly managed project; it is over cost; all of the promises that have been made about foreign contributions have remained unfulfilled.

But I must tell you as chairman of the Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight that undertook some very sensitive hearings, the most disturbing element of this entire project from my vantage point was the pattern of deceit and deception in which the Department of Energy engaged in order to block our efforts at finding out the truth of the mismanagement that had occurred.

There was constantly an enormous gap between what we were told in public session, on the one hand, and what was reveled in the documentary material that our committee eventually received, on the other. And there was absolutely no way that the claims of the Department of Energy that this was a project that was meritorious could be sustained by that documentary material.

This is really a moment of truth for this House. Either we are serious about fighting wasteful spending, or we are going to first vote to cut a project, and then very quietly vote to put the money back in so we can all go back home and say, "See, we opposed it at least once."

I ask my colleagues in this instance to reject this conference report so that we may really affirm the determination of this House to make the kind of tough choices that need to be made this year, to eliminate a project that is one of the least meritorious of the Department of Energy's initiatives—a conclusion reached by the Department's own Office on Policy.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GALLO], a hard-working member of the subcommittee.

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, I thank my ranking member for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report on Energy and Water Development appropriations for fiscal year 1993. As a member of this subcommittee, I would like to thank Chairman TOM BEVILL and ranking member JOHN MYERS for their leadership and direction. I would also like to express my appreciation to the subcommittee staff, Hunter Spillan, Bob Schmidt, Aaron Edmondson, Jeanne Wilson, and Lori Whipp for all their hard work.

Unfortunately, this year the subcommittee will lose three of its valued and dedicated members to retirement. CARL PURSELL, BARNEY DWYER, and LINDSAY THOMAS will be greatly missed for their expertise and insight on this subcommittee. I wish all of them well.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud of the fact that we have crafted a bill that will continue to move this country closer to a comprehensive energy policy. In spite of a tight fiscal budget, I believe that with this bill we have made a significant long-term commitment to the development of new energy sources for our Nation's future energy needs.

The immediate goal of an energy policy must be a balanced approach that deals with conservation and alternative fuels as well as conventional sources of energy. We must not shortchange our research and development programs and I believe this bill provides adequate funding to keep new and proven technologies on the right course.

The bill also provides funding for a number of critical flood control projects throughout the United States. These important projects will help to prevent property damage in areas with recognized flooding problems and even more importantly help save countless lives.

In my State of New Jersey, the conferees agreed to accept the funding levels for two New Jersey flood control projects that will allow the projects to remain on track.

These critical flood control projects must move forward in order to protect the public safety in the Passaic and Raritan River basins. With the additional funds for the Passaic flood tunnel, engineering and design of the entire project, including the Newark bank restoration portion has taken a closer step toward completion.

I will never forget the fear and apprehension expressed by the people in the Passaic River basin after April flooding in 1984 took three lives and caused $355 million in damage. Eight years have passed since that event and thankfully we have not been hit with a devastating flood to this point. While no one can accurately predict what the future will bring, we can be sure that time is not on our side, based on past experience.

Unfortunately, as memories of the 1984 flood continue to fade, they are being replaced with pie-in-the-sky proposals for inadequate flood control measures based on inaccurate information.

This bill also contains funding for several energy development projects that benefit New Jersey. I was happy that we, as conferees agreed to fund fusion research at $339.7 million. Fusion research is one of the programs that will move this country toward energy independence. Fusion energy is good science and I am happy to support the program.

In addition, the bill includes funding for solar and other renewable energy research. I have always been an active supporter for increased funding in renewable sources and was pleased that the subcommittee provided this critical funding.

It was a long and thorough process and I am happy to rise in support of this conference report.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, 3 months ago today I spoke to the House of Representatives from this same spot and asked that we kill, bury, do away with, and forget forever the super collider, and apparently most of us felt the same way as I did, because we decided by a vote of 232 to 181 to delete all funding for the SSC.

That outcome pleased me. But somehow I felt that like the phoenix, this thing would rise again. And sure enough, it has. And it would be seeking more and more money. And, friends, that day has come.

Now, many people have stood up here and congratulated the conference committee. Congratulate them? Heck. They did not express the will of the House. They caved in. They did not come back to us with a compromise. They came back to us with more money than went out of here in the consideration of this.

Despite the fact that we have twice voted to kill this project, here it is again to the tune of $517 million. How many times do we have to say no before this boondoggle goes away?

I should also point out that the conferees deleted a successful amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] that the President certifies foreign contributions to this project before the future funding was released. They must have felt that the foreign contributions were not going to come in, and indeed, they were not going to come in, so they just did away with that.

Now we have an all-American project that we can completely fund with billions of taxpayer dollars for an uncertain goal.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know how the rest of the Members feel about this provision, but I believe this particular section is a slap in the face to every Member of the House.

Join with me in rejecting this conference report. Let us send a message to the conference committee that when they go out of here to do conferences, we expect for them to fight for the will of the House and at least come back with a compromise.

□ 1850

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN].

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, it pains me to do this because the gentleman from Alabama is such a wonderful gentleman and I do not say this in a patronizing way; it is in a very true way.

The fact that the superconducting super collider is still in this bill, over $500 million, at a time when this country is bleeding to death with high deficits, just means, in my judgment, that I have to vote against this bill. And there are many good things in it, but this country has to make choices.

One of these days we are going to have to decide, are we going to fund this or are we going to fund health care. Are we going to fund this or are we going to fund Social Security.

I mean, it is as simple as that. The choices are going to have to be made. This is a pretty easy choice in my judgment to say no to. It is a choice for scientific reasons and for a whole sort of budget reasons that we can find other alternatives. So while it pains me to disagree with the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, I think for fiscal sanity, we must say no to the superconducting super collider.

I urge a no vote on the bill.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. JOHNSON].

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Energy and Water appropriations conference report and to specifically commend my colleagues for crafting a bill that is not only below the budget caps set in the 1990 agreement but also—and more importantly—is only 0.75 percent greater than last year's bill.

This is particularly important to my constituents, Mr. Speaker, because many of them are out of work and cannot afford to send additional tax dollars to Washington. Those who are working are not enjoying raises or bonuses, so I am especially pleased that the spending levels in this conference report are well below inflation.

The people of this country deserve our best efforts to rein in government spending: in so-called discretionary accounts as well as in the sacred cows of entitlements. Everyone—except those on the lowest rungs of the economic ladder—has to share the pain of these hard economic times.

Let me also commend the President for his leadership and firm hand, in working with the Congress to focus on holding these spending bills down. Unless the Congress—which controls all Federal spending—can develop consistent disciplined spending practices, we will never see the end of $300 billion deficits nor pass on to our children a vital America.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON].

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON].

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, my good friend just said that this is a process of consensus building. We are always building consensus around here, and we keep getting deeper and deeper and deeper and deeper in debt. The projected deficit in the next 7½ years is going to be $13.5 trillion. We are already at $4 trillion. Ten years ago we were at $1 trillion. And spending is totally out of control.

We will not even be able to pay the interest on the debt in 7½ more years, and that means this whole economy is going to come unraveled.

We have to make hard choices, and we have to do it now. This conference committee report is $682 million above that which left the House.

We tried to kill the super collider, which I supported in the past. And we tried to kill it. I voted against it this time because we simply did not have the money.

We have to prioritize, and here it comes back again, $483 million more than that which left the House.

If we did not even include that, we have an almost $200 million in additional spending, not including the super collider.

Let me just say that this is also $166.143 million above fiscal year 1992. This is only the second appropriations bill that is going to pass both Houses in the conference committees. The first one was $8 billion over fiscal year 1992 and $1.64 billion above the House-passed bill. And this is $680-some million above the House-passed bill.

When are we going to start making the hard choices?

The problem is, we can pay now or we can pay later. We either control spending now and pinch a few toes or in 7½ years we are going to see people on fixed incomes, Social Security, welfare, food stamps, pay $40 to $50 for a quart of milk or a loaf of bread because of hyperinflation, when the Federal Reserve Board has to monetize the debt.

We have to come to grips with this. The time is now. I hope we will defeat this conference committee report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COX of Illinois). The Chair will advise the Members that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] has 9 minutes remaining, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY] has 3 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS].

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report.

The SSC, the superconducting super collider, is a colossal waste of money. It is a giant public works project we do not need and cannot afford.

America is a science-creating machine without parallel. The Japanese and the Asian nations are science-consuming machines without parallel. They are going to take what we learned and use their money to put it to practical use.

We have a budget crisis. A few months ago this Congress voted overwhelmingly for a balanced budget amendment, but we are not willing to take practical steps to balance the budget. If we are not willing to cut defense, eliminate the Space Station, the SSC and other expensive projects, if we are not willing to cut the budget in other areas and we are not willing to raise taxes, how in the world are we going to balance our budgets?

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to our colleague and friend, the chairman of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I rise in support of the conference report. I want to explain why I think that this is a good conference report, although I am not in complete agreement with every aspect of it.

I have worked closely with the distinguished chairman for many months in this particular cycle to provide input to this bill, and basically I think it meets the needs of the country. It has some controversial things in it.

The one that is being discussed here, the superconducting super collider, has vexed me as it has many others over the years.

I came to the conclusion that it was in the best interest of the country for us to proceed with the funding of this massive, large science project. And I did it for many reasons.

I participated from the beginning in discussions of this in our Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. There is no question of its scientific validity. The main questions having to do with it are whether or not at this time of budget crisis we ought to continue. I weighed that argument very, very carefully. I felt that the House was wrong when they acted on this bill, when it first came before us in June, to strike out the superconducting super collider. I recognized that in the heat of the emotions at that particular time that it was the popular thing to do, but I think that the conference committee has acted properly in restoring some of that funding.

I want to compliment the chairman for his willingness to do that, recognizing that it would be controversial.

I want to say also just a word about a problem which I have discussed with the chairman many times, and that is to accept, as an amendment in disagreement, certain additions which the Senate places on this bill. I made a point that this is not good public policy for a number of years. I have spoken to the distinguished gentleman on the other side, the chairman of their appropriations subcommittee, and I have found no response to their tendency to do this.

□ 1900

I think it is contrary to the best interests of science and to the public to continue doing this, and I do not think that the House should yield. I suspect in the desire to move this bill along promptly that the House may approve of that this year, but I am going to have to oppose that, and I expect to lose, I might say, because the projects, a mere $100 million, more or less, are all meritorious in themselves. They just have not been included in either bill in the House or Senate until it got to conference, and then they were earmarked for specific projects.

I oppose this in principle. I oppose it so much that I am making a serious effort to amend the rules of the House to prevent this from happening. I want to bring this to the attention of the membership. However, in spite of all these possible difficulties with the bill, on balance I think that we should proceed with it. I think we should approve it, the conference report, move it up to the President in order that we may continue with the very valuable programs that are contained in there.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted the House to understand the difficult predicament that some aspects of this bill place me in. I thank the chairman for yielding me this time.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART].

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, in college, George Orwell in "1984" must have had this conference committee in mind in his book when he told us all that "war is peace, hate is love, up is down," because the fact of the matter is that we are told that this conference report represents a compromise, a consensus.

There indeed is a consensus around this place, and that is to keep spending money we do not have on projects we do not need. I admire the resiliency of this conference committee. Why, just a few months ago they told us that we could not spend more than $483 million on the super collider. The House in its wisdom cut that to $35 million, and then they stood strong for the House position and agreed to spend $35 million more in this conference report than just 3 months ago they said this project could sustain. My God, how is that for standing up for the House position?

We have test ban treaty limits in here, and $34 million on top of the test ban treaty goes to a new program aimed at developing new facilities for the production of nuclear weapons. We are going to spend money on weapons systems that we are not going to test, the same way we are going to spend money on a super collider that we do not need. George Orwell was right.

Let us be honest about it. The fix is in. When the conferees were appointed, not a single conferee on behalf of the leadership stood for the position of this House. The rules of this House require that the conferees reflect the position taken by the Committee of the Whole, but that was not going to happen, the same way it did not happen when the Committee on Rules constructed a rule that did not allow those who had objections to raise those objections.

Nothing new has happened, no foreign dollars, no foreign contractors, no foreign participation. One thing has happened in those 4 months, they have poured more concrete. That is what we are going to do if we do not at least cast a vote of protest and tell the folks that business as usual just will not work any more. Resist this. Defeat the conference report.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, we are getting pretty close to the end of the session. I think fewer than 9 legislative days is the plan. We have still 12 out of 13 appropriation bills to pass and send to the President, to find out if he is going to sign them, and if he is not going to sign them, then to consider overrides. That does not even consider all of the other bills that might find their way to this floor.

Mr. Speaker, we have a perfectly good conference report right here. We have delegated our representatives on the conference to meet with the other body's representatives on the conference to pound out an agreement that was within the budget limitations. They have done so. They have weighed the priorities. They have come back and they have given us a plan to live within those budget requirements and send it on to the President so we can address the problems of this country.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that we are going to not only waste a great deal of time, but in the long run, do ourselves a great disservice if we reject this conference report. I would urge that it be adopted.

Mr. Speaker, there are flood control measures, wetlands conservation, navigation aids, port maintenance funds, funds for the Department of Energy, research, cleanup, and environmental cleanup; all of this within our budget limitations.

The Members can argue the merits or the demerits of the super collider. I happen to think it is a great project, and that the benefits of that project will redound to future generations for many, many years to come. The point is, our conference committee has done their job. Now let us adopt the conference report. Let us move on to other matters. Vote "aye."

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COX of Illinois). The time of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY] has expired.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to our friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON].

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes in this body we have to agree to disagree agreeably, and with all sincerity I wish to say that I am going to miss the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE] next year when they are not here to attack the super collider as we come for our annual battle.

I am not so sure the citizens of Ohio will miss the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ECKART] quite as much, since there is $107 million in this bill for Corps of Engineers projects in Ohio, including $6 million in his city of Cleveland, which I am sure they do support.

What the debate on the super collider is, is the modern-day equivalent of turning swords into plowshares. We are turning missiles into magnets. It is about science supremacy in the world in the 21st century. It is a good project. I commend the conference committee for meeting the Senate conference committee partway in funding the project.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I urge everyone to vote for this conference report. This conference report represents many, many months, many weeks, many days and hours of work and negotiations. There are over 800 projects and programs in this bill, or affected by this bill.

We realize that in this are one, two, or three with which you may disagree. Frankly, I could find more than one, two, or three that I do not like in the bill, but this represents agreements worked out after many, many hours of negotiations with the other body. I urge the Members to accept this conference report and vote for it.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on the energy and water development appropriations for fiscal year 1993. This is a good and balanced bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, this was, beyond any doubt, the toughest bill that I have been involved in my 12 years on the committee.

Nonetheless, we have managed to continue funding, at reasonable rates, our on-going priorities for the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Department of Energy, and the other independent agencies within our jurisdiction.

And we have maintained these on-going programs in a manner that is not only within the 602(b) allocations but over $400 million under the President's budget request.

It is true that no one is completely happy with our product here, but again, it is a fair, balanced, and responsible bill.

One of the priorities that we have been able to maintain and strengthen is our commitment to solar and renewable energy programs.

While I certainly was among those who advocated a higher funding level, these programs were funded at above the President's budget request.

I would also like to point out that the conference report as it comes before the House contains significant investments in much-needed flood control and water supply projects which are critical to communities throughout our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to take this opportunity to commend the good work of the chairman of the Energy and Water Subcommittee, Mr. BEVILL; Mr. MYERS, the ranking minority member; and the subcommittee's dedicated staff. They have done an outstanding job over the years in defending the interests of the House, and this year is no different.

Mr. Speaker, I would especially like to thank Mr. BEVILL and Mr. MYERS for their assistance in defending the many varied needs of California. As in the past, the other body removed many of the projects of critical need to my State. But with the help and leadership of the chairman and Mr. MYERS, nearly all of our projects were restored.

For example, the conference report continues to support the efforts of the Corps of Engineers to address the flood threat to Sacramento and parts of Yolo County. The conference report contains funds that will help us improve the operation of the massive Central Valley project in California, making the project more protective of the environment and thereby helping to ensure that the CVP can continue to meet its critical flood control and water supply purposes.

And the bill continues to support a strong role for the Corps of Engineers in wetlands restoration, particularly in the Central Valley of California, where we have seen 98 percent of the historical wetlands destroyed over the years.

The bill—through its support for the SSC, general science, and other nuclear and high energy physics research—will also help maintain our Nation's position as a world leader in science and technology.

And we have made every effort to ensure that adequate funds are available to continue the cleanup of toxic and hazardous materials from our DOE facilities across the country.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I thank Mr. BEVILL and Mr. MYERS for their cooperation and support, and their sensitivity to the many water development and energy-related problems facing the Nation. I urge my colleagues to support the conference report.

Mr. GRADISON. Mr. Speaker, as Congress rushes to complete legislation prior to adjournment in a few weeks, fast-moving bills and conference agreements may have budget enforcement implications that Members should note. I have pointed out several of these instances already in statements in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, most recently on September 15 at page E2628. Taken separately, these infractions may seem small. Added together, it is possible that they could have substantive enforcement consequences.

The bill I wish to discuss today is H.R. 5373, the energy and water development appropriations bill for fiscal year 1993. This bill appears to breach the firewall between defense and domestic spending.

It shifts $64.5 million for research in particle physics from the Department of Energy's general science account to the Defense budget. The money in question would go to the Los Alamos Meson Research Facility, which the Department of Energy plans to close. This research has no military application. Funding the site through Defense accounts makes way for spending on domestic programs. I can see no reason for this transfer other than to avoid making hard choices on domestic discretionary spending.

The firewall between defense and domestic spending was established only 2 years ago and was resoundingly reaffirmed by the House in March. Breaching the firewall has a price. The funding contained in this conference agreement is below the President's request on both the domestic and defense sides, even with this breach. But the Office of Management and Budget indicates that it will continue to score the Los Alamos facility as domestic spending. Most of the domestic appropriations bills are still awaiting final action. Unless these remaining bills recognize that the $64.5 million will be scored by OMB as domestic discretionary spending, an end-of-session sequester could be triggered in early November.

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the energy and water appropriations bill for two simple reasons. First, the spending levels in this measure are $700 million higher than the amount approved by the House of Representatives just a few months ago. Second, this measure restores funding, almost $600 million, for the superconducting super collider, a project which the House had voted to cancel.

We need to reduce the deficit and make tough choices. This bill moves us in the wrong direction. I urge a "no" vote.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5373, the fiscal year 1993 energy and water appropriations conference report.

While I may not be perfectly happy with the spending level finally agreed to in conference, I do understand the constraints under which our able chairman, and my esteemed friend Mr. BEVILL, and his colleagues were working during final deliberation on the conference agreement.

To be specific, when this bill left the House, it called for $22 billion in spending, but it was $700 million short when it came back to us from conference with the other body. Nevertheless, I understand also the spirit of comity and compromise that go into reaching agreements on appropriations bills, especially when we have so little, it seems, to spend against such enormous need. Again, let me state my gratitude for the yoeman's work that went into the agreement, and let me say that I am grateful for what it will be able to do for West Virginia and the Nation as a whole.

I shall begin my brief overview of the conference agreement by expressing my deep appreciation for the level funding for the Appalachian Regional Commission [ARC], which gained $5 million between leaving the House and getting through conference. ARC will be funded at $190 million under this bill, the same as last year, and will go far toward helping the Nation's poverty pocket, known as Appalachia, come into the mainstream of America—both through economic development and through a highway system intended to provide access and linkages with the U.S. Interstate System as well as other primary arteries within the 13 Appalachian States. The $190 million, while it freezes ARC at the fiscal year 1992 appropriation level, is still a far cry from a massive cut of $100 million for ARC, as recommended by the President.

I was privileged, Mr. Speaker, to testify before the Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development this year, on behalf of projects in my district in West Virginia.

I testified on a number of projects managed by the Corps of Engineers which are of vital importance to my district, projects which span the range of the construction process from authorized studies to operations and maintenance.

The first project, the Kanawha River Basin comprehensive study, and the second, the West Virginia comprehensive study are of prime importance, and I deeply appreciate their inclusion in this bill.

The Kanawha River Basin comprehensive study affects the Kanawha River Basin in West Virginia, Virginia, and North Carolina. The project needed $700,000 in order to bring about early completion of the project and, since this is an ongoing project, I deeply appreciate the approval of a $500,000 allowance under this bill for its continuation at a time when resources are so scarce.

As a result of public hearings held by the Corps of Engineers, two additional areas of interest evolved, expanding the original scope of the study to determine the feasibility of creating a series of intermodal ports and industrial parks.

I am pleased also to note that an additional $500,000 is provided for the West Virginia port development comprehensive study along the West Virginia side of the Ohio River, focusing on the counties of Cabell, Wayne, Wood, and Ohio, and the West Virginia side of the Big Sandy River.

The second part of the expanded study, which would be covered by the increased funding for the West Virginia comprehensive study, involves examining the feasibility of developing the Virginia Point Recreation Area located in Kenova, WV, in Wayne County, the result of corps' hearings and workshops which led to local sponsors giving their commitment to share in the costs of the study. The corps reestimated that with $500,000 they would be able to accommodate the enlarged study scope to include a reconnaissance riverport development study of the West Virginia side of the Ohio River, focusing on the riverfronts of the cities of Parkersburg, Point Pleasant, Virginia Point, and Wheeling, WV.

Mr. Speaker, riverfront development is one of the keys to unlocking the economic development potential that exists along the Big Sandy and the Ohio Rivers, and this additional $1 million total funding will permit us to move forward into the next critical phase of the process.

H.R. 5373 has provided well for my State and district with respect to expanded studies described above, and will go far toward developing this historic and natural area for potential recreational as well as commercial use.

Aside from the expanded studies recommended by the corps, there is one other project in its construction phase, and it is of particular importance to my district—the Tug Fork project. H.R. 5373 has proposed to spend $67,450,000 for the Levisa and Tug Forks and Upper Cumberland River construction projects in West Virginia, Kentucky, and Virginia.

H.R. 5373 also allows $25 million for the Gallipolis Locks and Dams for West Virginia and Ohio, and $38.5 million for the Winfield Lock and Dam in West Virginia, which is sorely needed.

Further, I am pleased to note that the following Corps of Engineers general investigations and planning projects have been funded in my district and State, in addition to those outlined above:

Island Creek at Logan, WV (planning)	$304,000
Kanawha River Navigation, WV (investment)	1,050,000
Moorefield, WV (planning)	585,000

Mr. Speaker the $304,000 for the island Creek PED at Logan, WV, can be used to complete the project there, and is of utmost importance to that area which is located in my district.

It pleases me also to note that Corps of Engineers' operations and maintenance projects for the coming fiscal year include:

Beech Fork Lake, WV	$679,000
Bluestone Lake, WV	1,278,000
Burnsville Lake, WV	1,241,000
East Lynn Lake, WV	1,052,000
Elk River Harbor, WV	314,000
Elkins, WV	6,000
Kanawha River Locks and Dams, WV	8,829,000
Ohio River Locks and Dams, Huntington, WV	14,196,000
Ohio River Open Channel Work, Huntington, WV	1,833,000
R.D. Bailey Lake, WV	1,322,000
Stonwall Jackson Lake, WV	892,000
Summersville Lake, WV	1,476,000
Sutton Lake, WV	1,750,000
Tygart Lake, WV	1,078,000

Mr. Speaker, the funding for Beech Fork Lake in West Virginia and for East Lynn, R.D. Bailey, and Bluestone Lakes, will serve the needs of several flood control projects. The significant funding levels for the Ohio River Locks and Dams and for open channel work in Huntington, WV, are critically needed and I deeply appreciate their inclusion in H.R. 5373.

Again, let me express my strong support for H.R. 5373 and to congratulate my esteemed friend and colleague, TOM BEVILL, the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Water Appropriations Committee, and his able colleagues, for bringing back to us this conference agreement, containing vital continuation funding for critically needed flood control, navigation, operations and maintenance of water resources development projects throughout the United States.

I urge my colleagues to join with me in strong support of the conference agreement on H.R. 5373, and hope that the bill do pass.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference report to the energy and water development appropriations for fiscal year 1993, and I applaud the commendable job done by the Subcommittee on Water Development.

This bill provides crucial funding for the Department of Energy and the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Reclamation, as well as for the Corps of Engineers, in keeping our rivers, harbors, lakes, and coastlines safe and operational.

Moreover, this piece of legislation addresses an issue that remains of utmost importance to me and my constituents in the Eighth District of Missouri—this being flood control. Throughout my district, problems with flood control continue to hamper agricultural production and stifle economic development. However, no part of this country is invulnerable to the problem associated with water—whether it be too much or too little. This bill provides the needed funding for a number of critical flood control projects throughout the United States, as well as for rescue work, repair, and restoration to areas threatened or destroyed by floods.

I am pleased to see that this bill recognizes the many diverse needs relating to flood control and navigation, while acknowledging the fiscal restraints in which we find ourselves. I believe this bill is a further investment in improving our infrastructure, and I urge its passage.

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I voted against the conference report on Energy and Water because the conference added $483 million in spending for the super collider.

We voted earlier in the House to kill the spending for the super collider. But the conference has caved in to the Senate and allowed $483 million of additional spending for a project of questionable value.

Our country is $4 trillion in debt with a deficit this year of over $400 billion. We simply can't continue this kind of spending if we are going to make any progress to control these deficits.

I regret I cannot vote for this bill because there are some important projects in it including funding for the Garrison diversion project in North Dakota and many other useful and important projects. But my support for those parts of the bill is not justification for voting for $483 million more of spending for something that our country doesn't need.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member regretfully opposes the energy and water appropriations conference report for H.R. 5373 for fiscal year 1993. Although this conference report contains funding for many important projects—including projects that I have strongly supported, this Member cannot vote for its passage.

By including $517 million in funding for the superconducting super collider, conferees have totally ignored the mandate of the House to eliminate funding for this overbudget project which consumes far more than its fair share of precious science funds. In fact the amount of the appropriations exceeds the amount for the SSC in the bill originally brought to the House floor. It came to the House at a level of $484 million. The House rejected it by recorded vote but it came back to us at $517 million; that is outrageous. Therefore, this Member cannot support the energy and water appropriations conference report for fiscal year 1993, and I would refer back to my statements in opposition to the superconducting super collider as printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on June 17, 1992, at page 15171.)

SPEECH OF

HON. NORMAN Y. MINETA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 1992

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the fiscal year 1993 Energy and Water Appropriations Conference Report. This conference report contains funding for some of northern California's most important flood control projects: the Gaudalupe River Project, the Coyote and Berryessa Creek projects, and the upper Guadalupe River plan.

For 50 years, Santa Clara Valley has tried to control the flooding of homes and businesses when the Gaudalupe River spilled over its banks. And for 50 years, the citizens of the valley have asked Congress for assistance to help control the river.

I've been working on this project for 25 years from the time I served on the San Jose City Council, through my 4 years as mayor, and today as a Representative in Congress. Had it not been for consistent support and help of our colleague, Mr. EDWARDS, throughout this time, the valley might be faced with another 50 years of flooding. But with the passage of this appropriations legislation, flood control is assured.

Part of the vision of flood control in the valley is beautiful parkland, a greenbelt for downtown San Jose. If Washington beancounters had had their way, San Jose would have been forced to build slabs of grey concrete where green grass and a public park will be. But this legislation will provide San Jose with the flood control its needs, and in a way that will enhance our public space.

Congress can take great pride in this victory. This conference report will help build the America we need for the 21st century. I urge the support of our colleagues for this legislation.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MRS. VUCANOVICH

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentlewoman opposed to the conference report?

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. In its present form, I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mrs. VUCANOVICH moves to recommit the conference report on the bill, H.R. 5373, to the committee of conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The motion to recommit was rejected.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 245, nays 143, not voting 44, as follows:

Senate amendment No. 19: Page 18, after line 14, insert:

None of the funds in this Act shall be used to identify or delineate any land as a "water of the United States" under the Federal Manual for Identifying and Delineating Jurisdictional Wetlands that was adopted in January 1989 (1989 Manual) or any subsequent manual not adopted in accordance with the requirements for notice and public comment of the rule-making process of the Administrative Procedure Act.

In addition, regarding Corps of Engineers ongoing enforcement actions and permit application involving lands which the Corps or EPA has delineated as waters of the United States under the 1989 Manual, and which have not yet been completed on the date of enactment of this Act, the landowner or permit applicant shall have the option to elect a new delineation under the Corps of 1987 Wetland Delineation Manual, or completion of the permit process or enforcement action based on the 1989 Manual delineation, unless the Corps of Engineers determines, after investigation and consultation with other appropriate parties, including the landowner or permit applicant, that the delineation would be substantially the same under either the 1987 or the 1989 Manual.

None of the funds in this Act shall be used to finalize or implement the proposed regulations to amend the fee structure for the Corps of Engineers regulatory program which were published in Federal Register, Vol. 55, No. 197, Thursday, October 11, 1990.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

None of the funds in this Act shall be used to identify or delineate any land as a "water of the United States" under the Federal Manual for Identifying and Delineating Jurisdiction Wetlands that was adopted in January 1989 or any subsequent manual adopted without notice and public comment.

Furthermore, the Corps of Engineers will continue to use the Corps of Engineers 1987 Manual, as it has since August 17, 1991, until a final wetlands delineation manual is adopted.

None of the funds in this Act shall be used to finalize or implement the proposed regulations to amend the fee structure for the Corps of Engineers regulatory program which were published in Federal Register, Vol. 55, No. 197, Thursday, October 11, 1990.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

Senate amendment No. 21: Page 19, after line 4, insert:

"Funds are provided for the management and direction of the United States Army Corps of Engineers Civil Works Program, except that such funds shall not be used to close any district office of the Corps of Engineers. To futher a more efficient headquarters and division office structure, the Secretary may transfer not to exceed $7,000,000 from other appropriations under this title to be merged with, and remain available for the same time period as, this appropriation: Provided, That this appropriation shall not be increased by more than 5 per centum by any such transfers, and the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate shall be promptly advised of such proposed transfers.".

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

The text of the motion is as follows:

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and concur therein.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

Amendment No. 22: Page 19, after line 22, insert:

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. Public Law 101-302 (104 Stat. 213) is amended by striking the words "to meet the present emergency needs" under the General Expenses appropriation title of Corps of Engineers—Civil.

SEC. 102. Any funds heretofore appropriated and made available in Public Law 99-88 for construction of facilities at the Mill Creek recreation area of the Tioga-Hammond Lakes, Pennsylvania, project; in Public Law 100-71 for initiation of land acquisition activities as described in section 1114 of Public Law 99-662; and in Public Law 101-101 for construction of the Satilla River Basin, Georgia, project, and for acquisition of an icebreaking boat and equipment for the Kankakee River, Illinois, project, may be utilized by the Secretary of the Army in carrying out projects and activities funded by this Act.

SEC. 103. The Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers is directed to maintain in caretaker status the navigation portion of the Fox River System in Wisconsin. The Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works shall take over negotiations with the State of Wisconsin for the orderly transfer of ownership and operation of the Fox River Lock System to a nonfederal entity. These negotiations shall commence immediately, be conducted in good faith, and be completed as soon as possible. The terms of a negotiated settlement shall be presented to Congress immediately upon the completion of these negotiations. The settlement shall include provisions for both the logistics and timing of the transfer of the Lock System, as well as a negotiated recommendation for monetary compensation to the nonfederal entity for the repair and rehabilitation of damage and deterioration associated with all appropriate portions of the Fox River System which are being transferred.

SEC. 104. Notwithstanding the requirements of section 103 of Public Law 99-662, the projects for flood control, Moorefield, West Virginia, and Petersburg, West Virginia, authorized by section 101 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990, are modified to provide that the local sponsors may satisfy the cost-sharing requirements of section 103 of said law by contributing after January 1, 1990, land or other assets unrelated to the project site, at its appraised value.

SEC. 105. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used to implement the proposed rule for the Army Corps of Engineers amending regulations on "ability to pay" (33 CFR Part 241), published in the Federal Register, vol. 56, No. 114, on Thursday, June 13, 1991.

SEC. 106. Notwithstanding the provisions of Public Law 95-269, the Secretary of the Army is directed to place the Federal hopper dredge fleet, excluding the Essayons and the Yaquina which shall be stationed and operated within the jurisdiction of the North Pacific Division, in a standby status for a period of one year from the date of enactment of this Act and to make all the material scheduled to be dredged by the vessels placed in standby, available for competitive bidding by the private dredging industry. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the Secretary shall mobilize any standby vessels or any part of the Federal dredge fleet to respond to emergency or national defense needs, or if the Secretary determines that the private dredging industry cannot perform the scheduled dredging at a reasonable price and in a timely manner. No later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress evaluating the capability of the private dredging industry to perform the work of the Federal hopper dredges placed in standby status. The study shall include an analysis of the cost-effectiveness of having the private dredging industry perform such work; the incremental cost to the Federal Government of maintaining these vessels in a standby status; and the cost of retiring each vessel placed in standby status in this Act.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the motion and I ask for 20 minutes of the time allotted for debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COX of Illinois). Is the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] opposed to the motion?

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, may I say at the outset that I am profoundly apologetic to my good friends, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] for interrupting the smooth flow of this legislation.

As I indicated earlier during general debate, I support this bill and the conference report.

I have, of course, an understanding that it represents a compromise in many ways, but on this particular issue, represented by amendment No. 37, I have been making a personal crusade for a number of years to change the situation, and I will explain what is represented here.

I do not feel in good conscience that I can let this amendment in this bill go through without making it clear to all the Members why I am opposed to this particular amendment. I beg the indulgence of my friends for doing this. I recognize that the hour is late and they desire to go home and this troubles me, but I want to make clear the position I am taking here.

Mr. Speaker, this is the language of the amendment which Chairman BEVILL's motion proposes to accept. It is that $94,800,000 shall be available—of a larger $3 billion item—shall be available only for the Bishop Science Center, State of Hawaii; the Ambulatory Research and Education Building, Oregon Health Sciences University; the Center for Energy and Environmental Resources, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, LA; the Advanced Technologies Institute, University of Connecticut; the Biomedical Research Facility, University of Alabama; the Cancer Treatment Facility for the Indiana University School of Medicine at Indianapolis; the Cancer Institute of New Jersey; the Northeast Environmental Resource and Renewal Facility, Mayfield, PA; the Center for Advanced Industrial Process, Washington State University; and the Hahnemann University Ambulatory Care and Teaching Center in Philadelphia.

With a minor exception or two, each of these is allocated $10 million. In the House-passed bill, there was no money for any of these. In the Senate-passed bill, there was only $300,000 to study them. In the conference report, that $300,000 study has grown to the figure that I mentioned, $94,800,000 for 10 carefully described projects scattered throughout the United States.

It is this process by which unreviewed, unrequested projects are inserted into the conference that I have been objecting to for years without avail. It is such a serious matter that I have even proposed to the various committees studying the rules of the House that we revise the rules of the House to make this more difficult.

Now, I understand why they are in there. Somebody requested them. Most of those somebodies were on the Appropriations Committee.

They are worthy projects. I am not arguing with the merits of them, but nobody has reviewed the merits of them, except the person who suggested them to the appropriations conference committee.

They did not come up in the original bill in either House, as I have indicated before.

Mr. Speaker, this process is wrong. This process denies the Members of the House who are not on the Appropriations Committee any opportunity to secure worthy projects through the normal processes of authorization, peer review and so on.

Now, I know that many times those of us on authorization committees go to the Appropriations Committee and ask them to do things like this. I have been guilty of it myself. None of us are without sin; but to refuse to confront the reality that this is a distortion of the democratic process is wrong.

I think the only way I can make that point is to do what I am doing here today. I apologize again for delaying this bill, but I think it is absolutely essential that we do this.

Now, I would be happy at this point to recognize any other sinner who would like to confess and take a few moments of time on this matter.

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL].

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from California very much.

What we have here is $94.8 million of the taxpayers' money being added and appropriated by a conference committee for 10 new—and it is described this way—energy, educational and/or medical facilities, when neither the House nor the Senate bill which went into conference contained any such appropriations.

Now, obviously no authorizing committee ever reviewed them, or so far as I know, no authorizing committee has ever even heard of these 10 new building projects or facilities. Nobody really knows specifically what they are about. There has been no peer review, no competitive bidding, and especially in science and technology this, I think, is where we should certainly draw the line.

Mr. Speaker, we do have pork that has creeped in; yet the taxpayers are expected to pay for them without the rest of Congress even knowing what the specific kinds of facilities are that are being purchased, or their respective merits.

Officeholders of any local government will be run out of town if they tried this kind of irresponsible behavior. I am a former attorney of many local taxing districts. It is just unheard of that you would take the taxpayers' money and at the last minute in a conference committee where neither bill had any mention of any such construction projects or facilities, whatever they are, and then to plug them in at the last minute and expect the rest of us to accept it, especially at this time in the history of this Nation. I am not going to go over all the problems of the deficit. We're all aware of the burgeoning $4 trillion debt.

But for the conference committee to add these appropriations at this time I think would be terribly unreasonable, and the people of this Nation certainly will have a right, once again, to chalk up a good grievance against this body.

Now I defer, certainly, to the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN]. He is the chairman of the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. I, frankly, had hoped he would have presented an amendment that would simply delete all of these appropriations altogether, and the gentleman, in his good nature and the sound person that he is, has suggested that, well, the money will still be appropriated, but it will go on the basis of peer review, on the basis of authorization, and on the basis of study and competitive bidding, via the authorizing committees of this body and if not the appropriations—totaling $94.8 million will simply lapse.

Well, if we are going to spend that kind of money, that is the way it ought to be, and this is no attack upon the projects themselves. Maybe they will live up to, and survive the regular committee process, and ultimately be approved.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL] raised a subject that I neglected to cover in my initial remarks.

Procedurally, Mr. Speaker, it is necessary, under these circumstances, as I understand it, and I ask for a correction if I am wrong, to defeat the chairman's, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], motion for the previous question when we complete this debate in order that I may offer a motion to amend, and my motion to amend will not strike the money, although the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL] indicated that he would have preferred that. It will merely have the following language. It will strike all of the earmarks and insert in lieu thereof: Making competitive merit review awards to academic research facilities to the extent otherwise authorized by law.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the money remains, the projects can go forward, if they are authorized and peer reviewed, and the overall amount of money in the bill will remain the same.

Now I think that was the least difficult, most positive way to deal with this problem, and I hope that the chairman in his generosity would accept this amendment. But I doubt he will.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, this is actually a pretty good bill overall. It is within the President's spending limit, and it is having good effect on the Congress to deal with that kind of thing. It also follows the House authorization on energy R&D priorities fairly honestly, with the exception of the amendment we are dealing with here. It provides a critical boost for some hydrogen research which I think is one of the energies of the future, and I think that is a good thing. It funds some important futuristic programs like SP-100 and some others, and, as a matter of fact, the bill is, in my mind, good enough.

Mr. Speaker, I voted for it. I do not vote for many bills of this type, and I voted for this one. It is kind of unusual. But I will tell my colleagues that I think the moderate approach which the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] has taken on this particular amendment is exactly right.

What we have here is another process where, not only have they authorized a bunch of projects and appropriated the money at the same time without any kind of review of those projects, but they have also taken the bill well out of scope.

Now this bill is about, in this particular section, $150 million out of scope because of the additions that were put in in the conference. We have projects that are not authorized. We have had no hearings on these projects in our committee, or in any committee, authorizing committee. Some of us have never even heard of these projects. We do not know if they are good projects or not. We are going to spend $95 million for some projects that seem to have as their main merit that somebody on the conference committee got $10 million for their project, and everybody else took $10 million for theirs.

Mr. Speaker, that is not the way to get good science done in this country, and I would suggest that the chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN], has given us the right approach. What he is saying is, "Let's keep the money. Let's say that the money should go for good projects. But let's make certain the projects are good by having them reviewed. Let's have an authorization project where they get reviewed, or let's have a merit review process. But let's make certain that the $95 million that we're spending for these projects buys us good projects."

Mr. Speaker, we have no assurance of that here this evening. Support Chairman BROWN. He is going in the right direction.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I think I understand the tactics of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS]. I understand their desire to move the bill as quickly as possible and to use the minimum amount of time that they desire. And of course I would like to cooperate with them on this in every way that I can.

I am not anxious to delay this either, but I would like to have every Member here clear as to the procedure, and, after I clarify that, I will yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] for a brief time.

In order to get to my amendment, Mr. Speaker, it will be necessary to defeat a motion for the previous question on the amendment before us offered by the gentleman from Alabama, and I am, therefore, requesting all of the Members to vote "no" on the previous question. If the previous question is defeated, I will then offer my amendment, not to strike the money, but merely to say that the specific earmarks are removed and the funds will be allocated according to a peer review process.

Mr. Speaker, I want that to be clear in the minds of all the Members.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY].

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, this is a classic example of pork barrel spending. Items show up in a conference report that were not specifically funded, neither in the House, nor the Senate, version of this legislation. The gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] has eloquently made the case for striking these projects. Voters want their elected leaders to stop with politics as usual. I understand not even one of the conference committee members found this particular provision objectionable.

The bottom line, Mr. Speaker, is we should all object to this kind of practice, especially at this time when we are trying to convey to the American public that we are finally taking this deficit more seriously, and for that reason, Mr. Speaker, I would urge support for the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY].

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I would take issue with the last speaker, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY], and say this is not politics as usual. This is the exact opposite.

I can remember sitting in this hall a year ago when the President gave us his State of the Union message, and he talked about the new world order. He talked about how things had changed, and at that time he thanked the men and women in uniform, as he should, for what they had done to bring about the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the cold war. And he also thanked the taxpayers, as he should have, for paying for the weaponry that were deterrents so that we never would have that terrible nuclear war that we so dreaded. But not a word, not anything, no plan, not even a line, let alone a paragraph, about how we were going to deal in this new world order, how we were going to keep our skilled workers, the highly trained individuals who had given their adult life to make these weapons is their life work, and how they would go on to pay the mortgage, to take care of their families, to educate their children.

So, yes, there are some projects in this bill tonight. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], the chairman, of course would not let projects that were not worthwhile into his bill. Every one of us on both sides of the aisle know that the days of the Lawrence Welk projects are over, pork is over. But we have to begin to fight back to keep our skilled workers employed. Most of these projects are university projects. These are projects, and I will speak to particularly the one that I am interested in Connecticut. I am proud to say I am interested in it for it will retrain our engineers and provide needed high-skill jobs.

Mr. Speaker, Connecticut is a small State, but the fourth State dependent on defense and it made our Nation strong so that we could win that cold war. This project is a provision manufacturing institute, a joint effort of the schools of engineering and business, an institute of materials and science. The goal is to advance precision manufacturing and technology. The Advanced Technology Institute at our University of Connecticut will help the economy of New England rebound through this time of change, but, more importantly, is the only research and development center in Connecticut and one of the few in the Nation.

Mr. Speaker, we have to fight back. We have to keep our trained workers, our skilled workers employed for new challenges. We have to do new and innovative things in high technology so that we will remain and continue to be the Nation that everyone looks to for technology and as a world order. We cannot do it unless we pay for it. We pay for it in this way with university research because we have to go on to excel in high technology and continue as a proud Nation.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the words "peer review" have been thrown around here rather frequently this evening. What do they mean? How many Members have examined the peer review process we are discussing here?

What it really means is that a group of college presidents, in most cases, or maybe professors, get together and decide among themselves which university will get money. Part of it is corporate money, and I have no objection to the peer review process there. If it is corporate money or privately raised money, of course, they are the ones that should decide where that money goes.

What we are doing here with your money, the taxpayers' money, is deciding that these universities, which may not be one of the 20 or 30 or 40 most prestigious universities in the country, who are standing in need of funds like this to do the job we are providing for here.

Let us look at what this money does. It is not money to operate these facilities. It is construction money to build a facility. The university will then use that peer process to decide what shall be done in those universities in their research. All of the money for these universities is for research.

Let us examine just what this is. We have the environment. Certainly I think every Member here is concerned about the environment. Some may be more than others. But one of these projects is to help study the environment, how we may work and still protect the environment. How we can do a better job to be competitive in the world.

One out of four people in this country living today will personally experience cancer sometime in their life. One out of nine women will experience breast cancer. Those numbers are growing. Heart disease is the largest killer of people in this country, much higher than AIDS and all of these other things. These are things that would be done in one of the university projects.

Cancer has touched everyone in this room either directly through their own family, a very close friend, or some other family member.

Research for things like this is going to make life easier. We do not know the answer yet for cancer. We do not know what causes it. We have found some cures for cancer, fortunately. Some types of cancers can be cured. But not because someone did not make an investment. And this is what we are doing here.

We did not go through this willy-nilly. It is true we did not have any research dollars or any money for these facilities in our bill that passed the House. It was austere. The other body added certain projects.

But we examined these very closely, and we concurred with them. We are arguing today that they should be protected.

Technology transfer. We are still on the leading edge in the world as far as technology and development. Better ways to manufacture, building a better product so that we can be competitive with the rest of the world.

But somehow we do not transfer that technology out to industry or businesses so they can use it. Part of these research dollars will go for technology transfer so that American workers can be competitive in the rest of the world.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL] mentioned that he would run people out of local government if they did something like this.

I never served in local government, but I have been helping other county commissioners. And if a county commissioner wants to build a new bridge, I do not think he goes to a college professor or a college president to decide where that bridge shall be built or how it shall be built. They have to raise the money; they decide how it is spent. That is exactly what we are doing here.

The word "futuristic" was used by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER]. What are we describing here? The future of our children, so we can find jobs for them, so we can protect their health, so we can do the things that we were not able to do. These are the futuristic things that this committee is bringing forth here now, and we have examined them.

To my conservative friends—well, I do not see many of them on the floor right now—but to my conservative friends who are concerned about balancing the budget, we are not saving one penny here.

The amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN], our friend, if he is successful, will offer an amendment to keep the money in, but turn the decision over which one of these projects shall be built and where they shall be built to someone else who does not raise the money.

Let us take one last thing here. Back in 1985, 20 universities received more than 55 percent of the money through the peer review process. Most of those universities are under examination right now for fraudulent use of the peer process money that they received.

So we are not protecting anything here. If we were, we would all be supporting it. I would certainly be leading the pack here today.

In closing, we are not saving one penny by the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN]. It is going to be spent, except it is going to be spent somewhere else in the country. And some process at some elite college someplace, the same people making the decisions there are controlling where the dollars are going. And it is going to be their universities that get it.

So please support the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL]. That is the proper way to administer the funds that we have here in this program.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of my motion and urge a vote for it. I would like to point out that the proposed amendment does not strike the money; it strikes the projects. In other words, what it does is lets the administration decide what to do with the money.

I think Congress ought to make that decision. I think we should make that decision. I do not think we should give that right to someone else.

Mr. Speaker, we hear all about this peer system. I can tell you about the peer system. The late Dr. Frank Rose, the president of the University of Alabama, used to be one of the peers. He told me, "I will tell you how the peer system works. Universities that have the peers are the ones that get the projects, and they are the ones that make the decisions."

I do not think we should pass this out and tell someone else to make the decisions that Congress should make. This is our decision.

The committees of the two houses have agreed on these projects. I know one, the University of Alabama, is to complete a science research building with laboratory equipment. That is the same campus that developed the world's first artificial artery, a plastic artery that made it possible to save thousands and thousands of lives all over the world. This was the first in the world.

I am so glad we did not have at that time, the rule of my good friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN], which he wants to put in here.

As a matter of fact, this is the process we have followed for over 100 years. There is a good reason for this. Many of the requests that we get on appropriations, come from members of the authorization committees. We receive requests from the chairmen of the authorizing committees for one reason or the other, maybe the other body would not go along with their particular project, they come and say would you put this project on your appropriation bill.

This building is critical to my university.

Certainly that is a one-time expenditure. So we do this. These are projects that do not have an authorization.

Certainly, we go before the Committee on Rules. We go through this. They give us a rule on these matters.

So we are asking Members to let us let this Congress make those decisions. Support your committees. Do not get into this peer business and do not get into this business of letting the administration decide where these projects are going to go.

The money is going to be in here. This does not knock out the money. I just want to call that to the attention of Members.

Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate an aye vote on my motion.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I have deliberately refrained in my discussion here from questioning the value of any of these 10 projects. I know that they are very dear to the hearts of the Members who sponsored them. I do not question the motives of any of the Members who have suggested those projects. I regret that the distinguished chairman inadvertently, I am sure, misstated my amendment, which requires that these projects be authorized.

The fundamental law with regard to the Department of Energy states that all appropriations shall be made in accordance with annual authorizations. Annual authorizations are the only way that Members of Congress have a voice in these projects.

My amendment does not turn this over to the department or the administration. It requires that we abide by the law requiring authorizations.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] will point out quite correctly that we have not passed such authorizations recently. I have had long discussions with him and with the distinguished chairman of the counterpart subcommittee in the Senate, suggesting that we cooperate in getting authorizations.

I regret to say that I have been met by a stone wall with regard to that. The distinguished chairman in the other body says it is a prerogative of the Senate in accordance with their rules to do what we see done on this bill.

Now, is it fair to the Congress that of these 10 projects, they go to eight States and that seven of these States have important members on the Committee on Appropriations in either the House or the Senate? Is that allowing the Congress, the Members of the Congress an opportunity to participate in this process?

There is no person I have higher respect for than the distinguished gentleman from Alabama. He is right when he says that he is forced into doing some of the things that he is doing. He did not originate these projects. They were originated largely in the other body.

We have not passed an authorization, but this House passed the Organic Act requiring annual authorizations, and this year passed the Department of Energy bill, which in part came from the committee that I have the honor to chair, which required that there be authorizations.

And the conferees on the other side have refused to agree to that provision in the House-passed bill. The House has spoken. They want authorizations. But we cannot get them for a variety of reasons that we do not need to go into here tonight. But it is not true to say that my amendment proposes to turn this over to anybody except those disenfranchised Members of the House who today have no voice in the way these projects are established.

There is no partisanship in this. I have carefully looked at the names of the Members that I think I can identify with these projects, and they are about half Democrats and half Republicans.

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Speaker, may I just add one point. I know it is late.

Think of the precedent that we will be setting tonight. We all know what has happened. Some privileged Members sitting on a conference committee feel they can just take these types of liberties with the taxpayers' money, when we do not have the slightest idea as to what it is for. They are not even identified. Everybody gets $10 million except for two, right down the line. We do not even know if it is the beginning of a big construction project or a little construction project.

If ever we are going to take a stand, it should be here. We are not going to take the money away. We only say, use the rules of the Congress, some semblance of fairness.

Do not set a precedent where we just simple say, "This can happen, every conference committee, don't worry, you can break the rules of relevancy or whatever," and come back and expect us to put a stamp on it.

Congress has to stand up once in a while and say, "No, we will not stand for this."

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, let me conclude by repeating what I just said. We are not turning over our responsibilities to anybody else. We are redeeming our responsibilities as equal Members of the House of Representatives and demanding that we have a voice provided by laws that we have passed, to have a voice in what is going on on this matter.

It is not trivial. This has been going on over a decade. The total amount of earmarks in the annual appropriations is not just this $95 million. It approaches a half a billion dollars or more.

It is truly significant. It is truly important that we as individual Members of this House have a voice in how the taxpayers' money is spent and that it be spent in order to achieve the public objectives as determined by the public's representatives.

I ask for a "no" vote on the motion to terminate debate and a "yes" vote on my amendment.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Listening to the arguments, I have come to the conclusion there is just one question here: Who constitutes the peer? Was it this committee or some other committee of this Congress? That is the only argument we have here tonight.

Members of this committee were elected by the people, just like the authorizing committees are. We have used our judgment. We have examined them, same as the authorizing committees.

We never criticize the authorizing committees. I understand the peer question they raise here tonight. I think we all do. But that is an old issue.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am not going to use all my time. I just want to urge my colleagues to vote aye on my motion.

We have this come up frequently. We work with the authorization committees. We do get a vote on this. The rules require a vote. We want a vote. We want our colleagues to vote on it. We are not trying to slip anything through.

The other body is going to vote on it. So nobody is getting harmed. But the authorization committees, for one reason or another, frequently, do not pass an authorization bill that reaches the President's desk.

We have projects that we need throughout the country. We cannot sit back and let only the peers decide what we need.

I am just telling my colleagues, that system does not work. It is up to them. This is their vote. This is their privilege, and it should be. Nobody wants anything slipped through without their vote.

I just think that we ought to give a chance to those young men and women, those bright young men and women out there that want to go into science. Let us not discourage it. Let us encourage them and furnish them the labs and the places to work. This is what it is all about.

Every one of these projects is related to and part of the lab work in this country. We need these projects.

I urge my colleagues to vote aye on my motion.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the motion.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present. The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 157, nays 203, not voting 72, as follows:

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BROWN TO THE MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] on amendment No. 37.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COX of Illinois). The Clerk will report the amendment to the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BROWN to the motion offered by Mr. BEVILL: Strike "the Bishop Science Center" and all that follows through "Philadelphia, Pennsylvania" and insert in lieu thereof "making competitive, merit-review awards to academic research facilities, to the extent otherwise authorized by law".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] is recognized for 1 hour.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, a Member in opposition to this motion is not entitled to half the time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On an amendment to a motion, the hour is controlled by the proponent of the amendment.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. I thank the Chair.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] like to have one-half hour?

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, no. Well, yes, I would then; by popular demand, I accept.

Mr. BROWN. It is not my intention to use this hour in debate. I merely want to explain the parliamentary situation, and I will yield back the remainder of my hour.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? I would like to be recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS].

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from California, for yielding me this time.

I regret that we are taking the time at this late hour. I apologize to the membership. But I think there is a lot of misunderstanding of what we are doing here.

I know some people came on the floor and thought they were saving $100 million. That is not the case.

As I spoke earlier when many of you were not here, this does not save one penny. It is a peer fight is actually what it is, and you are going to turn the decision of how the money that is appropriated in this bill, in this provision, will go, whether it goes to the Members of the House of Representatives who have to tax the American people to pay for it, who are going to be taxed already, or you turn it over to a peer group, somebody no one will ever see or hear except that they themselves will ever know. So if you are concerned about saving the American taxpayers the money, your vote now will be against the motion offered by our colleague, the gentleman from California.

These were good projects. They are still good projects. But I doubt that very many of them will ever make it through the peer process when the big elite 20 or 30 universities decide among themselves, "Which is this, your turn to go to this university?" "No. I think I got the last one." "OK, we will give it to somebody else." This is the way the peer process that we are talking about here will be run.

So if you are concerned about saving dollars, one more time, my colleagues who voted, and some of you came on the floor and did not ask the members of the committee, but went over to somebody else and said, "What is the issue here," "pork." Well, the pork is still in. It is just where the pork is going to be located. So a no vote is a conservative vote.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am just going to take a minute to respond to the gentleman, because I think inadvertently he misspoke himself as my dear friend, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], did earlier. This is not a question over peer review. This is a question over whether the House will authorize a project, and it so states. It says, "This money will be spent in making awards to the extent authorized by law," and that means that every Member of this House will have the opportunity to decide instead of that very elite group for whom I have the greatest admiration who sit on Appropriations conference committees. Nine of these ten projects are in the States or districts represented by the conference committee. I admire every one of them. They are wonderful people. The projects are great people.

We are not fighting over peer review. We are fighting over the right of the Members of Congress to have a say in how the taxpayers' money is spent. That is the question, and I think everyone who came in and voted on the previous question understood that.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, now, which committee would be the authorizing committee?

Mr. BROWN. The committees that would have jurisdiction over the facility in question, if it is a scientific research project outside of the field of medicine, it would be the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. If it is an agriculture project, the Committee on Agriculture; if it is a health project, the Committee on Energy and Commerce. Every Member of the House who is on an authorizing committee ought to be concerned with this kind of language.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I will be very brief and very quick. I want to thank the gentleman for offering his amendment. This amendment is about due process and equal access to the process of having your projects considered on an equal footing with everybody else in this body irrespective of your committee assignment. It is about the extent to which a project anyplace in the country will be judged on its merit relative to other projects. It is about this body setting priorities rather than individuals.

For my part, when I am back in my district and people ask me if I oppose individual parochial projects being slipped into bills in conference by privileged Members, I say yes.

If you agree with me that that is the answer we ought to give our constituents, then I would say vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate and thank the gentleman for yielding.

Several of these projects are already under construction. Two of them are complete that I am aware of. So it is not reauthorization or new authorization. Several of these are already under construction. They have been appropriated in previous years. So we are finishing two or three of these. So that is really not the argument.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I mentioned earlier that this process has been going on for years. We have become comfortable with it. We love and respect our colleagues on the Committee on Appropriations. We know that they try to listen to us.

Unfortunately it still happens that most of these projects are in their districts. Now, I will tell you all that in the next session of the Congress with a third new Members, they are not going to feel so comfortable about delegating their rights as representatives of the people to a clique of distinguished elder Members no matter how much we love and respect them, and we might as well prepare for that day now.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I support my colleague, the gentleman from California, but I am concerned that even with his motion we will be obligating ourselves to spend dollars that if we were going to zero out would not be spent at all. I wonder if he could comment on that.

Mr. BROWN. Only if these are authorized in due process by the appropriate committee of Congress will this money be spent.

Mr. GLICKMAN. If the gentleman will yield further, so no dollars are being appropriated today for any specific projects in the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. BROWN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for a "yea" vote on my amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] to the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 250, nays 104, not voting 78, as follows:

□ 2108

So the amendment to the motion was agreed to.

The motion, as amended, was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

The text of the motion is as follows:

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum stricken and inserted by said amendment, insert: "$1,286,320,000".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL FUND

For nuclear waste disposal activities to carry out the purposes of Public Law 97-425, as amended, including the acquisition of real property or facility construction or expansion, $275,071,000, to remain available until expended, to be derived from the Nuclear Waste Fund. To the extent that balances in the fund are not sufficient to cover amounts available for obligation in the account, the Secretary shall exercise his authority pursuant to section 302(e)(5) of said Act to issue obligations to the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That of the amount herein appropriated, within available funds, not to exceed $5,000,000 may be provided to the State of Nevada, for the sole purpose in the conduct of its oversight responsibilities pursuant to the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, Public Law 97-425, as amended: Provided further, That of the amount herein appropriated, not more than $6,000,000 may be provided to affected local governments, as defined in the Act, to conduct appropriate activities pursuant to the Act: Provided further, That the distribution of the funds herein provided among the affected units of local government shall be determined by the Department of Energy (DOE) and made available to the State and affected units of local government by direct payment: Provided further, That within 90 days of the completion of each Federal fiscal year, each entity shall provide certification to the DOE, that all funds expended from such direct payment monies have been expended for activities as defined in Public Law 97-425, as amended. Failure to provide such certification shall cause such entity to be prohibited from any further funding provided for similar activities: Provided further, That none of the funds herein appropriated may be used directly or indirectly to influence legislative action on any matter pending before Congress or a State legislature or for any lobbying activity as provided in 18 U.S.C. 1913: Provided further, That none of the funds herein appropriated may be used for litigation expenses: Provided further, That grant funds are not to be used to support multistate efforts or other coalition building activities inconsistent with the restrictions contained in this Act: Provided further, That no funds herein appropriated from this Fund shall be used by the State of Nevada or by the Department of Energy for public relations, media, advertising or similar activities that are not related to scientific oversight of activities of the Department of Energy in furtherance of characterization studies: Provided further, That of the amount appropriated herein, up to $3,700,000 shall be available for infrastructure studies, mobile sampling platform and monitoring work and other research and development work to be carried out by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV) and the University of Nevada, Reno. Funding to the universities will be administered by the DOE through a cooperative agreement.

In paying the amounts determined to be appropriate as a result of the decision in Consolidated Edison Company of New York v. Department of Energy 870 F.2d 694 (D.C. Cir. 1989), the Department of Energy shall pay interest at a rate to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury and calculated from the date the amounts were deposited into the Nuclear Waste Fund. Such payments may be made by credits to future utility payments into the Fund.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken and inserted by said amendment, insert:

NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL FUND

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to amendment No. 43.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to amendment No. 43.

The House version of H.R. 5373 would have allocated $5,750,000 to the State of Nevada to do parallel site characterization studies; and $6,250,000 to affected local governments for socioeconomic studies of the impacts of the civilian high-level nuclear waste repository to the counties.

The amounts included in amendment No. 43 are substantially lower than what was a fair allowance for the legitimate parallel studies included in the original House version. Unfortunately, the other body felt the parallel studies are of less importance.

Because of the highly politicized process in which Yucca Mountain was designated as the only site to be characterized, it is essential that Congress gives Nevada an opportunity to fully participate.

Simply, Nevada's parallel site characterization studies are vital to the credibility and safety of the program and must continue to be adequately funded.

The original House amounts represent a level higher than the conferees' recommendation. I am opposed to these lower funding levels.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

Senate amendment No. 44: Page 39, strike out all after line 7 over to and including line 14 on page 40, and insert: $4,523,249,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 may be obligated to implement the reconfiguration of nonnuclear activities of the Department of Energy until the occurrence of the following:

(1) The Secretary of Energy submits a report to the Committees on Appropriations that contains an analysis of the projected costs and benefits of the proposed nonnuclear reconfiguration and an analysis of the alternatives considered. The analyses shall take into account all relevant costs and benefits and shall include a discounted cash flow analysis of each alternative.

(2) The Secretary of Energy certifies to the Committees on Appropriations that the discounted cash flow analysis demonstrates that the proposed nonnuclear reconfiguration is cost-effective on a plant by plant basis.

(3) A period of 90 days has elapsed after the later of the submission of the report and the certification by the Secretary of Energy.

Nothing in this provision prohibits the obligation of funds for studies, analysis, or preparation of conceptual designs that are necessary to assess the cost-effectiveness or feasibility of nonnuclear reconfiguration.

DEFENSE NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL

For nuclear waste disposal activities to carry out the purposes of Public Law 97—425, as amended, including the acquisition of real property or facility construction or expansion, $100,000,000, to remain available until expended, all of which shall be used in accordance with the terms and conditions of the Nuclear Waste Fund appropriation of the Department of Energy contained in this title.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

The text of the motion is as follows:

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and concur therein.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I object and strongly oppose amendment 48.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Indiana oppose the motion?

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. I do not, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I object to and strongly oppose amendment 48, which would move $100 million from the Defense Nuclear Waste Disposal Program and place it into the civilian high-level nuclear waste site characterization studies at Yucca Mountain, NV.

Before I explain my reasons, I would like to quote the conference report pertaining to amendment 43.

The conferees continue to be concerned with the spiralling cost estimates for the characterization of Yucca Mountain. The conferees believe these excessive costs stem in large part from a misallocation of emphasis away from Yucca Mountain * * * the conferees believe that the Department's budget submission requests more money than is necessary for the monitored retrievable storage facility and the waste transportation program.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the conferees are not pleased with DOE's site characterization management practices and massive spending spree. Yet, in the same bill, the conferees agree to give DOE $100 million more.

So which is it? "Good job, DOE, keep up the good work?" Or, "we are concerned this is becoming the next Government boondoggle?"

It seems to me that this conference report is trying to have it both ways. Amendment 43 expresses the Members' concern about mismanagement, misspending, and a misallocation of the Nation's resources. Conversely, amendment 48 pats DOE on the back and hands the Department another $100 million on top of the over $275 million it is already receiving for the site characterization program.

Mr. Speaker, I submit that, in these times of economic and fiscal chaos, this $100 million would be better spent servicing this country's debt. Instead, the conferees' have elected to sink more and more into the Yucca Mountain money pit.

By the conferees' own admission, DOE has mishandled the program. Why continue to support it?

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL] wish to seek time?

Mr. BEVILL. No, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] wish to seek time?

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. No, Mr. Speaker.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of today, consideration of Amendment numbered 57 is postponed.

The Clerk will designate the last amendment in disagreement.

Senate Amendment No. 58: Page 57, after line 23, insert:

"SEC. 508. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, $5,000,000 of the funds appropriated in Title I or Title II shall be available for the Central Maine Water Supply Project, to remain available until September 30, 1993, and to become available only upon enactment into law of authorizing legislation.".

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. BEVILL

Mr. BEVILL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

Mr. BEVILL moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"SEC. 508. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, $5,000,000 of the funds appropriated in Title I shall be available for the Central Maine Water Supply Project, to remain available until September 30, 1993, and to become available only upon enactment into law of authorizing legislation.".

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the votes by which action was taken on the conference report and on the several motions was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent from the Chamber when two rollcall votes were taken. Had I been present, I would have voted "no" on rollcall No. 400, to defeat the previous question, and "yes" on rollcall No. 401, to adopt the Brown amendment to remove earmarks from nearly $95 million in the fiscal year 1993 energy and water appropriations bill.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE HONORABLE CHARLIE ROSE, CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Honorable CHARLIE ROSE, chairman of the Committee on House Administration:

COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, DC, September 17, 1992.

Hon. TOM S. FOLEY,
Speaker of the House, H-204, The Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER, I have previously notified you that a member of the staff of my Committee has been served with a subpoena issued by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

After consultation with the General Counsel to the Clerk, I have determined that compliance with the subpoena is not inconsistent with the privileges and precedents of the House.

Sincerely,

CHARLIE ROSE,
Chairman.

ROTC CHIEF FEARS DRAFT-DODGING PRESIDENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor of the House again, for about the sixth time this year, to discuss a very unpleasant subject, the Governor of Arkansas and draft dodging.

Today in at least one of our Nation's newspapers the full text of the letter of Col. Eugene Holmes, written just 10 days ago, is presented to the American people on the subject of Bill Clinton and the University of Arkansas ROTC Program. The headline above this is: ROTC Chief Fears Draft Dodging President.

Mr. Speaker, I was stunned to learn that Colonel Holmes, who I have discussed in this well, was a survivor of the Bataan Death March and 3½ years of brutal Japanese warlord imprisonment, that his older brother, Bob, had died in the European Theater of combat and is buried at the American Cemetery at Cambridge, just a stone's throw away from another of Great Britain's great universities, Oxford, where Bill Clinton was organizing demonstrations in a foreign country against his Nation's foreign policy in that part of the cold war which we won called Vietnam.

BILL CLINTON AND THE UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS ROTC PROGRAM

There have been many unanswered questions as to the circumstances surrounding Bill Clinton's involvement with the ROTC department at the University of Arkansas. Prior to this time I have not felt the necessity for discussing the details. The reason I have not done so before is that my poor physical health (a consequence of participation in the Bataan Death March and the subsequent 3½ years internment in Japanese POW camps) has precluded me from getting into what I felt was unnecessary involvement. However, present polls show that there is the imminent danger to our country of a draft dodger becoming the Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States. While it is true, as Mr. Clinton has stated, that there were many others who avoided serving their country in the Vietnam war, they are not aspiring to be the President of the United States.

The tremendous implications of the possibility of his becoming Commander-in-Chief of the United States Armed Forces compels me now to comment on the facts concerning Mr. Clinton's evasion of the draft.

This account would not have been imperative had Bill Clinton been completely honest with the American public concerning this matter. But as Mr. Clinton replied on a news conference this evening (September 5, 1992) after being asked another particular about his dodging the draft, "Almost everyone concerned with these incidents are dead. I have no more comments to make". Since I may be the only person living who can give a first hand account of what actually transpired, I am obligated by my love for my country and my sense of duty to devulge what actually happened and make it a matter of record.

Bill Clinton came to see me at my home in 1969 to discuss his desire to enroll in the ROTC program at the University of Arkansas. We engaged in an extensive, approximately two (2) hour interview. At no time during this long conversation about his desire to join the program did he inform me of his involvement, participation and actually organizing protests against the United States involvement in South East Asia. He was shrewd enough to realize that had I been aware of his activities, he would not have been accepted into the ROTC program as a potential officer in the United States Army.

The next day I began to receive phone calls regarding Bill Clinton's draft status. I was informed by the draft board that it was of interest to Senator Fulbright's office that Bill Clinton, a Rhodes Scholar, should be admitted to the ROTC program. I received several such calls. The general message conveyed by the draft board to me was that Senator Fulbright's office was putting pressure on them and that they needed my help. I then made the necessary arrangements to enroll Mr. Clinton into the ROTC program at the University of Arkansas.

I was not "saving" him from serving his country, as he erroneously thanked me for in his letter from England (dated December 3, 1969). I was making it possible for a Rhodes Scholar to serve in the military as an officer.

In retrospect I see that Mr. Clinton had no intention of following through with his agreement to join the Army ROTC program at the University of Arkansas or to attend the University of Arkansas Law School. I had explained to him the necessity of enrolling at the University of Arkansas as a student in order to be eligible to take the ROTC program at the University. He never enrolled at the University of Arkansas, but instead enrolled at Yale after attending Oxford. I believe that he purposely deceived me, using the possibility of joining the ROTC as a ploy to work with the draft board to delay his induction and get a new draft classification.

The December 3rd letter written to me by Mr. Clinton, and subsequently taken from the files by Lt. Col. Clint Jones, my executive officer, was placed into the ROTC files so that a record would be available in case the applicant should again petition to enter into the ROTC program. The information in that letter alone would have restricted Bill Clinton from ever qualifying to be an officer in the United States Military. Even more significant was his lack of veracity in purposefully defrauding the military by deceiving me, both in concealing his anti-military activities overseas and his counterfeit intentions for later military service. These actions cause me to question both his patriotism and his integrity.

When I consider the calibre, the bravery, and the patriotism of the fine young soldiers whose deaths I have witnessed, and others whose funerals I have attended * * *. When I reflect on not only the willingness but eagerness that so many of them displayed in their earnest desire to defend and serve their country, it is untenable and incomprehensible to me that a man who was not merely unwilling to serve his country, but actually protested against its military, should ever be in the position of Commander-in-Chief of our Armed Forces.

I write this declaration not only for the living and future generations, but for those who fought and died for our country. If space and time permitted I would include the names of the ones I knew and fought with, and along with them I would mention my brother Bob, who was killed during World War II and is buried in Cambridge, England (at the age of 23, about the age Bill Clinton was when he was over in England protesting the war).

I have agonized over whether or not to submit this statement to the American people. But, I realize that even though I served my country by being in the military for over 32 years, and having gone through the ordeal of months of combat under the worst of conditions followed by years of imprisonment by the Japanese, it is not enough. I'm writing these comments to let everyone know that I love my country more than I do my own personal security and well-being. I will go to my grave loving these United States of America and the liberty for which so many men have fought and died.

Because of my poor physical condition this will be my final statement. I will make no further comments to any of the media regarding this issue.

Mr. Speaker, no matter how many empty chairs the camera tries to show to belittle these special orders, there are 1 million people watching us.

Mr. Speaker, along with the letter I submit Clinton's infamous, disgraceful letter of December 3, 1969.

[From the Washington Times, September 17, 1992]

TEXT OF BILL CLINTON'S LETTER TO ROTC COLONEL

The text of the letter Bill Clinton wrote to Col. Eugene Holmes, director of the ROTC program at the University of Arkansas, on Dec. 3, 1969:

I am sorry to be so long in writing. I know I promised to let you hear from me at least once a month, and from now on you will, but I have had to have some time to think about this first letter. Almost daily since my return to England I have thought about writing, about what I want to and ought to say.

First, I want to thank you, not just for saving me from the draft, but for being so kind and decent to me last summer, when I was as low as I have ever been. One thing which made the bond we struck in good faith somewhat palatable to me was my high regard for you personally. In retrospect, it seems that the admiration might not have been mutual had you known a little more about me, about my political beliefs and activities. At least you might have thought me more fit for the draft than for ROTC.

Let me try to explain. As you know, I worked for two years in a very minor position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. I did it for the experience and the salary but also for the opportunity, however small, of working every day against a war I opposed and despised with a depth of feeling I had reserved solely for racism in America before Vietnam. I did not take the matter lightly but studied it carefully, and there was a time when not many people had more information about Vietnam at hand than I did.

I have written and spoken and marched against the war. One of the national organizers of the Vietnam Moratorium is a close friend of mine. After I left Arkansas last summer, I went to Washington to work in the national headquarters of the Moratorium, then to England to organize the Americans here for demonstrations Oct. 15 and Nov. 16.

Interlocked with the war is the draft issue, which I did not begin to consider separately until early 1968. For a law seminar at Georgetown I wrote a paper on the legal arguments for and against allowing, within the Selective Service System, the classification of selective conscientious objection for those opposed to participation in a particular war, not simply to "participation in war in any form."

From my work I came to believe that the draft system itself is illegitimate. No government really rooted in limited, parliamentary democracy should have the power to make its citizens fight and kill and die in a war they may oppose, a war which even possibly may be wrong, a war which, in any case, does not involve immediately the peace and freedom of the nation.

The draft was justified in World War II because the life of the people collectively was at stake. Individuals had to fight, if the nation was to survive, for the lives of their countrymen and their way of life. Vietnam is no such case. Nor was Korea an example where, in my opinion, certain military action was justified but the draft was not, for the reasons stated above.

Because of my opposition to the draft and the war, I am in great sympathy with those who are not willing to fight, kill and maybe die for their country (i.e. the particular policy of a particular government) right or wrong. Two of my friends at Oxford are conscientious objectors. I wrote a letter of recommendation for one of them to his Mississippi draft board, a letter which I am more proud of than anything else I wrote at Oxford last year. One of my roommates is a draft resister who is possibly under the indictment and may never be able to go home again. He is one of the bravest, best men I know. His country needs men like him more than they know. That he is considered a criminal is an obscenity.

The decision not to be a resister and the related subsequent decisions were the most difficult of my life. I decided to accept the draft in spite of my beliefs for one reason: to maintain my political viability within the system. For years I have worked to prepare myself for a political life characterized by both practical political ability and concern for rapid social progress. It is a life I still feel compelled to try to lead. I do not think our system of government is by definition corrupt, however dangerous and inadequate it has been in recent years. (The society may be corrupt, but that is not the same thing, and if that is true, we are all finished anyway.)

When the draft came, despite political convictions, I was having a hard time facing the prospect of fighting a war I had been fighting against, and that is why I contacted you. ROTC was the one way left in which I could possibly, but not positively, avoid both Vietnam and resistance. Going on with my education, even coming back to England, played no part in my decision to join ROTC. I am back here, and would have been at Arkansas Law School because there is nothing else I can do. In fact, I would like to have been able to take a year out perhaps to teach in a small college or work on some community action project and in the process to decide whether to attend law school or graduate school and how to begin putting what I have learned to use.

But the particulars of my personal life are not nearly as important to me as the principles involved. After I signed the ROTC letter of intent, I began to wonder whether the compromise I had made with myself was not more objectionable than the draft would have been, because I had no interest in the ROTC program in itself and all I seemed to have done was to protect myself from physical harm. Also, I began to think I had deceived you, not by lies—there were none—but by failing to tell you all the things I'm writing now. I doubt that I had the mental coherence to articulate them then.

At that time, after we had made our agreement and you had sent my 1-D deferment to my draft board, the anguish and loss of my self-regard and self-confidence really set in. I hardly slept for weeks and kept going by eating compulsively and reading until exhaustion brought sleep. Finally, on Sept. 12 I stayed up all night writing a letter to the chairman of my draft board, saying basically what is in the preceding paragraph, thanking him for trying to help in a case where he really couldn't, and stating that I couldn't do the ROTC after all and would he please draft me as soon as possible.

I never mailed the letter, but I did carry it on me every day until I got on the plane to return to England. I didn't mail the letter because I didn't see, in the end, how my going in the Army and maybe going to Vietnam would achieve anything except a feeling that I had punished myself and gotten what I deserved. So I came back to England to try to make something of this second year of my Rhodes scholarship.

And that is where I am now, writing to you because you have been good to me and have a right to know what I think and feel. I am writing too in the hope that my telling this one story will help you to understand more clearly how so many fine people have come to find themselves still loving their country but loathing the military, to which you and other good men have devoted years, lifetimes, of the best service you could give. To many of us, it is no longer clear what is service and what is disservice, or if it is clear, the conclusion is likely to be illegal.

Forgive the length of this letter. There was much to say. There is still a lot to be said, but it can wait. Please say hello to Col. Jones for me.

Merry Christmas.

Sincerely,

BILL CLINTON.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION TO TRANSFER FEMA TO THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HARRIS). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to abolish the Federal Emergency Management Agency [FEMA] and transfer its functions to the Department of Defense.

Three strikes and you're out. Hurricane Hugo, the Loma Prieta earthquake, and the first 4 days of Hurricane Andrew in south Florida—they were all terrible disasters and FEMA's response to them was a disaster. Their response was a blizzard of redtape, a hurricane of hot air, but no avalanche of help—more like a glacial mountain of delay.

California faces future severe earthquakes. Estimates of future damage run as high as $60 billion with thousands buried in rubble, dying unless relief is massive and quick. I'd like to see help in the future coming from a mission-oriented unit of the Pentagon, and not from the political hacks of the FEMA dumping ground. When California gets hit with the big one, I'd like to see someone like Stormin' Norman come to the rescue, not a bunch of political donors holding down fancy-titled jobs. The civil servants at FEMA try, but the leadership is so bad, that it just doesn't work.

One could try to reform FEMA. But Mr. Speaker, after working with FEMA following the October 1989 earthquake that so badly hurt Oakland, I've decided that agency's swamp is too big and too deep. Some agencies are star crossed and snake bit. Some agencies just have a morale problem that is so bad you need to start over.

Let's start over. Let's put disaster relief under the military. The commanding officer in charge will be promoted or demoted based on his or her performance in coming to the rescue, not their politics.

As the disaster relief director for Dade County said, "where's the cavalry?"

Let's give the job to the cavalry from the start.

JOHN E. FISHER INDUCTED INTO THE INSURANCE HALL OF FAME

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, one of the emoluments of this office I will miss is the opportunity it affords me to take special recognition of exceptional people who have done extraordinary things. John E. Fisher, who I am pleased to call one of my best friends, is one of those people. At the International Insurance Society, Insurance Hall of Fame meeting in Toronto, Canada on July 6, 1992 John E. Fisher was inducted into the Insurance Hall of Fame. The citation read: The Society recognizes John E. Fisher as a renowned executive, insurance innovator, international spokesman, community leader, and humanitarian.

John Fisher has become widely recognized as a leader in both the property-liability and life-health insurance industries in the United States as well as internationally.

John has served from 1981 to the present as general chairman and chief executive officer of the Nationwide Insurance Enterprise. He has served in industry leadership roles as chairman of the board of trustees of the American Institute for Property and Liability Underwriters in 1986 and 1987 and as chairman of the American Council of Life Insurance in 1989 and 1990. He holds professional designations in both fields—chartered property casualty underwriter [CPCU] and chartered life underwriter [CLU].

Because of his strong personal commitment to continuing education and professionalism, Nationwide's board of directors named their national study facility the John E. Fisher Nationwide Training Center, where 7,000 of their staff members prepare each year for improved insurance knowledge and performance.

The Nationwide Insurance Enterprise is broader in scope than most insurance organizations because of its strong cooperative heritage extending back to its beginnings in 1926 as the Ohio Farm Bureau Insurance Co. This organization was founded as a parallel or companion institution to the rapidly growing international cooperative movement in Europe early in this century.

Nationwide's cooperative heritage mandates that the enterprise reach out—both nationally and globally. In this regard, John Fisher is well known as a world leader in international cooperative insurance circles. He served for many years on the executive committee of the International Cooperative Insurance Federation and as its chairman from 1985 to 1990. This organization is a voluntary federation of 120 cooperative insurers in 43 countries with a combined annual premium volume of 25 billion pounds sterling.

John's humanitarian and community service commitments have become legendary. His numerous contributions to society and to his local community include key leadership roles with the Boy Scouts of America's local council, self-help training programs for the unemployed, food banks for the needy, and health-cost containment programs; service on boards of trustees of three colleges, on local hospital boards and on the Grace Commission—appointed by the President to find ways to reducing waste in Government—as well as scores of other activities which represent John Fisher's outstanding leadership qualities and his total commitment to improving the society he serves.

A fine example of his altruism and leadership qualities is the key role he has played for many years in the U.S. Medicare Program. He recognized early in the program that a strong bond of cooperation between Government and private industry was an indispensable element to an efficient, cost-contained national Medicare Program which pays a portion of the health care costs of elderly and disabled people.

John has vigorously promoted and ensured the continuing commitment of Nationwide Insurance organization to the Nation's Medicare Program on a not-for-profit basis. This commitment involves serving over 1.85 million eligible recipients in Ohio and West Virginia at a level of benefit payments totaling over $1.5 billion in 1991. Over 1,000 staff members of Nationwide are assigned to the task of checking and paying these Medicare claims delivered to the recipients at a minimum cost to the Government for the service.

Marjorie and I want to congratulate and commend John and his lovely and very supportive wife Eloise on behalf of ourselves and on behalf of a grateful community.

LOS ANGELES TRANSIT COMMISSION SHOULD AWARD RAILCAR CONTRACT TO LOW BIDDER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, a few months ago I spoke out on the floor of the House and other places against the Los Angeles Transit Commission's award of a railcar contract to a Japanese company over a qualified American company which was the low bidder. I did that because $5 million could be saved by going with the low bidder, and I do not believe government money should be wasted, especially today when governments at all levels are running up such huge debts.

However, even more importantly, the commission's decision was going to cost 3,100 American jobs, and we certainly do not need our Government agencies shifting jobs overseas, especially during a recession or weak economic times.

I called for an investigation then, but a few days later, the commission reversed its decision and canceled the higher cost contract. And I was pleased and was content to let the whole matter drop.

However, I take the floor tonight because people continue to contact my office and send clippings and reports of other abuses and wasteful and ridiculous spending by the Los Angeles Transit Commission.

Why should I be concerned about this? Well, as I said a few months ago, billions of dollars for this Los Angeles rail system are coming from or will come from Federal tax money. Whether we like it or not, taxpayers all over the country are helping foot the bill for this project, which has been described as the largest public works project in the Nation at this time.

The U.S. Department of Transportation estimates that this system will ultimately cost $184 billion.

The Wall Street Journal, in an editorial entitled "The Subway That Ate L.A." said this about the system and the $3.8 billion cost of just one portion:

> The $3.8 billion figure is a rough one because the project has run 20% over budget since ground was broken five years ago. By the 21st century, when this wonderful dream of urban politicians and planners is complete, who knows what the tab will run.
>
> U.S. taxpayers should care about this, though the odds are they will never experience the system even if they visit L.A. (It follows few sightseers' paths.) That's because half of the cost of the core Red Line is coming from Portland and Pensacola and Peoria. Last year's transit bill opened up the purse strings again.

The Wall Street Journal article continues:

> Los Angeles transit is a nest of overlapping agencies, lucrative contracts and personal perquisites for the unelected officials in charge. Its monumental failure, so predictable and yet so inexorable, screams for sanity in the loud caverns snaking beneath the center city.
>
> Once transit elephants such as L.A.'s are built they have to be operated. That's where even bigger dollars are wasted.

The Los Angeles Times, in one editorial, said this:

> Money is too tight to mention, except at the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission, where it has been flowing as freely as house wine at happy hour.
>
> It had been a bit of party, all right, for the LACTC staff. During a recent 18-month period, the agency's nearly 500 staffers spent at least $2.9 million on travel, meals, entertainment and automobile expenses, according to records obtained by The Times. The examples cited by staff writer Jane Fritsch are as numerous as they are ridiculous—take, for instance, the 6,000 taxpayer dollars spent on doughnuts.
>
> After The Times requested explanations of his purchases, Executive Director Neil Peterson reimbursed the agency $1,267 for personal charges he had made on a commission credit card. One bill was from a school in Arizona—a golfing school.
>
> An ex-official, Thomas Tanke, bought $1,588 in bicycles with an agency credit card, which he repaid after auditors traced the transaction.
>
> A few other hair-raising statistics; $194,000 for catered lunches, $1,000 in late fees for delinquent credit card accounts, more than $4,000 for a 1990 Christmas party and $800,000 for the opening ceremonies for the Long Beach-to-Los Angeles Blue Line.

The Los Angeles Times says:

> An independent review is in order.

Another story reported that a consulting firm, which has been paid millions of dollars thus far, charged taxpayers for expenses ranging from vacation trips to England to mortgage payments on an employee's house to $17,000 for an employee's near daily commute from Los Angeles to his home in the San Francisco area.

The Los Angeles Observer accused the commission of "wild binge spending" which it referred to as reprehensible and said its executives were "too busy vacationing, golfing, and partying" to watch the store. The Observer called for a long overdue investigation.

The Federal Government has recently provided or is obligated to provide $1.3 billion for this project so far. Much more will be requested in the future. Most of this money will have to come through the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, of which I am a member.

Based on the reports thus far, I do not believe we should provide one additional penny for this system. Like the Wall Street Journal, I believe that taxpayers all over this Nation should be concerned about this. Like the Los Angeles Times and other publications, I believe this whole mess should be thoroughly investigated.

I have requested that the General Accounting Office look into this to see if tax money is being wasted. Others believe that there may have been criminal violations.

If these investigations show outright fraud or corruption, as some have alleged, the FBI should look into this, too.

VACATING OF SPECIAL ORDER AND REINSTATEMENT OF SPECIAL ORDER

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to vacate my 60-minute special order tonight and, in lieu thereof, be permitted to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HARRIS). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

INSURING THE VIABILITY OF THE ECONOMY AND THE ENVIRONMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOAGLAND] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, as the economy becomes increasingly global and as we gain understandings of the impact of one nation's activities on another, we must make sure we have the modern-day tools to develop a healthy economy and a healthy natural resource base. The Nation's economy is dependent today in large part on the international economy, and more and more buying and selling crosses countries' traditional boundaries. Likewise, environmental degradation does not respect arbitrary borders, as, for example, air and water pollution and migratory animals, move long distances.

Many authorities have called the 1990's the critical decade for revitalizing our Nation's economy and for reversing trends of biological degradation.

Current Government policies may not be sufficient to meet this challenge. The bill I introduce today would create a national body to address that very question.

What is wrong with current policies? In the case of natural resource use and management, traditionally, many Federal programs have emphasized commodity production as the only demand on our resources. Traditional economic strategies do not recognize the value of natural resources. In the case of Federal environmental laws, we now have at least 29 Federal laws addressing conservation and resource management and those laws, generally, have three problems: First, many confine natural resource management to one specific resource, for example, migratory birds, wetlands, air, marine mammals, perhaps too narrow an approach. Second, Federal policies are too often crisis-oriented, rather than preventive, addressing the threat of extinction of a species when it is almost too late rather than developing a system to avoid threatening a species. Third, Federal management practices may overemphasize production or scenic values, at the expense of other values. Mostafa Tolba, executive director of the U.N. Environmental Program, has written:

> We have no tools because we are wedded to the economic and legal forms of the 17th and 18th centuries. Environmental protection is still reactive rather than preventive. Under the present system it takes a crisis—some event so shocking that it cannot be ignored—to stimulate a serious interest.

A HEALTHY RESOURCE BASE BREEDS A HEALTHY ECONOMY

As we attempt to reinvigorate the nation's economy and give every American who seeks it a good job at a good wage, we must also evaluate the adequacy of our current policies to provide for the sustainable use of our natural resources.

Good management of resources has economic payoffs. For example, in my home state of Nebraska, the Platte River is 30 percent its original size. Much of the $8.8 billion Nebraska agriculture industry, which no doubt spins off millions more in economic benefits, is dependent on an adequate water supply from the Platte. Local municipalities use the Platte as their water supply, as do many industries. Last year, Minnesota Corn Processors, a company with a wet corn-milling process, rejected Grand Island, NE, as a site for its $57 million plant because they said the Platte does not have enough water to dilute the plant's effluent. While fortunately this company located in Columbus, NE, Grand Island lost jobs, because of the Platte's lack of flows.

Let's look at wetlands: Less than 10 percent of Nebraska's wetlands remain, yet wetlands help purify and recharge groundwater and clean ground water is critical to productive croplands.

And there is the example of prairies. Less than 3 percent of Nebraska's tallgrass prairie remains. But prairies help maintain the fertility of soil and water quality, while preventing soil erosion, also critical to agriculture.

I am sure that a country as rich in natural and human resources as the United States has it within our means to make economic and other development sustainable, as defined by the World Commission on Environment and Development, "to ensure that it meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs." We must make sure the planet maintains the carrying capacity to support all of our people and our activities.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON THE SUSTAINABLE USE OF NATURAL RESOURCES

I am introducing a bill, H.R. 5969, to create a National Commission on the Sustainable Use of Natural Resources to develop policies to better conserve biological resources while sustaining the viability of our economy. This blue ribbon group would have a broad mission to develop policies to promote the conservation, sustainable use and resilience of the biological resources on which human life depends. It would be composed of 16 distinguished members appointed by the House of Representatives, the Senate, and the President. My intent is that a wide range of perspectives be brought to bear on the commission's deliberations and the bill requires that commissioners be chosen from among scientists, private industry experts, academics, environmental specialists, nongovernmental organizations and governmental representatives who are knowledgeable about natural resource management.

The Commission would be directed to, first, develop a plan for conducting an inventory of the biological resources of the United States; second, to develop strategies to enable all levels of government and private landowners to sustainably manage our biological resources; and third, to make recommendations for criteria that can be used for the conservation of biological resources. A summary of the bill appears at the end of my statement. The Commission would send periodic reports to Congress and the President and a final report in 3 years. Public participation is required.

I chose the approach of a national commisson because the problems are complex and the solutions are far reaching. The answers require that we bring the best and the brightest from all sectors together to work together. A prestigious national commission can help demonstrate to the public and the policymakers the seriousness of the problems and the magnitude of the solutions. We had, for example, a National Advisory Committee on Clean Air and the U.S. Bipartisan Commission on Comprehensive Health Care which led the way for major public policy discussions and problem solving. No one commission can do everything; but piecemeal approaches, including piecemeal lawmaking at multiple levels of government, are not now working.

THE 1990'S: A CRITICAL DECADE

Scientists around the globe are telling us that we are experiencing unprecedented declines in natural resources. Species are being lost at something like 1,000 times the normal rate.

Here are some examples: 80 to 290 species have become extinct in the United States in the last several hundred years. In the past decade alone, 38 species have been added to the United States threatened and endangered species list.

More than half the varieties of the world's 20 most important food crops that existed at the beginning of this century have been lost, including rice, wheat, corn, oats, barley, potatoes, beans, and peas. Three-fourths of the world's bird species are declining or threatened. In this country, ducks that breed in prairies and parkland regions dropped 18 percent between 1979 and 1986.

Less than half of our country's original wetlands acreage remains. We lose 300,000 to 500,000 acres every year.

More than 95 percent of the virgin forest in the lower 48 States has been lost. We have 13 percent of our ancient forests left. Our original forest cover has been reduced from 438 million hectares to 296 million hectares.

Scientists say that the equilibrium of the oceans is endangered by overfishing and coastal development. Seaside development and its attendant pollution despoil the bays and estuaries where fish breed. American oysters, once numerous, have declined by 99 percent since 1870, destroying numerous jobs for Chesapeake Bay families.

In 1850, the passenger pigeon was the most common vertebrate in North America, accounting for 40 percent of all birds on the continent. This bird is now extinct.

Less than 3 percent of Nebraska's original tallgrass prairie remains. The October 1991 issue of the American Horticulturalist reports:

> For thousands of years, midland America was a natural garden. Native plants and wildlife lived in biological harmony, nurtured by sunshine, rain, wind and occasional wildfires. From April until November, a changing kaleidoscope of color swept over the landscape . . . Native Americans took advantage of what were probably the richest hunting grounds in the world with a biodiversity that rivaled the tropical forests.

Only remnants of America's prairies remain today and that is usually in graveyards and along railroad lines.

The wet meadows along the Platte River are teeming with many species of plant and animal life, but along the Platte, 73 percent of native grasslands and wetland meadows are gone; the river's width has been reduced by 70 percent.

Nebraska has fens, habitats that are among the Nation's unique natural resources and which support a great variety and number of species. They were thousands of years in the making. According to Nebraskaland magazine, Nebraska's sandhill fens harbor 12 rare plant species.

Nebraska's Platte River, which some have called a "river under siege," is home to several endangered or threatened species: the least tern, the piping plover, and the prairie fringed orchid.

WHY DO WE NEED SUSTAINABLE PRACTICES?

Human survival depends on clean water and air, fertile soils and productive seas, in short, healthy biological systems. Our food, much of our clothing, and many of the things we use daily are the products of diverse and healthy ecosystems.

More than half of all our medicines can be traced to naturally occurring organic compounds, including one-quarter of all prescriptions written in the United States. Over 3,000 antibiotics, including penicillin and tetracycline, are derived from micro-organisms. The purple prairie cornflower, a native Nebraska plant, is now being researched for its anticancer potential.

Sustainable use of resources has economic payoffs. Forests that are managed sustainably provide an ongoing supply of timber for timber-dependent communities. Likewise, healthy fisheries provide continuing jobs; depleted fisheries do not. Healthy soil supports agriculture; eroded, infertile soil does not.

But we must be concerned about more than just those species that have immediate health or economic benefits. Maintaining the diversity of life provides future generations with options for new products and services. More important still, maintaining this diversity ensures the maintenance of healthy, productive, and stable ecosystems today. Clean water, productive agriculture, sustainable timber harvest, and bountiful fish harvests are all at risk if we overtax the biological systems on which these resources are based.

DEVELOPING SUSTAINABLE APPROACHES

The Commission can develop a comprehensive, integrated strategy and demonstrate to the world the United States' commitment to sustainably use and conserve our common biotic wealth. If indeed the 1990's are the crucial decade for stopping degradation, we must act now.

When Capt. John Smith sailed up the Potomac River in 1607, he observed that it was a "fruitful and delightsome land." He observed, "the soil to be lusty and very rich * * * all along the shores great plenty of pines and firs * * *." He wrote, "In summer no place affordeth more plenty of sturgeon, nor in winter more abundance of fowl * * * the river exceedeth with abundance of fish." He described it as "wilderness as God first made it." We do not see much left of the world of John Smith as we travel up the Potomac today.

It may be human nature to use up resources available to us today without regard to their availability in the future, but it does not have to be that way. As our population grows, consuming more and more resources, we continue to use them up. The pressure placed on our resources by humans, as we consume space, housing, food, and energy, will only increase. And our ingenuity in shaping the world's resources to our needs will only increase as our numbers increase. There need not be a conflict between the sustained use of the resources of the earth and the needs of humans. In most areas, these can be reconciled.

Lester Brown, in "Building a Sustainable Society" writes, "Efforts to protect the biological systems that support the economic system deserve to be high on humanity's political agenda."

As James Gustave Speth, founder and president of World Resources Institute has put it, "Next to the human mind, the Earth's biological wealth is the greatest thing about this planet." Let's save it.

SUMMARY OF H.R. 5969 THE COMMISSION ON THE CONSERVATION OF BIOLOGICAL RESOURCES ACT OF 1992

The bill's purpose is to develop Federal policies to promote the conservation, integrity, and resilience of biological resources.

The bill would establish the National Commission on the Conservation of Biological Resources to be composed of 16 members. They would be appointed as follows: two by the President; five by the President pro tempore of the Senate from recommendations by the majority leader and two from recommendations by the minority leader; five by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and two by the minority leader of the House.

Commission members would be scientists; academics; environmental specialists; persons knowledgeable about environmental sciences, conservation or land use; representatives of local, State and Federal governments, including Members of Congress; private industry representatives.

The Commission would be directed to, among other duties, plan for a systematic inventory of U.S. biological resources; identify policies and practices for improving management of public lands; identify mechanisms for coordinating government and the private sector in promoting sustainable use of biological resources; create a system for establishing priorities for Federal action needed to conserve biological resources; identify mechanisms for helping communities bear the economic costs of plans to conserve resources.

The Commission would be required to submit a report to the President and to Congress, including legislative recommendations, within three years of enactment and would terminate 60 days after submitting the report.

SERIOUS QUESTIONS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, many of us participated this afternoon in reviewing Col. Eugene Holmes' claim that Governor Clinton had lied about draft evasion. He did so point by point. The gentleman from Texas, the great SAM JOHNSON, presented a salient point. He said that the President of the United States must take an oath, and that oath goes, "I pledge to defend the Constitution against all enemies, domestic and foreign."

How can Governor Clinton do that after electing to deceive his own draft board by stating that he would go into the ROTC, and when he was not drafted, saying:

> By the way, I am not going to do that, either. I am going to become a Jane Fonda-Tom Hayden antiwar draft dodger.

Jane Fonda and Tom Hayden at least had the courage to stand up for their convictions. Governor Brown and others did the same. However, Governor Clinton has lied, has deceived the American public long enough.

I had a young Democrat who asked me after the meeting, he said:

> Mr. Cunningham, I did not serve in the military. Does that mean that I should not > be eligible to serve as President of the United States?

And our answer was:

> Absolutely not. You did not decide to deceive. You didn't use political influence. You didn't lie, and cowardly, move out of the war and let someone else take your place.

By the way, that young Democrat is voting for President Bush.

I would have a hard time, Mr. Speaker, supporting a man after being, myself, shot down over North Vietnam in May of 1972, to be head of our armed services.

I would ask all Members, and everyone associated with the armed services, to take a serious look at the lies that Governor Clinton has put out to the American people.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. I yield to my great colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I think, instead of having the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM] graciously rushing over here from another meeting and letting me finish the letter, and I repeat this, there are about 1 million people watching tonight. The letter is going in the RECORD in its entirety, both the letter from then-Clinton, aged 23, to Colonel Holmes, thanking him for saving him from the draft, and the Colonel resented that expression because he says:

> I was not saving him from serving his country, as he erroneously thanked me in his letter from England dated December 3, 1969. I was making it possible for a Rhodes Scholar to serve in the military as a United States officer.

Since both the letters will be in, anybody can now call their Congressman and he can bring it up on his screen in regular bold print, 8½ by 10 inch page, and get it from their own Congressman.

What I would like to do is just a little colloquy with the gentleman on something that we discussed out there on the lawn to the American press, and at least CNN ran it.

I believe if Colonel Holmes had written this letter on February 7, of this year, instead of September 7, and today, by the way, is the 205th anniversary date of the Constitution of the United States. It was ratified 205 years ago today. I have a granddaughter, Erin Mary Griffin. It is her birthday today. She was 5.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, the Preamble to the Constitution says, "provide for the common defense."

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, we would not be here today without this Constitution. There would not be a Presidency, there would not be a Supreme Court, there would not be a U.S. Senate.

Here we are, discussing this 10 days after the Colonel wrote the letter. If this had come out, as I believe one of the Senators over there who holds a Medal of Honor said, "He will be opened up like a soft peanut in the general election."

That has not happened yet. I think this letter would have precluded his winning any of those Democrat primaries. People were giving him the benefit of the doubt because he was the most charming and appealing of the candidates, but I believe someone else would have won that process, or there would have been a draft movement at the convention.

The sad thing is that half of our country is willing to overlook this, and at this point, according to the polls, make a draft-dodger President and Commander in Chief.

I think people owe it to themselves and the history of our country, and teaching kids to memorize Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Adams, Monroe, John Quincy Adams.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, they had a term in 1940 for this type of individual. They called them chickenhawks.

Mr. DORNAN of California. It will all be in the RECORD, Mr. Speaker.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3298, FARM CREDIT BANKS AND ASSOCIATIONS SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS ACT

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102–876) on the resolution (H. Res. 573) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3298) to enhance the financial safety and soundness of the banks and associations of the Farm Credit System, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 918, MODIFYING REQUIREMENTS APPLICABLE TO LOCATABLE MINERALS ON PUBLIC DOMAIN LANDS

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102–877) on the resolution (H. Res. 574) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 918) to modify the requirements applicable to locatable minerals on public domain lands, consistent with the principles of self-initiation of mining claims, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENTS TO H.R. 5620, SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS, TRANSFERS, AND RESCISSIONS ACT, 1992

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102–878) on the resolution (H. Res. 575) providing for the consideration of Senate amendments to the bill (H.R. 5620) making supplemental appropriations, transfers, and rescissions for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

BRAZEN INTELLECTUAL PIRACY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HARRIS). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, American newspapers recently reported a story described as a feud between the Mexican Government and an American archeologist, Dr. Jeffrey Wilkerson. It is not a feud, but is an expropriation of Dr. Wilkerson's archeological sites, which is a cultural ecology project on the Bobos/Nautla River.

This story is a tragedy for several reasons, and I might point out, Mr. Speaker, that the reason that I am particularly interested in it is that Dr. Wilkerson happened to have grown up in my district. His mother, Merlene Wilkerson, lives in my district today, as do his two sisters, Diane and Sandra. They live in the Second Congressional District in Maryland.

Mr. Speaker, there is a lot of interest in this story that should show what is happening between Mexico and the United States today.

First and most importantly, it is sad for all concerned as to how this area now will be developed. The archeological sites are potentially among the most important on the North American Continent, and the region is a treasure of information revealing a highly developed ancient civilization in Mexico. If this area is desecrated by commercialization for tourism, then its information and value to this generation, and future generations will be forever lost.

Located in Veracruz, some of the sites may be 2,000 years old and some may be substantially older. I can just see a Denny's or McDonald's perched on the perimeter of the area. Club Med and the latest fashion shops are inappropriate for such a site, and a five-star hotel is also inappropriate. Commercializing this site is sheer vandalism of history and archeology of the worst kind.

Traditionally, these sites are important to all the citizens of Mexico, but the treatment of Dr. Wilkerson, who is one of the leading Meso-American scholars in this hemisphere, baffles me. It makes no sense.

The Christian Science Monitor quoted Mexican officials in describing Dr. Wilkerson's project, that this mammoth restoration project is "the most important and ambitious * * * in recent decades." A year ago, the Government originally gave academic approval for the project, and Dr. Wilkerson and his group of scholars, mostly from Mexico, were waiting patiently for the permit to begin work when suddenly this August, Mexican Government officials reversed their position, grabbing the project from Dr. Wilkerson.

I might add—Dr. Wilkerson has been in Mexico for 29 years. He is a highly respected archeologist and ecologist who has trained many of the young people now working in the field. Dr. Wilkerson has been backed by the National Geographic Society in other projects, and is affiliated with the Smithsonian Institution. Certainly these two American institutions have a world-class standing of impeccable credentials, so it is amazing to me that the Mexican Government would suddenly find these premier institutions lacking in academic credentials.

Second, and equally important for the United States, this ripping off of confidential papers in Dr. Wilkerson's proposal is a concern for many firms because of the North American Free-Trade Agreement [NAFTA] and the need to protect intellectual property or secret trade information. If it can happen to a major scientific project, it can to any commercial endeavor.

The chronology of how this happened is interesting—and from that I will let you draw your own conclusions from the chronology—but I think you will end up agreeing that this raises a serious question on how Anmerican firms and scientists will be treated under NAFTA.

Please remember as you listen that Dr. Wilkerson tried repeatedly in June and July to get an appointment with the appropriate officials of Mexico's National Institute of Anthropology and History [INAH] when he found his life's work being taken away, but was refused an appointment.

In 1972, on a postdoctoral fellowship from Harvard, Dr. Wilkerson proposed in a paper at that time, that a cultural corridor linked great pre-Hispanic cities of the central Mexican highlands with coastal civilizations in tropical Veracruz. Actually, he first visited the area in 1963 and began work in 1968.

Dr. Wilkerson is well qualified for this work. He was born in Baltimore, MD, and received his B.A. from Franklin and Marshall College and his Ph.D. in anthropology from Tulane University. He held various scholarships from these institutions as well as national Woodrow Wilson and NDEA fellowships. In addition to working on projects in Mexico, Dr. Wilkerson also had a postdoctoral fellowship for the study of pre-Columbian art from Yale University in addition to his Harvard fellowship. He also was named a research associate by the R.S. Peabody Foundation and has been appointed a collaborator of the Smithsonian Institution.

Over many years he has worked and lectured in Mexico and presently directs a nonprofit research foundation, the Institute for Cultural Ecology of the Tropics. He has undertaken projects in various parts of Mexico, Guatemala, Belize, Puerto Rico, France, and the United States. He has over 70 publications.

This is no Johnny come lately to archeology and cultural ecology. His colleagues have credited Dr. Wilkerson for establishing an 8,000-year chronology for Mexico's gulf coast as well as being the first to ascribe major archeological significance to the site in the Bobos/Nautla River corridor.

Excited over the site, Dr. Wilkerson immediately proceeded to formulate a project and plan, and proceeded in June 1991, with the complicated application process from the National Institute of Anthropology and History [INAH], which controls all archeology projects in Mexico. He received the academic approval in September 1991, assembled a full international crew to begin work, and was waiting for the final permit to begin work. That changed abruptly last month.

As you follow this chronology, please keep in mind, that Dr. Wilkerson has had a number of projects in Mexico and has never had a problem with them. This difficulty has confounded him as well as the intellectuals in Mexico who know his work well

On July 31, 1992, Mari Carmen Serra Puche, the new president of INAH and the sister of Commerce Minister Jaime Serra Puche, the chief Mexican negotiator on NAFTA, wrote Wilkerson that "in the same area that you propose to work, there already exists a project in which the Mexican Government is participating." Therefore, she said, Wilkerson would be denied permission to carry out his proposed project.

The stated reason to deny Dr. Wilkerson was that he lacked the backing of the Smithsonian and because National Geographic wanted to publish the results of his study. Despite formal letters from these institutions to the contrary, INAH forced Dr. Wilkerson to go back for further clarification of his backing.

One of the people involved with the additional letter writing from an American institution, said in a conversation with my staff, "We fully back him, how much more can we say?" Historically, you should know that currently there are six National Geographic projects functioning in Mexico and dozens of previous ones, including some of Dr. Wilkerson's, which have never been challenged on these points.

On August 5, the North American Free-Trade Agreement was announced in Mexico and the same day, Mari Carmen Serra Puche, sister of Jamie Serra Puche, the NAFTA negotiator, announced she was taking over Dr. Wilkerson's project.

According to the New York Times, on the instructions of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, federal culture officials and the government of Veracruz announced that the most ambitious Mexican archeological restoration project in recent years would begin immediately at the sites. The only problem with this, is much of Dr. Wilkerson's documentation for his project was leaked and used by the Government and others.

When questioned, Mari Carmen Serra Puche, said such scientific work was not regarded as confidential. This infuriated scholars and intellectuals in both Mexico and the United States.

The Christian Science Monitor quoted an archeologist and researcher at the National Autonomous University of Mexico, that he—

> Was surprised to learn that project submissions to the Archaeology Council are not confidential. If they weren't confidential, nobody would present a detailed project. That's intellectual property. If it's not confidential, there would be a great quantity of projects being duplicated.

After the announcement, there was a meeting the first of September at INAH with Mari Carmen Serra Puche and her surrogates with Dr. Wilkerson, at which time, he was asked to repudiate a newspaper story about his project. But the main point of the meeting was for Dr. Wilkerson to accept a new zone that he would work.

Around this time, Dr. Wilkerson was shown letters from the Mexican Embassy to the Washington Post and individuals who had contacted the Embassy on the archaeological project issue. The letters, which were based on a document prepared by INAH, were factually inaccurate.

There was also an article in the Washington Post that the matter was settled about Dr. Wilkerson's project. Which was not so.

The latest event in this saga, was a press conference by INAH in Mexico City on September 14. The INAH Filibobos project was reannounced. Remember, the project was originally announced by August 5, and encompassed exactly the area of Dr. Wilkerson's project.

The Excelsior newspapers in Mexico City reported that Dr. Wilkerson can collaborate in their project if he presents academic institution endorsements.

It also described the press conference as polemical and that the participants were "unable to offer concrete answers about what is the importance of salvage work in this area for which they do not have a large amount of data * * * and it appears that INAH's interest was awakened by the personal project of the American researcher in the study area."

To me, that means they announced a project, but had not the foggiest notion what it was.

The newspaper account also stated:

> Not even the Director of the work, Mari Carmen Serra Puche could clarify what is the interest of INAH in salvaging this zone in which they do not know exactly what their aims are, nor why they are calling it the most ambitious project in the last decade.

The newspaper quotes it as saying that INAH will open the sites to the public and then only afterward discuss the academic value.

A curious part of the story was the statement about Filibobos being a valuable opportunity to create an infrastructure of services and ecological reserve. My understanding is this is entirely outside the normal authority of INAH—that it has no legal basis for participation in commericial infrastructure. According to announcements from various sources, there are plans for building roads and bridges through this study area which is an important ecological region.

Remember that Mari Carmen Serra Puche is simultaneous director of the National Museum of Anthropology, president of the Council of Archaeology, and director of the Filibobos project.

You should also know that this may be the first time that someone has been appointed from outside INAH as the director of the museum, and no one else has three titles of position within INAH. She is also the sister of the Secretary of Commerce, Jaime Serra Puche, who negotiated NAFTA in which they supposedly are guaranteeing intellectual property rights and trade secrets.

To me, this whole affair casts some very serious doubts on the intentions of Mexico to follow through on its guarantees, especially on intellectual property, which is so important to American business and our academics.

Also at question is how a Mexican Government institution can and will arbitrarily change the rules on a scientific endeavor so important not only to Mexico, but to the whole continent. In additon the question remains how they can commercialize such a site and ignore or relegate its academic importance to a secondary position?

To me this site is important, and it is an absolute wonder because of its age and cultural significance. Most of us have wondered as children, how a civilization can disappear, or how cities and buildings can be covered over or lost. We tend to think our time is the most important time, but it is always a surprise to find that other ages existed where people carried on extensive business and religious activities in an area that is partially wilderness. We need to know about this.

Instead of commercializing our wonders, why not look at them as Dr. Wilkerson does, as man's relation with his environment. I believe he says it best for all of us in one of his letters to his family.

> Perhaps the present is not as sophisticated as we would like to think. Unless we learn the value of preserving the past in its own setting we too will inevitably follow the same cycle. Those plants, animals, buildings, artifacts, and the unique valley which shelters them, are a part of the heritage of all men—if we choose to recognize them. For the moment, but probably not for many more moments, this splendid valley and its extraordinary testimonies to ancient grandeur are still hidden in the wilderness of time.

If INAH has its way and commercializes the project, it certainly will not be hidden in time—it will be forever lost—and we will all be the losers.

Once again, I want to salute Dr. Jeffery Wilkerson, who grew up in the second District of Maryland, and express my appreciation to his mother Merlene Wilkerson, my constituent who wrote me about this tragedy. I am certain many of my colleagues will want to join me in pressuring the Mexican Government on this matter.

INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTION REQUESTING IMMEDIATE INVESTIGATION BY HOUSE ETHICS COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, there has been a considerable amount of time spent by the gentleman from Texas, the chairman of the House Banking Committee, in the investigation of United States/Iraq relations prior to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. During this process, he has intentionally and systematically made unauthorized disclosures of classified and top secret State Department and CIA documents into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. This clear violation of House rules and possibly Federal law has been ignored by the Speaker, leaving no other option but to file this resolution asking for an immediate investigation by the House Ethics Committee.

Although Chairman GONZALEZ has denied the disclosure of any classified material, some of the documents that he has inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD in their entirety, still bear the classifications of "secret" or "confidential" on their faces. Furthermore, the chairman has stated on the floor "the American people have a right to know them [the facts], and piddling, phony charges about national security won't stop me."

Mr. Speaker, I want to set the record straight and provide letters for the RECORD that establish a chronology of events that will provide the complete story that Mr. GONZALEZ has not told. I want to make it very clear that I do not question the authority of the gentleman from Texas in his role as chairman of the Banking Committee to investigate to the full extent concerns he may have that come under the prerogative of his committee. I support the ability of investigators to receive the necessary information from the administration to complete full investigation. I am not questioning his investigation; I am questioning the intentional and unauthorized release of classified and top secret material. Clause 7 of House rule 48 prohibits the disclosure of such information in the Intelligence Committee's possession without a vote of the committee. This provision mandates an investigation by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct and a report of its finding and recommendations. Under rule 48, those recommendations specifically may include censure, removal from committee membership, or expulsion from the House.

Like Chairman GONZALEZ, I do not always agree with the classification of material we on the Intelligence Committee review and from time to time I feel we have too much material classified. But the decision to ignore that classification is not up to me or any other Member. There is a clear process that members must go through in an attempt to declassify material.

If a Member truly believes an issue is important enough that the House should debate it, and some of the information he deems necessary for debate remains classified, the Member can invoke rule 29. The House can then consider the matter, and the classified information involved, freely in an executive session. Pursuant to this rule, the House may vote to make all or part of the transcript of those secret proceedings public. I believe that any leaks of classified information should be strongly dealt with. Furthermore, in these instances more harm is done than is often apparent on the surface.

Mr. GONZALEZ cavalierly dismisses concerns that the documents he placed in the RECORD "in no way harmed the national security." Of course, it is practically impossible for laymen to grasp all of the possible ramifications which may result from the disclosure of classified information just from looking at its face, let alone the impact of releasing numbers of sensitive documents.

After classified information had been made public by the gentleman from Texas, the minority leader, Mr. MICHEL, expressed his concerns in a letter to the Speaker on May 15, 1992. I quote from that letter.

> Chairman Gonzalez is publicly disclosing classified information in the Congressional Record during the course of delivering those orders. This information was made available by executive branch agencies to the Banking Committee in cooperation with a committee investigation. In some cases, he has inserted in the Record documents which clearly state that they are classified "secret" or "confidential."
>
> In a letter to our colleague, Congressman Shuster, the State Department indicated that as of April 24, Chairman Gonzalez had "inserted in the Congressional Record the full texts of at least fourteen classified documents generated by the Department of State."
>
> The documents have not been declassified. Moreover, when the State Department gave the committee access to these documents, it was the Department's understanding that access would be restricted to persons with appropriate security clearances, that they would not be duplicated and that the documents would be returned when the committee completed its relevant legislative activities.

To date, that letter has not been answered or acknowledged. The Republican leader wrote to the Speaker again on July 24, 1992 and has yet to receive a response. In a letter to Chairman GONZALEZ on July 24, 1992 the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Robert Gates said:

> We also have determined that your statement in the Congressional Record on 7 July 1992 included information from a top secret compartmented and particularly sensitive document dated 4 September 1989 to which we gave your staff access. Because of the sources and methods underlying that information, I will ask for a damage assessment to determine the impact of the disclosure.
>
> I regret that you chose to discuss information from classified documents without attempting to determine if we could work out a way to satisfy both our need to protect intelligence sources and methods, as well as your need to make public information concerning the development of U.S. policy toward Iraq.
>
> I must also take strong exception to your statement in the Record that, "the lack of CIA cooperation with the prosecutors in Atlanta was a calculated administration effort to conceal the true nature of the BNL scandal and to hide the level of Iraqi government complicity in the scandal. In fact, the CIA has cooperated completely with the prosecutors in Atlanta. We received and responded to several Department of Justice requests for information beginning in late summer 1990 providing, among other things, directorate of intelligence finished intelligence reports; raw intelligence reports; copies of articles from the foreign press; and foreign broadcast information service reports. We also provided special briefings for senior Department of Justice attorneys and have provided additional responsive information as it has become available. Although we are unable to determine the value of CIA information to the prosecutor, the facts will show that we have been completely responsive to all requests we have received.
>
> This agency's consistent policy has been to cooperate when requested to do so, with all Department of Justice prosecutions. If evidence to the contrary has come to light during the course of your investigation, I ask that you provide me with facts sufficient to permit inquiry into whether a violation of agency policy has occurred. If no such evidence exists, I urge that the Record be promptly corrected.

In a July 28, letter to Mr. GONZALEZ from Acting Director of Central Intelligence, Admiral Studeman, he wrote:

> As director Gates' response to your letter of 7 July indicates, we have been making every effort to cooperate with your requests for access to intelligence reports available for you to use in public statements. We are prepared to work with you to continue reviewing our reports to determine what may be made available to the public.
> We have reviewed your statements published in the Congressional Records of 21 and 27 July. We have determined that portions of your statements were drawn from classified intelligence documents, some of which are top secret, compartmented, and particularly sensitive. I have asked the Office of Security of the Central Intelligence Agency to undertake a review of your statements in order to determine the impact of the disclosures of intelligence information on intelligence sources and methods.

The lack of a response and further disclosures of classified information led Mr. MICHEL to introduce House Resolution 539 on August 4, 1992, and in addition to that resolution, I also include his statement at this time which reads: in part:

> Mr. Speaker, I introduce this resolution with great reluctance. But quite frankly I don't know what else to do. Over two and a half months ago, in an effort to keep this above politics, I quietly wrote the speaker about my concerns over the unauthorized disclosures by chairman Gonzalez, urging quick and decisive action. I got no response * * *.

Today I am introducing House Resolution 572 directing the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to conduct an investigation regarding the possible unauthorized disclosure of classified information.

As had been referenced in Director Gates' letter, Chairman GONZALEZ indicated there was an effort to hide behind classifications and not produce the documents. I want to read portions of an August 28, letter to Intelligence Committee Chairman DAVE MCCURDY in which Assistant Attorney General W. Lee Rawls outlines a proposal to submit all of the requested information to the House Intelligence Committee.

> I am writing on behalf of the administration to advise you that the administration will be delivering or, consistent with established security procedures, making available to the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence copies of classified documents that are responsive to the requests for information set forth in the subpoenas that were recently served on a number of departments and agencies by the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.
>
> The administration is compelled to respond in this manner because of Chairman Gonzalez's disclosures of classified information on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the Congressional Record.
>
> On May 15, 1992, the attorney general wrote to Chairman Gonzalez to advise him that the administration would not provide him or the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs with any more classified information until specific assurances are received from the chairman that classified information provided to him and the committee will receive such security protection. Because we have not received such assurances from Chairman Gonzalez, the administration is following the procedure set forth in the attorney general's May 15, 1992 letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The Speaker declined that offer. [letter submitted] Following that decline, Assistant Attorney General Rawls wrote this September 4, letter to members of the Banking Committee.

> This letter concerns the requests for information set forth in the subpoenas that the committee recently served on a number of departments and agencies and, specifically, the protection of classified documents responsive to those requests.
>
> The administration is compelled to address this issue because of Chairman Gonzalez's disclosure of classified information on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the Congressional Record.
>
> On May 15, 1992, the attorney general wrote to Chairman Gonzalez to advise him that the administration would not provide him with any more classified information until specific assurances were received from the chairman that classified information provided to him and the committee would receive such security protection. To date, we have not received such assurances.
>
> Therefore, in a further effort to meet the legitimate needs of the committee, consistent with the administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities, the administration intends to comply with the requests by permitting individual members of the committee, other than the chairman, and their appropriate staff with requisite security clearances to view responsive, classified documents in their offices or at the offices of the appropriate department or agency.
>
> The administration remains committed to providing the committee with the information it needs to perform its legislative responsibilities. We can only do so, however, if the provision of that information does not undermine the administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities to protect classified information from unauthorized disclosure.

Mr. Speaker, I think the record is clear. There is every indication that the administration is making every effort to comply with Chairman GONZALEZ' investigation, and if not, let us see the list of things that have been requested that have been flatly denied. Let the investigation continue but, Mr. Speaker, the intentional leaks must stop.

OFFICE OF THE REPUBLICAN LEADER,
U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, May 15, 1992.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As you may know, our colleague Henry Gonzalez, Chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, has taken a series of special orders regarding U.S. policy toward Iraq and the role of the Banco Nazionale de Lavoro.

Record during the course of delivering those orders. This information was made available by Executive Branch agencies to the Banking Committee in cooperation with a committee investigation. In some cases, he has inserted in the Record documents which clearly state that they are classified "Secret" or "Confidential."

In a letter (see attached) to our colleague Congressman Shuster, the State Department indicated that (as of April 24), Chairman Gonzalez had "inserted in the Congressional Record the full texts of at least fourteen classified documents generated by the Department of State." According to that letter, those documents "contain classified information involving sensitive diplomatic discussions and * * * disclose sensitive high-level internal deliberations." The Treasury Department has also expressed concern about publication of classified documents it provided to the Banking Committee.

The documents have not been declassified. Moreover, when the State Department gave the Committee access to these documents, it was the Department's understanding that access would be restricted to persons with appropriate security clearances, that they would not be duplicated and that the documents would be returned when the Committee completed its relevant legislative activities.

It is my understanding that the Banking Committee has never voted to disclose publicly any of these sensitive classified documents. These repeated, unilateral disclosures of classified information raise serious questions of possible violations of House Rules, at least Clauses 1 and 2 and Rule XLIII (Code of Official Conduct). Also, these actions appear to violate the spirit and the letter of Clause 2(k)(7) of Rule XI. I do not know whether the Committee voted to subpoena these documents in executive session. However, the information in these classified documents is required by Executive Order to be protected from disclosure to unauthorized persons, which would certainly seem to include the public. When a Member or committee wishes to bring classified Executive Branch information before the House, Rule XXIX provides the vehicle of a secret session to do so. The information so imparted must continue to be protected unless the House votes to disclose it. Similarly, classified information sent by a committee to the Archives is protected from public disclosure by Clause 5(a) of Rule XXXVI.

Even if the classified documents at issue here were not technically requested in executive session, they should be considered to be de facto executive session information requiring, at a minimum, that the committee authorize their public disclosure. To take the contrary view and accept the implication that any member may unilaterally disclose classified information received by a committee outside of executive session would be blatantly inconsistent with the protective treatment of classified information under Rules XXIX and XXXVI. Clearly, no Rule of the House authorizes such unilateral disclosures.

Two of the Executive Branch departments involved, State and Treasury, have indicated in writing that these unauthorized disclosures have significantly damaged the spirit of close cooperation between the Executive and Legislative Branches. The State Department has expressed its concern about the adverse effects such disclosures have on our ability to conduct our foreign relations. They also noted the grave concerns expressed by our Ambassador to Italy as to the chilling effects these disclosures may have on our relations with that close ally.

My level of concern is further heightened by my understanding that the Banking Committee has also been given access to some sensitive intelligence information. If this trend of disclosing classified information continues, it may be only a matter of time until that information is published in the Record, potentially compromising sensitive intelligence sources and methods. To condone such a pattern of conduct could readily lead to widespread resistance by the Executive Branch to House requests for classified information and to disruptive confrontations in the courts.

Finally, I sincerely believe that the reputation of the House is being seriously damaged by this highly questionable practice. Therefore, in this connection and mindful of Rule XLVIII, I earnestly request and urge you, Mr. Speaker, to look into this serious situation immediately and take whatever corrective actions are necessary to resolve this troublesome matter.

Sincerely,

ROBERT H. MICHEL,
Republican Leader.

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY,
Washington, DC, July 24, 1992.

Hon. HENRY GONZALEZ,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In response to your letter of 7 July, we have reviewed the memorandum entitled "Iraq-Italy: Repercussions of the BNL-Atlanta Scandal" to determine whether it can be declassified. We have determined that nearly all of the document can be declassified, although we have had to make some very limited exclusions to protect sensitive intelligence sources and methods. The sanitized document is enclosed. We have done this as part of a continuing effort to cooperate with your committee.

We also have determined that your statement in the Congressional Record on 7 July 1992 included information from a TOP SECRET compartmented and particularly sensitive document dated 4 September 1989 to which we gave your staff access. Because of the sources and methods underlying that information, I will ask for a damage assessment to determine the impact of the disclosure.

I regret that you chose to discuss information from classified documents without attempting to determine if we could work out a way to satisfy both our need to protect intelligence sources and methods, as well as your need to make public information concerning the development of US policy toward Iraq.

I must also take strong exception to your statement in the Record that, "The lack of CIA cooperation with the prosecutors in Atlanta was a calculated administration effort to conceal the true nature of the BNL scandal and to hide the level of Iraqi Government complicity in the scandal." In fact, the CIA has cooperated completely with the prosecutors in Atlanta. We received and responded to several Department of Justice requests for information beginning in late summer 1990 providing, among other things, Directorate of Intelligence finished intelligence reports; raw intelligence reports; copies of articles from the foreign press; and Foreign Broadcast Information Service reports. We also provided special briefings for senior Department of Justice attorneys and have provided additional, responsive information as it has become available. Although we are unable to determine the value of CIA information to the prosecutor, the facts will show that we have been completely responsive to all requests we have received.

This Agency's consistent policy has been to cooperate, when requested to do so, with all Department of Justice prosecutions. If evidence to the contrary has come to light during the course of your investigation. I ask that you provide me with facts sufficient to permit inquiry into whether a violation of Agency policy has occurred. If no such evidence exists, I urge that the record be promptly corrected.

Sincerely,

ROBERT M. GATES,
Director.

OFFICE OF THE REPUBLICAN LEADER,
U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, July 24, 1992.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I regret that I have to write you again relative to our colleague Henry Gonzalez, Chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs, who on July 7th and July 21st, disclosed during special orders classified information provided to the Banking Committee by the Executive Branch. Previously, as you may recall, he disclosed classified documents of the State Department and Treasury. On July 7th, he disclosed information purportedly from a classified Central Intelligence Agency document which he indicated is entitled "Iraq-Italy, Repercussions of the BNL-Atlanta Scandal." On July 21st, he disclosed information from two top secret, compartmented CIA intelligence documents.

These unilateral disclosures are improper and neither authorized by, nor consistent with, the Rules of the House, as I pointed out in my letter of May 15, 1992. [See Attachment] It is not up to the capricious inclinations of one Member whether to disclose classified information made available by the Executive Branch to a House committee. Such conduct serves no legitimate legislative oversight needs. Instead, it strikes at the very heart of the mutual trust between branches which is crucial to effective oversight. This information was furnished to the Banking Committee in support of its oversight responsibilities and with the expectation that it would be properly protected from unauthorized disclosure.

This steady stream of leaks by a senior Member of this body reflects very badly on the public reputation and dignity of the House as an institution, quite apart from any consideration of the merits of Chairman Gonzalez's speculations on the meaning and significance of the information he has been disclosing. Moreover, for the leadership of the House to continue to countenance this highly questionable behavior has other far-reaching and disturbing ramifications. It feeds what I fear is a growing and very troubling perception of the relative ease with which any Member may disclose with impunity classified information in virtually any committee's files. Equally seriously, continued inaction on these habitual disclosures will have injurious effects on intelligence assets. Repeated disclosures of classified information are bound to make them more and more hesitant to risk their lives and safety by cooperating with U.S. intelligence agencies. I believe the July 7th incident is the first instance in which Chairman Gonzalez disclosed information from a CIA document he openly acknowledged to be classified. This disclosure, coupled with his leaks of July 21st, suggest an ominous trend. I say that because I understand that for nearly a year now the CIA has been giving Banking Committee staff access to many classified intelligence documents in cooperation with that committee's oversight inquiries.

Frankly, I am puzzled and disappointed that you have not yet responded to or acknowledged my original letter of May 15th on this egregious matter. It is time for action. Every day of inaction risks further disclosures and further damage to national security interests and to the vitality and effectiveness of the legislative oversight process. Mr. Speaker, I therefore urge you again to take whatever steps are required to put an end to these continuing, unauthorized, unilateral disclosures.

Sincerely,

ROBERT H. MICHEL,
Republican Leader.

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY,
Washington, DC, July 28, 1992.

Hon. HENRY GONZALEZ,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As Director Gates' response to your letter of 7 July indicates, we have been making every effort to cooperate with your requests for access to intelligence information. We have appropriately declassified intelligence reports available for you to use in public statements. We are prepared to work with you to continue reviewing our reports to determine what may be made available to the public.

We fully respect your obligation to discharge the oversight responsibilities assigned to your Committee. I hope that you understand our obligation to protect intelligence sources and methods through careful review of information before it is released to the public.

We have reviewed your statements published in the Congressional Records of 21 and 27 July. We have determined that portions of your statements were drawn from classified intelligence documents, some of which are Top Secret, compartmented, and particularly sensitive. I have asked the Office of Security of the Central Intelligence Agency to undertake a review of your statements in order to determine the impact of the disclosures of intelligence information on intelligence sources and methods.

Very respectfully,

W.O. STUDEMAN,
Admiral, U.S. Navy, Acting Director of Central Intelligence.

STATEMENT BY ROBERT H. MICHEL, INTRODUCING A RESOLUTION CALLING FOR AN ETHICS PROBE OF CHAIRMAN GONZALEZ, AUGUST 4, 1992

Mr. Speaker, I introduce this resolution with great reluctance. But quite frankly I don't know what else to do. Over two and a half months ago, in an effort to keep this above politics, I quietly wrote the Speaker about my concerns over the unauthorized disclosures by Chairman Gonzalez, urging quick and decisive action. I got no response, even through Attorney General Barr indicated in a letter to the Speaker that because of Mr. Gonzalez' unauthorized disclosures, the administration must cease furnishing him classified information

Eleven days ago in another letter to the Speaker, I reiterated my concerns, and noted that since my original letter, there had been more unauthorized disclosures by Mr. Gonzalez that were drawn from very sensitive and highly classified CIA documents. These latest disclosures prompted letters to House Leaders from the Director of Central Intelligence, Robert Gates, and Admiral William Studeman, who is temporarily serving as the acting Director of Central Intelligence.

Both Gates and Studeman have indicated that Mr. Gonzalez has unilaterally disclosed classified Intelligence information. So have representatives of the State Department and Treasury Department with respect to classified information emanating from their agencies which they gave Chairman Gonzalez in a good faith effort to comply with this requests.

Mr. Speaker, the information that Mr. Gonzalez has been disclosing was furnished to him with the understanding that it be properly protected. The key to successful oversight of intelligence matters is trust. Without it, the whole process breaks down. Failure to act on this matter provides the Executive Branch with a legitimate reason to withhold information—information that is crucial to meaningful oversight.

Failure to address this problem immediately will also cause serious damage to our Intelligence activities overseas. Put yourself in the shoes of a friendly country or third parties who have been helping our Intelligence Officers carry out their mission. Letting this go on unaddressed creates the perception that Congress is a sieve and we are unconcerned about the security interests of our allies and the lives of our Intelligence Officers and their agents.

We must remember that in this highly interdependent world we can't go it alone. Terrorism is a case in point. Most terrorism against U.S. Citizens occurs overseas. To combat it, we need the cooperation of our allies. That kind of cooperation is going to dry up—if we continue to let leaks like this go unpunished.

Failure of the House to hold Mr. Gonzalez accountable places him above the law. Moreover, this steady stream of leaks by a senior member of this body reflects very badly on the public reputation and dignity of the House as an institution, quite apart from any consideration of the merits of Chairman Gonzalez' speculations on the meaning and significance of the information he has been disclosing. For the Leadership of the House to continue to tolerate this highly questionable behavior has other far-reaching and disturbing ramifications. It feeds what I fear is a growing and very troubling perception of the relative ease with which any Member can disclose classified information with impunity.

Mr. Speaker, every member of this institution must abide by our rules and procedures. When a member of a committee wishes to bring classified Executive Branch information before the House, Rule 29 provides the vehicle of a secret session to do so. That information must remain protected unless the House votes to disclose it. In short, I believe that Mr. Gonzalez' conduct does not reflect creditably on the House and violates Clause 1 of House Rule 43, which deals with Members' code of conduct. It also violates Clause 2 of House Rule 43, which enjoins all members to adhere to the spirit and the letter of the rules of this body.

It is against this backdrop, Mr. Speaker, that I introduce this Resolution today. Enough is enough. It is time for action. Every day of inaction risks further disclosures and further damage to national security interests and to the vitality and effectiveness of the legislative oversight process.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, August 28, 1992.

Hon. DAVE MCCURDY,
Chairman, Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing on behalf of the Administration to advise you that the Administration will be delivering or, consistent with established security procedures, making available to the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence copies of classified documents that are responsive to the requests for information set forth in the subpoenas that were recently served on a number of departments and agencies by the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

The Administration is compelled to respond in this manner because of Chairman Gonzalez's disclosures of classified information on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the Congressional Record. The executive order on national security information precludes us from disseminating classified information "outside the executive branch except under conditions that ensure that the information will be given protection equivalent to that afforded within the executive branch." E.O. 12356, Section 4.1(c), 47 Fed. Reg. 14874, 14881 (1982). On May 15, 1992, the Attorney General wrote to Chairman Gonzalez to advise him that the Administration would not provide him or the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs with any more classified information until specific assurances are received from the Chairman that classified information provided to him and the Committee will receive such security protection. Because we have not received such assurances from Chairman Gonzalez, the Administration is following the procedure set forth in the Attorney General's May 15, 1992 letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Consistent with the Administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities, until such time as Chairman Gonzalez provides the executive branch with specific assurances that classified information will remain protected, the Administration intends to respond to subpoenas and other requests for information from Chairman Gonzalez or the Committee that call for the production of classified documents by delivering or, in appropriate circumstances, making such documents available to the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. We are following this procedure on the understanding that the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence will act as the custodian of the classified documents in question, and that the Speaker will control access to the documents to ensure that they are disclosed only to persons who provide specific assurances that they will accord the documents security protection consistent with that afforded such documents within the executive branch, that is, protection from unauthorized disclosure, with access provided only to persons with appropriate security clearances and a need to know the classified information contained therein.

Enclosed are copies of the Attorney General's letters of May 15, 1992 and my letters to today's date to Chairman Gonzalez and the Speaker.

Sincerely,

W. LEE RAWLS,
Assistant Attorney General.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, September 2, 1992.

DEAR MR. ATTORNEY GENERAL: In an August 28 letter, Mr. Lee Rawls, the Assistant

Attorney General for Legislative Affairs, has written to inform me that copies of certain classified documents responsive to supoenas issued by the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs are to be delivered or made available to the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He further indicates that the Administration intends to continue to provide classified documents requested by the Banking Committee to the Intelligence Committee and ask that I, as Speaker, act to control access to such documents subject to security criteria set forth in his letter.

The Parliamentarian informs me that he knows of no precedent for the issuance of such a directive by the Speaker. Neither committee has requested this arrangement, nor was it the subject of any agreement between the Administration and me.

After careful consideration of Mr. Rawl's letter, and further consultation with the Parliamentarian, I have determined that I have no authority to impose the conditions the Administration seeks. I therefore suggest that the Administration discuss with the Banking Committee the manner in which it will comply with these subpoenas. It is my view that it is not appropriate for either the Intelligence Committee or me as Speaker to unilaterally interpose ourselves between the Banking Committee and the Administration with respect to what constitutes effective compliance with the Committee's subpoenas.

With high personal regard, I am

Sincerely,

THOMAS S. FOLEY,
The Speaker.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, September 4, 1992.

Hon. HENRY B. GONZELEZ,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This letter concerns the requests for information set forth in the subpoenas that the Committee recently served on a number of departments and agencies and, specifically, the protection of classified documents responsive to those requests. In a letter dated September 2, 1992, the Speaker of the House of Representatives has advised the Administration that, under the circumstances, he has no authority to control access to classified documents placed in the custody of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence in response to requests for information issued by the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs.

As the Administration has previously advised you, classified documents are subject to the binding restrictions set forth in the executive order on national security information, which precludes departments and agencies from disseminating classified information "outside the executive branch except under conditions that ensure that the information will be given protection equivalent to that afforded within the executive branch." E.O. 12356, Section 4.1(c), 47 Fed. Reg. 14874, 14831 (1992). By letter dated May 15, 1992, the Attorney General informed you on behalf of the Administration that "in light of your recent disclosures [of classified information], the executive branch will not provide any more classified information to you until specific assurances are received from you that classified information provided to you and the Committee will receive the same security protection provided by the executive branch, that is, protection from unauthorized disclosure, with access provided only to persons with appropriate security clearances." To date, we have not received such assurances.

Accordingly, the Administration will deliver or, in appropriate circumstances, make available to you responsive, classified documents only on the condition that you provide the Administration with specific assurances that classified information provided to you will receive the same security protection provided by the executive branch, that is, protection from unauthorized disclosure, with access provided only to persons with appropriate security clearances. If you provide the Administration with such assurance, the Administration will, consistent with its constitutional and statutory responsibilities, deliver or make available to you responsive, classified documents forthwith.

Until you provide such assurances, and consistent with the Administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities, the Administration intends to comply with the requests for information set forth in the subpoenas by permitting individual members of the Committee and their appropriate staff with requisite security clearances to view responsive, classified documents in their offices or at the offices of the appropriate department or agency. Requests to view classified documents should be directed to departments and agencies that indicate that they have custody or control of classified documents responsive to the Committee's requests. Viewing arrangements will be made promptly, and will be carried out in accordance with established security procedures.

The Administration remains committed to providing the Committee with the information it needs to perform its legislative responsibilities. We can only do so, however, if the provision of that information does not undermine the Administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities to protect classified information from unauthorized disclosure. We look forward to working with you to resolve this matter in a mutually satisfactory and responsible manner.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at 514-2141 or Faith Burton, Acting Deputy Assistant Attorney General, at 514-1653.

Sincerely,

W. LEE RAWLS,
Assistant Attorney General.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, September 4, 1992.

Members of the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR COMMITTEE MEMBER: This letter concerns the requests for information set forth in the subpoenas that the Committee recently served on a number of departments and agencies and, specifically, the protection of classified documents responsive to those requests.

The Administration is compelled to address this issue because of Chairman Gonzalez's disclosures of classified information on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the Congressional Record. The executive order on national security information precludes us from disseminating classified information "outside the executive branch except under conditions that ensure that the information will be given protection equivalent to that afforded within the executive branch." E.O. 12356, Section 4.1(c), 47 Fed. Reg. 14874, 14881 (1982). On May 15, 1992, the Attorney General wrote to Chairman Gonzalez to advise him that the Administration would not provide him with any more classified information until specific assurances were received from the Chairman that classified information provided to him and the Committee would receive such security protection. To date, we have not received such assurances.

Accordingly, on August 28, 1992, I wrote to Chairman Gonzalez to advise him that the Administration would deliver or, in appropriate circumstances, make available responsive classified documents to the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. The Administration elected to follow this procedure on the understanding that the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence would act as the custodian of the classified documents, and that the Speaker of the House of Representatives would control access to the documents to ensure that the documents would be disclosed only to persons who would accord the documents security protection consistent with that afforded such documents within the executive branch, that is, protection from disclosure, with access provided only to persons with appropriate security clearances. On September 2, 1992, the Speaker of the House of Representatives wrote the Attorney General to advise him that, under the circumstances, he has no authority to control access to classified documents placed in the custody of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence in response to requests for information issued by the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs.

Therefore, in a further effort to meet the legitimate needs of the Committee, consistent with the Administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities, the Administration intends to comply with the requests by permitting individual members of the Committee, other than the Chairman, and their appropriate staff with requisite security clearances to view responsive, classified documents in their offices or at the offices of the appropriate department or agency. Requests to view classified documents should be directed to departments and agencies that indicate that they have custody or control of classified documents responsive to the Committee's requests. Viewing arrangements will be made promptly, and will be carried out in accordance with established security procedures.

The Administration remains committed to providing the Committee with the information it needs to perform its legislative responsibilities. We can only do so, however, if the provision of that information does not undermine the Administration's constitutional and statutory responsibilities to protect classified information from unauthorized disclosure.

Enclosed are copies of the Attorney General's letters to Chairman Gonzalez and the Speaker dated May 15, 1992, my letters to Chairman Gonzalez and the Speaker dated August 28, 1992, and the Speaker's letter to the Attorney General dated September 2, 1992. If you have any questions about this matter, please do not hesitate to contact me at 514-2141 or Faith Burton, Acting Deputy Assistant Attorney General, at 514-1653.

Sincerely,

W. LEE RAWLS,
Assistant Attorney General.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COMBEST. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

I just wanted to say that I was in my office and listened to the gentleman's words and came over to the floor because I thought that what he was saying is extremely important.

I think too many of us begin to develop an idea about the people who are impacted and affected by the leaking or the displaying of classified documents that evidence the fact that we do not understand how absolutely critical it is that we maintain confidentiality and that the lives of people who work for the United States are affected and at times endangered because of the actions of Members of Congress who take it into their own hands to decide what will be classified and what will not be classified.

I just wanted to say to the gentleman that the men and women of the nonuniformed services who work in our intelligence operations around the world, who risk their lives on a daily basis, who do not get praise when they come home, like our Desert Storm troopers, and who sometimes die in small and quiet places, have a real interest in what the gentleman is saying, and in this body adopting, and that includes all the Members, some of whom have betrayed that confidentiality and that trust, adopting a discipline, because if we do not adopt a new discipline, we are going to see lives lost.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for taking time from his busy schedule to come down and say the words he has given us today.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the gentleman.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COMBEST. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

My remarks will be very circumspect, because I sit on the Ethics Committee, and the gentleman from Texas has called for action by that committee, so in order not to prejudge anything and be entirely fair, I will be very cautious in what I say; however, I could not let this opportunity pass without saying that I think it is necessary that some action come forward, because I think some critically essential principles are at stake in front of us.

I happen to come from the Sunshine State, the State of Florida, where we have government in the sunshine, we cherish the public's right to know and the public's access to information; but we also know that some matters are withheld from the public for security reasons, whether it is national security or other bonafide purposes, and they are out there.

Matters are classified according to degrees of sensitivity, subject to special procedures, rules of handling, we know that. We know these things. It is part of being a Congressperson.

Some quarrel with classifications, and I would agree there are times they should be challenged, whether a report or a document has got the right classification or is classified for the right reasons is debatable; but that is not the issue here in any way. There are procedures to deal with that.

I would say that in some very special circumstances, there are ways to get special access to classified material or waivers of classified material. Again, those are not the issues here.

I do not know of a single event, not any event, and certainly there should be no event where there is any latitude for an individual Member of Congress to unilaterally and deliberately expose classified material. I do not see how any Member of Congress has the experience to make that judgment and substitute his or her preference over the judgment of professionals who have made the classification.

Now, on its face, based on what I have heard this evening, it appears that one Member of this body has willfully, repeatedly and significantly, released clearly classified information on several occasions, despite warnings to desist, if I have understood it properly.

I think it is alleged that damage has been done or may have been done to our national interests, to this institution and to the ability of this institution to work in a cooperative and friendly spirit with the executive branch, an efficient spirit; but for me tonight, and the reason I am speaking is not about this individual, it is about the principle involved, because it is a professional principle, and let me try this for a thought.

Were I a doctor or a lawyer, I believe that anybody would understand the client privilege between an attorney and his client. I think anybody would understand the special relationship between the doctor and his patient and the right to privacy. I think those are clear things.

Well, I happen to be a former intelligence officer. I will tell you that that profession depends on respect and privacy of sensitive matters, and they cannot be breached without serious effect.

It is a matter of professionalism. I would suggest that our professional intelligence efforts, on which we spend many hours, would be reduced to chaos and rubble if we tolerate unauthorized disclosure of privileged information by a Member of Congress because it is some kind of a right or privilege we afford to a Member of Congress.

Besides, we all know it is against the rules.

In fact, it turns out that matters are not quite finished in Iraq. We have got some very difficult decisions ahead in that country. We have got some very difficult decisions ahead with our partners to get compliance with the U.N. resolution. Leaks, willful or otherwise about Iraq, will affect our Intelligence gathering capability negatively. It is not in our Nation's best interests, certainly not now, and certainly not about Iraq. This is serious business.

If all the things that I have heard are true, I would suggest that it would be prosecutable and where it is not, perhaps there is a debate going on about whether a Member might be able to hide behind the speech and debate clause. I gather that is not resolved yet, anyway. There is some case law on it.

Some I know will say that this is all partisan politics. It is not so; anyway, not for me, it is not so. I have spoken from the well twice before on this issue. I have written an op-ed piece about it. I believe I have experience that is somewhat unique in this body as a former intelligence officer in the clandestine services; so I feel very strongly about it and this goes beyond partisan politics.

Unauthorized disclosure of classified information is wrong. It is harmful to our Nation's best interests, and I believe the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST] said it well when he said our first order of business is this must be stopped. Then perhaps we can get to the question of whether rules were broken, whether or not some punitive efforts are necessary; but meanwhile, I plead, Mr. Speaker, please stop the leaks now.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the gentleman, and again emphasize that they come from the experience of the years that he spent as an intelligence officer and understands the pressure those people are under in a very sensitive and certainly very dangerous position.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further request for time or any further statement.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on the subject of my special order tonight.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HARRIS). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 28 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, September 18, 1992, at 10 a.m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

4267. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting an amendment to the fiscal year 1993 request for appropriations for the Department of Defense, the Asian Development Bank, and the Asian Development Fund, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1107 (H. Doc. No. 102–391); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4268. A letter from the General Counsel, Department of the Treasury, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to relieve the regulatory burden on depository institutions and credit unions that are doing business or that seek to do business in an emergency or major disaster area, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

4269. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting a copy of the 1991 edition of "Health, United States," which presents data in four areas: Costs and financing of health care, distribution of health care resources, and the health of the Nation's people; in addition it contains the fifth triennial "Prevention Profile," pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 242m(a)(2)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

4270. A letter from the Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, transmitting notification of the Department of the Air Force's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance [LOA] to Korea for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 92–39), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

4271. A letter from the Deputy Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, transmitting the Department of the Navy's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance [LOA] to Turkey for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 92–43), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

4272. A letter from the Deputy Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, transmitting notification of the Department of the Air Force's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance [LOA] to Greece for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 92–41), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

4273. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a report on the status of efforts to obtain compliance by Iraq with the resolutions adopted by the U.N. Security Council, pursuant to Public Law 102–1, section 3 (105 Stat. 4) (H. Doc. No. 102–390); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed.

4274. A letter from the Deputy Associate Director for Collection and Disbursement, Department of the Interior, transmitting notice of proposed refund of excess royalty payments in OCS areas, pursuant to 43 U.S.C. 1339(b); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

4275. A letter from the Deputy Associate Director for Collection and Disbursement, Department of the Interior, transmitting notice of proposed refunds of excess royalty payments in OCS areas, pursuant to 43 U.S.C. 1339(b); to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

4276. A letter from the Attorney General of the United States, transmitting the annual report for fiscal year 1991 on the private counsel debt collection pilot project, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 3718(c); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

4277. A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, Secretary of Commerce, transmitting the 11th report on activities of the Department of Interior and the Department of Commerce with respect to the emergency stripped bass research study, pursuant to 16 U.S.C. 757g(b); to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

4278. A letter from the Administrator, General Services Administration, transmitting an informational copy of a lease prospectus, pursuant to 40 U.S.C. 606(a); to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

4279. A letter from the Secretary, Department of Defense, transmitting the 1992 report on allied contributions to the common defense, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 1928 note; jointly, to the Committees on Armed Services and Foreign Affairs.

4280. A letter from the Deputy Secretary of Energy, transmitting a copy of a report entitled, "Transporting U.S. Oil Imports: The Impact of Oil Spill Legislation on the Tanker Market"; jointly, to the Committees on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and Public Works and Transportation.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Committee of Conference. Conference report on S. 2344 (Rept. 102–871). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. CONYERS: Committee on Government Operations. H.R. 5798. A bill to authorize payments to units of general local government for fiscal years 1992 and 1993; with an amendment (Rept. 102–872). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. BROOKS: Committee on the Judiciary. H.R. 3204. A bill to amend title 17, United States Code, to implement a royalty payment system and a serial copy management system for digital audio recording, to prohibit certain copyright infringement actions, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. 102–873, Pt. 1). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. BROOKS: Committee on the Judiciary. H.R. 4841. A bill granting the consent of the Congress to the New Hampshire-Maine Interstate School Compact (Rept. 102–874). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BROOKS: Committee on the Judiciary. H.R. 5452. A bill granting the consent of the Congress to a supplemental compact or agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey concerning the Delaware River Port Authority (Rept. 102–875). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. FROST: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 573. Resolution providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3298) to enhance the financial safety and soundness of the banks and associations of the Farm Credit System (Rept. No. 102–876).

Ms. SLAUGHTER: Referred to the House Calendar. Committee on Rules. House Resolution 574. Resolution providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 918) to modify the requirements applicable to locatable minerals on public domain lands, consistent with the principles of self-initiation of mining claims, and for other purposes (Rept. 102–877). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BONIOR: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 575. Resolution providing for the consideration of Senate amendments to the bill (H.R. 5620) making supplemental appropriations, transfers, and rescissions for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992, and for other purposes (Rept. 102–878). Referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 5 of rule X and clause 4 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. RAHALL (for himself, Mr. Miller of California, and Mr. Studds):

H.R. 5962. A bill to modify the requirements applicable to locatable minerals on public domain lands, consistent with the principles of self-initiation of mining claims, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. BEREUTER:

H.R. 5963. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow individuals to designate all or any portion of their income tax refund to reduce the public debt: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ERDREICH:

H.R. 5964. A bill to direct the Secretary of Education to make a grant to Jefferson State Community College in Birmingham, AL, for construction of a business and technology center; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Ms. KAPTUR (for himself and Mr. Guarini):

H.R. 5965. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Professional Trade Service Corps, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Ways and Means, Post Office and Civil Service, and the Judiciary.

By Mr. LaFALCE:

H.R. 5966. A bill to amend the Bankruptcy Act to make small business investment companies and specialized small business investment companies ineligible to file bankruptcy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SMITH of Oregon:

H.R. 5967. A bill to extend the deadline under the Federal Power Act applicable to the construction of a hydroelectric project in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. STARK:

H.R. 5968. A bill to transfer the functions of the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency to the Secretary of Defense; jointly, in the Committees on Armed Services and Public Works and Transportation.

By Mr. HOAGLAND:

H.R. 5969. A bill to establish a National Commission on the Conservation of Biological Resources; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas (for himself, Mr. Kyl, Mr. Riggs, Mr. Thomas of Wyoming, Mr. Doolittle, and Mr. Nichols):

H.R. 5970. A bill to improve the access of all Americans to health care; jointly, to the Committees on Ways and Means, Energy and Commerce, and the Judiciary.

By Mr. KOSTMAYER:

H.R. 5971. A bill to authorize the Administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to make grants for the purpose of promoting the use of bicycle helmets by children under the age of 16; to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

By Mr. RAMSTAD:

H.R. 5972. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, to strengthen the Federal prohibitions against assaulting children; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mrs. SCHROEDER (for herself, Mr. Wheat, Mr. Gilman, Mr. Green of New York, Mr. Lehman of Florida, Mr. Martinez, Mrs. Collins of Michigan, and Mr. Downey):

H.R. 5973. A bill to grant employees family and temporary medical leave, to treat the costs of the Head Start Program and other programs for children as emergency funding requirements, to provide aid to parents in providing the best possible learning environment for children, to promote investments in child welfare and family preservation, to reduce violence and improve the safety of children and their families, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Education and Labor, House Administration, Post Office and Civil Service, and Ways and Means.

By Mr. COMBEST:

H. Res. 572. Resolution directing the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to conduct an investigation regarding possible unauthorized disclosures of classified information in violation of the Rules of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Rules.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 4542: Mr. SUNDQUIST.

SENATE—Thursday, September 17, 1992

(Legislative day of Tuesday, September 8, 1992)

The Senate met at 9 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Honorable HERB KOHL, a Senator from the State of Wisconsin.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee * * *.—Psalm 55:22.

Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass.—Psalm 37:5.

Gracious God of love and patience, one exasperation leadership must endure is to have to listen to solutions invented by those who don't have to solve the problems. It is so easy to know what to do when one does not have to do it. Washington seems crowded with those who have no responsibility for the issues with which the Senate struggles, yet who have all the answers. Give Your servants grace and patience as they must tolerate these Monday morning quarterbacks who are always offering their remedies for others' problems.

We pray especially for our leadership as the pressure increases exponentially these closing days of the 102d Congress. And we remember our families who often pay a terrible price during times of pressure in the Senate. Bind them together in patience, understanding, and forgiveness. Let there be daily healing as tension in relationships causes rupture, and fill their hearts with love for each other.

We pray in the name of Him who is Love incarnate. Amen.

RESERVATION OF LEADERSHIP TIME

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1993

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 5677, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5677) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Pending:

Helms amendment No. 3002 (to committee amendment on page 23, line 12), to prevent the use of tax dollars to support efforts by charitable organizations to compel the Boy Scouts of America to accept, as members or leaders, homosexuals, or other individuals who reject the Boy Scout's oath of allegiance to God and country.

Domenici amendment No. 3004, to provide additional funding for the National Institutes of Mental Health for the Health Care for the Homeless Program.

AMENDMENT NO. 3004

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is on the Domenici amendment No. 3004, on which there shall be 20 minutes of debate equally divided in the usual form.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who yields time?

On the pending amendment, the remaining time is controlled by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Iowa if he might yield me 2 minutes.

Mr. HARKIN. Yes, I will be happy to yield.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, before you proceed, might I ask Senator HARKIN—I do not have any objection, either—but that time that was running under the quorum call would all come off my side.

I wonder if the Senator would object to a unanimous-consent request that the time used in that quorum call not be charged to either side.

Mr. HARKIN. I have no objection, Mr. President.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Minnesota.

OPPOSITION TO BREAKING THE FIREWALLS

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I thank the Chair very much, and I thank the managers of the bill. I appreciate the difficulty they are presented with here this morning.

I particularly appreciate the opportunity to rise and make a brief comment about several votes that I took yesterday, along with the rest of the Members, in breaking down the so-called firewall; in effect, votes that I took in opposition to—and a majority of Members took in opposition to—the motion to waive the Budget Act.

In addition to the arguments that have been made on this floor relative to the difficulty of doing business within the parameters of budget deals made in previous years, when the politics were different and the policy pressures were different, I wanted to make a comment on the relativity between spending money and accomplishing needed purposes.

A lot of the things that this particular appropriations subcommittee has to deal with are critical issues. The way in which we on the authorizing committees ask them to deal with them are not always appropriate, nor are they applicable to a particular time. I think the subcommittees on both sides of the aisle are to be complimented for doing an incredibly good job in a very difficult situation.

And I must rise, therefore, to say that just spending more money in one area or the other does not necessarily equate with doing more good.

A good example of this is the area of breast cancer. I have literally thousands of constituents, primarily women, who are desperate to spend more money to find a cure for breast cancer.

My own response to them is that my own wife died of breast cancer. I wish we had been able to do in 1967 what we are able to do today.

But I also know, from spending 14 years in this position, that money alone does not solve the problem. And if you expand the amount you are going to spend exponentially, you do not quicken the pace of knowledge, and certainly it is not appropriate wisdom to do that.

I think that this subcommittee has done a great job on breast cancer. The authorizing committee has done a terrific job. Senator HARKIN and I both serve on that committee.

The National Cancer Institute agrees that this is an appropriate amount of increase. And as much as we would like to spend more, and we would like to hasten the pace of this, I believe that what we are doing in the authorizing committee, what this body has decided to do in conjunction with the House, and what this particular appropriations bill does is going to move us substantially forward in finding a cure, and cures based both on the diagnostic side and the prevention side, and on the remedy side, for a real killer of so many American women. I ask unanimous consent that a relevant portion of the fiscal year 1993 budget estimate for the National Cancer Institute be printed in the RECORD. This bypass budget is prepared and submitted directly to the President of the United States in accordance with legislation contained within the National Cancer Act. It reflects the best professional judgment of the Institute, and represents a realistic appraisal of the scientific opportunities currently available for cancer research.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PREFACE

The By-Pass Budget is prepared and submitted directly to the President of the United States in accordance with legislation contained within the National Cancer Act. The purpose of this document is two-fold. It conveys the accomplishments that have been achieved by the National Cancer Program to date, and also presents the challenges that remain and the resources necessary to take full advantage of today's exceptional opportunities in order to successfully attain these goals.

The By-Pass Budget reflects the professional judgment of the Institute, and represents a realistic appraisal of the scientific opportunities currently available. Given the achievements to date and the challenges ahead, it represents a unique opportunity for continued progress in the prevention and treatment of cancer.

This budget document has been organized by the 10 major Research Programs of the Institute, distinguished by the Progress and the Plans for 1993. The Resource Development areas of Cancer Centers Support, Research Manpower Development and Construction as well as Cancer Prevention and Control are similarly described.

In addition, narratives on special areas of scientific opportunity and achievement have been included. Topics include Women's Health Issues, Cancer and Poverty, Cancer and the Population Age 65 and Over, Information Dissemination, Cancer Vaccines and Novel Approaches to Cancer Therapy.

WOMEN'S HEALTH ISSUES—EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The National Cancer Institute (NCI) pursues a multi-faceted and coordinated plan of research and applications for health issues of women. The intersection of many public health concepts, for example the impact of physiologic hormonal changes and exogenous hormones (such as estrogen) on cancer, heart disease and osteoporosis, requires an integrated, multidisciplinary approach.

To this end, NCI supports the concept of a large-scale effort that embraces the expertise of essentially every categorical Institute within the National Institutes of Health, in order to meet the challenge of providing and maintaining health for women of all ages. The Director of the National Institutes of Health (NIH) has developed a major women's health initiative. This will involve longitudinal studies, community-based research and specific clinical trials to develop new strategies for preventing and treating cancer (particularly cancer of the breast but also cancers of the reproductive tract, lung and colon), heart disease, stroke and osteoporosis.

The By-Pass Budget reflects the commitment of the National Cancer Program to women's health and specifically to the eradication of death and suffering from cancers that affect the length and quality of survival of women. NCI faces this challenge from malignancies of the breast and female reproductive organs (cervix, uterus, ovary) and from other diseases such as lung and colon cancers and AIDS which, while not uniquely women's health issues, have a significant impact on women's survival.

CHANGE IN CANCER MORTALITY 1973–88

[Percent change]

Cancer	Age group
	All ages	<50	50+
Breast	1.8	−10.5	4.8
Cervix	−41.5	−34.8	−44.2
Uterus	−22.2	−47.7	−20.1
Ovary	−8.1	−41.6	−1.3

Among the many diverse areas of high priority for NCI in cancers in women, those of surpassing importance are:

The development and implementation of prevention clinical trials for breast cancer, examining the role for tamoxifen chemosuppression in certain postmenopausal and high-risk women. The NCI will also examine the efficacy of prevention strategies with dietary reductions of daily fat intake and/or supplementation of micronutrients such as calcium and vitamin A derivatives;

The accessibility and delivery of health care to women who, for reasons of age, race, education, or most importantly poverty and lack of resources, are medically underserved;

The clinical development, procurement and availability of promising new therapies, for example taxol, a chemically complex natural product with a unique mechanism of action and important activity in refractory or relapsing ovarian and breast cancers.

Breast cancer epitomizes the challenge of NCI's mission in women's health. It is widely prevalent and takes a tragically large toll on women's lives. It is responsible for 32 percent of all cancers in women with an estimated 175,000 new diagnoses (for a lifetime risk of occurrence of one in every nine women) and 44,500 deaths per year. Yet breast cancer is increasingly curable, steadily yielding to the insights gained through basic and clinical investigation. There are realistic prospects for its ultimate prevention and eradication. The strategies that NCI has designed to foster translation of basic biologic discovery into targeted clinical innovations in the arenas of treatment and prevention will serve as a template for the laboratory and clinical response to other malignancies.

Within the scope of the By-Pass Budget, NCI proposes a multidisciplinary approach to breast cancer that integrates all facets of intramural and extramural resource. In particular, a new type of cancer center grant (P50) within the framework of the Cancer Centers Program, the Specialized Programs Of Research Excellence for breast cancer, will support investigator-initiated research in all disciplines of breast cancer investigation—tumor etiology, biology, diagnosis, therapy, quality of life, cancer education, community outreach, and cancer prevention including vaccine development. This funding instrument will also support career development and innovative cutting-edge clinical research. This Specialized Programs Of Research Excellence for breast cancer represents a unified effort to bring the advances in basic scientific knowledge from the laboratory to the bedside to change the outlook for this cancer.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the transfer amendment holds out the promise of additional Federal funds for cancer research, breast cancer screening, AIDS care, and a host of other social ills. Sponsors of this amendment have drummed up support from a number of grassroots organizations deeply committed to these causes.

The implication that has been raised is that opposition to this transfer amendment is tantamount to opposition to these worthy causes. A further implication is that this money is simply lying dormant unobligated and that it is simple matter to put it to good use.

As a Senator committed to a healthy America, and fully committed to medical research and treatment, I am distressed by those assumptions. Mr. President, I believe that this approach is playing politics with the hopes and fears of the American people. This is nothing more than a budgetary sleight of hand.

Supporters of this amendment may not be aware of the serious consequences of this proposal. Most people probably do not know that this so-called transfer requires us to violate the budget agreement—an agreement that took the Congress months to hammer out. The agreement, while not perfect, is fiscally responsible.

I would like to address, specifically, the transfer to support breast cancer research. In fiscal year 1992, the National Cancer Institute will spend approximately $133 million on research targeted toward breast cancer. This is in addition to funds for basic, untargeted research that may well advance our knowledge of breast cancer or other cancers. Basic research accounts for approximately 50 percent of the budget of the National Cancer Institute and provides our best hope for new breakthroughs against breast cancer.

For fiscal year 1993, the House has provided an increase of one-third over the fiscal year 1992 level, for a total of approximately $177 million. The Senate bill would further increase funding for breast cancer to $220 million. The Senate level represents the best professional judgment of the National Cancer Institute about what good science should be funded. We should not second guess these experts who are working so strenuously to solve the problem of breast cancer, which has touched all of our lives.

Clearly, Mr. President, every worthy project could use greater funding. But, the ends of this amendment simply do not justify the means. This is fiscal politics not fiscal responsibility.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Who yields time?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, is the situation that there is now 20 minutes of debate equally divided on the Domenici amendment?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time used by the Senator from Minnesota was charged against that 20 minutes.

Mr. HARKIN. How much time do we have remaining?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. HARKIN. Seven minutes.

How much time does the Senator from New Mexico have remaining?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Ten minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Iowa agrees with this statement.

Since Senators are wondering about whether we are going to have to have a rollcall vote, it seems to me we most probably will be able to work this amendment out; is that right?

Mr. HARKIN. I am not certain if we can work this out, Mr. President. We have been discussing this.

I want to accommodate the Senator from New Mexico, but we are in a very tight budget situation. I am not certain how we are going to work this out. Obviously, I have to consult with my ranking member, and if he agrees, then I think we can work something out.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator from New Mexico.

AMENDMENT NO. 3004

Mr. DOMENICI. The amendment which I sent to the desk last night is not the appropriate amendment. It is in error. We are now drafting the appropriate amendment.

Nonetheless, I will take about 5 minutes to explain the thrust of the amendment, because essentially we all, here on the floor, those involved in this, understand what the Senator from New Mexico is going to do when he offers the appropriate amendment.

I will withdraw the other and substitute the appropriate one after I show the amendment to the manager and to the ranking Republican member.

It will have a different set of offsets than I contemplated yesterday, and for that reason it is not ready.

Having said that, Mr. President, just last week a rather extraordinary event occurred in Washington. About 2,000 Americans from all over the country came here for a national convention. They belonged to an organization called the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

The Senate has already heard the Senator from New Mexico describe that marvelous group of Americans. They are tied together. Their link together is that they either have family members or close friends who have one of the severe mental illnesses; that is schizophrenia, manic depression, bipolar disease, or one of those very, very serious, significant mental illnesses. They are part of a group representing people with severe mental illness.

Mr. President, as they met here—they are concerned about many things, but two things bothered them the most. They came and spoke to Senators. And we had a very, very interesting response from Senators about the problems they represent in Main Street America and in the homes of our people.

First, they wanted to make sure that when we reform health care we do not deal them out by having some inordinate cap on what you can spend for schizophrenia or manic depression, but do not have the same cap for cancer or heart disease or kidney disease. We have reached a point where schizophrenia is a severe mental illness or disease.

So the point is, do not tell parents of these kinds of people, or spouses, you can only have $50,000 worth of health coverage and let the other one have health coverage that is substantially different. It is time for equity and nondiscrimination.

The other point was they came to thank Congress for dramatically increasing the funding for the National Institutes of Mental Health, the premier organization that is directing research dollars into the hands of the best scientists in the country who are now joining this cause, because they, for once, see some continuity of funding, because over the last 5 years the National Institutes of Mental Health have had dramatic increases, thanks to a number of people in this Senate—thanks to this chairman and this ranking member who are here on the floor, because they have helped with it. Thanks to Senator RUDMAN who helped this Senator. That fund has been going up.

Now this year the President asked for a specific amount, not extraordinary, and we have underfunded that in the bill before us by $21 million in budget authority, something like $10 million in outlays. So we are under the President in funding for the National Institutes of Mental Health. This fund is what is used principally for the universities and other research activities and in-house research activities that, as part of the Decade of the Brain, are making giant strides in diagnosis and cure and medication and ways of caring for those people with severe mental illnesses.

I could talk on indefinitely about the strides that are being made and how bad things were when we had all of these people in mental institutions called asylums. But let me suggest that until we get on with sustained research we are never going to get the mentally ill off the streets and they will be 40 percent of the homeless.

There is a time when we would wish that would no longer be, so today we do not want to let that funding and that institute fall back. It is on an increasing spiral which puts it in an appropriate position, alongside of other great National Institutes of Health activities. We have just created the National Institutes of Mental Health as a freestanding institute now.

I want to close these opening remarks by telling the Senate that we now have pretty good documentary evidence that we are not funding, even with the last 5 or 6 years of accelerated expenditures and grants—we are not funding the research for people with severe mental illness adequately. Let me just read what the Office of Technology Assessment has said. If you use $100 a year as the costs of mental illness disorders, we are spending about 30 cents on research.

In comparison, use the same $100 basis, we are spending 73 cents, twice as much, on heart research; and for every $100 cost in cancer, we are spending five times, almost six times as much, $1.63 versus 30 cents.

That is because there was always a stigma about this illness and we were not quite sure that it was a real illness. So now we are getting it built up. This amendment essentially asks to bring it to the President's number by adding $23 million in budget authority and about $9.5 million in outlays. That is the essence of it. I yield the floor at this point.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, if the Senator will yield me 1 minute?

Mr. SPECTER. OK.

Mr. HARKIN. How much time do we have remaining, Mr. President?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa has 7 minutes.

Mr. HARKIN. How much time does the Senator from New Mexico have?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico has 2½ minutes.

Mr. HARKIN. I yield 1 minute to the Senator.

Mr. DECONCINI. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. DECONCINI pertaining to the introduction of S. 3239 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, this is an interesting debate. I have been trying to follow it on the road driving in. I think I support the amendment of the Senator but I missed what the offset is. Is someone going to explain it? Is the Senator from Iowa going to do that?

I am going to sit and see what the offset is and see if the managers can agree to the amendment because I think the Senator from New Mexico has a very important subject matter here that needs addressing.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I yield myself a couple of minutes—2 minutes.

We tried in our subcommittee to meet all the requests of Senators. We tried our best to have a balanced bill. I would support wholeheartedly what the Senator from New Mexico is trying to do in any other circumstance. We have provided strong support for NIMH; a 28-percent increase in the last 3 years. And we are proud of that. Senator SPECTER and I worked very hard to do that. In terms of percentages that is, perhaps, the largest increase of any institute in our bill.

This bill provides a $13.5 million increase over last year for NIMH. Is that the highest of NIMH? No. I figured out there are about eight higher and eight lower. So it is right in the middle of the increases we gave for all the institutes in our bill.

I would love to give more money to NIMH. This is the Decade of the Brain. We are making progress. But the offset, as I understand it, is going to come from the Health Resources and Services Administration.

So where will the cuts come from? Homeless health care? Maternal and child health care block grants? Family planning? Nursing education? Ryan White AIDS? I can go down the list.

I have mixed feelings about this amendment, I will tell you the truth, Mr. President. I want to support the Senator. We ought to have more money in NIMH. But I do not know that I can support taking it out of these other programs, and that is the dilemma we find ourselves in.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has 4 minutes.

Who yields time?

Mr. DOMENICI. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania. How much time do I have?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has 2 minutes and 30 seconds.

Mr. DOMENICI. I yield 2 minutes to Senator SPECTER.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I support the amendment by the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, with some reluctance, because of the reasons articulated by the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN]. I do not like to see money come out of the Health Resources and Services Administration account because none of those items, really can stand the cut. But in establishing priorities, I think Senator DOMENICI has made a valid point, when you compare 30 cents in research for $100 expended for mental illness compared with 73 cents for heart and $1.63 for cancer.

In supporting Senator DOMENICI's amendment, what I seek to do in conference is to find a way to accommodate the other interests who will be taking $21 million out of the pool of almost $2.6 billion, which is a relatively small amount. Having said that, I again acknowledge, I do not want to see any of those other accounts cut, but as I listen to the discussion today and know the problems of mental illness, my evaluation is that it is appropriate on the setting of priorities at this point to reallocate $21 million and then in conference to work through to see to it that the minimal amount of hurt is done to these other very important projects.

I thank the Chair and I thank my colleague from New Mexico for the time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, if I could have the attention of Senator HARKIN, I have had Senator WELLSTONE ask if he could speak for a couple of minutes. I think I only have 30 seconds. I wonder if he would have any objection to my asking that each side get an additional 5 minutes before we resolve this issue?

Mr. HARKIN. How much time do I have left, Mr. President?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Four minutes.

Mr. HARKIN. I will be glad to yield some of my time to Senator WELLSTONE. I yield 3 minutes of my time to Senator WELLSTONE.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New Mexico. I just came in and did not know the amendment was coming up right away, so as I speak on the floor, these are definitely extemporaneous remarks.

I just want to say that I support the amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico. I support it I think for good reasons.

Yesterday, I spoke for the transfer amendment and I spoke for the transfer amendment because I think we are faced with this outrageous situation of still close to $290 billion for the Pentagon unwilling to transfer 1.5 percent of those resources to domestic programs and therefore we get into these tradeoffs, whether you are going to have money for homeless people, Head Start, mental health and all the rest.

This amendment is about equity and about fairness. I think that if there is a group of citizens that you can point to in our country that have really had to carry too much stigma, a group of citizens that have almost been without a voice and without a presence in the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives, it is really those who suffer from mental illness.

What the Senator from New Mexico is trying to say in this amendment is that there has to be some equity, there has to be some fairness. We have to follow through with a commitment, and he is trying to restore some funding in this area. I believe the amendment is a very important amendment and is the right thing for us to do.

I have to tell you that some of the reports that have come out most recently about the number of people suffering from mental illness who are incarcerated, who should not be in jail, the number of people suffering from mental illness that I personally have met in visiting homeless shelters who should not be in those shelters, the number of people suffering from mental illness who are not receiving the support and not receiving the care they should receive has led me to the conclusion that this amendment is a very, very important amendment. I really think and I hope that my colleagues will support it. I thank the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I understand the Senator is prepared to send his amendment to the desk. In consultation with him, as I understand the amendment, it will now read that the offset will come from the Health Resources Services Administration, but that no account could be cut below its 1992 level unless the committee itself has already cut below that level. I ask the Senator if that is correct?

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is correct.

AMENDMENT NO. 3005

Purpose: To provide additional funding for the National Institute of Mental Health

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I send the amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senators RUDMAN, MCCAIN and WELLSTONE, and I ask unanimous consent that the previous one, which is in error, be withdrawn.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The previous amendment is withdrawn.

The amendment (No. 3004) was withdrawn.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the new amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], for himself, Mr. RUDMAN, Mr. MCCAIN, and Mr. WELLSTONE, proposes an amendment numbered 3005.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 25, line 8, strike "$574,803,000" and insert in lieu thereof "596,098,000: Provided, That the level of funding for the Health Resources and Services Administration shall not exceed $2,564,466,000.".

AMENDMENT NO. 3005, AS MODIFIED

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment at the desk that is pending be modified to include language that I will send to the desk which is, as indicated by Senator HARKIN, that none of the programs within this would be reduced below last year's level unless the bill itself has already done that. I send that to the desk and ask that it be added to the amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

On page 25, line 8, strike "$574,803,000" and insert in lieu thereof "596,098,000: Provided, That the level of funding for the Health Resources and Services Administration shall not exceed $2,564,466,000: Provided further, That no program, project, or activity be reduced below the fiscal year 1992 level unless it is already reduced in the bill.".

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have only 30 seconds. I want to thank the Senators who support this. This will now add $21 million to the research at the National Institutes of Mental Health, bringing it to the President's requested level, and this money will come out of a series of programs that amounts to $2.68 billion, so it will be a very small fraction. Some of those programs have been increased substantially more than we are increasing the NIMH. In any event, it appears to this Senator that this is fair.

I thank the manager and the ranking member for their support. I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, on this side we are willing to accept the amendment as has been redrafted and so modified.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, my colleague and friend, Senator DOMENICI, is a champion for people with mental illness. He understands the difficulties they face, and he does everything he can to improve their lives.

People with mental illness suffer not only from the illness but also from the stigma that needlessly comes with it. That stigma, that lack of empathy for what another human is going through, reflects ignorance about what mental illness is and where it comes from.

Mr. President, on Tuesday I heard testimony before the Labor and Human Resources Committee that was among the most moving and the most compelling that I have heard in my years in the Senate. Brave, selfless people told the committee their personal stories about suffering from mental illness over periods of decades.

But their real pain was not what made the impression on me. What made the impression on me was that in each case these people went misdiagnosed for years—years in which they were told it was all in their heads, in which if they received treatment it was the wrong treatment, in which symptons that could have been relieved were not relieved.

In the last 30 years researchers have made great strides in understanding the biological foundations of major mental illnesses and in developing drugs to treat them. With this increased knowledge among researchers has come increased understanding and compassion among everyday people about what life is like when you have a mental illness.

But there is so much more to do, as was emphasized to me by what I heard at Tuesday's hearing and at a hearing on rural mental health problems that I attended last year in Marshall, MN. Until we know more about what causes mental illness and what are the most effective ways to treat it, far too many people with mental illness will continue to suffer from inappropriate care.

Senator DOMENICI has proposed an increase in funding for research on mental illness, to bring the appropriation back up to the level the President proposed. Had I been on the Appropriations Committee I would have done my best to make sure the appropriation level was never reduced below the President's request. It is a minimum. We should support this amendment.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3005), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DECONCINI addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, What is the parliamentary procedure?

Mr. HARKIN. I think the bill is now open for amendments.

Mr. DECONCINI. I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside so I may speak for a few minutes and offer an amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3006

(Purpose: To increase appropriations for the National Youth Sports Program)

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator GORTON from Washington, Mr. REID, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. SEYMOUR, Mr. SASSER, Mr. WARNER, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. KASTEN, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. SANFORD, Mr. KOHL, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. BINGAMAN, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], for himself, Mr. GORTON, Mr. REID, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. SEYMOUR, Mr. SASSER, Mr. WARNER, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. KASTEN, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. SANFORD, Mr. KOHL, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. BINGAMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 3006.

On page 40, line 4 strike "$450,642,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$457,642,000".

On page 40, line 5, strike out "$35,115,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$42,115,000".

On page 40, line 6, insert after the comma the following: "including $12,000,000 shall be for carrying out the National Youth Sports Program,".

On page 40, line 10, insert before the period the following: "Provided, That notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government receiving appropriated funds under this Act for fiscal year 1993 shall, during fiscal year 1993, obligate and expend funds for consulting services in excess of an amount equal to 95.9 percent of the amount estimated to be obligated and expended by such department, agency, or instrumentality for such services during fiscal year 1993: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the aggregate amount of funds appropriated by this Act to any such department, agency, or instrumentality for fiscal year 1993 is reduced by an amount equal to 4.1 percent of the amount expected to be expended by such department, agency or instrumentality during fiscal year 1993 for consulting services. As used in the preceding two provisos, the term 'consulting services' includes any services with the definition of 'Advisory and Assistance Services' in the Office of Management and Budget Circular A—120, dated January 4, 1988.".

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I rise together with Senator GORTON and others to offer an amendment to restore full funding to the National Youth Sports Program. This program gives hope to at-risk boys and girls, many of whom have no hope. It gives opportunity to high-risk youth, many of whom face dead-end lives.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is recommending cutting the National Youth Sports Program by almost 60 percent, from its current level of funding of $12 to $5 million in fiscal year 1993. I want to emphasize to all my colleagues that the National Youth Sports Program was created in 1968 as a response to the riots in Los Angeles in an effort to assist at-risk youth. Now, 27 years after Watts, this country has once again experienced bloody riots in the streets of Los Angeles. Mr. President, this is no time to cut support for poor children in the urban ghettos of this Nation—or anywhere else in this country for that matter.

The National Youth Sports Program is much more than a sports enrichment program. Participating boys and girls receive job and education counseling. They receive intense instruction in alcohol and drug abuse prevention. They get free meals and free medical exams. It is not unusual for these exams to turn up undiscovered medical conditions, because many of these kids just do not have the money to see a doctor.

The NYSP educates youngsters on important issues like AIDS, teen pregnancy, gangs, and suicide prevention. The program gives many of these boys and girls an opportunity—perhaps their only opportunity—to see a college campus for the first time in their lives. It may very well offer the motivation they need to stay in school. This past summer the program served over 70,000 high-risk youth in 173 colleges and universities across the country.

To repeat: The committee wants to cut the program by $7 million. It says we should fund the NYSP with private dollars. The fact is, private sources already pay two-thirds of the costs of the NYSP. Many of these dollars come from businesses in the community. But the lion's share comes from the National Collegiate Athletic Association through its participating colleges and universities. The NCAA donates staff, buildings, and equipment and operates the program free of charge. This year the NCAA increased its contribution by 15 percent. I understand the NCAA will further increase its contribution in fiscal year 1993.

I ask my colleagues to consider what a $7 million cut would do:

A cut this big would slash the number of participating colleges and universities by half, from 173 to 86. All remaining program budgets would shrink.

A cut this size would close the door on 35,000 at-risk youth. This is half the number of kids who participated in the NYSP this past summer.

A cut this big would wipe out the extended NYSP, which now operates from October through May in 45 colleges and universities. The program is a safety net for youngsters throughout the entire school year.

In order to pay for our amendment we would cut funding for consulting services by 4.1 percent in the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and related agencies. According to the Office of Management and Budget, these agencies have estimated they will spend in excess of $151 million on consulting contracts in fiscal year 1993. Let me emphasize that agencies frequently deflate what they actually spend on hiring consultants, and this $151 million figure may actually prove to be much higher. The DeConcini-Gorton amendment would take a very small amount out of this considerable pot—less than $5 million in outlays—to help at-risk kids improve their future.

I would like to take the opportunity here to acknowledge the yeoman's work done by Senator PRYOR over the years in trying to control the astronomical amount of money the Government spends on consultants. To give you an idea of how big a pot this is, one source estimates we now spend between $4 and $20 billion every year contracting out work the Government has traditionally done itself.

Mr. President, the National Youth Sports Program has worked successfully for 24 years. Many of the youngsters it helps live in public housing projects or on Indian reservations. All of them must meet the poverty income guidelines established by the Department of Health and Human Services. We all know how successful Head Start is. Many of the youngsters who participate in Head Start go on to participate in the NYSP.

In closing, let me remind my colleagues that we have a children's crisis in America. In city after city, babies are going to bed hungry at night, youth are replacing families with gangs, children are dropping out of school and dropping out of sight. The latest FBI figures are in, and juvenile crime jumped an incredible 27 percent over the last decade.

Mr. President, it is ridiculous at a time when juvenile crime is escalating in America to think of eliminating one of the solutions. For some youngsters, the National Youth Sports Program may be the only alternative they know to drugs and crime during the summer months—the time when crime rates are highest. For many, it may be the only way they know to a better life.

It is my great hope that we do not slash this program at the 11th hour, when the school year has already begun. It is my hope we do not go to a vote on this. This is a program that gives at-risk youngsters across this Nation hope for a better future.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of this amendment to increase funding for the National Youth Sports Program. This amendment restores the 50-percent cut proposed by the administration. In its starkest terms, this cut means that 35,000 children won't be involved in this antidrug and anticrime program and they will be on the streets—in everyday danger of falling prey to drugs and crime.

Children in my home State of Delaware are helped by this partnership program—both Delaware State College and the University of Delaware have committed their staff, facilities, and energy to helping children through the Youth Sports Program.

In Delaware, as across the country, these programs have brought the children most at-risk of turning to drugs and crime out of the neighborhoods hardest hit by drugs and crime. The Youth Sports Program in Delaware works with these children throughout the summer—involving them in sports and recreation activities, drug prevention programs, as well as educational activities.

Mr. President, Delaware State College and the University of Delaware—along with 170 colleges and universities across the Nation—have made a significant commitment to this program. Through their efforts, the program is a vital, working part of the Nation's continuing fight against drugs and crime among our youth.

This amendment simply keeps our end of the bargain by maintaining Federal support at its current level. I urge its immediate adoption.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge Senator DECONCINI's longstanding commitment to this program. It is through his efforts and those of many others literally thousands of children have been given the chance they desperately need in their fight to stay away from drugs and crime.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the committee print includes $5 million, the same as the President's request for the National Youth Sports Program. The House provided $5.94 million, and last year's level is $12 million. For the past 5 years Federal funding for this program has doubled, from $6.3 million in fiscal year 1988. The money goes by sole source contract to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, otherwise known as the NCAA, primarily for sports instruction for disadvantaged youth, using otherwise idle college facilities during the summer months.

The administration has stated it intends to find private sponsors to replace Federal funding for this program. Already more than half the program is privately funded. Many services are donated by sports enterprises, the medical profession and the NCAA itself.

There is no doubt about it, Mr. President, this is a good program. But again we have to set priorities for scarce Federal funding. We cannot afford to do it all.

I think this program is a prime candidate for funding by the colleges and by the NCAA. I am wondering if perhaps they might not pick up some of the load themselves.

We offered to restore $3.5 million with the corporate offset for a total of $8.5 million. However, Senator DECON-

CINI and others who have been strong supporters of this program have come up with an offset that comes out of consulting services.

I do not know all the ramifications of this right now, but it would restore the funding to $12 million for the National Youth Sports Program, offset by cutting consultant services.

Again, I want to accommodate the Senator and others who feel very strongly about this program. We will accept it. We will take it to conference and see what happens there.

But I must be quite frank. I do not know what the impact will be on the consulting services. Quite frankly, I agree with the Senator. They are probably getting too much money anyway, and so will accept the amendment in good faith, and take it to conference with that understanding.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to express my strong support of Senator DECONCINI's amendment and for the National Youth Sports Program. We have the opportunity today to invest in the future of our young Americans—the future of our Nation. The National Youth Sports Programs provides at-risk and disadvantaged youth an opportunity to better themselves and their prospects for the future. The program provides each participant with a free medical exam and a daily meal provided by the USDA. Participants engage in sports activities of all types, expanding their physical skills and fitness while helping to boost self-esteem. This program, however, is much more than just a sports program. It also provides educational opportunities with counseling on health and nutrition, higher education, and careers. Instruction also includes drug education, suicide prevention, antigang strategies, cultural awareness, and AIDS education.

Despite the value of these programs, Congress has proposed to decrease funding for the National Youth Sports Program by 50 percent. The potential impact of such cuts would be the exclusion of over 35,000 at-risk youth. These cuts would also force the elimination of the Extended National Youth Sports Program which extends the program into the school year providing a more intensely focused program promoting continued drug education, community support, and alternative and positive activities. Another valuable service that would be eliminated is the Math and Science Program. Instruction that seeks to motivate young people into pursuing careers in math and science. They provide the students with hands-on experience, career counseling, and assistance in developing analytical and critical thinking skills. Mr. President, can we really afford to let these programs fall by the wayside? Our Nation is currently suffering from an increase in violent crime, especially gang violence and drug-related offenses. The numbers of young people involved in these crimes is astronomical. Today, not only are our streets unsafe, but so are our schools. We can begin prevention now. By acting today we can avoid mandatory spending for more prisons, drug rehabilitation, and welfare tomorrow. Let us step in now and lend these young people a hand in directing their future in a positive direction, providing them the support, education, and self-esteem they need.

In my home State of Nevada, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas participates in the National Youth Sports Program—a program that brings the local community and State and Federal agencies together in providing Nevada's young people with the chance to develop their physical and social skills as well as providing them the support they need to make informed decisions and pursue a positive path for the future. I have seen firsthand the benefits of this program, and I commend UNLV for their efforts on behalf of the young people in our State. I urge you now to show your support for the National Youth Sports programs in your States and the talented and dedicated staff that make this program possible. Join me and Senator DECONCINI and our other colleagues in leading our young people into a bright and positive future.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I will not disagree with the judgment of the distinguished chairman. I compliment Senator DECONCINI for his customary tenacity on a worthwhile project. There is no doubt about it being worthwhile. The only question arises on a scale of priorities, with so many other items which we have to consider.

When you take a look at the last amendment, for example, on mental health, and funding for LIHEAP and breast cancer, et cetera, it is just hard to establish this as a priority above those.

I know the distinguished Senator from Arizona understands that fully, as we approach the conference issue.

AMENDMENT NO. 3005

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator MCCAIN be listed as an original cosponsor of the Domenici amendment (No. 3005).

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3006

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be in order in its present form.

Is there further debate?

The amendment (No. 3006) was agreed to.

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, here we are on the floor now, and we are ready to take amendments. We came in at 9 o'clock this morning. We have dispensed with two amendments so far. We have not had a record vote.

Last night, the majority leader and minority leader had a unanimous consent agreement on the list of amendments. I am going to read those. I hope Senators who have these amendments will come over so we are not here all day. We can dispense with these amendments if Senators will please come to the floor.

We have an amendment listed here for Senator D'AMATO; an amendment by Senator CRANSTON; Senator PRYOR has a couple; an amendment by Senator HOLLINGS; Senator DOMENICI—we took care of Senator DOMENICI already; Senator BUMPERS; Senator KASSEBAUM; Senator PELL; Senator SIMON; Senator LUGAR; Senator COCHRAN; Senator BENTSEN; Senator BINGAMAN; Senator KENNEDY; Senator SHELBY; Senators EXON, ADAMS, and DANFORTH; Senators DOLE and GLENN; Senator PELL; Senator SEYMOUR; Senator HATCH; Senator NICKLES; Senator HELMS; Senator MCCAIN; Senator LOTT; Senator WALLOP; Senator RUDMAN; and Senator WELLSTONE.

All of these Senators are on this list for amendments, and we are ready to start dealing with these amendments right now.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARKIN. Yes, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I am persuaded by the Senator from Iowa. I am trembling. I am ready.

I will be sending an amendment to the desk right now.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Minnesota yield 30 seconds for me to ask a question of the managers of the bill?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I certainly will.

Mr. EXON. I hope this will not interrupt the sending to the desk of an amendment by my friend from Minnesota, and I thank him.

When the Senator from Iowa read the list of amendments, did he mention and list the amendment that may be offered by the Senator from Nebraska? Was that on the list?.

Mr. HARKIN. I did, Mr. President.

Mr. EXON. I simply advise the Senator from Iowa that the matter that I have reserved the right to propose is legislation on an appropriations bill. Few people pay attention to the rules around here, but I will not offer that amendment, as I indicated indirectly last night when the majority leader formed this unanimous consent request. I cannot offer the amendment right now.

There is a meeting going on right now that might make it not necessary to vote on this, on this particular bill. But I simply say that this Senator probably will not offer my amendment because it is legislation on an appropriations bill, unless other Senators offer amendments that are legislation on an appropriations bill. And if they do so, then I think that opens up Pandora's box, and would further delay and make it more difficult for the managers of the bill to move this along.

I say that is the reason I am not offering the amendment at this time.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator, and I hope other Senators follow his good example to the maximum extent possible.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator.

My point is, I hope Senators will not do it. If some are offered, I may likely go ahead with mine. The manager has every right, as he should, to oppose legislation on an appropriations bill. More Senators should do it.

Mr. HARKIN. I appreciate the Senator's indulgence.

AMENDMENT NO. 3007

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WELLSTONE], for himself, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. HARKIN, proposes an amendment numbered 3007.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself and Senators SIMON and HARKIN.

Mr. President, I also would like, just for a moment, to thank Sherry Ellison, who helped me work on this amendment. This is a real important amendment, I believe, Mr. President. What this amendment does is it would restore the provision in the higher education bill we worked very hard on in this authorization that would enable college students going to school, less than half-time students, to be eligible for Pell grant assistance. This is a basic equity issue, and one I think is pretty important.

I think the Presiding Officer probably experienced the same thing in Wisconsin. I was a teacher for many years, but I have come to realize that students now in higher education are not necessarily 18 and living in a dorm. Many of these are the nontraditional students, and there are many nontraditional students. I am not so sure the nontraditional are not becoming the traditional students. They may become the majority of students in these times.

What you find is many students are older; many are single parents; many of them are women going back to school. And in order to be able to go back to school, they have to work part time. Therefore, they can only go to school part time, or less than part time.

These are the very students who are most in need of some Pell grant assistance. So what this amendment assures is that these students will be eligible for Pell grant assistance. I want to point out that I think, if the rhetoric counts, we have the support of the President himself, who on April 16, 1992, said he had the following recommendation: Extend Pell grant to guaranteed student loan eligibility to provide the opportunity for lifelong learning to less than half-time students.

So I think this is a bipartisan amendment, and I think it is a very important one. As one who taught for many years, I think it is extremely important that we take this action.

I thank both managers, Senator HARKIN and also Senator SPECTER, for their cooperation. I believe I have a strong commitment from the Senator from Iowa to keep this in conference committee. It is very important that we provide Pell grant assistance for many of our students in the United States. And, again, the face of the students is changing. It is a different student now, and we have to make sure that we understand that.

I thank the Chair very much. I yield the remainder of my time.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this provision was begun in the fiscal year 1990 appropriations bill, and I understand the Senator's concern and, quite frankly, he is right on the merits of this. We have just had some communication from the authorizing committee, however, on this aspect of the amendment, and I am going to have to suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LIEBERMAN). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be set aside so that we can move ahead and consider another amendment, to better use our time not in a quorum call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3008

(Purpose: To express the sense of Congress concerning the funding of Federal drug demand and drug supply reduction activities and continuation of the Office of National Drug Control Policy)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] proposes an amendment numbered 3008.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place insert the following:

SEC. . SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING THE FUNDING OF DRUG DEMAND AND DRUG SUPPLY REDUCTION ACTIVITIES AND CONTINUATION OF THE OFFICE OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL POLICY.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the second budget submitted by the President to the Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, after the date of enactment of this Act should provide for the funding of activities to reduce the demand for drugs (including anti-drug education programs and treatment) in an aggregate amount that is equal to the aggregate amount of funding for activities to reduce the supply of drugs (including law enforcement uses, law enforcement grants, border control and customs efforts, prison construction and maintenance, and international eradication efforts;

(2) the Director of National Drug Control Policy should be assigned authority to implement and oversee the distribution of funds for drug demand and drug supply reduction activities in accordance with paragraph (1); and

(3) section 1009 of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 (21 U.S.C. 1506) should be amended to continue the existence of the Office of National Drug Control Policy beyond the current termination date of November 18, 1993.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this amendment is a sense-of-the-Congress amendment to alter the allocation of the approximately $12 billion now spent in the war on drugs, to have an even split of $6 billion on the so-called supply side, $6 billion on the so-called demand side. By way of further elaboration, the supply side moneys are spent on interdiction from foreign countries, on street crime in the United States; whereas, the demand side is spent on education and rehabilitation.

In making this suggestion, Mr. President, it is with some reluctance that I see any money taken away from law enforcement, but I believe as a matter of priority that the Nation would be better served if we emphasize more especially education and also rehabilitation than the law enforcement aspect. I say that with some experience, having been a district attorney of a big city with a major drug problem, as the distinguished Presiding Officer has been the Attorney General of a northeastern State with a major drug problem.

I believe law enforcement is vital and, in line with that, I have offered the armed career criminal bill, which has been a cornerstone in dealing with major drug dealers and also took the initiative on a special strike force in the eastern district of Pennsylvania on legislation back in 1986 which has become a model for the Nation on Operation Trigger Lock which has been implemented by the Department of Justice around the country, and I have also been active on the interdiction issue from foreign countries, having offered amendments to use the U.S. military along those lines.

Having said that, it is my judgment that an even split between enforcement and prevention, or rehabilitation, is a better allocation of funds. In articulating this proposition, I have discussed this at a number of hearings of the Judiciary Committee and the appropriations subcommittee with the drug czar, with the Attorney General, and with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, to try to have more emphasis placed upon the so-called demand side.

In offering this amendment, I realize it has no binding effect. It is technically not legislation on an appropriations bill because, as the Parliamentarian has explained, it does not include a wherefore clause or a referral and it does not obligate anyone to do anything. But I think it is an important expression of sentiment in a building process to try to get a reallocation of this priority.

I now yield the floor to my distinguished colleague, the chairman of the subcommittee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa, Mr. HARKIN.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have no objection to the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania. In fact I think it is a good amendment. I think it correctly focuses on the problem that we have had, of the need to put more into education and preventive care, preventive resources, education, and rehabilitation. And that is what his amendment seeks to do to even that out. As he stated it is not legislation on an appropriation, it is a sense of the Senate, and in that light we will accept it.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the two magic words, as I understand it, which precludes it being legislation on an appropriation bill are the words "whereas" and "resolved."

Mr. President, I do not make an inquiry to that effect. I merely make a statement as to my understanding of the rules and I ask that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

The amendment (No. 3008) was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GRAHAM addressed the Chair.

1992 BASELINE LEVELS

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, over the past several weeks I have offered a series of amendments to appropriations bills to decrease salaries and expenses to the fiscal year 1992 baseline levels for each Federal agency.

These amendments were intended to freeze the overhead costs of Federal executive agencies at their 1992 level. I consider these amendments to be a first step in our Government's crucial responsibility to reduce the deficit.

As of today, these amendments have cut approximately $122 million in overhead costs. In the time of the growing budget deficit, it is appropriate to take small steps to restrain Federal spending. We have started this process in the salary and expense accounts of Federal agencies as that first step.

The bill we have before us today already cuts salary and expense accounts to fiscal year 1992 baseline levels and in several areas goes much further.

I would like to explain the nature of these cuts, as I understand them and also to enter into a colloquy with the chairman in order to further articulate the rationale for the reduction.

Section 517 of the bill, or the attrition provision, reduces the salaries and expenses of the Department of Labor, Department of Health and Human Services, and Department of Education by a total of $120 million by requiring that as vacancies occur in full-time positions, no more than half of the vacancies shall be filled.

Section 217 of the appropriations bill reduces salaries and expenses of the Department of Health and Human Services [HHS] by $125 million, providing that the aggregate employment level for agencies funded is limited to the actual level provided in fiscal year 1992.

The cut was across the board because most programs funded under HHS do not separate salaries and expenses from program costs. I commend the chairman for his efforts to protect the few programs which do indicate salaries and expenses with this provision.

I would like to briefly explain the nature of the Department of Labor cuts.

Within the Department of Labor, the committee has recommended freezing the executive management and the administration and management functions within the overall departmental management account.

In fiscal year 1992, the executive direction function of departmental management was funded at $21,419,000.

The committee recommends the same level for fiscal year 1993.

The committee bill recommends a small decrease—$72,000—from the fiscal year 1992 funding level for the administration and management function.

I applaud the committee for its austerity in the Department of Labor departmental management account.

The committee has increased the program administration account at the Department of Education [USDE] enough to allow for approximately a $6 million increase for the executive direction subcategory of program administration.

I am satisfied, however, that the $5 million attrition cut imposed on the U.S. Department of Education elsewhere in the bill, if applied primarily to the central administrative expenses of the Department, will hold the spending for executive direction to a level sufficiently close to its fiscal year 1992 base.

Applying the cuts to executive direction would be consistent with congressional intent, according to the colloquy into which I will shortly enter with the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee.

I ask the chairman of the subcommittee if he would respond to a series of questions.

I would like to engage in a colloquy with the chairman to discuss congressional intent regarding these reductions.

Mr. President, if I could direct a series of questions to the chairman of the subcommittee.

It is my feeling that the cuts should come from administrative expenses, specifically, from central offices located here in Washington, DC. Service delivery should not be affected by these cuts.

Mr. HARKIN. If the Senator will yield, I share this concern with the Senator from Florida and fear that the across-the-board cut will ultimately hurt the quantity and quality of service levels. As chairman of the Labor, HHS, and Education Appropriations Subcommittee, I will work to protect service delivery and ensure that adequate oversight accompanies the administrative decrease.

Mr. GRAHAM. I thank the chairman. I am very pleased and recognize the diligence with which he has and will continue to provide oversight to the agencies within his responsibility.

In the future, I ask the Chairman, will agency budget justifications identify specifically amounts for executive direction?

Mr. HARKIN. Yes; the appropriations bill we are considering today requires that the fiscal year 1994 budget justification specify amounts budgeted for administrative costs with comparisons to fiscal year 1993 comparable amounts. It is already in the bill.

Mr. GRAHAM. I am very pleased at that, because with that greater definition it will be possible for Congress to provide more specific oversight and budgetary direction relative to the central administration of the various departments.

Finally, I want to comment on section 517 of the bill, the attrition provision. This section reduces the salaries and expenses of the related departments by a total of $120 million by requiring that as vacancies occur in full-time, permanent positions, no more than 50 percent shall be filled.

Does the chairman anticipate that this attrition be spread across departments or occur within each program element of the department?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, each department would implement the attrition provision across the department. Again, it is my hope that the departmentwide cuts would not effect smaller, hands on programs in a disproportionate manner.

Let me also further say that what we have done in this bill—we have frozen these levels of personnel. In addition, for every two people who retire, resign, or quit in the next fiscal year, only one person could be hired to replace those two.

Within the personnel freeze itself, however, we have not put an absolute cap on each separate agency. They may want to increase one, but if they do that, that has to be offset with a decrease. So it is departmentwide.

Mr. GRAHAM. I am very pleased to hear the chairman's statement of the intent for the implementation of this attrition provision. While I was Governor of Florida and the State was in a position that forced sharp spending reductions, there was a proposal for an agency-by-agency "thou shalt not fill vacant positions" policy. What was immediately recognized was that in those departments that provided the most hands-on, direct client services such as in a State mental hospital, those programs had the highest rates of turnover and therefore if you administered the attrition program on a unit-by-unit basis, you would have very severe adverse effects on citizens in greatest need. Therefore, the policy was applied on a departmental level, which had the effect of focusing the reductions on the central office, the management functions rather than the delivery of service functions.

I am very pleased that the Senator contemplates a similar approach to the implementation of this attrition provision.

I again compliment the chairman and ranking member of this subcommittee for the responsible provisions which have been included in the fiscal year 1993 Labor, HHS, and Education Appropriations bill which I think will make a contribution toward responsible fiscal policy and deficit reduction.

I commend the chairman for his efforts.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Florida for his comments and for his diligence in pursuing this aspect of trying to cut Government spending. He has been here for, I think, every bill that has come up to seek to implement these kinds of restraints on personnel growth; to make sure that we get the moneys and the services out in the field where they are actually being delivered.

He has done a great job and I am thankful for his comments that this bill reflects the kind of work he has been pursuing for so many years, first as Governor and now as a distinguished Senator from Florida. I, too, want to compliment the Senator from Florida for all of his efforts in cutting Government spending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, acting in his capacity as a Senator from Connecticut, suggests the absence of a quorum. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments before the Senate at this time be laid aside in order that I may offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, in a moment I will offer an amendment. Before I do I would like to speak for a few moments to my colleagues about the subject matter of this particular amendment.

I am almost embarrassed to speak on this issue. I am almost embarrassed to speak on this particular issue this morning because I have, for 14 years, spoken on the floor of the U.S. Senate about the abusive use of consultants and contractors within the Federal Government. I have talked for these 14 years about the enormous dependence of this Government upon consultants and contractors to perform the inherent functions of our Federal system of Government. I think most Members of the Senate realize that I have spent a lot of time investigating the way the Government hires consultants and utilizes contractors. But now we must look once again at the tremendous amount of money that we spend today in the Federal budget on consulting and contracting.

For the past 14 years I have asked one simple question, the same question that today remains unanswered. I have asked this question: How much money does the U.S. Government spend on consultants?

No one has been able to give this Senator or any of my colleagues an answer to that question. For 14 years I have asked the OMB directors, under three administrations, to give us a definition of consultants; or to give us an answer as to why consultants are so widely used and what criteria the various agencies of the Government use in hiring consultants and contractors.

During these 14 years, Mr. President, the Office of Management and Budget, on some nine occasions, has stated that changes are not necessary. In August 1980 Karen Hastie Williams, Office of Federal Procurement Policy, stated:

> We believe that the administrative actions taken to date are indicative of the continuing efforts of this administration to control the use of consulting services and that these actions will produce lasting and positive reforms.

That was August 1980, 12 years ago, under the Carter administration.

A year later, David Sowle, Office of Federal Procurement Policy, in opposing the Consulting Reform Act that I had introduced, stated that two new "directives would solve the problem."

In 1981, Mr. Sowle said:

> OMB fully intends to take proper steps to insure the Government's use of consulting services is not abused. We believe that agency management, operating within guidelines already established by OMB and those additional instructions proposed, should be given the flexibility to use consultants to meet unusual management needs.

That was 1981.

In June 1988, Joe Wright, Deputy Director, OMB, said that OMB is opposing statutory change and promised that a new definition of "consulting services would be in place in 90 days." That was June 1988, Mr. President. The bottom line is that this has not been done. It has not been an easy area to establish clear-cut policies.

In November 1989, Allen Burman, Director of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, stated that OFPP policy letters would now solve the problems with consulting services. Nothing has been done.

In 1991, Allen Burman of OFPP states two additional policy letters are now necessary. None of these policy letters have been issued.

During all this time, Mr. President, you might say, well, maybe we are not using as many consultants and contractors as we did in the past. Maybe some of these promises by Directors of OMB under Democratic and Republican administrations, perhaps some of those reforms that they speak of have, in fact, slowed down the use of consultants and contractors.

Let us look at the facts of the matter. In 1980, the Federal Government was using approximately $47.6 billion a year in consultants and private contractors. OK, let us think about that: 1980, $47.6 billion. To do traditional Federal functions, our Government was going outside the Federal payroll and ignoring the Federal civil servant to perform these functions.

In 1982, we spent $66 billion. This was when then President Reagan was saying, "We are going to freeze the number of Federal employees; in fact, we are going to cut back the number of Federal positions." But what was happening was we were going outside the Government and spending an additional $20 billion, only 2 years later, for private contractors.

Mr. President, one of the fastest growing increases in the obligations of the Federal taxpayer is not necessarily interest on the national debt, it is not military spending, it is not Social Security, it is not retirees benefits; it is the private contracting firms who are getting these Federal contracts and doing the work of the Federal Government. This is happening at the same time our Presidents are saying we are going to cut the number of Federal employees, but they do not tell us how much they are spending on contractors and consultants.

By the way, these are not my figures. These are the figures of the Office of Management and Budget, OMB. Those figures indicate that from 1980 to 1990, we have seen a 90-percent increase—90-percent increase—in the dollars that we spend to hire private consultants and contractors.

Mr. President, I have tried on many, many occasions, as I stated, to get some simple answers as to why we have to have this dependence on these consultants and contractors. As I have said, I met with the OMB Directors. We have held nine hearings in the past 3 years alone. We have conducted innumerable investigations. We have sent, for example, our staff from the Governmental Affairs Committee down to the agencies of Government. We have actually watched the contractors come and go. We have researched the records as to who these contractors are, what other clients they have, and what other interests they actually represent at the same time they are representing, or allegedly representing, the Government agency that has hired them.

Mr. President, today I am taking a very simple approach in this amendment. In the next amendment that is going to be following, it is not quite so simple. I do not know if this amendment is going to be acceptable or not. I hope it will be. I think it is a good approach. After watching these changes for the past 14 years, Mr. President, and seeing that nothing is getting better, only worse, that we have increased the use of consultants and contractors by 90 percent in 12 years to over $90 billion, I am offering an amendment which would have a very simple function. For the first time in the Federal budget, my amendment would create a line item for consultants. I am going to repeat that. For the first time in our Federal budget, we are going to have a line item for consultants. This would require every agency that uses consultants to report exactly how much they plan to expend and how much they spent the year before.

This amendment defines consultants as people or companies that provide management and professional services; studies, analyses, evaluation; engineering, and technical services—I would like to add, not including routine engineering services, Mr. President;—and research and development. This definition is not some outlandish restrictive definition. It is taken from the recent OMB guidelines. It encompasses almost all of the consultants whom I have found create significant problems.

Once again, we are not talking about a small amount of money. We are talking about $90.6 billion in 1990 spent on all contracting services. At least one-fifth of these contracting dollars and probably more, about $20 billion, was spent on consultants for advice, for studies, for analyses, et cetera.

These consultants do not only advise agencies about the Congress, these consulting firms are writing testimony. For example, testimony given in March 1989 was drafted by the Bruce Co. of Washington, DC.

It was the testimony of not some low-ranking individual down in one of the agencies. It was the Assistant Administrator, Linda J. Fisher, Policy, Planning and Evaluation, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, when she appeared before the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the U.S. Senate.

Did her staff draft this statement? Did Ms. Fisher draft this statement? No. A consulting firm drafted this statement given to our colleagues on that particular committee.

On April 3, 1989—Adm. James D. Watkins, the Secretary of Energy, appeared before the defense nuclear facilities panel in the House of Representatives. Mr. President, which firm has probably more contracts with the Department of Energy than just about any consulting firm that we know of? Well, that firm is known as BDM. They get millions and millions of dollars, not only from the Department of Energy, but from EPA, the Department of Defense, and many others.

Who, Mr. President, would you imagine wrote the testimony regarding our policy in the defense nuclear world for Secretary Watkins? Who wrote that testimony? BDM wrote the testimony. This was brought out in my hearing that Secretary Watkin's testimony was written by BDM, enunciating our policy in nuclear defense areas. It was enunciated by a contracting company that has millions of dollars of contracts not only with DOD, but with the Department of Energy.

Mr. President, I must say that Secretary Watkins admitted that he gave this testimony to the House of Representatives, but at that time he did not know it had been written by a consulting company.

Mr. President, here's another example once again at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. I will put all of these examples in the RECORD, Mr. President. This is an enforcement letter sent from EPA to a company that evidently had violated some waste disposal and management rules of EPA.

Who wrote this letter to the particular company saying that they are in violation? Did EPA? Did some of the attorneys for EPA? They have hundreds down there. No. A consulting company that has a contract with EPA is doing this type of work, which is, of course, a function inherent to the mission of that particular agency.

Mr. President, another example, also from 1989. The General Accounting Office did a report about one of the agencies of our Government. Well, the General Accounting Office does this report on EPA and the EPA, after this report was issued, hired a consulting company to respond to the findings of the General Accounting Office. A consulting company was hired to respond to a GAO report.

In most instances, Mr. President, I have discussed this on many occasions, when my colleagues, when the distinguished occupant of the chair, the distinguished junior Senator from Connecticut writes a letter to the EPA, the Department of Energy, maybe the IRS, about a constituent, that agency does not respond to this letter written by a Senator. They hire a consulting company. They hire a contractor to respond to the letter.

Mr. President, it has gotten so ridiculous, it has gotten so abusive that let me cite my dear departed colleague from the other body, the late Mendel Rivers of South Carolina. I believe he was chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, quite a flamboyant character. One day I heard him in debate in the other body, I have always remembered it, that "This matter has gotten so ridiculous it is ridiculous." And this has gotten so ridiculous, Mr. President, that it is ridiculous.

I have tried very long and very hard to make some common sense out of this. I have tried on many occasions to cut back the funding. I have tried on many occasions to bring more sunshine to the issue. I am going to try maybe later this morning, maybe this afternoon, maybe this evening, something that all of the contracting firms, all of the consultants inside and around the beltway are writing and wiring and coming to see our colleagues about; that is, the contracting licensing amendment that I am going to offer next. But this amendment does not go that far.

This is a simple amendment. It is a simple approach. It is simply to establish a line-item in our appropriations bills that will be known as consultant services. The definition of consultants is set out in the amendment. It is not radical. It uses OMB language and commits this to statute.

I think, Mr. President, for the first time it is going to give us a real opportunity to get hold of this issue of consultants. I truly hope that it will meet with the approval of the committee, that it will ultimately meet with the approval of my colleagues in the Senate and in the other body, and be signed into law by the President.

Mr. President, at this time, I think for the moment, I will yield the floor.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, what is the pending amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendments have been laid aside for consideration of an amendment to be offered by the Senator from Arkansas which has not yet been offered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I do not think the Senator from Arkansas has offered his amendment actually yet in which case I thought the pending amendment was the Wellstone amendment.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota is correct to the extent that the Senator from Arkansas has not yet offered the amendment. I would be glad to offer the amendment at this time or I would be glad to delay offering it.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I know the manager wants to keep things moving. I think our amendment is being accepted and ready to go; whatever the managers' pleasure is.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, as I understand it, the pending amendment was set aside. We are ready for Senator PRYOR to send his amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The pending amendment was set aside by unanimous consent.

AMENDMENT NO. 3009

(Purpose: To provide that the Office of Management and Budget shall establish a separate line item for funding of consulting services for budget requests, the annual budget, and for other purposes)

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] proposes an amendment numbered 3009.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

On page 87, insert between lines 15 and 16 the following:

SEC. 518. (a) Beginning in fiscal year 1994, and in each fiscal year thereafter, the Office of Management and Budget shall establish the funding for consulting services for each department and agency as a separate line item in—

(1) each department and agency request for funding in my budget proposal submitted for inclusion in the annual budget of the United States Government submitted by the President to the Congress;

(2) each such budget proposal; and

(3) each budget annually submitted to the Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code.

(b) For purposes of this section consulting services include—

(1) management and professional support services;

(2) studies, analyses, and evaluations;

(3) engineering and technical services (excluding routine engineering services such as automated data processing and architect and engineering contracts); and

(4) research and development.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, might I inquire of the Senator from Arkansas? Is this amendment in essence the new line item for consulting services?

Mr. PRYOR. That is correct.

Mr. HARKIN. That is all that is in this amendment?

Mr. PRYOR. That is correct.

If I might respond, I think what the distinguished Senator from Iowa, the manager of this legislation, might be asking is that he does not want our colleagues to be confusing this amendment with a later amendment that I plan to offer requiring the consultants and contractors to get a license before they can have a Government contract. The current amendment specifically establishes a line item for consulting services.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have no problem with the amendment. We accept the amendment on this side. I understand that the minority side has accepted this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment (No. 3009) was agreed to.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. PRYOR. I thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

AMENDMENT NO. 3007

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WELLSTONE].

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I urge adoption of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have no objection on this side to the amendment, and the other side has stated they will accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

The amendment (No. 3007) was agreed to.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3002

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment now is the Helms amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, again, we are here on the floor, and we are ready to take amendments. If Senators in their offices are watching, if they have amendments, please come over and offer them. We are ready to roll. There is not much we can do, unless Senators come offer their amendments.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I would like to respond to the Senator from Iowa and promise to offer my amendment. I would like to have about 5 minutes for a little preparation, if I could, and if I might suggest the absence of a quorum for 5 or so minutes, I will come back and offer the amendment, with the agreement that I will be recognized to offer the amendment when the quorum call is called off.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I had stepped off the floor momentarily, but I wanted the RECORD to show that the distinguished chairman and I had discussed the amendment by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WELLSTONE] on part-time Pell Grant students, and that was acceptable to this side of the aisle.

Similarly, we had discussed the amendment by the distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Senator PRYOR] concerning the line item on consultants and, similarly, that was acceptable on this side of the aisle.

AMENDMENT NO. 3010

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside, and I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator LUGAR and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment will be laid aside.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. LUGAR, proposes an amendment numbered 3010.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 23, line 11 before the period, insert: "Provided further, That $100,000 shall be available for the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health to update the mortality study of the workers at the capacitor facility in Bloomington, Indiana".

Mr. HARKIN. The amendment has been cleared on this side, Mr. President.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, that looks like a good amendment to this side. I commend by distinguished colleague from Indiana, Senator LUGAR. It is agreed to here.

The amendment (No. 3010) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3011

(Purpose: To require the use of certain appropriations to carry out the duties of the Glass Ceiling Commission)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and on behalf of Senator DOLE, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside, and the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], for Mr. DOLE, proposes an amendment numbered 3011.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, line 16, insert after "Act," the following: "and to carry out related activities,"

On page 3, line 2, strike "and".

On page 3, line 5, insert after "of the Act" the following: ", and $750,000 shall be to carry out the duties of the Glass Ceiling Commission under title II of the Civil Rights Act of 1991".

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this amendment provides for $750,000 to be set aside to carry out the duties of the Glass Ceiling Commission which is designed to have appropriate assurances that women are treated fairly in the workplace. This amendment has been discussed with the distinguished chairman of this subcommittee, Senator HARKIN.

I might note, Mr. President, for those watching, if anybody is, on C–SPAN II, the difficulty of the proceedings with consultations being conducted all the time. As I had said, I discussed this with Senator HARKIN, and this is agreed to by both sides. I await the concurrence of my distinguished colleagues for the RECORD.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have examined this amendment. It is a great amendment on further studies on the effectiveness of the glass ceiling keeping women out of executive positions. We accept it.

The amendment (No. 3011) was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3012

(Purpose: To amend the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 to provide an effective date for changes made by such Act to the annual loan limits under the Perkins loan program)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside for the consideration of the amendment I send to the desk on behalf of Senator PELL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside.

The clerk will report.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. PELL, proposes an amendment numbered 3012.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 72, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

SEC. . ANNUAL LOAN LIMITS.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 468 of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3), by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (4), by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) the changes made in section 464(a)(2)(A), relating to annual loan limits, shall be effect for award years beginning on or after July 1, 1993.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect as if enacted on July 23, 1992.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I understand this amendment has been cleared on both sides.

Mr. SPECTER. This amendment is being offered by the chairman of the authorizing committee. So we shall overlook any issue of legislating on an appropriations bill, and we agree to it.

The amendment (No. 3012) was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR].

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, what is the pending business of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina, Mr. HELMS.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside in order that I may offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I have another amendment. I want to again thank the distinguished managers for accepting the previous amendment offered. This amendment is not quite as simple, and I am sure it may be a little bit more controversial than the last. As another attempt to bring about some much-needed reform to the Government's use of consultants, I am offering S. 2928, the Contractor Licensing Reform Act of 1992, as an amendment to the Labor-HHS appropriations bill.

Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to discuss this amendment, because there has been a lot of activity by the consulting industry to try to convince my colleagues that we have here in the Senate a licensing idea that would bring the Federal Government to a halt.

This year, Mr. President, OMB estimates—once again I am going to go to my chart—OMB estimates that the Federal Government is going to spend over $90 billion on contracts. In 1990, for example, we spent $90.6 billion.

I imagine we are probably going to be spending about $93 or $94 billion in the next fiscal year.

This is a 90-percent increase, 90-percent increase, during the Reagan and Bush administrations in spending and in the dependency on contractors and consultants.

Where does all of this money go? I have tried to find out for some 14 years and I have yet to find a good answer to that question.

I have found that a large part of this $90 billion goes to consulting services, though estimates vary from $9 to $20 billion. I have found that far too much of this money goes actually into what I call an open money sack that receives very, very little review. Some of my colleagues have asked why it matters whether this work of the Federal Government be performed by contractors or Federal workers.

I would like today to try to provide some answers as to why it matters. We have contracted out the basic responsibility to run the Government to an invisible bureaucracy over which we have lost control. We have lost control, Mr. President, of the shadow Government. We have lost control of an invisible bureaucracy that we have created that sucks up some $90 billion a year of the taxpayers' money.

I am not talking about the contractors that cut the grass at the local Air Force base. I am talking about the contractors who do the planning, the budgeting, and the management work of the U.S. Government. These are functions that in the past have been historically reserved to the employees of the Federal Government and today we are contracting these services out.

Contractors today write congressional testimony. They answer the letters from Senators and House Members. They appear in Cabinet meetings and other singular administration functions. Contractors today are helping to oversee the contracting office at a number of Federal agencies. Contractors today are drafting agency budget presentations that are sent to Congress and, yes, Mr. President, contractors today are performing studies and analyses for the Government to see whether or not those particular agencies are using too many contractors. Of course, we know what their answer is going to be.

Mr. President, to emphasize another point: It costs more to use private contractors. It cost more to use private contractors than to perform this basic work of Government in-house. The General Accounting Office, and the Department of Defense IG, have reported that it cost from 25 to 40 percent more to hire contractors instead of using Federal employees.

Mr. President, many of these same contractors that help to plan and manage these programs and draft regulations also work for private clients who stand to benefit from the Government work. The only system presently in place to guard against these conflicts amount to no more than a massive paper shuffle. For example, the EPA allows contractors with ties to polluters to draft Federal regulations that affect these industries.

Mr. President, I have tried a number of approaches to correct these problems. First I have held hearings and asked the agencies OMB and OPM to correct these abuses and, if not correct them, at least to tell us how many consultants and contractors they are hiring and why we are becoming or have become so dependent upon their services.

Second, I have tried to address these problems in the past years by utilizing the power of the purse. For 2 years I have successfully amended virtually every appropriations bill with first a reduction and then a cap on consulting services spending. However, in May 1991, a GAO review found that poor accounting and the lack of a definition—if we can believe it—for consulting services made these amendments unenforceable.

Finally, I amended the Defense appropriation bill in fiscal year 1989 to create a system of consultant registration to deal with this problem. While that is resulting in maybe a modest improvement in the regulations, there is still no effective governmentwide system to deal with these problems of excessive costs, conflicts of interest or loss of accountability.

Mr. President, I think now it is time for a new approach. For the first time in the history of our Federal budget system, should the amendment that has just been passed establishing a line item for consultants be approved by the other body and by the President, we are going to see a line item in our federal system for consulting services. It is now time to carry this a step further. This is why I am offering today as an amendment S. 2928, which I introduced last month.

The amendment establishes a requirement that each and every contractor who wants to provide certain types of services to the Federal Government apply for and receive a license. That sounds, Mr. President, pretty simple. This amendment, the Contractor Licensing Reform Act of 1992, would establish within the Department of Treasury the Office of Contractor Licensing. This office would establish and maintain a licensing system for the registration, issuance and review of a license. The consultants that would be covered are as follows: management and professional services; studies, evaluations and analyses; engineering and technical services, excluding routine engineering services, like building a bridge or designing a computer system; and research and development.

Once again, Mr. President, the language is simple and the purpose is equally simple. Each applicant who wants to do consulting work for the Federal Government would be required to simply submit to the Office information identifying the principal officers and employees of the applicant, disclosures of whether the applicant is a registered foreign agent, disclosure of any tax delinquencies, disclosures of any conviction of the applicant for a misdemeanor or felony in any Federal or State court, all clients for the past 2 years, promotional business material, such as annual reports, marketing brochures, and any other relevant information required by the office.

That is what my amendment would do. The Office would them make a determination if the applicant who is about to receive Federal tax dollars is in compliance with procurement, contracting, and ethics laws; and then, at that time, the Office may issue a license.

Agency contracting offices will be required to review the license and information disclosed by the license holder before they make a contract award.

Further, Mr. President, this bill lists certain functions that are inherently governmental in nature and could not be performed by contractors. This is something that is long overdue. This language is consistent with OMB proposed guidance, but placing this language in statute will ensure that we have accountability in these agencies.

Another provision would require that agencies conduct a cost comparison before awarding a contract. As I stated earlier, Mr. President, although it costs 25 to 40 percent more to use outside contractors, agencies do not even check first in our Federal system to see if their present employees are able to perform the work at less cost.

We have become so totally dependent that we pick up the phone and ask a consulting company or a contractor to perform a function when, at the next desk, a Federal employee could do the same function at 25 to 40 percent less.

Finally, Mr. President, this bill prohibits reimbursing contractors for frivolous expenditures for entertainment and efforts to boost their employees' morale. The GAO has recently uncovered numerous cases of thousands of dollars being spent by contractors on parties and alcohol. None of these costs should be borne by the taxpayers and this provision would change the current system that permits contractors to pass these unreasonable costs along to the Government.

Mr. President, I hope my colleagues are going to accept this amendment. It is a very modest, but I think very important, reform in one aspect of our Federal spending. It certainly should allow some sunshine into this system, because for too long agencies have been hiring contractors, not knowing who else they work for, or whatever potential conflicts these contracting or consulting firms might have.

Mr. President, I have just been handed a letter from the Project on Government Oversight, a letter signed by Liz Galtney, the project director in Washington, DC, offering their support for this initiative to have contractors at least receive a license before they do business with the Federal Government.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PROJECT ON GOVERNMENT OVERSIGHT,
Washington, DC, September 16, 1992.
Senator DAVID PRYOR,
Federal Services Subcommittee, Hart Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR PRYOR: We are writing to express our organization's support for your efforts to bring some sunshine into government procurement. Specifically, our organization supports your initiative to create a licensing office that would collect relevant information on contractors seeking to provide consulting services to the federal government.

It is my understanding that your licensing requirement would involve very little paperwork for contractors, who already provide the same information to the government each time they bid for a contract. The advantage of this reform measure is that it would for the first time provide a centralized source of information on a very important group of contractors.

We hope that Congress approves your initiative since we believe it is only a small step toward improved government accountability. Particularly in this election year, when there is widespread consensus that the government must work better, your effort is definitely one reform that would improve the federal government's use of consultants.

Sincerely,
LIZ GALTNEY,
Project Director.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, architects, if they have a Government contract, must have a license. Doctors or nurses, if they work in a military hospital, must be licensed. We even have to have a license for landscape architects.

But, Mr. President, there is about $20 billion, or maybe more, of Federal dollars going out today to those who do not have to have a license. They do not have to state their qualifications. They are under no rules or regulations with regard to ethics laws. They are totally free. This is an unaccounted-for system that has truly grown out of control.

Mr. President, we have come across, for example, in several of the hearings that we have been holding on consultants and contractors, one particular company, PRC. They do work with EPA. They have enormous contracts worth $220 million, 2 years ago, our most recent figure. Here is their brochure they send out to potential stockholders for PRC. They list their current clients. They include U.S. and international governments, States, industries, professional service firms, et cetera:

> Through our involvement in policy development and innovative technology evaluation, PRC offers clients expertise in the forefront of the environmental field.

> Under contract to United States EPA, PRC has conducted hundreds of regulatory compliance inspections, giving us in-depth experience with what regulators are looking for.

Mr. President, what they are basically saying is: If you will hire us, we also work for the Government, and we know what these regulators are going to be investigating and attempting to regulate. If you will hire us, we will see to it that you are given the advice, maybe, on how to even skirt those regulations.

Mr. President, we found in another recent hearing another company that we thought might be of interest. This is a company called Roy F. Weston. In 1990, for example, Roy F. Weston had 13 contracts with EPA worth over $100 million.

Once again, I guess this is a prospectus to clients. Weston says, "So that we can represent either the regulated or the regulator."

This is what the company is holding out they can do: To represent the regulated or the regulator.

Mr. President, that in itself is a conflict of interest, and should this contracting licensing amendment be passed, we would see who else Roy F. Weston represents. We would see who else PRC represents.

But today, under the present system, Mr. President, we have almost no knowledge of who else they represent and what potential conflicts of interest they, in fact, actually have.

Mr. President, at this point, I have concluded my statement.

I understand the Senator from Iowa may have a question. I will be glad to respond.

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRYAN). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, has the Senator sent the amendment to the desk yet?

Mr. PRYOR. I have not.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I have listened to the comments of the Senator from Arkansas. Quite frankly, I have heard him talk about this issue for many years now, since I have been here. I believe he is right on target; he is right on course; he is correct in everything he says. The legislation that he is talking about, I believe, is needed, and I would support it.

But I must say, Mr. President, that I would have to resist this because, first of all, the amendment or the legislation that the Senator is talking about really pertains to the Department of the Treasury. This is an appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health, and Human Services, and Education. We have no jurisdiction over the Department of the Treasury.

I would suggest to the Senator that this amendment might be more aptly applied to the Treasury appropriations bill, and not this one.

Second, while we have certainly bent the rules once in awhile for legislation on an appropriations bill to change an effective date, for example, or insert a new line item, these are minor variations in the prohibition against legislation on appropriations bills. Mr. President, this is 12 pages of legislation.

As I said, I agree with the Senator from Arkansas. He is right on target on this. But this should be put on an authorization bill, not an appropriations bill. This is 12 pages of legislation.

So, in good faith, I would like to ask the Senator from Arkansas if he might not want to, hopefully, think about putting this amendment on an authorization or perhaps the appropriate appropriations bill. I cannot speak for the chairman of that Appropriations Subcommittee on what he might want to do. But this totally breaks any rule against legislation on an appropriations bill. It is 12 pages of legislation—good legislation, legislation that ought to be passed, I might add. But certainly we could not accept this on this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, responding to my good friend from Iowa, if I might, I would like to first thank him for his support of the concept that I am proposing today. Second, I would like to respond by saying, yes, this does apply to the Department of Treasury, but it also applies to every other Department and agency of the Federal Government. It applies to HHS. It applies to DOD. It applies to IRS. It applies across the board, throughout our Federal system.

I do not know, for example, if this is legislation on an appropriations bill. I will just be honest, I do not know. It could be; it could not be. But knowing we only have about 3 weeks or maybe 2½ weeks left in the session, and not knowing what is going to be happening to other legislation that will be brought before the Senate, this might just be the last opportunity that this Senator from Arkansas has this year to offer something that will help to curb the spiraling costs and abusive costs of consultants and contractors within the Federal Government.

Mr. HARKIN. If the Senator will yield?

Mr. PRYOR. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HARKIN. As the Senator knows, I fully support this legislation. I would like to have the opportunity at some time to vote for it, support it, and see it passed. Under the rules, as I understand the agreement we have in the Senate now, when this appropriations bill is finished, we will proceed to the defense authorization. It is an authorization bill. Certainly, this type of legislation would be more appropriate—excuse the play on words—more germane, for example, to the Defense authorization bill.

Mr. PRYOR. The Senator from Iowa is exactly right, Mr. President. One of the problems is the practical problem in basic politics 101. When I saw the 12 members of the Senate Armed Services Committee opposed to this bill, I decided the DOD bill might not be the best bill to try to put it on. So I am pretty practical when it comes to considerations like this.

If this, as legislation on an appropriations bill, should come down, or if

I should withdraw this amendment or not actually send it to the desk, then I would probably have no other option than to go to the Department of Defense authorization bill because I do not know a vehicle that might work other than that for the remainder of this session.

If the distinguished Senator from Iowa could educate the Senator from Arkansas on that, I would certainly appreciate it.

Mr. HARKIN. If the Senator will yield, I think there are plenty of conference reports coming down the pike that are fully amendable when the conference reports are here. This Senator does not know all of them, but I think there are a bunch of them, and I think they would be amendable by this legislation.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, the distinguished majority leader and Speaker of the House and the minority leaders, it is my understanding, have come to the conclusion that on October 4 we are going to be gone from here. I hope that is the case. I think the American public would love to see us gone from here. I hope we will be gone.

But today I would like to state that I think this amendment is critical and I think we not only have conflicts of interest, we have abuses in authority. We have, once again, a shadow government that is out of control. And I think it is very, very necessary that, in the new year, we have the opportunity to try a new approach. I think this is a new approach that we should try.

But, Mr. President, in view of this, I am at this point going to state that I am not at this moment, on this bill, going to go forward with this amendment. But I am going to go forward with this amendment on a subsequent bill or some vehicle before we leave on October 4.

I want to express once again my deep appreciation to the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Arkansas for his restraint in offering this amendment because it is good legislation. I just might respond by saying I hope there will be an opportunity for him to offer it this year. The distinguished Senator from Arkansas has been working on this issue for over a decade. He has put in a lot of time and effort. Perhaps next year with a new administration we can get something like this done for the American people.

Mr. PRYOR. I thank my friend from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I have been familiar with the work of the Senator in this area over many years. We have stood, regrettably, toe-to-toe on this type of legislation. I assure the Senator that at such time as he seeks the opportunity to bring this up, this Senator—and I hope others will join in—will be strongly opposing this.

Men and women across this country every morning get up and go out and try to work in the private sector in hopes that their Government, be it the executive or the legislative branch, tries to provide an environment in which they can work. In the last 24 hours we have witnessed one of the most remarkable chapters in the financial history not only of this country but the whole world. This type of legislation, again, begins to challenge their ability to go into the workplace, be it here in the United States or in the world market, and compete.

I say to my good friend, we have to, as a Government, and particularly as a Congress, begin to recognize the difficulty, the increasing difficulty of the workplace, the challenge to those who get up every day to go out and apply their brains and their commitment and their courage to provide jobs, to provide America with a competitive product in the world market. And this piece of legislation, in my judgment, further hinders their effort to do that.

So we shall have, I say to my good friend at such time as he selects, a good, old-fashioned debate on this piece of legislation.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, not wishing to take additional time—and I apologize to my colleagues for taking so much time already this morning on this and other matters—to my friend from Virginia I say I am sorry he was not here earlier when I held up this chart of what we have spent from 1980 to 1990. We have increased the amount spent on private contractors and consulting by 90 percent—90 percent. So the workplace we have created is about a $92 or $93 billion workplace environment, subject to almost no accountability, I say to my friend; subject to no ethics laws.

And, Mr. President, speaking of a workplace, if I were a Federal employee doing a mission or performing a job and the person at the next desk to me was a private contractor making 40 percent more or 25 percent more for doing the same or less work—when we talk about the difficulty of the workplace, then I say to my friend from Virginia, that is a difficult situation for anyone in any workplace. I am trying merely to license the people who get contracts from the Government.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I will withhold further comment.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. McCAIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending Helms amendment be set aside for purposes of offering an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3013

(Purpose: To grant the power to the President to reduce budget authority)

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk on behalf of myself and Senator COATS, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows;

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. McCAIN], for himself and Mr. COATS, proposes an amendment numbered 3013.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO ACT OF 1991.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Legislative Line Item Veto Act of 1991".

(b) ENHANCEMENT OF SPENDING CONTROL BY THE PRESIDENT.—The Impoundment Control Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE XI—LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO RESCISSION AUTHORITY

"PART A—LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO RESCISSION AUTHORITY

"GRANT OF AUTHORITY AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1101. (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the provisions of part B of title IX and subject to the provisions of part B of this title, the President may rescind all or part of any budget authority, if the President—

"(1) determines that—

"(A) such rescission would help balance the Federal budget, reduce the Federal budget deficit, or reduce the public debt;

"(B) such rescission will not impair any essential Government functions; and

"(C) such rescission will not harm the national interest; and

"(2)(A) notifies the Congress of such rescission by a special message not later than 20 calendar days (not including Saturday, Sundays, or holidays) after the date of enactment of a regular or supplemental appropriations Act or a joint resolution making continuing appropriations providing such budget authority; or

"(B) notifies the Congress of such rescission by special message accompanying the submission of the President's budget to Congress and such rescissions have not been proposed previously for that fiscal year.

The President shall submit a separate rescission message for each appropriations bill under paragraph (2)(A).

"(b) RESCISSION EFFECTIVE UNLESS DISAPPROVED.—(1)(A) Any amount of budget authority rescinded under this title as set forth in a special message by the President shall be deemed canceled unless during the period described in subsection (B), a rescission disapproval bill making available all of the amount rescinded is enacted into law.

"(B) The period referred to in subparagraph (A) is—

"(i) a Congressional review period of 20 calendar days of session under part B, during which Congress must complete action on the rescission disapproval bill and present such bill to the President for approval or disapproval;

"(ii) after the period provided in clause (i), an additional 10 days (not including Sundays) during which the President may exercise his authority to sign or veto the rescission disapproval bill; and

"(iii) if the President vetoes the rescission disapproval bill during the period provided in clause (ii), an additional 5 calendar days of session after the date of the veto.

"(2) If a special message is transmitted by the President under this section during any Congress and the last session of such Congress adjourns sine die before the expiration of the period described in paragraph (1)(B), the rescission shall not take effect. The message shall be deemed to have been retransmitted on the first day of the succeeding Congress and the review period referred to in paragraph (1)(B) (with respect to such message) shall run beginning after such first day.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 1102. For purposes of this title the term 'rescission disapproval bill' means a bill or joint resolution which only disapproves a rescission of budget authority, in whole, rescinded in a special message transmitted by the President under section 1101.

"PART B—CONGRESSIONAL CONSIDERATION OF LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO RESCISSIONS

"PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL MESSAGE

"SEC. 1111. Whenever the President rescinds any budget authority as provided in section 1101, the President shall transmit to both Houses of Congress a special message specifying—

"(1) the amount of budget authority rescinded;

"(2) any account, department, or establishment of the Government to which such budget authority is available for obligation, and the specific project or governmental functions involved;

"(3) the reasons and justifications for the determination to rescind budget authority pursuant to section 1101(a)(1);

"(4) to the maximum extent practicable, the estimated fiscal, economic, and budgetary effect of the rescission; and

"(5) all facts, circumstances, and considerations relating to or bearing upon the rescission and the decision to effect the rescission, and to the maximum extent practicable, the estimated effect of the rescission upon the objects, purposes, and programs for which the budget authority is provided.

"TRANSMISSION OF MESSAGES; PUBLICATION

"SEC. 112. (a) DELIVERY TO HOUSE AND SENATE.—Each special message transmitted under sections 1101 and 1111 shall be transmitted to the House of Representatives and the Senate on the same day, and shall be delivered to the Clerk of the House of Representatives if the House is not in session, and to the Secretary of the Senate if the Senate is not in session. Each special message so transmitted shall be referred to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate. Each such message shall be printed as a document of each House.

"(b) PRINTING IN FEDERAL REGISTER.—Any special message transmitted under sections 1101 and 1111 shall be printed in the first issue of the Federal Register published after such transmittal.

"PROCEDURE IN SENATE

"SEC. 1113. (a) REFERRAL.—(1) Any rescission disapproval bill introduced with respect to a special message shall be referred to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be.

"(2) Any rescission disapproval bill received in the Senate from the House shall be considered in the Senate pursuant to the provisions of this section.

"(b) FLOOR CONSIDERATION IN THE SENATE.—

"(1) Debate in the Senate on any rescission disapproval bill and debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith, shall be limited to not more than 10 hours. The time shall be equally divided between, and controlled by, the majority leader and the minority leader or their designees.

"(2) Debate in the Senate on any debatable motion or appeal in connection with such a bill shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the mover and the manager of the bill, except that in the event the manager of the bill is in favor of any such motion or appeal, the time in opposition thereto shall be controlled by the minority leader or his designee. Such leaders, or either of them, may, from the time under their control on the passage of the bill, allot additional time to any Senator during the consideration of any debatable motion or appeal.

"(3) A motion to further limit debate is not debatable. A motion to recommit (except a motion to recommit with instructions to report back within a specific number of days, not to exceed 1, not counting any day on which the Senate is not in session) is not in order.

"(c) POINT OF ORDER.—(1) It shall not be in order in the Senate or the House of Representatives to consider any rescission disapproval bill that relates to any matter other than the rescission of budget authority transmitted by the President under section 1101.

"(2) It shall not be in order in the Senate or the House of Representatives to consider any amendment to a rescission disapproval bill.

"(3) Paragraphs (1) and (2) may be waived or suspended in the Senate only by a vote of three-fifths of the members duly chosen and sworn.".

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, on this particular issue that I am bringing up again, there is a previous unanimous-consent agreement of 1 hour equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I may not even use all of that time because this issue has been debated all across the Nation. I brought this amendment up several times in the past, and I will say to the Members of this body that I will continue to bring up this amendment until it is passed in one form or another because I am convinced that an overwhelming majority of the American people are deeply concerned, in fact in some cases frightened, about what the Federal deficit is doing to them, their lives, their families, and their futures.

It is my view, I think the correct one, of the overwhelming majority of the American people that one of the cures for this terrible disease, called out-of-control spending, is the line-item veto. This amendment provides the President of the United States with what is known as a line-item veto, which means that the President has the ability to selectively veto expenditures from a massive appropriations bill without having to veto the entire piece of legislation.

I remind my colleagues that 43 out of 50 Governors in America have the line-item veto. I think it is of interest that the Presidential candidates of both parties, both President Bush and Governor Clinton, have unequivocally stated their support for the line-item veto. As I said before, poll after poll shows that significant numbers of the American people support the line-item veto.

Mr. President, our debt has increased $3.5 trillion since 1974; 1974 was when the Congressional Budget Control and Impoundment Act was passed. Fifty-six times in the last 30 years we have raised taxes on the American people. On only one occasion in the last 30 years have we had a balanced budget. What is even more alarming is the dramatic escalation in the deficit since the enactment of the 1974 Budget Act.

I would like to make another point today that I have not made in the past on this issue. That is that there is now widespread belief throughout the Nation, and certainly by many in this body as well as throughout the country and the media, that the only possible way to bring the deficit under control is to cut entitlements. Entitlement is an interesting word. What it really means in many cases is the difference between poverty and a decent existence for many Americans, the difference between being able to obtain a minimum level of health care and suffering terrible physical or mental disabilities.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I wonder if my colleague will possibly yield for a 5-second unanimous-consent request.

Mr. MCCAIN. It is always a pleasure to yield to my friend from New York.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I apologize to my distinguished colleague.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Charlotte Whitenight, a congressional fellow in my office, be permitted on the floor during the consideration of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, let me thank my colleague and friend and tell him I am going to join him in support of his amendment.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from New York.

As I was saying, it is the difference between being able to enjoy at least a part of the American dream, or despair, poverty, neglect, and a very bleak future.

My point is that it borders, in my view, on hypocrisy to go to the American people and tell them that we are going to have to cut their entitlement programs without first getting under control the outrageous spending practices that have become the order of the day, such as bovine flatulence studies, Abraham Lincoln research and interpretive centers, unauthorized spending not noted with particularity in reports, projects that demonstrate methods of eliminating traffic congestion, or even a $41 million grant for a university that has a $14 million annual budget and 1,400 students.

I urge my colleagues, Mr. President, in fact all Americans, to obtain a copy of a booklet put out by Citizens Against Government Waste called "The Pork List." "The Pork List" is a document that will make most Americans laugh and cry. They will laugh because of the incredible things that we spend their tax dollars on, and they will cry because it is their hard-earned tax dollars that are being spent.

Sooner or later it has to come to a stop or we will reach a financial crisis in this country of unprecedented proportions. I know of no economist who does not view the deficit as the number one reason why we have lacked competitiveness with foreign countries, why we are unable to reach higher levels of economic growth and more jobs. Nineteen cents out of every dollar is spent to pay interest on the national debt.

This year, for the first time, the American taxpayer will pay more of their tax dollars to pay interest on the national debt than they will to defend this Nation. We will spend more money on interest on the debt than we will on national defense. If I had said that several years ago, it would have been a very outrageous statement. Unfortunately, today the outrageous has become a reality.

This amendment is a small step, but a step in the right direction. As my colleague, Senator HOLLINGS, stated near the conclusion of last February's debate on the line-item veto, "it is time to stop splitting hairs and get this valuable tool to the President."

I would like to mention one other reason why I am bringing this issue up again. Because Senate rule 16, state that any appropriation must be described "with particularity" in the report. In other words, a description of that appropriation must be provided within the legislation itself. I brought forward an objection to a violation, on September 9, 1992, because I believed that a report was in violation of rule 16, by spending $319.2 million for which there was no description whatsoever. I was ruled against by a parliamentary ruling of the Chair. Only in Washington, DC, can $319.2 million be spent with a three-word description and that be interpreted as "with particularity."

I think it is another example of a system that is basically out of control.

Mr. President, I request the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, we have to begin deficit reduction by eliminating Government waste, whether it is $6.3 billion in unauthorized pork in the 1992 defense appropriations, $48.1 million in ignored rescissions since 1974, or the $70 billion that the General Accounting Office identified that would have been saved between 1984 and 1989 by a President armed with a line-item veto.

The waste and inefficiency must be eliminated. We cannot go before the American people and ask them to sacrifice their entitlements until we get this kind of wasteful and unnecessary spending under control.

I would like to add, Mr. President, that there have been and will be accusations leveled at me that there have been pork-barrel projects for my State. Obviously, the characterization of many of these projects are in the eye of the beholder. I would plead guilty if that would make my accusers feel better. What I am trying to change here is not the individual appropriations. What we need to change is the system itself which has failed the Congress and the American people by continually spending beyond our means.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona controls 30 minutes; the floor manager, the Senator from Iowa controls the other 30 minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. I would ask my colleague from Arizona to yield me 3 minutes to support his amendment.

Mr. McCAIN. I yield 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I support the principle of the line-item veto. I compliment Senator McCAIN for his tenacity on this issue. One day we will have a line-item veto for the President to strike a given item from the budget when it is excessive and not in the public interest. I think that it is long overdue.

I have supported legislation to this effect, and am in support of the constitutional amendment which would provide for a line-item veto where the Congress could overrule by a simple majority but to pass these items in the daylight so people can see what they are instead of being comprehended in thick legislative proposals where no one knows what is being enacted, reserving of course the two-thirds override for major legislative bills.

Mr. President, I joined recently in cosigning a letter offered by the distinguished Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE] urging the President to exercise the line-item veto based on his current constitutional authority. It is my legal judgment that the President has authority at the present time to exercise the line-item veto, and let the matter be carried forward to a judicial challenge. I think the chances are excellent that the Supreme Court of the United States would uphold an exercise by the President of the line-item veto.

But until that happens, until we have a constitutional amendment, if the President does not exercise the line-item veto, I am pleased to join with Senator McCAIN, compliment him again for his tenacity and persistence on this issue, and predict that one day this effort will be successful.

I yield the remainder of my time, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the call of the quorum be equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McCAIN. I yield whatever time the Senator from Indiana requires.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I inquire how much time remains on both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has approximately 20 minutes, and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. McCAIN] has approximately 10 minutes.

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. COATS] is recognized.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Arizona for yield time. I was tied up in some meetings and did not realize we were operating under a time agreement.

Mr. President, for the second time this year, Congress has the opportunity to substantially curb wasteful and unnecessary Government expenditures by allowing the President the power of the line-item veto.

Since our discussion on the line-item veto last February, the mid-session estimates for the deficit for fiscal year 1992 have declined somewhat from the levels anticipated early this year to $333.5 billion.

This decline is in no way the result of any kind of fiscal restraint on the part of Congress with regard to special interest projects. The primary reason we will see a $333 billion deficit rather than a $400 billion deficit is the result of less than anticipated allocations to the Resolution Trust Corporation.

I might add that the slower than expected economic growth as a result of the failure of Congress to pass a sound and effective economic growth package and veer away from its infatuation with tax increases is expected to add an additional $2.1 billion to the deficit.

We should not be proud of these new numbers. A $333 billion deficit is shocking. We should be ashamed of such an extremely poor fiscal record.

We are fast approaching the $4 trillion point for our Federal debt. The Federal Government is borrowing $1 billion per day and our debt service at $306 billion per year was the second largest item in last year's budget. Next year our interest payments are expected to become the largest single item in the budget, and $40 billion of this amount will go to foreign creditors.

In fact, a June GAO report on the budget notes that net interest payments will exceed $1 trillion by the year 2020 if we do nothing to reverse our current spending habits.

This same GAO report adds that—

> The Nation's long-term economic future depends in large part upon budget and investment decisions made today. Failure to reverse [current] trends in fiscal policy and the composition of Federal spending will doom future generations to a stagnating standard of living, damage U.S. competitiveness and influence in the world, and hamper our ability to address pressing national trends.

Is this the legacy that we want to leave our children and grandchildren?

Think of what we, as a responsible Congress, could do with those hundreds of billions we are paying annually in debt service. For one thing, we could raise the personal exemption for individuals and families to the level it should be to rightfully account for annual costs of living.

For the duration of my 12 years in Congress, we have failed to keep our spending under control despite repeated miracle budget agreements, forced budget caps and ceaseless wailing on the part of so many Members of both bodies who refuse to back up their words of outrage with substantive action to cut waste.

And we cannot place the onus of the blame for the debt on the President. If Congress is going to continue to claim responsibility over the power of the purse we must also assume responsibility for the endless litany of studies and projects that the Federal Government has no business funding.

In the course of this year alone, as we have debated fiscal year 1993 appropriations bills, Congress has allocated funds for:

A study on striped bass;

Millions for capital improvement projects in Palau;

A million dollars to relocate a road at a fish hatchery;

A kickoff of a smokey bear celebration;

The sum of $700,000 for a new road and parking lot, boat dock, and composting toilet at the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway;

Apple research, bee research, acoustics research, dwarf bunt research, filbert blight research, and locoweed research;

A Department of Treasury fitness facility;

A bicycle transportation demonstration project;

Funding for an international coffee organization and an international jute organization;

An international office of the vine and wine; and the list goes on and on.

I personally have been working for 12 years on behalf of a line-item veto, and I know my colleague, Senator MCCAIN, has devoted a similar amount of his time to its passage. I was especially pleased with the strong endorsement the line-item veto received in the President's State of the Union Speech this year.

I might add that the Democratic nominee for President, Governor Clinton, has also endorsed the concept of a line-item veto.

In fact, he claims that he will save close to $10 billion over 4 years with a line-item veto. I am not sure if he has paused to reflect on the fact that his budget plan already appears to be $10 billion off because the majority of his own party which controls Congress won't allow a line-item veto to be enacted.

Frankly, I believe line-item veto savings could be considerably higher than those predicted by Governor Clinton.

Earlier this year the General Accounting Office completed a study that found that had the President had the power of a line-item veto from 1984 through 1989, some $70 billion in Federal spending would have been saved.

Think of what $70 billion over 5 years could cover. It could easily pay for WIC and Head Start and then some; $70 billion could cover a doubling of the personal to $4,000 for dependents under age 18 for 5 years; $70 billion would come close to paying for the entire student loan program for 5 years—and we all agreed during the debate on the higher education bill last week that we need to expand access and get aid to more students; $70 billion could take the recently approved extension of unemployment benefits and stretch it over a 12-year period—although I sincerely hope this would not be necessary.

Or we could apply $70 billion to the debt and reduce our interest obligations.

I believe that, given an assurance that rescissions will have some chance of passage, the number proposed by the President on an annual basis would increase dramatically.

As we all know, many special interest projects that have never gone through any kind of oversite or authorization process are routinely tucked into large appropriations bills that often must be passed by the end of the fiscal year.

Despite the existence of a specific procedure for the authorization and appropriation of taxpayer's dollars for worthy endeavors, the passage of special interest projects or pork surreptitiously included in appropriations bills has become the status quo.

An amendment that I offered to the so-called dire emergency supplemental appropriations bill last March clearly illustrates business as usual port practices that are now so common in this distinguished body.

I proposed to delete specified funding for a ship overhaul. Not only did the Navy strongly oppose the extensive overhaul that was mandated, but the project had been tucked into the appropriations bill without any discussion whatsoever in either of the House or Senate Armed Services Committees. I pointed out that the merits of this rather sizable project should receive some review by the appropriate committees before it was approved.

A good number of my colleagues agreed and my amendment passed with a health majority of 56 votes. Yet when the doors closed on the conference committee, the funding was quietly restored to the bill without debate.

I don't mean to point fingers at specific Members of Congress, Mr. President. We all do it. We all work with the Appropriations Committee to support projects of varying importance for our home States.

Clearly the tens of billions that could be saved with a line-item veto will not resolve all of our debt troubles. Entitlement spending is growing at phenomenal rates, and I expect that in the next several years serious consideration will be given to means by which we can add greater efficiency to our entitlement programs.

This will be a long and complicated procedure, however, in contrast to the simplicity of ensuring good congressional fiscal behavior with a line-item veto.

The McCain-Coats line-item veto amendment puts the onus of fiscal responsibility back on Congress by insisting that a vote to disapprove any rescissions must occur, or they go into effect.

In 1974, the President's power to impound or cancel appropriated funds was curbed by Congress. The Budget Control and Impoundment Act weakened the President's hand by allowing Congress the right to say no to rescissions by inaction.

Under current law, the President sends up his recommended cuts, and if Congress does not act to approve them, they become meaningless. The cuts simply die on the vine as Congress spends more and more and accuses everyone but themselves of fearing tough spending choices.

Over the years, the congressional attitude toward Presidential rescissions has become one of nearly total neglect. In 1991, President Bush proposed 47 rescissions for a possible savings of $5.55 billion. Only one rescission was approved by Congress. We saved $2.1 million—a drop in the bucket.

If this amendment passes, the President would send up rescissions with his annual budget submission and Congress would have 20 days to react. If they do not pass a disapproval resolution, the rescissions would go into effect. Thus the burden is on Congress to say no to cutting funds for specific projects, and they must do it publicly.

The McCain-Coats amendment also gives the President power to rescind appropriated funds within 20 days of signing a spending bill. Congress then again has 20 days to say "no," or the cuts are made.

This would give the President the same power that 43 of our Governors now regularly employ. It would also let the President cut the pork from huge continuing resolutions or dire emergency supplemental appropriations bills fattened by last minute goodies added by Congress.

In both cases, Congress would have to pass a resolution of disapproval that could not be amended at any point, and like any other bill, could be vetoed by the President. Since no amendments are allowed, the Congress would be faced with an all or nothing proposition. They would either take the cuts or reject them, with no haggling over the details. Expedited procedures would ensure that both the legislative and executive branches act fast.

This proposal puts the ball in Congress' court and allows the President to have another tool with which to trim the bloated Federal deficit. No longer can the Congress simply ignore the President's spending priorities and then blame the growing deficit on him, adding insult to injury.

Mr. President, as the American public focuses on the operations of our Government in this election year, let's send them a clear message that we do strive to improve. That we are willing to do what is necessary to regain their respect as the bodyguards of their tax dollars.

Mr. President, this is not a new subject to this Chamber. In fact, we are visiting it for the second time this year. I have, along with the Senator from Arizona, on numerous occasions in the past 3½ years attempted to raise this issue before this body and discuss and debate it in an effort to provide the President of the United States with a management tool that in my opinion is absolutely necessary if we are going to exert any fiscal discipline over the way in which our current budget is determined to spend the money that we do spend in this country. We all know the horrendous figures that apply to the budget deficit and the impact that it has had on our economy and the decisions that we would and need to make in this Chamber relative to a whole range of issues.

We have cited the statistics over and over relative to the size of the budget deficit, the impact that this has on our economy, the impact that this has on our future, the ability of our businesses and industries to be competitive, the ability of the United States to produce products at a competitive price to sell both here and abroad. The budget deficit is something that has to be addressed.

I do not pretend nor have I ever pretended that a line-item veto is the sole tool necessary to address the enormity of the current budget deficit. I have said over and over that only when this body enacts a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget will we be able to once and for all gain control of our budget. Until then, as long as the Federal Government has the ability to float debt to cover expenses, and to cover spending, we will find ourselves constantly finding ways to provide the latest loophole, the latest exception, the latest deficit spending opportunity, to meet needs—some legitimate, some questionable—that this Government addresses on a year-to-year basis.

The line-item veto is a way of restoring some balance in the process of how we make decisions in terms of our spending. Currently, the Congress is the one branch of Government which operates on the basis of determining for the President and for the executive branch and for the American people without any realistic check and balance other than a Presidential veto of the entire piece of legislation presented to him.

Unlike the power exercised by 43 Governors of our States, unlike the power exercised by the chief executive officer or president of financial officer of every business corporation in America, unlike the power exercised by the head of every household in America, it is only at the Federal Government level and it is only the President of the United States that does not have the power to say I will accept most of this spending proposal, but I have reservations about a few of the items, and I am exercising my power of line-item veto to tell you, the legislative branch, that I neither want nor can I spend adequately the funds that you have provided in this piece of legislation.

We all know how the process works. We all know when popular spending bills come along, when necessary spending bills come along, attached to those bills are provisions for expenditures of money that have not been justified through the authorization process, that have not seen the light of public hearing and public debate, that are not voted on up or down on their merits, and we all know that they are presented to the President with a take it all or reject it all proposal. What line-item veto does is simply give the President the right to say I will take most, I will take some, but I cannot accept this item, that item, or another item.

If the President had that power, I believe we would exercise considerably more restraint in fashioning the appropriations bills, in fashioning the spending bills, urgent supplemental appropriations, and others that are forwarded to the President for signing. Every Member of this body knows that you wait for a popular vehicle to come along, a must-pass piece of legislation, and that is the opportunity to attach to it your particular item of unauthorized, in many cases, pieces of spending and particularly spending that has not been subject to public debate and a vote up or down by the Members.

No one is denying Congress the right to overturn what the President does. The proposal that Senator MCCAIN and I are offering, the enhanced rescission proposal, gives Congress the right to overturn the decisions made by the President, but it simply does so in a way that the President has some say in determining how funds are going to be spent.

The GAO study has often been cited. The GAO studied the effect of what a line-item veto power to the President might have on our spending. And over a 5-year period of time, in the mid to late eighties, they calculated that up to $70 billion could have been saved; not small change.

Would it solve the entire budget deficit problem? No; it would not. Would it substantially impact the budget deficit problem that we currently face? Absolutely.

So I hope that my colleagues will continue to look at this effort as an effort to inject some type of balance, some type of fiscally responsible tool in the executive branch that will exert some discipline in terms of the way we spend the taxpayers' dollars, and will support the efforts Senator MCCAIN and I have now attempted over the past 3½ years to pass line-item veto authority—or in this case, enhanced rescission authority—to the President of the United States.

I think instinctively, I think experientially, each one of us understands why this is necessary. In a sense, it saves us from ourselves. It removes the temptation to simply pass unauthorized, unnecessary, nice to have but not absolutely necessary to have—particularly at a time of significant deficit—items of spending that certainly could wait for better economic times, certainly could wait for better budget times, and, in some cases, certainly would never pass muster with this body or with the American people were they subjected to light-of-day debates and up-or-down votes by the Members.

What we are calling for here is openness, sunshine, honesty in budgeting, integrity in the appropriations process, and exposing all spending to the scrutiny of the public in terms of whether or not that ought to be included in our appropriations.

Mr. President, I see we have a colleague who wishes to speak, so I yield back whatever time may be remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERREY). All time has expired.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, how much time remains?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have been in an appropriations markup with respect to the Department of Defense appropriations bill, and have just arrived on the floor.

The distinguished Senators, Mr. MCCAIN and Mr. COATS, were unaware, of course, that I was tied up in the appropriations markup. So I do not fault them for going ahead with the amendment.

I wonder, however, if I might have some additional time, should I need it, over and above the 20 minutes. I had agreed, I believe, to an hour to a side. I do not know how much of that hour I would use normally, but I will not take that much today, even if I am granted additional time.

But I wonder if I might have some additional time, in the event I need it.

Mr. MCCAIN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. MCCAIN. I say to my friend from West Virginia, the time allotted was 1 hour equally divided.

But I have no objection to such additional time as the Senator from West Virginia chooses to take. I will agree to any unanimous-consent agreement. I know how strongly the Senator feels about this issue.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished Senator for his courtesy and understanding. I deeply appreciate his response.

Mr. President, this amendment is not a line-item veto amendment. A careful reading of the amendment will indicate that it is a rescissions amendment, an enhanced rescissions amendment, which is far different from a line-item veto amendment.

A line-item veto amendment, if it were enacted into law, would permit the Congress still to exercise its authorities and powers to package an appropriations bill in such a way that there could be very, very few line items to which a President could get with his veto pen.

But an enhanced rescissions amendment is a far more dangerous amendment. There is some question as to whether a line-item veto, as enacted by legislation, would be constitutional. There is some question.

There is no question in my mind that if this type of amendment, dealing with enhanced rescissions, were enacted into law, it would be constitutional. The legislation that is presently on the books with respect to rescissions is certainly constitutional. And that was enacted by the Congress as a statute.

This amendment would still deal with rescissions, but would turn the present law on its head in that, under the present law, if the President proposes rescissions of appropriations, the Congress has, I believe, 45 days within which to respond. And if the Congress just sits on its hands, the rescissions, under the present law, that are recommended by the President would automatically not become effective. The obligations of the funds must go forward if the Congress does nothing.

The Congress, on the other hand, can act, as the Congress did earlier this year, in approving all of the President's rescissions, part of the President's rescissions, or none of the President's rescissions and substituting its own proposed rescissions. And that is precisely what Congress did earlier this year. The President had threatened to send over 1,300 separate items to be rescinded. And it was publicly by some that it was expected that there would be a rollcall vote, on each of those rescissions.

I took the position that we ought to take a look at the President's proposals; agree with some of them, if they were justified, and disagree if, in our judgment, they were not justified; and, at the same time, propose some rescissions of our own. That was done, and we passed a bill.

The President requested $7.9 billion in rescissions, and the bill that was passed by Congress provided for $8.2 billion in rescissions. So the current law has been working. But now, here is what would happen if this amendment were to be agreed to.

And, in part, the amendment reads as follows, and I shall just read excerpts in the interest of time:

> * * * The President may rescind all or part of any budget authority if the President—
>
> * * * notifies the Congress of such rescission by a special message not later than 20 calendar days (not including Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays) after the date of enactment of a regular or supplemental appropriations Act or a joint resolution making continuing appropriations providing such budget authority; or
>
> * * * notifies the Congress of such rescission by special message accompanying the submission of the President's budget to Congress and such rescissions have not been proposed previously for that fiscal year.
>

Then there is the following paragraph entitled "Rescission Effective Unless Disapproved." It reads as follows:

> * * * Any amount of budget authority rescinded under this title as set forth in a special message by the President shall be deemed canceled unless during the period described in subparagraph (B), a rescission disapproval bill making available all of the amount rescinded is enacted into law.

And then under subparagraph (B) it is stated that the Congress has a—> * * * review period of 20 calendar days of session under part B, during which Congress must complete action on the rescission disapproval bill and present such bill to the President for approval or disapproval * * *.

>
> * * * an additional 10 days (not including Sundays) [are provided] during which the President may exercise his authority to sign or veto the rescission disapproval bill; and > * * * if the President vetoes the rescission disapproval bill during the period provided * * * an additional 5 calendar days of session after the date of the veto.

So, Mr. President, what we have here is a proposal that would give the President the power to propose certain rescissions. He would do this within a 20-day period following the enactment of a regular or supplemental appropriations bill, or by special message when he submits his annual budget to Congress.

If the Congress takes no action within the specified time of 20 days then all of the President's proposals for rescissions would automatically go into effect and the funds appropriated by the Congress would be rescinded.

Whereas, under the present law, if Congress takes no action, the obligation of the funds must go forward. If Congress did take action and passed a bill rejecting the President's proposals in whole or in part, the President could veto that bill, of course, and it would take two-thirds of both Houses to override his veto. In other words, with one-third plus one of either body, the President could veto the Congress' disapproval of his rescissions.

So the present law is made to stand on its head. All of the advantages are placed in the hands of the President—of any President—under this amendment. I know there are some Senators who are for the line-item veto, but they are against enhanced rescissions, and I hope they understand that this amendment provides for enhanced rescissions—not a line-item veto. And once Congress ever passes legislation of this kind, the horses are out of the barns because any effort on the part of Congress then to wrest that authority and power that it will have given to any President and recoup that power and authority would have to run the obstacle course of a Presidential veto.

So, once we transfer this power to the President—if we ever transfer this power—Congress will never get it back unless it is able to pass a measure so doing over a Presidential veto. And it would require two-thirds of both Houses to recoup that power, and it would be quite unlikely that we could get the two-thirds needed.

So, enhanced rescission would be far more invasive than an item veto. Item veto would apply only to separately enumerated items in an appropriations bill, but enhanced rescissions could reach every dollar of every appropriation except mandatory appropriations. Only rarely would Congress overturn a Presidential rescission under this amendment. A determined President could tie the Congress in procedural knots. These would not be the kind of knots that Alexander, with his sword, severed in the year 330, circa, B.C., the Gordian knot.

It would take many votes in each House to retain an appropriation. Once the House and the Senate passed an appropriation and the conference report, the President could veto it. The Congress could override the veto and thus the measure would become law. But, under this amendment, the President could still rescind the items in the appropriations bill. Then the House and the Senate would have 10 days to pass a bill disapproving the President's rescissions. The President could then veto that bill and, finally, the Congress could override that veto if it could muster a two-thirds majority.

In any event, we can see that the Congress would have to, in certain instances, adopt an appropriation a number of times—and, in two instances, by super majorities—before that appropriation could be finally nailed down into law.

Congress would be in constant turmoil passing appropriations bills, trying to override the President's veto; passing disapproval resolutions or bills and trying to override the President's veto of the disapproval measures. The deck would be loaded against the peoples' representatives in Congress in their efforts to fund needed programs.

As I have indicated, today Congress can pick and choose among rescissions proposed by the President. Amendments can be made to rescission bills. This amendment would remove both of those rights. It also would require an up-or-down vote on the whole of the President's rescission message without amendment—without amendment—unless a three-fifths vote can be mustered to waive these requirements.

Mr. President, these arguments have been gone over in considerable measure before. I have pointed out that enhanced rescission power is really a Trojan horse which the President would use in fiscal battles with the Congress.

In actual practice, enhanced rescission power would allow the President to coerce the Congress into supporting his priority programs. Any Senator opposed to the President's program would likely find enhanced rescissions imposed upon that Senator's programs for his own State, the people he represents. The obvious result would be to pass the President's spending priorities, in some instances, on top of Congress' spending priorities. That could result, in some instances, in more Federal spending rather than less.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 20 minutes has expired.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, those who wish to balance the budget by granting enhanced rescission power to the President should note that two-thirds of every dollar of Federal budget authority would stand outside the reach of this enhanced rescission limit.

Mr. President, this chart represents the composition of the 1993 CBO January baseline budget authority. That total circle represents $1,612.5 trillion; $1,612.5 trillion. Of that total, the items such as net interest, Medicare, Social Security, deposit insurance, and a denomination here that is designated "all other," these are mandatory, automatic programs, entitlements, all of these are not controlled by the Appropriations Committees. The Appropriations Committees have no control over these. They are mandatory, they are required by law, they are met by formulas within the law. And so we have to abide by the laws. There is not a thing that the Appropriations Committees can do to reduce them.

So the remaining portion of the entire budget of $1,612.5 trillion, the remaining portion which is now being pointed out, over which the Appropriations Committees do have control, are defense and international—in this instance, amounting to $399.9 billion, or 19.2 percent of the total budget—and domestic discretionary, $205.1 billion or 12.7 percent of the total, both of which amount to 31.9 percent.

So the Appropriations Committees have control over only 31.9 percent of the total. That is it—lock, stock, and barrel. That is parks, U.S. forests, law enforcement, education, health services, the war on drugs, water and sewer grants, Indian schools—you name it, the bread and butter items, the appropriations that affect all the peoples of this country in one way or another every day.

So under this amendment, the President, in rescinding moneys, could only rescind the moneys that are under the control of the Appropriations Committees; in other words, 31.9 percent of the total budget. Those two items, defense and international, $309 billion and domestic discretionary, $205 billion would amount to $514 billion. But the President would not ordinarily be rescinding defense appropriations. He will be rescinding domestic discretionary which amounts to a total of only $205 billion. All we have for discretionary domestic items is $205 billion. So if the President rescinded all of it—all of it—the whole thing, $205 billion—if he rescinded the entire $205 billion, every dollar and every dime, he would be reducing the budget deficit for this year by only about one-half.

At the same time, the Government would come to a stop because the moneys for the Government's operations are right here in the little piece on the chart that represents a total of $205 billion. Everything would come to a halt. The judiciary would not have any money on which to operate. Law enforcement would come to a complete stop. The executive branch would have to stop its operation; close down.

So it does not make sense, Mr. President. It is obvious that this amendment, at best, could do little to wipe out the budget deficit, which is almost $400 billion for this year.

Those who like to say: Oh, it is the Congress' fault. The President is always saying give me a line-item veto, give me what 43 Governors have.

We are not talking about a line-item veto here today. We are talking about enhanced rescission authority. Forty-three Governors may have some kind of line-item veto, and it varies from State to State. The States do not balance their budgets, really. Mr. Clinton does not balance his budgets. Mr. Reagan did not balance his in California. Mr. Carter did not balance his in Georgia. Why? They were helped by the Federal Government.

That Federal funds pipeline runs directly from this floor to the capital of Arkansas, the capital of West Virginia, the capital of California. That Federal pipeline carries a lot of Federal moneys without which those Governors would fall very short in balancing their budgets.

They boast about how they balance their budgets. Cut out that Federal money, cut off that Federal pipeline, and they will be meeting us as we come off the elevators out here. They will not be able to balance their budgets.

So the President is just blowing smoke when he indicates that if Congress would give him a line-item veto or enhanced rescissions, he will balance the Federal budget. But I would be very fearful of giving Mr. Bush or any President enhanced rescissions for the reasons I have already explained. Once we ever give that power to any President, it will be like that old song, "I am going down this road and I ain't comin' back." We will never get that power over the purse back from the President.

It is the power of the people we are talking about, the power of the purse which belongs to the people.

We know, and the founders of our Republic knew, and those who wrote the Constitution knew, that Englishmen had struggled to wrest from tyrannical monarchs over many centuries that power over the purse and place it in the hands of the people through their representatives in the legislative branch. The British House of Commons probably originated during the Parliaments of 1339–1341 when the knights and burgesses broke away from the lords and started meeting separately.

That was in Edward III's time. Edward III reigned from 1327 to 1377. So it was during his time that appropriations, as we know them, began to be made when Parliament would make grants under certain conditions and would specify what those grants were to be spent for. They were not to be spent for anything other than for what the Commons had specified.

The English people did not really and finally nail down this control of the power over the purse by their elected representatives until William of Orange and Mary, assumed the throne in 1689.

I ask unanimous consent to proceed for another 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Our forebears who wrote this Constitution and who gave the power over the purse to the people through their elected Representatives in Congress knew the history of the English struggle, and knew that it extended over many centuries. Englishmen had shed their blood and had won this power over the purse for the elected representatives of the people by dint of the sword and the threat of the sword, and our forebears were not about to place that power over the purse in the hands of any President, any monarch, any king.

So, they set forth in the Constitution where the power over the purse would lie, and that is specifically in the legislative branch. Mr. President, we should not give that away.

Before we get too partisan in our struggle over enhanced rescission power, I urge those who might vote for this amendment to consider what would happen if the present administration is voted out of office in November.

If we look at the polls today, there is a good likelihood that the present occupant of the Oval Office will not be there after next January 20 and there will be a new President. Therefore, I suggest to those, my friends—most of whom support this amendment are on the other side of the aisle—that they stop, look, and listen carefully before they cast their vote for an amendment providing enhanced rescission power for the President.

I would say to my dear friends on the Republican side of the aisle, if Mr. Clinton is the President after next January 20, they will rue, the day that they voted for this amendment. And I will be opposed to it in his administration—if the Lord lets me live—I will be opposed to it in his administration just as strongly as I am opposed to it in the Bush administration and was opposed to it under the Reagan administration.

So I would suggest that my Republican friends think long and hard about what they may be about to do on this amendment.

Mr. President, I close by referring to some ancient history.

Mr. President, under the Roman empire the Roman consuls, the Roman generals would from time to time be voted a triumph by the Roman Senate. They were voted a triumph because of their victories over barbarian armies, or other armies, or kings. In a triumph, the Roman general would ride a chariot. He would be surrounded by his children and wife in the chariot, and he would be accompanied on foot by the general, the ministers, and the high officials of state of the country which had been defeated.

As in the case of Jugurtha, for example, the general who had lost, or the king who had been defeated, would march in the procession with a bell around his neck. It was customary for those who were condemned to be executed to wear a bell so that Roman citizens would not contaminate themselves by touching the defeated general or king. And then, of course, walking with that defeated general or king would be his wife, his children, his ministers; they would all be humiliated. And they knew that they were on their way to their deaths. They would be scourged with whips, with rods, and then executed. But in that chariot with the general who was enjoying the triumph which had been voted in his honor by the Roman Senate, was a slave, and that slave would be continually whispering in his ear: "Look behind, look at what comes after."

There was a bell and a whip fastened to the chariot to remind the triumphant general or consul, when he looked behind him, that there might come a time when he himself could be condemned and subjected to the rods and execution.

So I say to my friends on the other side: Look at what comes after. Fortune may not always smile upon you as it is smiling today when you have a President of your own party in the White House. Fortune is subject to change, and fortune may smile upon another party after the November election, in which case you undoubtedly would not want that President to have enhanced rescissions authority.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

Mr. BYRD. I yield to the distinguished Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of legislation which enables the President to control wasteful and unnecessary appropriations and thereby reduce the Federal deficit. This amendment, a statutory, separate enrollment line-item veto is identical to a measure previously considered by the 99th Congress as well as legislation reported favorably by a bipartisan vote out of the Senate Budget Committee on July 25, 1990.

Mr. President, currently, 43 States have, in one form or another, a line-item veto allowing the chief executive to limit legislation spending. As a former Governor who inherited a budget deficit in a poor State, I can testify that a line-item veto is invaluable in imposing fiscal restraint.

Mr. President, the fiscal problems of our Nation are well-known. We face annual deficits now approaching $500 billion and a total debt of $3.8 trillion. For years now, we have been toying with freezes, asset sales and sham summits, but the deficit and debt continue to grow.

Mr. President, the taxpayer, as well as the Congress, have grown weary of the smoke and mirrors and are past ready for a serious deficit reduction package. If ever there was a problem that needed to be attacked from every possible angle, it is this deficit. The President said in his State of the Union Address that he was willing to take the heat and make tough decisions with a line-item veto. Let us hold him to that commitment and make the line-item veto part of a deficit reduction measure.

Mr. President, this amendment provides that each item shall be enrolled as a separate bill and sent to the President for his approval. Therefore, each item of an appropriations bill would be subject to veto or approval, just like any other bill, and the override provisions found in article I of the Constitution would apply in the case of a veto. "Item" is defined as "any numbered section and any unnumbered paragraph" of an appropriations bill. The enrolling clerk would merely break an appropriations bill down into its component parts and send each separately enrolled provision to the President.

Mr. President, this legislation also contains a 2-year sunset provision allowing for a reasonable testing period and requiring an evaluation of the line-item veto's success. I have no question but that it will be demonstrated to be a modest, but effective, method of restraining fiscal profligacy.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the amendment I was going to offer be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, The Impoundment Control Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

TITLE XI—LEGISLATIVE LINE-ITEM VETO SEPARATE ENROLLMENT AUTHORITY LEGISLATIVE LINE-ITEM VETO

SEC. 1101. (a)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, when any general or special appropriation bill or any bill or joint resolution making supplemental, deficiency, or continuing appropriations passes both Houses of the Congress in the same form, the Secretary of the Senate (in the case of a bill or joint resolution originating in the Senate) or the Clerk of the House of Representatives (in the case of a bill or joint resolution originating in the House of Representatives) shall cause the enrolling clerk of such House to enroll each item of such bill or joint resolution as a separate bill or joint resolution, as the case may be.

(2) A bill or joint resolution that is required to be enrolled pursuant to paragraph (1)—

(A) shall be enrolled without substantive revision,

(B) shall conform in style and form to the applicable provisions of chapter 2 of title 1, United States Code (as such provisions are in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act), and

(C) shall bear the designation of the measure of which it was an item prior to such enrollment, together with such other designation as may be necessary to distinguish such bill or joint resolution from other bills or joint resolutions enrolled pursuant to paragraph (1) with respect to the same measure.

(b) A bill or joint resolution enrolled pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) with respect to an item shall be deemed to be a bill under clauses 2 and 3 of section 7 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States and shall be signed by the presiding officers of both Houses of the Congress and presented to the President for approval or disapproval (and otherwise treated for all purposes) in the manner provided for bills and joint resolutions generally.

(c) For purposes of this concurrent resolution, the term "item" means any numbered section and any unnumbered paragraph of—

(1) any general or special appropriation bill, and

(2) any bill or joint resolution making supplemental, deficiency, or continuing appropriations.

(d) The provisions of this Act shall apply to bills and joint resolutions agreed to by the Congress during the two-calendar-year period beginning with the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that the full Budget Committee report on my statutory line-item veto bill, which was passed in the committee by an affirmative vote of 13–6 in 1990, be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Senate Report 101–518]

LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO SEPARATE ENROLLMENT AUTHORITY ACT

Mr. Hollings, from the Committee on the Budget, submitted the following report together with additional and minority views

I. SUMMARY OF THE LEGISLATION

On a motion by Senator Ernest F. Hollings, by a vote of 13 to 6, the Committee reported an original bill, the "Legislative Line Item Veto Separate Enrollment Authority Act." This amendment to the Congressional Budget Act provides that each "item" in an appropriation bill shall be enrolled as a separate bill and sent to the President for his approval. Consequently, each "item" of an appropriations bill would be subject to veto or approval just like any other bill, and the override provisions found in Article I of the Constitution[1] would apply in the case of a veto.

II. NEED FOR LEGISLATION

This legislation offers an important opportunity to revise the budget process by enabling the President to control wasteful and unnecessary appropriations and thereby reduce the Federal deficit. Under current law, a specific appropriations item can be cancelled only through a cumbersome rescission process that has proved to be largely ineffective. Indeed, the President's proposed rescission can be thwarted simply by congressional inaction. In fact a substantial majority of Presidential rescissions submitted since the present law was enacted in 1974 have never been acted upon.[2]

This legislation would rectify this problem by permitting the President, in effect, to rescind appropriations items on an "up front" basis by being able to approve or veto specific items in an appropriations bill. This simple but important change in the law will permit the President more effective control of various components of the Federal budget.

III. LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

Legislative line item veto is not a new idea. Indeed until the Congressional Budget Act of 1974[3] was enacted, the President had broad impoundment authority. This power was sometimes used by the President to block appropriations deemed contrary to his budget policies.[4]

Furthermore, line item veto is not an untested idea. Forty-three states already give a similar power to their Governors, who generally regard it as a constructive tool of budget control at the State level.

United States Presidents since Ulysses S. Grant have sought the line item veto, but until now Congress has refused to cede the power of the purse and with considerable justification, because earlier Congresses seldom adopted budgets that were unbalanced. Deficits have increased in earlier decades, during wartime or recessions, yet Congress always managed to bring these deficits back to balance. However, the budget has not been balanced or shown a surplus since 1974.

Twelve measures introduced in the 100th Congress would grant the President the authority to veto a part, rather than all of an appropriations bill. In the 101st Congress, hearings on the legislative line item veto were held by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution on April 11, 1989. On June 8, 1989, the Constitution Subcommittee voted to report without recommendation, two measures, S.J. Res. 14 and S.J. Res. 23, to the full committee without recommendation. On April 26, 1990, the Committee approved S.J. Res. 14 and S.J. Res. 23. Tables I and II note recent Congressional actions on legislative line item veto and other related measures.[5]

[1] Section 7. Clause 1. All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other Bills.

Clause 2. Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; If he approves he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by Yeas and Nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays expected) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Clause 3. Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives my be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitation prescribed in the Case of a Bill. [4] In President Richard Nixon's Annual Budget Message to the Congress on January 29, 1971, he discussed reforming the budget process:

"Reform of the budget process is long overdue. Fifty years have passed since the Federal budget system currently in use was adopted. The system was a major step forward in 1921. Because of congressional inaction, it has become a travesty a half century later.

"Enactment of appropriations 6 months or more after the start of the fiscal year they are supposed to cover is evidence of a major weakness. I have sent two budgets to the Congress. In each, I have had to formulate budget proposals for the year ahead without knowing what the Congress would provide in its action on the prior year's budget, which was transmitted 11 months earlier. Even now, as this message is being written, action on last year's appropriations request for one department has not been completed.

"I have, therefore, had to act on parts of the budget without knowing the totals that would result. This is an intolerable situation, but one that the Congress seems to accept as the normal way of doing business. It completes action on appropriation bills over a 10- to 12-month period without any goal or determination of the total expenditures that will result after the last bill is passed.

"Excess in the number and detail of appropriations often diverts attention to minutiae. It also impairs the ability of agency heads to manage their agencies responsibly and economically.

"The budget is our principal instrument for coordinated management of Federal programs and finances. Close cooperation between the executive and legislative branches is needed now to make the budget an efficient and effective instrument for this purpose. Therefore we must seek a more rational, orderly budget process. The people deserve one, and our Government, the largest fiscal unit in the free world, requires it.

"Furthermore, Federal credit programs which the Congress has placed outside the budget-guaranteed and insured loans, or loans by federally sponsored enterprises—escape regular review by either the executive or the legislative branch. The evaluation of these extra budgetary programs has not been fully consistent with budget items. Their effects on fiscal policy have not been rigorously included in the overall budget process. And their effects on overall debt management are not coordinated well with the overall public debt policy. For these reasons, I will propose legislation to enable these credit programs to be reviewed and coordinated along with other Federal programs." Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States—Richard Nixon: Containing the Public Messages, Speeches, and Statements of the President—1971, The United States Government Printing Office, p. 87 (1971).

98th	Amendment to H.R. 2878	Gingrich	January 31, 1984 House	144–248	Item Veto.
98th	Amendment to H.R. 2708	Gekas	February 23, 1984 House	145–243	Separate Enrollment (variation)
98th	Amendment No. 3045 to H.R. 2163	Mattingly	May 3, 1984 Senate	56–34 (out of Order)	Item Veto.

One measure introduced in the 101st Congress similar to this legislation has been referred to the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration. Senator Humphrey offered S. 3 in an attempt to achieve results similar to granting an item veto authority by requiring that each item in an appropriations measure be separately enrolled.

In addition, Senator Roth offered S. 21, a proposal to grant the President item veto authority rather than enhanced rescission power. S. 21 amends Title X of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act. Still another measure offered by Congressman Campbell, H.R. 297, asserts that the Constitution already grants the President item veto power, and encourages him to exercise this power.

In summary, there have been numerous legislative line item veto proposals entertained in the last several Congresses. Such proposals will continue to attract Congressional attention given the desire to exercise greater fiscal control over ever-increasing budget deficits.

IV. HOW THE PROPOSAL WORKS

This legislation provides that each "item" of any appropriation bill shall be enrolled as a separate bill for presentation to the President. The President would then be able to sign or veto separate pieces of legislation. Any vetoed "item" would have to be returned, along with the President's objections, to the House in which it originated. As mandated in the Constitution, any vetoed measure could be overridden by a two-thirds vote of each House.

This legislation defines "item" as any and all paragraphs and numbered sections contained in appropriation bills. The legislation contains a "sunset" provision under which the line item veto authority will expire in two years unless specifically renewed by Congress.

This last provision is important. The automatic sunset provision gives an insurance policy against potential abuses in the use of the line item veto. It may be invoked if circumstances arise that make it clear that it is not providing a reasonable restraint on excessive federal spending.

V. ROLL-CALL VOTE IN COMMITTEE

Senator Hollings offered an original bill to amend the Congressional Budget Act that would create a legislative line item veto separate enrollment authority.

The Committee agreed to the Hollings motion to report the Legislative Line Item Veto Separate Enrollment Authority Act by a vote of 13 Yeas to 6 Nays.

YEAS

Mr. Hollings, Mr. Exon, Mr. Simon, Mr. Conrad, Mr. Robb, Mr. Domenici,* Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Boschwitz, Mr. Symms, Mr. Grassley, Mr. Kasten, Mr. Nickles, Mr. Bond.

NAYS

Mr. Sasser, Mr. Riegle,* Mr. Lautenberg, Mr. Sanford, Mr. Wirth, Mr. Rudman.*

*This vote was made by proxy.

VI. JOINT REFERRAL UNDER THE STANDING ORDER

The Committee on the Budget has jurisdiction over the matter in the Legislative Line Item Veto Separate Enrollment Authority Act by virtue of the standing order on the referral of budget-process legislation into which the Senate entered on August 4, 1977. Upon the reporting of the Act, the Presiding Officer will refer it to the Committee on Governmental Affairs pursuant to the standing order, with instructions that the Committee on Governmental Affairs shall have 30 days to report or be discharged.

VII. REGULATORY IMPACT

Paragraph 11(b)(1) of rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate requires that each report accompanying a bill evaluate "the regulatory impact which would be incurred in carrying out the bill."[6] The enactment of this legislation would not have significant regulatory impact.

VIII. COST ESTIMATE

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, August 22, 1990.

Hon. JIM SASSER,
Chairman, Committee on the Budget,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has reviewed a bill that would provide for a legislative line item veto through separate enrollment authority, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on the Budget, July 25, 1990. We estimate that the bill would result in no significant cost to the federal government and in no cost to state and local governments.

The bill would require the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House to direct the enrolling clerk of each body to enroll each item of any appropriation bill or resolution as a separate bill or resolution. This would allow the President to sign or veto each appropriation item as a separate act. Under current practice, the President can sign or veto an entire appropriation bill, but cannot deal separately with individual items in such a bill. The legislation would apply to bills and joint resolutions agreed to by the Congress during the next two calendar years.

We do not expect the government to incur any significant increased cost from enrolling appropriation bills as specified in this legislation. It is possible that the availability of the line item veto could result in some savings starting in fiscal year 1991, but there is no basis for predicting how much the President would use it or how often the Congress would override such vetoes.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is James Hearn, who can be reached at 226-2860.

Sincerely,

ROBERT F. HALE
(For Robert D. Reischauer, Director).

IX. ADDITIONAL VIEWS

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF SENATOR HOLLINGS

On July 25th, 1990, the Committee voted to report favorably my statutory line-item veto proposal. Currently, 43 states have, in one form or another, a line-item veto which allows the Chief Executive to limit legislative spending. As a former Governor who inherited a budget deficit in a poor state, I can testify that a line-item veto is invaluable in imposing fiscal restraint.

The fiscal problems confronting this country are well known, and are, in fact, surging, not receding. We face actual deficits in excess of $400 billion. For years, we have been toying with freezes, asset sales and sham summits, but the deficit and debt continue to grow. The taxpayer, as well as the Congress, have grown weary of the smoke and mirrors, and it is time to enact a serious deficit reduction package. If ever there was a problem that needed to be attacked from every possible angle, it is this deficit. The President has said he will take heat and make the tough decisions with a line-item veto. Let's hold him to that commitment and make the line-item veto part of a deficit reduction measure.

The bill approved by the Committee is a statutory, separate enrollment line-item veto with a two year sunset provision that is identical to a bill considered by the Senate in the 99th Congress. It provides that each "item" shall be enrolled as a separate bill and sent to the President for his approval. Therefore, each "item" of an appropriations bill would be subject to veto or approval just like any other bill, and the override provisions found in Article I of the Constitution would apply in the case of a veto.

"Item" is defined as "any numbered section and any unnumbered paragraph" of an appropriations bill. The Enrolling Clerk would merely break an appropriations bill down into its component parts and send each separately enrolled provision to the President.

The bill also contains a two year sunset provision. This will allow for a reasonable testing period and require an evaluation of how well the line-item veto has worked. I have no question but that it will be demonstrated to be a modest, but effective, method of restraining fiscal profligacy.

Finally, I would like to make a part of the record a history of the line-item veto found in the June-July issue of Congressional Digest. It provides a thorough discussion of the origins and development of the concept at the federal level.

ERNEST F. HOLLINGS.

LINE ITEM VETO

*He Who Decides a Case Without Hearing the Other Side * * * Tho He Decide Justly, Cannot Be Considered Just*—Seneca.

FOREWORD

The United States Constitution provides that the President may sign a measure into law or veto it in its entirety. The proposed line item veto would grant authority to the President to veto specific items within appropriations bills while approving the remainder. With this alternative, the President could remove one or more features of a particular bill.

The question of whether or not the President should be given such power has been the subject of a longstanding controversy. The line item veto first appeared in the Constitution of the Confederate States in 1861. Later, Ulysses S. Grant became the first President to call for such an expansion of the veto. Since then, hundreds of line item veto measures have been introduced in Congress, but none has been approved.

Discussion of the line item veto has persisted, especially in light of the mounting concern over the size of the Federal deficit. Along with proposals to balance the Federal budget, the line item veto has been promoted by many as an essential means of bringing Federal spending under control.

The appropriations process begins in the House. Each year, the 13 House appropriations subcommittees prepare spending bills to meet the budget needs of the agencies within their jurisdictions. These include "Defense," "Interior," "Labor, Health and Human Services and Education," and other broad areas. Appropriations bills start with the budget requests submitted to the Congress by the agencies themselves. The subcommittees review these requests, assess the programs involved and report their bills with any recommended changes to the full Appropriations Committee, which then reports the bills to the full House. Following House passage, each appropriations bill is referred to the Senate, where the process of committee review and floor action is repealed.

If action has not been completed on one or more regular appropriations bills by the start of the fiscal year, Congress may pass a "continuing resolution" to provide temporary budget authority for the affected agencies. Congress can also pass a supplemental appropriations bill at any time to provide budget authority beyond the original estimates for certain programs.

More and more, Congress has been criticized for formulating omnibus appropriations measures that cover wide areas and comprise much detail. In addition, the appropriations "rider" (a provision amending existing law) increasingly has become a device for changing Federal programs through the appropriations process.

The proponents of the line item veto, therefore, argue that the President's authority has been thwarted by these practices, and that expanded veto power would help to keep Congress in check. They further contend that the line item veto is needed to help reduce Federal spending and lower the deficit.

Opponents argue against the line item veto on the grounds that it would lessen congressional responsibility for making budgetary decisions and heighten the President's legislative role—leading to an unwarranted expansion of the power of the Executive over Congress. They also express concern that the line item veto in effect would give the President the ability to punish or coerce individual Members into supporting his policies, and that this might damage a Member's ability to properly represent the interests of his or her constituents in matters of local interest.

The two proposals reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee call for a constitutional amendment to grant line item veto authority to the President. Thus, either would require passage by two-thirds of both the House Senate as well as ratification by three-fourths of the States.

EVOLUTION OF FEDERAL BUDGET POLICY

The current budget process has evolved from a set of informal procedures during the early years of the Republic into the complex system in use today. The addition of presidential line item veto authority would constitute still another significant change in our Federal financial policy.

Early Federal Debt Policy

A major controversy in the First Congress was over whether the new U.S. Government should assume the debts contracted by the States during the War of Independence. The State debts were assumed. Together with other Federal debts owed to both foreign and domestic lenders, they comprised a total of under $100 million.

The banking system and the amount of Federal revenue to be raised were principal policy issues of the pre-Civil War era. The main source of Federal revenue was from import duties.

Income Tax and The Depression

The national debt had remained at some $1 billion from the turn of the century until World War I. By 1919, wartime expenditures has raised it to $25 billion. The adoption in 1913 of an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the income tax opened a new source of Federal revenue.

The Bueau of the Budget was created by an act of Congress in 1921. It was located in the Treasury Department, but under the immediate direction of the President. The Act established the procedure for creating a budget consisting of revenue and expenditure estimates, to be submitted annually by the President to the Congress.

The national debt was reduced by some $1 billion annually in the 1920s until 1930 when it became $16 billion. International and national financial policy was drastically altered by the global depression. Central to the controversies during the Roosevelt era were the New Deal "pump-priming" programs intended to improve the economy. The Natonal debt rose to $51 billion by 1940.

President Roosevelt transferred the Bureau of the Budget from the Treasury to the White House in 1939. Federal finance had, in effect, become an instrument of policy beyond administering governmental expenses.

Post World War II

By 1946, war expenditures had forced the Federal debt to $271 billion.

Under a Nixon Administration reorganization plan, the Bureau of the Budget was designated the Office of Management and Budget in 1970. The expansion of the Federal Government and strains between a Democratic-controlled Congress and the Republican Nixon Administration led to the enactment of legislation creating the present budget process. By the early 1980s, the expenditures of the Vietnam war, combined with those of the "Great Society" programs, established an annual level of expenditures over $200 billion.

The 1974 Budget Act

The purpose of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Act of 1974 was "to provide Congress with the procedures, analytical capabilities and the authority to make the Federal budget a more useful tool of national economic policy." The Act provided for congressional overview of the Federal budget and curtailed the power of the President to impound or rescind funds for Federal programs. Under the Act the Congress focuses on overall budget totals and relates individual appropriations actions to one another within a general set of spending priorities.

THE PRESIDENTIAL VETO

The following language from the Constitution of the United States of America grants veto power to the President.

The Constitution of the United States Article I, Section 7

"Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approves he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a law. But in all cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively.

"If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

"Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill."

THE BUDGET PROCESS AND THE PRESIDENT

The following is excerpted from an April 1990 report of the Library of Congress' Congressional Research Service on "The President and the Budget Process."

Summary

Conflicting budget priorities, along with concern over the size of the Federal deficit, have accentuated the institutional tensions between the Executive and Legislative branches inherent in the Federal budget process.

Congress exercises its "power of the purse" by enacting appropriations measures, but the President has broad authority as chief executive in the implementation stage of the budget process. It is at this stage that the budget authority provided by Congress is actually spent by the Federal Government.

Impoundment, whereby the President withholds or delays the spending of appropriated funds, provides one important mechanism for budgetary control during the execution stage, but Congress retains oversight responsibilities at this stage as well.

The Impoundment Control Act of 1974 established two categories of impoundments: deferrals, or temporary delays in funding availability; and rescissions, or permanent cancellation of the designated budget authority.

The 1974 law also stipulated different procedures for congressional review and control of the two types of impoundment. With a rescission, the funds must be made available for obligation unless both Houses of Congress take action to approve the rescission request (forwarded in a message from the President) within 45 days of "continuous session."

Consideration of impoundment reform has become increasingly joined with that of an item veto for the President.

The Constitution provides that the President may sign a bill into law or veto the measure in its entirety. Depending on specific provisions, rescission may be viewed as approaching a functional equivalence with an item veto: the President identifies certain items in an appropriations law for possible elimination by sending an impoundment message to Congress.

Background and Analysis

The recent report of the National Economic Commission, among other commentaries, has suggested that the "balance of power on budget issues has swung too far from the Executive toward the Legislative branch."

Debate about the appropriate relationship between the branches in the Federal budget process seems endemic, given the constitutional necessity of shared power in this sphere.

Under the Constitution, Congress possesses the "power of the purse" ("No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law"), but the President enjoys broad authority as the chief executive who "shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

Federal budget documents refer to three main stages in the budget process: (1) executive formulation and transmittal of the President's budget recommendations; (2) congressional action and (3) budget execution and control.

Budget execution involves the actual spending of funds as appropriations laws and implemented. Impoundment for funds by the President represents an important component in budget execution.

History of Impoundment

Impoundment of Federal funds refers to Executive action to withhold or delay the spending of appropriated funds.

One useful distinction among impoundment actions, which received statutory recognition in the 1974 Impoundment Control Act, focuses on duration, whether the President's intent is permanent cancellation of the funds in question (rescission) or merely a temporary delay in availability (deferral).

Virtually all Presidents have impounded funds in a routine manner as an exercise of Executive discretion to accomplish efficiency in management. The creation of budgetary reserves as a part of the apportionment process required by the Antideficiency Acts provided formal structure for such routine impoundments, which originated with an administrative regulation issued in 1921 by the Bureau of the Budget, and then received a statutory base in 1950. Impoundments for policy reasons, whether short-term or permanent, have proved far more controversial.

In the 1950s and 1960s, disputes over the impoundment authority resulted from the refusal of successive Presidents to fund certain weapons systems to the full extent authorized by Congress.

These confrontations between the President and Congress revolved around the constitutional role of Commander-in-Chief and tender to focus on relatively narrow issues of weapons procurement. President Johnson made broader use of his power to impound by ordering the deferral of billions of dollars of spending during the Vietnam war in an effort to restrain inflationary pressure in the economy. While some of these impoundment actions before the time of President Nixon were motivated by policy concerns, they typically involved temporary spending delays, with the President acting in consultation with congressional leaders, so that a protracted conformation between the branches was avoided.

Conflict over the use of impoundments greatly increased during the Nixon Administration, and eventually involved the courts as well as Congress and the President. In the 92nd and 93rd Congresses (1971–1974), the confrontation intensified as the President sought to employ the tool of impoundment to reorder national priorities and alter programs previously approved by Congress.

Following President Nixon's reelection in 1972, the Administration announced major new impoundment actions, affecting a variety of domestic programs.

For example, a moratorium was imposed on subsidized housing programs, community development activities were suspended and disaster assistance was reduced. Several farm programs were likewise targeted for elimination.

Perhaps the most controversial of the Nixon impoundments involved the Clear Water Act funds. Court challenges eventually reached the Supreme Court, which in early 1975 decided Train v. City of New York, on narrower grounds that the extent of the president's impoundment authority.

During these impoundment conflicts of the Nixon years, Congress responded not only with ad hoc efforts to restore individual programs, but also with gradually more restrictive appropriations language. Arguably, the most authoritative response was the enactment of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (ICA).

In order to effect a needed compromise in comference, the ICA differentiated two categories of impoundments: deferrals, or temporary delays in funding availability; and rescissions, or permanent cancellations of designated budget authority.

The 1974 law also required the President to inform Congress of all proposed rescissions and deferrals and to submit specified information regarding each action.

The ICA further required the Comptroller General to oversee Executive compliance with the law and to notify Congress if the President failed to report an impoundment or imporperly classified an action. Before 1974, the "rescission" and "deferral" terms did not appear central to the impoundment debate.

While the accumulation of budgetary reserves under the Antideficiency Act provided an antecedent to deferrals, the earlier laws limited deferrals to routine administrative functions.

Congressional Review of Rescissions

In the case of a rescission, the ICA provided that the funds must be made available for obligation unless both Houses of Congress take action to approve the rescission request with 45 days of "continuous session" (recesses of more than three days not counted).

In practice, this usually means that funds proposed for rescission not approved by Congress must be made available for obligation after about 60 calendar days, although the period can extend to 75 days or longer.

Congress may approve all or only a portion of the funds requested for rescission. Congress may also choose after the 45-day period to rescind funds previously requested for rescission by the President.

It is also possible for Congress to rescind funds never proposed for rescission by the President, but such action is not subject to the ICA procedures. The ICA makes no mention of procedures for congressional disapproval of a rescission request during the 45-day period. However, some administrations have voluntarily followed a policy of releasing funds before the expiration of the review period, if either the House or the Senate authoritatively indicates that it does not intend to approve the rescission.

In the fall of 1987, as a component of legislation to raise the limit on the public debt (P.L. 100–119), Congress enacted several budget process reforms. Section 207 involved the rescission authority of the President. It provides a statutory prohibition against the practice, sometimes used by Presidents when Congress failed to act on a rescission proposal within the allotted period, of resubmitting as new rescission proposal covering identical or very similar matter.

By using such resubmissions repeatedly, with accompanying delays of 45 days or more, the President might continue to tie up funds even though Congress, by its inaction, had already rejected virtually the same proposal. The prohibition against such seriatim rescission proposals (contained in the 1987 law) applies for the duration of the appropriation, so that it may remain in effect for two or more fiscal years.

Reviews of Deferrals

The original provisions of Title X allowed a deferral to continue in effect for the period proposed by the President (not to extend beyond the end of the fiscal year so as to become a de facto rescission), unless either the House or the Senate took action to disapprove it. This procedure, known as a one-House legislative veto, was invalidated by the 1983 Supreme Court decision in I.N.S. v. Chadha.

Initially, however, the impact of the 1983 decision on impoundment control appeared modest. For one thing, Congress had previously adopted the practice of rejecting deferrals through language in appropriation bills, subject to the full legislative process, rather than by one-House resolutions.

Another factor facilitating accommodation between Congress and the President was the restraint exercised by the Office of Management and Budget in the initial aftermath of the Chadha decision. However, the President's budget for Fiscal Year 1987, submitted early in 1986, proposed substantial amounts for deferral, especially targeting housing programs.

The National League of Cities, joined by several other organizations and four Members of Congress, challenged the legality of such "policy" deferrals (as distinguished from deferrals for routine administrative purposes previously authorized by the Antideficiency Act).

In May of 1986, a Federal district court ruled that the President's deferral authority under the ICA was no longer available, since it was inseverable from the one-House veto provision in the law, previously held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court; in January of 1987, the decision was affirmed on appeal (City of New Haven v. United States).

Section 206 of the Balanced Budget Reaffirmation Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-199) served to codify the Appeals Court decision in the New Haven case. The provisions in the ICA as amended no longer sanction policy deferrals.

Rather, deferrals are now permissible only for contingencies, for efficiency or as specifically provided for by law. Section 206 also reaffirmed certain provisions of the 1974 law relating to enforcement responsibilities of the Comptroller General, who is empowered to sue the Executive for violations of the ICA. Early in 1990, the use of deferrals again engendered controversy when the President submitted to Congress an impoundment message covering 19 deferrals, amounting to over $2.19 billion, in the DOD budget for FY 1990. The justification for each deferral cited "changes in requirements in view of promsing developments in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe." Most deferrals involved congressional "add ons" to the Administration's budget request; the President favored the transfer of funds being deferred to other accounts.

After reviewing the deferral actions, GAO reported to Congress March 6, 1990, that 17 of the 19 deferrals (involving almost $1.77 billion) were made for policy reasons and were not authorized under the Impoundment Control Act. In a letter dated March 28, 1990, the OMB Director informed Congress that the Administration no longer intended to withhold the funds included in these deferrals. Thereupon the funds became available for obligation, and a possible confrontation in the courts was avoided.

GAO is empowered to sue for release of funds withheld without authority by the Executive Branch.

VETO PROCEDURES IN THE STATES

The following is based on an appraisal of the line item veto prepared by the House Committee on the Budget.

Currently, some 43 States allow item vetoes in appropriations bills. Several States, including Indiana, Maine, Nevada, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont, authorize general vetoes of bills but do not authorize item vetoes. North Carolina does not permit its governor to veto any legislative bills.

Many States revised their constitutions after the Civil War to respond to the practice of adding legislative riders to appropriations measures and to provide their governors more power to fulfill State constitutional mandates for State budgets to be in balance.

State practices

Although most States have amended their constitutions to include line item power for their chief executive, the practices adopted vary widely.

In Alabama, for example, the governor may veto a major budget bill entirely or offer executive amendments, which may delete or add figures and language. In Illinois, the governor has reduction veto power on a particular line item. The amount he or she may approve becomes law unless his or her veto is overridden by the State legislature. In Indiana, on the other hand, a court has ruled that the governor—in vetoing items—must veto a complete section and only in an appropriations bill.

Mechanisms differ

The mechanisms used by States also differ with respect to legislative language accompanying appropriations.

In Colorado, for example, the governor can veto accompanying language only if he or she deems it unconstitutional. In Illinois, the State constitution prohibits substantive language in an appropriations measure.

In Michigan, the governor may veto distinct items of appropriations. The rule has been that when a line item is vetoed, the language accompanying that line item is also vetoed. In Wisconsin, substantive program language contained in the budget bill can be item vetoed apart from appropriation figures.

Constitutional provisions

Constitutional provisions again differ widely from State to State, especially with regard to the manner in which executive vetoes may be overridden by the legislature.

The vetoes required in each house to pass appropriations and revenue bills or items over the governor's veto include: majority elected (e.g. Arkansas), three-fifths elected (Maryland), two-thirds present (Texas), and two-thirds elected (Mississippi).

State and Federal differences

There are certain areas of distinction between the Federal and State budgetary processes. The comparisons are cited by both proponents and opponents of the proposal to give the President line item veto authority.

Balanced budget. A balanced budget is required in 49 States. The 43 governors authorized to veto items in State bills all operate in this context. Since it is an accepted practice, the balanced budget concept is not a prominent issue in the States.

Although a balanced Federal budget is a sought-after goal, there have been times when the Federal budget has been used for purposes of impacting the national economy, a usage beyond the function of financing government operations. In addition, such items as national defense, for example, are Federal, not State, responsibilities.

X. MINORITY VIEWS OF SENATOR SASSER

The Hollings proposal for a line-item veto conflicts with the separation of powers. Giving the President this line-item veto would yield additional fiscal powers to an already powerful Presidency. The line-item veto proposal would also threaten the Constitutional principle that the power of the purse—one of the few checks and balances[7] on the Presidency short of impeachment—is vested in the Congress.

The President already has considerable power over the budget process. He proposes the budget and he can focus national attention on the budget in a way that no legislature composed of 535 members can. The President exercises extensive power to defer expenditures. He can and does propose various rescissions which are sometimes agreed to by the Congress. Finally, the President retains his Constitutional power to veto appropriation bills—a power which can significantly shape the appropriations process.

The Constitution gives Congress the power to write laws. It gives the President the power to veto a bill in its entirety or to sign a bill in its entirety. With the enactment of this legislation, the President would be granted undue power to change the shape of appropriations legislation. The ability to strike sections of an appropriations bill is in effect a right to amend without check or balance. This is contrary to the separations of powers contained in Article I of the Constitution.

Therefore, I must strongly oppose the Hollings Legislative Line Item Veto Separate Enrollment Authority Act. For as the Federalist Papers[8] noted so well, "the accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive, and judiciary, in the same hands, whether of one, a few or many, and whether hereditary, self-appointed, or elective, may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny."[9]

XI. CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW

Pursuant to paragraph 12 of rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, this committee finds no changes in existing law caused by the passage of this measure, the Legislative Line Item Veto.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the distinguished Senator from South Carolina supports a line-item veto but opposes enhanced rescission.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I support the enhanced rescission right now.

Mr. BYRD. All right. I am sorry.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I ask my distinguished colleague from West Virginia, are we ready to make a point of order?

Mr. BYRD. Yes; does the Senator wish to make a point of order.

Mr. SASSER. Has all time been yielded back?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-seven seconds remain.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I yield my time.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, has all time been yielded back on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not hear the President pro tempore. Did he yield back all his time?

Mr. BYRD. Yes, Mr. President. I will state once again that this is not a line-item veto amendment. This is an enhanced rescissions amendment. I hope that Senators will reject it. I hope they will support the point of order. The motion will be made to waive the Budget Act, and I hope they will vote against waiving the Budget Act.

I yield the remainder of my time.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, all time having been yielded back on both sides, under section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, a point of order lies against legislation dealing with a matter within the Budget Committee's jurisdiction if the Budget Committee had not reported it out. Under section 904(c) of that act, the votes of 60 Senators would be necessary to waive that point of order.

So, Mr. President, I raise a point of order that the pending amendment violates section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I move to waive section 306 of the Budget Act, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to waive.

The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SANFORD], and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 40, nays 56, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this question the yeas are 40, the nays are 56. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The Chair recognizes the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. LEAHY. I yield for that, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The McCain amendment contains matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Budget and has been offered to a bill that has not been referred to or discharged from that committee. As a result, the amendment violates section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act. The point of order is sustained, and the amendment falls.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. LEAHY].

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I would like to, first off, commend the managers of the bill, commend them for their efforts to increase funding for women's health research. I also want to commend the managers of this bill for the special attention paid to the issue of breast cancer.

I am particularly pleased they have included my language directing the National Cancer Institute to conduct a study to find out why breast cancer hits women in Vermont and the Eastern States the hardest of any place in this country. We know that breast cancer is more devastating in Vermont, in the eastern United States, than any other part of the country, but we do not know why. No studies have been done to determine why. But now, with the inclusion of my language in this bill, we are taking a giant step forward to find out just why that has happened.

This needed study is part of legislation that Congressman SANDERS, of Vermont, and I introduced this year. In fact, we passed it this year, but the President rejected it when he vetoed the National Institutes of Health reauthorization bill. I understand the politics in that veto, but the veto was a bitter disappointment to me and to millions of Americans across the country. I believe it sent, in many ways, a signal: Election year politics are more important than women's lives.

Mr. President, breast cancer is killing our mothers and our wives, our sisters and our daughters. Every 3 minutes another American woman is going to be diagnosed with this disease. Every 12 minutes another woman in the United States of America will die. And despite decades of research and experimentation, there is still no certain cure for it. In fact, there is no known cause of breast cancer. It is time to wage war on this disease and put a stop to it. We have to know what causes breast cancer. We have to know why it strikes women in the eastern part of the United States more than the rest of the country. And we have to know what cure there could be for breast cancer.

The $220 million in breast cancer research funds contained in this bill finally gives this disease the attention it deserves. It is going to expedite our researchers' race for a cure. It says the U.S. Senate and the U.S. Congress recognize we have a disease which is reaching, in some parts of the country, nearly epidemic proportion, a disease which has been ignored for too long and one we will now face up to.

The Leahy-Sanders breast cancer study will target the specific concerns of women in Vermont and either other States that have the highest breast cancer mortality rates. This will not bring about a cure for those women who have contracted breast cancer, but it will at least say, in those eight States, we will try to find out why this disproportionate number of cases has occurred and then take the steps that are at all possible to stop it from happening to others.

I have heard from women throughout my State, both those who have suffered from breast cancer and those who fear the possibility of it, saying it is time to act. Some of these letters have been the most gripping letters I have read. I have met with many of the women. Within the past few weeks a very good friend and supporter of mine died of breast cancer. I have another close friend of my wife and mine who suffers from this and heroically works day after day to help others with breast cancer. It is time we respond to them, not just in Vermont but throughout the country.

So, Mr. President, I applaud Congressman SANDERS for his relentless devotion to keeping this issue alive, going to Democrats and Republicans alike in the House to get their support. He and I are determined to work for the passage of the Cancer Registries Act, but the women in Vermont should not have to wait another day wondering when we are going to have answers to the important questions about the cause of breast cancer.

We should also note we have come this far in this legislation because in this body Republicans and Democrats have worked together to support this legislation. I thank the Senators in both parties who have joined with me on this. I think we will give hope to millions of women in this country. Certainly we will give answers to those women in Vermont and the other eight States most heavily hit by this scourge.

I thank the managers for their courtesy in letting me step in to say this at this time. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP].

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the Helms amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is not a sufficient second.

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, for the purpose of offering another amendment, I ask unanimous consent that the pending Helms amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HARKIN. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa reserves the right to object.

Mr. HARKIN. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside.

AMENDMENT NO. 3014

(Purpose: To provide $2,000,000 for the Children's Television Workshop literacy project entitled "Ghostwriter")

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN], for himself and Mr. INOUYE, proposes an amendment numbered 3014.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 68, line 1, insert "and $2,000,000 for the Children's Television Workshop literacy project entitled 'Ghostwriter'" before the semicolon.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am offering this amendment in behalf of the distinguished Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE] and myself. It deals with funds already provided in the bill. It directs the Department of Education to spend the funds allocated by the Appropriations Committee's bill for a multimedia literacy project. I am advised that the amendment has been considered by both sides of the aisle, and I trust that it will be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, the amendment which Senator COCHRAN and I are proposing today would codify in bill language the intent of our committee during the past 3 years. It would provide $2 million to the Department of Education for the production of a new nationwide multimedia project designed to improve children's reading and writing skills.

Mr. President, giving our children the ability to read with comprehension and write with coherence is one of our Nation's crucial educational challenges. We are fortunate that the Children's Television Workshop, producers of the national public television treasure, "Sesame Street," has undertaken to meet this challenge. Their program is called "Ghostwriter," and is the most ambitious national educational media project since "Sesame Street."

"Ghostwriter" has been designed with the guidance of a distinguished panel of American educators to put exciting, appealing literacy activities into the hands of millions of children via their local PBS station. In addition, 20 million minimagazines and 80,000 activity guides will be distributed to youngsters and youth organizations, including Girls, Inc., Boys and Girls Clubs of America, 4-H Youth Development Education, and the YMCA of the United States. The American Library Association and the United States Postal Service are also actively assisting "Ghostwriter."

The workshop has assembled an unprecedented public/private partnership to fund the $20.8 million cost of this project. It includes $7.5 million from the workshop itself, $5 million from NIKE, Inc., largest private contribution ever for a children's educational media project, and grants from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trust, the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, and from PBS and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Over the past 3 years, the workshop has worked with the Department of Education to enlist them as a major partner in "Ghostwriter," as they have been in every major workshop educational project since "Sesame Street." While the Department has been supportive of the concept, they have been short of funds. Finally, just weeks ago, the Department made a grant of $300,000 to "Ghostwriter," as much as they are able to do absent a substantial specific appropriation. A $2 million appropriation to the Department for this project will be about 10 percent of the cost of this major national literacy initiative, a prudent investment which leverages nearly 10 times that much toward the total project.

We are pleased that the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee has included an authorization for this project in its pending office of educational research and improvement bill.

Mr. President, inclusion of this appropriation will be an effective major contribution to the location of our Nation's children, and we urge its support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? The Chair recognizes the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN].

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the amendment does not add funds to the bill and therefore does not require any offsetting cut. This amendment simply strengthens the Appropriations Committee position by directing the Department of Education to spend the funds allocated by the committee for a multimedia literacy project. It is a good amendment. We have no objections to it on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to amendment 3014 offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment (No. 3014) was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we are making some progress, not as rapidly as I had hoped. We took a lot of time on the line-item rescission amendment of Senator MCCAIN, and before that we had a long discussion on an amendment that was not offered by Senator PRYOR.

There are a lot of amendments yet to be offered, Mr. President, and I hope Senators will come over and offer them. We are here. We have a list of amendments that was agreed to last night, and I hope that Senators will come over. Otherwise, we are going to be here until 10, 11, or 12 o'clock tonight.

So, Mr. President, we are here, ready to take amendments. With that, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that I may proceed as if in morning business for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CABLE TELEVISION

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, as you know, we have been watching the actions of the House. They have just passed a conference report on the cable reregulation bill. I was very interested in the numbers over there as passed this time.

Mr. President, we will be considering that piece of legislation and that conference report in this body in the near future. I just wanted to remind my colleagues as the debate opens up that there are some features and some fundamental differences as we get into the debate on the reregulation of cable television. I just want to throw out some of these figures so that over the weekend, until we get into the debate on this. that should be considered; and, maybe some questions, to ask some questions about just where we should be going as far as setting policy with regard to cable television.

Cable television has been one of the great growth stories in the last 5 years. It has only been deregulated basically since 1986. It has performed tremendous services and brought great advances to most of our communities here in the United States, and we should not overlook that; that there are people receiving television programming now who until that happened never would have had access to it before.

Currently, there are 76 program networks in this country, programs like Cable News Network, the Arts and Entertainment Channel, Learning Channel, Family Channel, Disney Channel, the National Work Channel, Black Entertainment Channel, Court TV, Comedy Central, the Weather Channel, Nickelodeon, local access channels, community access channels, and like C-SPAN II we are seen on now, and we also have C-SPAN I. The list goes on.

It has created nearly 70,000 new jobs during the 1980's; in 1991 alone over 4,000 new jobs. These are not just little minimal jobs. These are high paying jobs. That is not counting the industries that are allied with the cable industry when you talk about all of the support manufacturing, distribution, construction materials, and this type thing. But they are high paying jobs.

In my State of Montana, cable industry pays nearly double the average wage. I have to take a look at that and understand what this Congress does and how it will affect that.

What is Congress' response to all of this, all of this industry that has created all of these jobs and has phenomenal growth in a time when we had a so-called slow growth? Our answer is to impose stifling regulations on that industry, which, in turn, will discourage investment, which, in turn, will discourage the employment outlook and job opportunities in each and every neighborhood in America. It will say "no" to innovative programming, to new transmission technologies like fiber optics all of which are essential for job creation in the years ahead and on and on into the 21st century.

The issue, Mr. President, is quite simple. Congress wants to dictate, and wrap around the cable industry to the point that new jobs and programming creation stops. I think this is bad news for our economy. It is bad news for our consumers. Frankly, reregulation is the wrong answer.

We would switch over to the competition channel, we should anyway, to the competition channel and try to find some of our solutions for some of the concerns that we have now about the cable industry. Competition, not reregulation, will create the most substantial benefits for consumers, and the greatest opportunity for jobs in America.

What are we asking about? What have we been talking about on this floor? Where has our economy gone?

No. 1, it is not that bad.

No. 2, we keep shutting the doors on job creation to jump start an economy that, yes, this Congress should be trying just as hard to do as our President.

Competition, not reregulation, will drive down rates and improve service quality while promoting industry development and technological development. Competition, not reregulation, will bring the best service at the best price to the consumer.

So I believe that competition, not regulation, should be the philosophy that drives this economy. It always has been. Competition protects the consumer here at home and also has quite a lot to do with the way we perform in the international markets.

Minority Leader DOLE and Senator GORE have introduced legislation which would allow telephone company entry into cable programming as a viable competitor. Telephone company entry into cable programming is supported by President Bush and the Federal Communications Commission, but yesterday Congressman JOHN DINGELL, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, indicated his desire to allow telephone company entry into cable programming as a way to introduce new competition into the cable television industry during this session of Congress if this cable reregulation fails.

So there are those out there that are looking at ways to provide competition and not reregulation.

So when this bill, this conference report comes before this body, I plan to do everything that I can do to stop this anticonsumer, anticompetitive bill—to improve rates and services for consumers and to create jobs in America. We should then work to foster competition in this industry or in any other industry.

I hope my colleagues will join this debate. It will be long, and I think there will be a lot of give and take on this issue. But it is very important that we do not forget the basic philosophy that American enterprise works better when it works in a free market.

Mr. President, I have a couple of items that I would like printed in the RECORD.

I ask unanimous consent that today's editorial out of the Wall Street Journal, and also a very strong letter from the President indicating that if the conference report on S. 12 passes, he would veto it, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Sept. 17, 1992]

CABLE KIBOSH

The cost of two tickets to a Broadway show is now more than $100. The $5 movie ticket is a thing of the past in most cities. But is anyone calling for federal price controls on Broadway or the movies? Yet that's precisely what Congress will do to cable television if it passes a bill to reapply 1970s-style regulation to the industry.

Voters are in an ugly mood, and incumbents are desperate to show effort for the folks back home. It's no surprise Congress has seized on cable TV rates, which have gone up faster than the rate of inflation and are a sore point in many of the 60 percent of American homes with cable. But rather than find ways to make the industry more price competitive, Congress is on the verge of short-circuiting a new, promising technology for short-term political gain.

More troubling, there are rumblings that the Bush administration will take a pass on a long-promised veto. That's because House Minority Leader Bob Michel has gone over with the re-regulators (and the broadcasters), calling into question a veto-override vote.

The bill before Congress is a nightmarish morass of rules that can only impede the development of cable technology and new programming. Venture capitalists won't want to become hostage investors in cable under a provision requiring them to wait three years after purchasing a system before they can sell. The bill so micromanages cable companies that it even specifies the number of phone lines they must have to handle complaints.

The cable industry, for all its lobbying and moaning, isn't particularly credible because of its record of defending local cable monopolies. After the industry secured the deregulation of cable-service prices from Congress in 1984, it continued to insist that cable was a natural monopoly and that cities should grant just one franchise per city. This ignored the record of the 65 cities that allow more than one cable operator. In those more competitive areas, cable TV prices fell an average of 25 percent, and subscribers had fewer service complaints.

By seeking to protect their noncompetitive franchises while defending their right to run up prices, the cable industry invited Congress to re-evaluate its 1984 decision to deregulate. Defenders of the cable bill before Congress claim it will work against monopolies by barring cities from awarding "exclusive" cable franchises, but that is legal gobbledygook. Few cities award explicitly exclusive franchises, and no one thinks the bill will affect any of their cozy deals with local cable firms.

If Congress would only resist the temptation to keep changing the signals it sends on cable TV, emerging new technologies will make many of the complaints about the industry moot. Local telephone companies will soon be able to transmit TV signals using digital and fiber-optic technologies. Computers will be linked with TV monitors to offer a variety of viewing choices that will make today's cable systems as outdated as a rabbit-ears antenna. But there is no way the benefit of these emerging technologies can be fully realized if Congress insists on second-guessing the process every step of the way.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, September 17, 1992.

Hon. ROBERT DOLE,
Republican Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR DOLE: I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Conference Report to accompany S. 12 (Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act of 1992), which the House and Senate will consider in the next several days.

This legislation will hurt Americans by imposing a wide array of costly, burdensome, and unnecessary requirements on the cable industry and the government agencies that regulate it. The heavy-handed provisions of this bill will drive up cable industry costs, resulting in higher consumer rates, not rate reductions as promised by the supporters of the bill.

The bill will also restrain continued innovation in the industry, cost the economy jobs, reduce consumer programming choices, and retard the deployment of growth-oriented investments critical to the future of our Nation's communications infrastructure.

My vision for the future of the communications industry is based on the principles of greater competition, entrepreneurship, and less economic regulation. This legislation fails each of these tests and is illustrative of the Congressional mandates and excessive regulations that drag our economy down.

Congress would best serve consumer welfare by promoting vigorous competition, not massive re-regulation.

For these reasons I will veto S. 12 if it is presented to me, and I urge its rejection when the House and Senate consider the Conference Report.

Sincerely,

GEORGE BUSH.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1993

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I wanted to encourage my colleagues on this side of the aisle to let us know if they have any amendments to the pending legislation, the Labor-HHS appropriations bill. The managers are here prepared to do business.

I say to my colleagues that there is still hope that we can finish this, I hope, by 4 o'clock this afternoon so we might then turn to the DOD authorization bill to accommodate a couple of our colleagues, at least one colleague on this side of the aisle who has a problem on tomorrow; and also, to accommodate a number of colleagues on both sides of the aisle who have already made plans on Saturday. The majority leader has indicated there will be a Saturday session unless we finish this bill, and the DOD authorization bill by some time tomorrow night or throughout the night tomorrow.

We have a number of amendments on this side.

I have one myself which I understand is now being looked at to see if it can be worked out; Senator D'AMATO has an amendment; Senator HATCH has two amendments, combined into one; Senator HELMS has six amendments; Senator KASSEBAUM has an amendment; Senator LOTT; Senator NICKLES, has two amendments; Senator RUDMAN has an amendment; Senator SEYMOUR; and Senator WALLOP has an amendment on Davis-Bacon. That will be 12 amendments on this side. I am not certain how many of the amendments will be offered or whether or not any of the amendments offered will bring about rollcall votes.

But it is my understanding that many of these amendments are in the process of resolution, and that perhaps maybe one out of the 12—maybe more, I am not certain. The manager, Senator HARKIN, would know—everybody I talked to would like to be adjourned on October 3, if not before. This is a bill that I think both sides want to pass.

Senator SPECTER and Senator HARKIN have done a good job on this particular bill. They would like to get to conference, and we would like to move on to the DOD authorization bill and hopefully finish that by tomorrow night, so we can avoid a Saturday session and avoid disrupting plans that many of my colleagues on each side of the aisle have had in the works for weeks and months.

So, again, if you could let us know by 2:15 if you intend to offer the amendment, the managers could make plans on how to deal with those amendments.

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank the Republican leader for his help in attempting to complete work on this bill. He has been very helpful in trying to get people together to get their amendments over here. I request that Senators on our side to do the same. We have a call going out to Senators, and we are asking if you have an amendment, let us know by 2:15 if you want to offer it. If not, if there is more than a moderate lull in the proceedings over here, I would ask the Republican leader and the ranking member, Senator SPECTER, if we could sit down and hope the Chair would go to a third reading of the bill.

Those Senators on the list who have amendments include: Senators CRANSTON, HOLLINGS, BUMPERS, SIMON, BENTSEN, BINGAMAN, KENNEDY, SHELBY, and PELL. If they want to offer the amendments, let us know by 2:15 and come over and offer the amendments.

AMENDMENT NO. 3015

(Purpose: To provide needed funds for programs providing services to older Americans)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside. After a discussion with the manager of the bill, Senator HARKIN, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator NICKLES, Senator SEYMOUR, Senator COATS, and Senator MCCAIN and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment will be set aside.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE], for Mr. NICKLES (for himself, Mr. SEYMOUR, Mr. COATS, and Mr. MCCAIN, proposes an amendment numbered 3015).

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 42, line 14, strike "$844,316,000" and insert the following: "$850,693,000: Provided, That notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the figure that appears on page 87, line 10 shall be deemed to be $106,737,000".

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I rise in support of this amendment, which would increase funding for programs authorized under the Older Americans Act to the level requested by the administration.

The Older Americans Act is the major source of funding for federally supported nutrition and social services for the elderly. Since these programs were instituted a quarter of a century ago, millions of seniors have benefited from services provided under this act, such as Meals-on-Wheels, employment services, nursing home ombudsmen, and programs designed to prevent elder abuse.

On Tuesday evening, the Senate unanimously adopted S. 3008, the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1992. This important legislation created new programs and increased authorization levels for many existing ones.

Unfortunately, the bill that is now before us proposes to fund several of these programs at levels lower than the President requested. The committee bill would level fund grants to States for supportive services and centers, ombudsmen services, and elder abuse prevention. The administration proposed raising the funding for these three programs by a total of $783,000. The committee bill would cut funding for aging research, training and special projects by $1.4 million below the current level. In all, the committee bill provides $6.4 million less than the President proposed for Older Americans Act programs.

What is worse, Mr. President, is that the House bill would provide even less for these important programs. The House version of H.R. 5677 would cut OAA programs—including nutrition programs—by 1 percent. This would result in cuts in services for congregate and home-delivered meals and in-home services for the frail elderly.

Let's look at these programs that would be cut:

AGING SUPPORTIVE SERVICES AND SENIOR CENTERS

This program funds community-based, comprehensive and coordinated services. Seniors receive in-home care and legal services under this program. Funds are allocated to the States on a formula basis. If this program is funded at the requested level, Oklahoma will get a little over $4 million. If the program is funded at the Senate or House level, we will get less.

OMBUDSMAN SERVICES

This program funds investigations of complaints made on behalf of older individuals residing in nursing homes. Oklahoma will receive $53,000 for this program under the President's budget, less under either the Senate or House bill.

PREVENTION OF ELDER ABUSE AND NEGLECT

State efforts under this program have focused on public education related to elder abuse. Oklahoma will receive just under $60,000 if the program is funded at the requested level, less under either the House or Senate bills.

Mr. President, we cannot allow funding for these important programs to be reduced. This amendment would increase funding for OAA programs to the requested level of $850.7 million. That represents an increase of $6.4 million over the committee's recommendation.

The amendment would pay for this increase by reducing spending for salaries and expenses at the Department of Health and Human Services by the same amount. I am aware that the committee bill already reduces the HHS account for salaries and expenses by a substantial sum, $225 million. The Management and Budget Office at HHS estimates that the Department will spend about $5.45 billion next year on salary and expenses.

Some of these funds—by no means all—will provide salaries and benefits for members of the Senior Executive Service [SES]. According to the Office of Personnel Management, the executive branch employs nearly 8,000 people at the ES-6 level, the highest career classification in the Federal Government. Their average salary: $112,000. Salaries for other SES employees range from $90,000 to $108,300.

By contrast, let us look at the people who are served by these programs. Many are on fixed incomes. Many are frail. Many are poor. According to the Administration on Aging, 1.27 million participants in the congregate nutrition program—47 percent of all who benefited from these services in fiscal year 1990—were poor.

Further reductions in salaries and expenses will certainly not be painless. But they will be far less painful than reductions in these vital programs for older Americans.

It is my intention that these additional funds be used to increase the committee bill's allocation for congregate meals by $2 million; for home-delivered meals by $2 million; for grants to Native Americans by $405,000; for supportive services and centers by $762,000; for ombudsman services by $10,000; for prevention of elder abuse by $11,000; for in-home services for frail elderly by $500,000; and for aging research, training and special projects by $689,000.

Mr. President, this amendment would restore these reductions, and raise funding for programs under the Older Americans Act to the requested levels. It is a crucially important amendment, important to older Americans who rely on services authorized by the Older Americans Act and important to their families as well, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, Tuesday night, the Senate finally passed vital legislation to reauthorize the Older Americans Act. I was pleased that agreement was finally reached on this act which is so crucial to meeting the special problems and needs of our Nation's older population. The Older Americans Act has served as an effective vehicle for the delivery of supportive nutrition and other social services to millions of elderly citizens across our Nation, since its inception in 1965.

Due to my strong support for the programs authorized under the Older Americans Act, I was disappointed to learn that the appropriations bill before us today, H.R. 5677, cuts funding for this important act. Under H.R. 5677, the Administration on Aging would receive $844 million—this represents a level $6.3 million below the administration's request for fiscal year 1993 and $2.2 million below the fiscal year 1992 funding level. The House bill provides even less funding, falling about $12 million below the administration's request.

As Senator NICKLES pointed out, the Senate version of this bill would keep funding at current levels for three important grant programs: supportive services and centers, ombudsman services, and prevention of elder abuse programs. The administration had requested an increase in funding of $783,000 for these three programs, which are relied upon by States and local communities to help them meet the needs of our Nation's senior population.

Aging supportive services and senior centers serve an important role in local communities by facilitating the development of comprehensive and coordinated systems of services. About 7 million older Americans receive supportive services under this program. Of these 7 million, 18.5 percent are minority older persons, and 37.1 percent are low-income older persons.

Ombudsman services assist with the investigation and resolution of complaints on behalf of older individuals residing in long-term care facilities. Recent reports by the Office of the Inspector General, GAO, HHS, and others concluded that this program needed to be expanded and strengthened. In fiscal year 1990, 154,119 complaints were received, compared to 134,509 in fiscal year 1989—an increase of about 20,000 cases. Without the increased funding requested by the administration, the capacity of States and communities to implement the OIG recommendations, especially in light of the caseload increases, will be greatly impaired.

In regard to elder abuse, estimates indicate that between 1.5 and 2 million older persons are victims of elder abuse. The magnitude of this problem warrants increased attention. These three programs are just a few examples of why the administration's funding request levels are needed to accomplish the goals of the Older Americans Act.

For these reasons, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support this amendment to ensure that the essential programs authorized under the OAA receive adequate funding. This amendment would simply increase funding for these programs to the level requested by the administration for fiscal year 1993. These funding increases would be offset by a reduction in the levels for salaries and expenses at the Department of Health and Human Services.

I commend Senator NICKLES for his work on this important amendment and urge my colleagues to join us in supporting this amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have examined the amendment. It is a good one. We have no objections on this side, and we accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3015) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending committee amendments for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3016

(Purpose: Funding for National Commission on Private Pension Plans)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. METZENBAUM, and Mr. PRYOR and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. BENTSEN (for himself, Mr. METZENBAUM, and Mr. PRYOR), proposes an amendment numbered 3016.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 8, before the period at the end of line 13, insert ": Provided, That $600,000 shall be available for the National Commission on Private Pension Plans if an Act authorizing such Commission is enacted into law".

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment has been cleared by the other side. It provides $600,000 for a private pension plan commission, if it becomes authorized. This amendment is for Senators BENTSEN, METZENBAUM, and PRYOR. The commission would study the private pension system. The offset is within available funds from the Pension Welfare Benefit Administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3016) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DODD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3017

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk, which is on the list, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] proposes an amendment numbered 3017.

At the appropriate place add the following: "None of the funds appropriated under this Act may be expended by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to implement or administer the regulations affecting mandatory seat belt use, mandatory motorcycle helmet use, and mandatory employer driver safety awareness programs, to be codified or proposed to be codified at parts 1910, 1915, 1917, 1918, 1926 and 1928, title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations."

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I have submitted this amendment on behalf of more than 500,000 small business men and women across this country. The amendment pending at the desk proposes to correct another case of bureaucratic over-reach by preventing the Occupational Safety and Health Administration—OSHA, as it is known—from using funds provided by this bill to implement regulations affecting mandatory use of seat belts or motorcycle helmets, and mandatory driver safety awareness programs.

This amendment has the endorsement of the National Federation of Independent Business. It was offered in the House by the distinguished member from Louisiana, Mr. LIVINGSTON, on July 28, and after being brought to the floor of the House of Representatives on a procedural vote of 215 to 188, it was passed on a voice vote.

Mr. President, let me explain a little bit in detail what is involved here. OSHA has dreamed up more red tape to choke American business. In July 1990, OSHA first proposed the Occupant Protection in Motor Vehicles Regulation. The final regulations could be issued at any moment. These new regulations will include two new mandates: One, employer accountability for employee seatbelt use; and two, employer-sponsored driver training programs. Once in place, these regulations will affect every business in America whose employees are required to drive on the job.

Let us look at what these regulations will do to small business. Employers will:

First, face the cost of providing driver education for each employee who drives on the job. This could include the purchase of a driver training video and/or the hiring of an expert.

Second, employers will lose productivity and sales for employee time devoted to the driver education program.

Third, possible employer fines for employees' failure to wear seat belts or motorcycle helmets, and,

Fourth, possible fines for employers' failure to implement driver education programs.

The bureaucrats will insist, Mr. President, that the seatbelt laws and helmet laws save lives. But the last time I looked, every State already had auto safety laws and motorcycle helmet laws, which are doing just fine.

Thirty-eight States already have mandatory seatbelt and helmet laws. In my own State of North Carolina, to receive a license to drive, an individual must complete significant classwork in driver education. For each type of vehicle, the State of North Carolina requires a different test. In order to drive a schoolbus, you must have a bus driver's license; to drive any type of van, you need a chauffeur's license. And so on, down the line.

But here comes the Federal Government, nosing in where it is not needed, with its own bureaucracy, telling the States and the employers of those States that there is not already enough oversight of drivers and driving safety; that's not what the American businessman needs Washington to do. It doesn't need Washington to duplicate the job already being ably done by the States.

If anybody thinks we need more bureaucrats, I'll sell them some swampland down in eastern North Carolina. Somebody put it this way: This is "nonsense on stilts" for OSHA to propose to get in where it is not needed, and where it is not wanted, at additional cost to small businessmen.

Mr. President, as I say, these regulations will hold employers liable for their employees' seatbelt use. How on Earth can the employer monitor seatbelt use when their employees are on the road? How can they do that?

They cannot do it. Employers should concern themselves with running their businesses, not playing traffic cop. We already have State laws and regulations, and merely duplicating State laws with rules on the Federal level that punish employers for their employees' actions will not save one life.

All these regulations will do is enhance the job market for the Trial Lawyers of America. They will be the real winners, as more injured third parties discover that the driver that hit them was not trained in strict accordance with a poorly planned and poorly conceived OSHA regulation.

We should not allow OSHA to make this rule final. I urge my colleagues to stand up for the small businessman and restore some balance and sanity to the regulatory system.

I could go on at some length about this thing, but I know we are trying to finish this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the president of the National Federation of Independent Business, Mr. John Motley, to Secretary of Labor Lynn Martin and a "Dear Colleague" from Representative BOB LIVINGSTON be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF INDEPENDENT BUSINESS,
Washington, DC, February 24, 1992.

Hon. LYNN MARTIN,
Secretary, Department of Labor,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY MARTIN: On behalf of the over 500,000 members of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), I urge you to stop or significantly modify the Occupant Protection in Motor Vehicles rule.

While NFIB members support motor vehicle safety, they strongly object to the two mandates expected to be included in the regulation—employer accountability for employee set belt use and an employer-sponsored driver education program for employees.

Under the proposed rule, an employer could be fined if any employee fails to wear a seat belt or motorcycle helmet. In effect, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration [OSHA] is holding the employer liable for the employee's actions, even though it is virtually impossible for the employer to oversee the employee's behavior off the job site.

Designing and implementing a driver safety program adds an equally burdensome requirement for small business owners trying to operate in a sluggish economy. If such safety programs are necessary for on-the-job driving, they should be administered by state governments which already provide similar safety training and certification for truck drivers through the commercial drivers license testing program. Under this program, drivers must demonstrate knowledge and skill for certification. These license examination programs could offer the experience and expertise in driver training that a small employer would not be able to provided.

In effect, the proposed sweeping driver training and seat belt regulation will negatively affect every small business in America whose employees are required to drive on the job. Some of the consequences small businesses will face as a result of this regulation are as follows:

Cost burden of providing driver education for each employee who drives on the job;

Possible employer fines for employees' failure to wear seat belts or motorcycle helmets;

Possible fines for employers' failure to implement driver safety programs;

Lost productivity and sales for employee time devoted to on-the-job driver education programs.

At a time of economic recession, this regulation would hinder small employers' ability to create jobs. Thank you for moving quickly to address this very important issue affecting small business.

Sincerely,

JOHN J. MOTLEY III,
Vice President,
Federal Governmental Relations.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Washington, DC, July 27, 1992.

DEAR COLLEAGUES: On Tuesday, July 28th, 1992, I will offer an amendment to the Labor/HHS Appropriations bill to prevent OSHA from mandating employer accountability for employee seatbelt use and employer-sponsored driver training programs.

OSHA first proposed the Occupant Protection in Motor Vehicles regulation in July, 1990 and final regulations could be issued at any time. These outrageous regulations will require employers to become driver training program designers, driver education instructors, law enforcement officers, and potential defendants in liability cases.

Like most Federal redtape, the regulations are well-intentioned, but disastrous in application. It is true that seatbelt and helmet laws save lives. But should employers be held responsible for their employee's seat belt use? Employees live longer if they eat healthy foods. Should employers be fined if their employees eat Twinkies and smoke cigarettes?

Driver training and licensing should remain the purview of state government. Thirty-six states have already enacted safety belt use laws. Merely duplicating state laws with rules that punish employers for their employees' actions will not save lives.

This rule would spawn more litigation as injured third parties discover that the driver that hit them was not trained in strict accordance with a loosely-written OSHA regulation.

OSHA has consistently overestimated the savings and underestimated the costs of this rule. OSHA estimates that employer-provided driver training will cost no more than $18.75 per employee. How will the employer interpret the rules, design and implement a driver training program, and keep records for less than $20? If the 19 million businesses in our nation each spend only $100 per year on driver training, we're looking at over $1 billion a year in costs to employers.

OSHA admits that typical seat belt and motorcycle helmet laws apply to operators, but the proposed OSHA standard is applicable to employers, not employee/drivers. The regulations will turn employers into government agents who enforce traffic violations. When will the employer find time to run a business?

The employers in my district cannot afford the time and expense required by these burdensome regulations. Let's stop the regulatory reach of Big Brother by passing my amendment limiting the use of funds to implement this ill-advised rule.

If I am prevented from offering the funding limitation amendment before the Committee of the Whole rises, I urge my colleagues to oppose the motion to rise so that I may offer my amendment.

Sincerely,

ROBERT L. LIVINGSTON,
Member of Congress.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am willing to have this considered on a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the Senator from North Carolina's amendment to kill an important OSHA regulation.

This OSHA rule would save thousands of lives by offering protection for employee occupants of motor vehicles while they are on the job.

It addresses three major areas:

First, safety belt use;

Second, motorcycle helmet use; and

Third, driver safety awareness.

Motor vehicle accidents are the single largest cause of occupational injuries and fatalities.

In the manufacturing sector more workers are killed each year in crashes than by fixed machinery.

Each year approximately 2,100 fatalities and 91,000 lost workday injuries occur due to occupational motor vehicle crashes among employees.

Motor vehicle fatalities account for more than 35 percent of all occupational fatalities.

The national safety council testified that occupational motor vehicle accidents cost $16.2 billion in 1989 alone. It is incredible to me that the Senator from North Carolina thinks these simple rules are not worth saving so much money, as well as saving lives.

It is estimated that the OSHA regulations on the use of safety belts and drive safety awareness training alone could save 684 employee lives and 31,635 lost-workday injuries annually.

Unfortunately, the Senator from North Carolina seems to think taking a driving course and wearing a seatbelt is too burdensome requirement to save those lives and lost workdays.

I know the Senator does not like OSHA, but one would think the tragedy in his own State, in Hamlet, NC, would have changed that view. By all accounts better OSHA enforcement could have saved those lives. But the Senator from North Carolina seems to find OSHA's role a burden rather than a help.

This OSHA regulation was not arrived at lightly. Over 500 written comments were received by the public—over 2000 pages of public testimony were offered for the record.

Elizabeth Dole personally supported this regulation and was convinced of its merit.

It is strongly supported by the following groups:

These groups strongly support this OSHA rule:

National Highway Transportation Safety Administration.

National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

National Safety Council.

National Association of Fleet Administrators.

National Electrical Contractors Association, Inc.

Chemical Manufacturers Association.

Dow Chemical.

Industrial Truck Association.

Automobile Club of Southern California.

AFL–CIO.

Traffic Safety Now.

National Commission Against Drunk Driving.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I would like to indicate my support for the amendment of my colleague, Senator HELMS. The Helms amendment prohibits the Department of Labor from utilizing appropriate funds to implement or administer regulations affecting mandatory seat belt use, mandatory motorcycle helmet use, and mandatory employer driver safety awareness programs.

Mr. President, I am not a newcomer to this issue. I have been involved in motor vehicle safety and motorcycle helmet regulation for past several years. Although I strongly favor the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's [OSHA] attempt in other areas to promote workplace safety. I also believe that the Federal Government should not be micromanaging individual conduct. For instance, during the highway bill debate last year, I opposed mandatory motorcycle helmet laws. The was not because I opposed the use of motorcycle helmets—on the contrary, I think that they are a good idea.

But I do not believe that the Federal Government should force the men and women of this country to wear motorcycle helmets. Life involves choices, and in a free society, individuals should have the power to choose whether they wish to wear safety helmets.

Mr. President, in addition, I question what role the Department of Labor should play in motor vehicle safety issues. We know that the Department of Transportation [DOT] conducts studies and issues extensive regulations on motor vehicle safety issues. Should the Department of Labor be promulgating regulations that address motor vehicle safety? I wonder what the Department of Labor knows that the Department of Transportation does not know about motor vehicle safety.

In short, we run the risk of inconsistent and overlapping Federal regulations in this area. The Congress needs to give more thought to the respective roles of Federal agencies in regulating vehicular safety. Until we come to some satisfactory consensus about the best way to addressing this problem, I believe it is appropriate to delay the Department of Labor's regulatory approach. Accordingly, I will support the Helms amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, inasmuch as the managers want to hasten this bill along, while they are considering the pending amendment, I wonder if they would wish for me to ask consent to lay aside this pending amendment so I can offer another one that is on the list.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank our colleague from North Carolina for that suggestion. I think it is a good idea and would be pleased to see him proceed to do that.

Mr. HELMS. We could save some time that way, Mr. President. Let me put the unanimous-consent request to you as stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request?

If not, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3018

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I have another amendment which is on the list, which I send to the desk and ask it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] proposes an amendment numbered 3018.

At the appropriate place add the following: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds made available under this Act or an amendment made by this Act shall be allocated to any State, metropolitan area or rural area, if such State, metropolitan area or rural area, carries out any program for the distribution of sterile needles for the hypodermic injection of any illegal drugs, unless the President of the United States certifies that such programs are effective in stopping the spread of HIV and do not contribute to the use of illegal drugs."

Mr. HELMS. I thank the clerk.

Mr. President, this amendment really is a question posed to the Members of the U.S. Senate. The amendment is asking Senators if they—we—believe that Federal dollars should be used to aid and abet an activity which is illegal in every State and under Federal law.

This amendment has been endorsed by the Director of the National Drug Control Policy, Bob Martinez. This amendment would put the Senate on record as opposing the distribution of hypodermic needles for the injection of illegal drugs unless the President of the United States certifies that such distribution does nothing to encourage the abuse of narcotics. That is what the amendment says. Nothing more, nothing less.

You can see for yourself that the amendment would permit the President to resume needle distribution if he certifies that such a program is effective in halting the spread of the AIDS virus. And to answer a question which I know may be asked by some Senator, probably my good friend from Massachusetts, Mr. KENNEDY, the Helms amendment does not contain a provision about the distribution of bleach to drug addicts.

Mr. President, I think that most Americans would agree that drug abuse is one of the great dangers facing this Nation today. It is not the greatest, but it is a great abuse and a great danger.

Not only are drugs destroying the young people of this country, but the young people are the primary reason why the streets of our country have become war zones, and nobody knows that better than those of us who live in or near Washington, DC. President Bush declared a "war on drugs" shortly after he entered office and most agree that progress has been made—not enough, but some has been made. Yet just as we are about to turn the corner, here come the liberal politicians saying we need to hand out needles to drug addicts. Well, that does not even make good nonsense.

So if any Senator thinks this is an off-the-wall proposal, let me identify some of the people and organizations supporting this amendment: The Office of National Drug Control Policy, the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors, the National District Attorneys Association, the chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics, the House Republican Leadership, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Dr. Louis Sullivan, and the former Secretary of Education, Bill Bennett.

There are many others, but these are some typical ones. These organizations and distinguished leaders believe, as I do, that making sterile needles available to drug addicts only encourages more use of illicit drugs. I do not think I need to say anything more about this issue because we have been around the horn three or four times on this issue for the last 3 or 4 years.

If Senators want to vote to encourage drug use, vote against this amendment. If Senators think handing out free needles is needed to fight AIDS, vote against this amendment. I do not think many will vote no, but at least we will see who is serious about combating drugs and who is not.

Again, Mr. President, I am perfectly willing to have this matter considered on a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, after conferring with the distinguished Senator from North Carolina. I just talked with him in the cloakroom and secured his agreement. He is willing to set aside his pending amendments so that while they are being considered we do not use up valuable time on a quorum call.

The distinguished Senator from New York is ready to offer an amendment. I have consulted with Senator HARKIN's staff. The Senator is off the floor for the moment, but I ask at this point unanimous consent to set aside the pending business in order to take up the amendment by the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMNT NO. 3019 TO COMMITTEE AMENDMENT BEGINNING AT PAGE 2, LINE 24

(Purpose: To increase the amounts available for carrying out programs of cancer research)

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO] proposes an amendment numbered 3019.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 3, line 1, strike "under the Job Training Partnership Act" and insert "authorized by the Job Training Partnership Act, Provided, That an amount of $214,000,000 is appropriated for carrying out section 301 and title IV of the Public Health Service Act with respect to breast cancer research, in addition to any other amount appropriated under this Act: Provided further, That—

"(1) of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense in any appropriations Act making funds available to the Department of Defense in fiscal years before fiscal year 1993 for research and development, $214,000,000 of the remaining balances are rescinded; and

"(2) notwithstanding section 601(a)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974—

"(A) the fiscal year 1993 discretionary spending limit for the domestic category, as adjusted under section 251 of such Act, is increased by $214,000,000 in budget authority and $98,000,000 in outlays; and

"(B) the fiscal year 1993 discretionary spending limit for the defense category, as adjusted under section 251 of such Act, is decreased by budget authority and outlay reductions resulting from paragraph (1)".

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, breast cancer is a deadly epidemic. It is an epidemic that strikes over 180,000 women each year. It will kill more than 46,000 women this year alone. My amendment will provide the resources we need to mount a truly all-out attack on this devastating disease.

It is not a complicated amendment. It simply provides the full level of funding for breast cancer research at the National Cancer Institute which has been recommended by the Nation's leading breast cancer experts. These experts—and I am talking about some of the most highly-credentialed researchers currently working in the field—met this past February in Washington to determine the amount of money that they actually needed for breast cancer research in 1993.

Why do I say that? Because this is not a figure that I have picked out the air, in terms of seeking adequate resources. Our leading cancer experts concluded that an additional $300 million, over and above the current $133.7 million, could be immediately used, without waste; so as to jump start our national breast cancer research program. My amendment fully funds this increase by adding $214 million to the $220 million provided by the committee.

Let me say the committee did make every attempt it could within the bounds of its limited resources, and did come up with $80 million-plus, but it is not enough.

My colleagues may ask why do we need more funding for breast cancer, as opposed to more funding for other cancers? Why for research? Why now?

Let me just touch on several reasons. Breast cancer has reached an epidemic proportion. There is no known cause and no known cure for breast cancer. Breast cancer research has been underfunded. The mortality from breast cancer has not changed in decades. An investment now has the potential to exploit new research technology and make a very significant difference.

Breast cancer has reached an epidemic proportion. Stop and listen to this. In 1960, 30-plus years ago, 1 out of 14 women developed breast cancer in her lifetime; 1 out of 14. Last year that figure had moved about 40 percent, and it was 1 out of 10.

This year, if we want to talk about an epidemic, there is another 10 percent movement in the wrong direction. This year that figure is 1 in 9. If we want to talk about epidemics, this may be a silent one but it is raging throughout America. It is ravaging American families. It has become an incredible crisis of tremendous dimensions. And we are operating as if in the stone age as it relates to the allocable resources.

I hope in a few minutes to touch on just how backward we are in terms of providing the necessary resources and doing the elementary work needed to attempt to define how it is we have this increased incidence and this epidemic raging along, while we take little, if any, real action to deal with it.

I suggest, when we talk about the AIDS epidemic—this is an epidemic. We talk about the wars that are going on—46,000 women will die this year and 180,000-plus will be diagnosed with breast cancer. And next year it may be another 10 percent higher. This is clearly an epidemic as big as any war we've ever faced—but the people we are losing in this war are our wives, our sisters, and our daughters.

Every 4 minutes another women is diagnosed with breast cancer. Every 12 minutes another woman dies of breast cancer. Every woman lives with fear of mutilation, and her family—of death from this killer. The breast cancer mortality rate has not changed in decades, notwithstanding the improvements in treatment and so-called early detection.

Why do I say so-called early detection? Because even the mammograms are behind the times, in terms of what we can and should be doing. With men, last year we had a significant breakthrough as it related to prostate cancer. Blood tests now give us earlier warning to deal with this form of cancer, holding out the promise of a greatly reduced mortality rate for prostate cancer in the future. Not so with women. Not so.

Yet, when cancerous breast tumors are first detected by way of the mammogram, leading experts say that those cancers may have been present 6 to 7 years before the mammogram reveals them.

Mr. President, it simply is unacceptable for us to continue to do business as usual. Indeed, I hope the general public and my colleagues in the Congress will begin to get a better sense of the proportion and magnitude of this danger.

Let me tell you something incredible. We do not have a national registry as it relates to breast cancer. Why? We do not have a tissue bank as it relates to breast cancer. Why? We should be working to see to it that we can develop a blood test that can give the true early warning to deal with this monstrous disease that has such a profound impact not only on the people it strikes directly but on every single one of their family members and friends, and which causes such devastation to families and loved ones.

There is no question that fighting breast cancer is absolutely essential. That is why I have brought forth this amendment. I am not happy that I have to seek to break down a firewall, and I understand the great reluctance that so many will have in piercing this wall. If anything, I have been criticized for maybe voting for too much in the way of defense. But I have to tell you, if we are going to talk about defending this Nation and meeting our obligations, I cannot think of a more important reason for which to breakthrough that wall, than to allocate the funds necessary to mount an all-out battle on this leading cancer killer of our Nation's women.

We are on the verge of being able to provide an opportunity to do the kind of research that can save millions of our loved ones. I am convinced that if we make available these resources, we can achieve the kind of breakthroughs that we have seen in other areas of early cancer detection and prevention.

We are on the verge of very exciting discoveries in the field of breast cancer. These are based on new techniques in molecular biology which have revolutionized our abilities to detect the very earliest changes in genes that lead to breast cancer. It has been compared to the enormous changes in computer technology, like moving from a room size UNIVAC computer to a laptop. The scientific methods that used to take years and high-level scientific effort can now be done by a graduate student in an afternoon. We desperately need to exploit all these advances if we are going to make real progress in battling this disease.

Many will hear this and say, "but I thought the breast cancer problem was taken care of with the mammogram." Unfortunately, mammograms alone are not the answer. The mammogram is an important tool of detection. It has made a difference in some women, but the mammogram is not prevention. Doctors tell me that most breast cancers have been present for 8 to 10 years by the time a lump can be felt, and 6 to 7 years by the time it can be seen on a mammogram. As a result, some 30 percent of cancers detectable only through mammograms will have spread by the time of diagnosis. That is the difference.

We need better methods of detection. We need a blood test which will finally detect breast cancer early on. The same kind of blood test should be developed for breast cancer that has been developed to detect prostate cancer.

We do not know what causes breast cancer. We know that all cancers start with mutated genes but we have no idea what causes the mutations. Some people have blamed it on diet, but our parents ate diets higher in fat than we do. It is not just fat but maybe the carcinogens and the pesticides and the hormones that are deposited in this fat. There is little to no research on the environmental aspects of this disease. One Connecticut study showed that women with breast cancers have higher levels of PCB's in their breast tissue than women who do not have the disease. This research is vital and yet it is not adequately addressed in the current budget.

Our current method of treatment is not a cure. Today's treatments for breast cancer are very crude. We treat women with poison and radiation and surgery hoping that we will kill the cancer and not the patient. This is similar to dropping an old-style atomic bomb. What we need is a smart bomb for breast cancer. Something which will specifically kill the breast cancer cells without causing destruction to the rest of the woman's body and immune system. Exploiting the molecular biological aspects of the disease will give the tools for this type of specific and subtle treatment.

Another vital need which is not included in the $220 million level is a national breast tumor registry and tissue bank. We desperately need a national registry of women with breast cancer. We need to know why there are hot spots such as Long Island. We need data on where and how breast cancer occurs in this country. Registries will allow us to spot local trends and to develop the exact statistical profiles to identify and to battle breast cancer.

And, Mr. President, did you know that scientists cannot easily grow breast cancer cells? They do not have enough tissues to do their research. I did not know this until the other day. Surgeons are removing breast tissues every day and this tissue is generally discarded. We desperately need to develop a national tissue bank which can store this tissue for scientific research purposes.

Finally, we need to recruit more scientists and new ideas into this field. This money will jump-start the research. Scientists will see that there is now, finally, adequate funding for breast cancer research and start to address these very fundamental issues.

This funding needs to be enough today, and it needs to be ongoing, or we are never going to get a change in the most common cancer in women. By setting aside, as this amendment does, roughly one-half of 1 percent of the research and development budget of the Department of Defense, we can fund a meaningful and effective defense of women's lives. Nineteen ninety-two has been said to be the Year of The Woman. Let us make it the year that we take on this battle on behalf of our wives, daughters, granddaughters, and friends.

Mr. President, I understand the difficult dilemma that this amendment creates in the minds of many of my colleagues. It means that we have to break through the firewall. I cannot think of a more important purpose and reason for taking this extraordinary course of action, and that is why I have undertaken this amendment and this initiative.

I have not heretofore ever sponsored an amendment that would do this, but if we are going to give meaning to, and recognize, the Year of The Woman, then let us meet this basic responsibility and see to it that this program is adequately funded.

Mr. President, I am prepared to go to a vote on this, and I will seek a rollcall vote. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask my distinguished colleague from New York for 5 minutes.

Mr. D'AMATO. Certainly.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I support this amendment. I do so because I think that the additional funds being directed to breast cancer and taken from unobligated funds from the Department of Defense is a good investment for the future health of America. There is no doubt about the serious problem of breast cancer in our country today. This problem was first made aware to me many, many years ago when a good friend in her late twenties developed breast cancer and it proved fatal by her early thirties.

I have seen the concern for the problem, the threat of breast cancer in my own household and believe that more can and should be done to find funds to undertake responsible research on this important subject.

Within the subcommittee itself, the distinguished chairman and I have made very substantial increases since 1989 when Senator HARKIN became chairman and I became ranking. I believe the statistic is that there had been a 46 percent increase on funding for breast cancer from 1989 through the current fiscal year. And in the course of allocations on this budget, we had raised the total to $220 million, which constituted an $87.3 million or a 63 percent increase over 1992. And, candidly, the chairman and I have searched in the budget to try to bring the figure to a total of $300 million.

It is hard to say just what funding level would produce the maximum benefit. But the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO], has offered this amendment which increases the funding to a total of $434 million. It is a $300 million increase over last year, and it is an increase in excess of $100 million over this year. I believe, considering the offset from unobligated funds from the Department of Defense, it is worthwhile.

I further think it is worthwhile in terms of the principle of eliminating the so-called firewall between defense and this kind of spending because the situation in the world is vastly different from what it was at the time the firewall was established. There are very substantial unobligated funds in DOD procurement, and it seems to this Senator this amendment makes sense for those reasons.

So I am glad to support my colleague from New York.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. D'AMATO addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO] is recognized.

Mr. D'AMATO. If I might just spend a few moments, I want my colleagues to know that I believe the committee chairman and the ranking member did everything they possibly could in terms of dealing with such a tight budget as related to HHS. I also want my colleagues to know that I decided to structure this amendment as I did, using defense research and development as an offset, only after very carefully considering any and every alternative option. I found there simply are no other options that will yield the increase we need for breast cancer research without decimating other vital health or educational initiatives.

So this amendment avoids the problem of pitting one disease against another disease, or one form of cancer against another form of cancer.

I have never offered an amendment to breach the walls in the past. I am under no illusion that the reductions, as minimal as we have tried to make them, will be painless. But when I consider that of the nearly 2 million American women who have been diagnosed with breast cancer, 46,000 of these women will die this year alone, I know this is the right thing to do.

When I consider the area that I live in, come from—Long Island—in certain areas we have what we call hotspots where the incidence of cancer as it relates to the rest of the State is 25 to 30 percent higher. We have people living in fear, in terror, so it is not only for the victim who actually contracts the disease, it is for those who know them, their loved ones, and those who fear the unknown. It is about time we found out what that unknown was and how we can deal with it. That is what we attempt to do.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, how much time is remaining on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no time agreement on this amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold that.

Mr. HARKIN. I will be glad to withhold.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] is recognized.

Mr. STEVENS. As one who has suffered from cancer, and my grandfather and father and brother all died from cancer, I am sad to have to make this statement. But the chairman, the Senator from Pennsylvania, and the committee have raised the amounts for breast cancer by $43.5 million already. This is an increase of $87.3 million over the current fiscal year. For breast and cervical cancer screening, it has been raised from $70 to $73 million. Again, that is a $23 million increase over fiscal year 1992.

I am constrained under the current circumstances, Mr. President, to state that the pending amendment pertains to matters which are within the jurisdiction of the Budget Committee. Although I am not a member of that committee, I have been asked, pursuant to Section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act, to raise a point of order against the pending amendment, and I do raise that point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SIMON). The Senator from Alaska has made a point of order under section 306 of the Budget Act.

Mr. D'AMATO addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. D'AMATO. I move to waive the Budget Act in consideration of this amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to waive the Budget Act.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SANFORD], and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

NOT VOTING—4

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this veto, the yeas are 43, the nays are 53. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative the motion is rejected.

The pending D'Amato amendment addressed the establishment of mandatory ceilings on spending and appropriations and thus the process by which Congress annually establishes the appropriate levels of budget authority and outlaws. Consequently, the amendment deals with matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Budget, and this bill has been reported by or discharged from that committee. As a result, the amendment violates section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, it is unfortunate that our amendment narrowly lost. However, the $87 million increase in the bill is a 65-percent increase over last year's funding. Although we narrowly lost in our effort to raise the total funding level an additional $214 million, I want it to be known that this fight is far from over. I will continue to pursue the full level of funding needed to fight and win the battle against this devastating disease.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is an amendment No. 3018 offered by the Senator from North Carolina.

AMENDMENT NO. 3020 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3018

(Purpose: To limit funding for programs that distribute sterile needles for the hypodermic injection of illegal drugs)

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to that amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WELLSTONE). The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] proposes an amendment numbered 3020 to amendment No. 3018.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike all after the first word in the amendment and add the following: "any other provision of this Act, no funds appropriated under this Act shall be used to carry out any program of distributing sterile needles for the hypodermic injection of any illegal drug unless the Surgeon General of the United States determines that such programs are effective in preventing the spread of HIV and do not encourage the use of illegal drugs, except that such funds may be used for such purposes in furtherance of demonstrations or studies authorized in the ADAMHA Reorganization Act (Public Law (102-321).".

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I oppose the Helms amendment. It is unwise policy and a blatant attempt to use the appropriations process to overrule recently enacted authorizing legislation.

I have offered a second-degree amendment that reiterates the agreement we enacted as authorizing legislation.

Just 2 months ago, Congress passed and the President signed into law the ADAMHA Reorganization Act. That authorizing legislation squarely resolved the question that the pending amendment has brought back before the Senate.

The ADAMHA bill was a bipartisan initiative to improve the Federal Government's role in research, treatment and prevention of mental illness and substance abuse. Senator HATCH and I introduced the bill in June 1991 and on August 2, 1991, the bill passed the Senate by unanimous consent.

That bill provided for a ban on the use of Federal block grant money for needle exchange programs unless the Surgeon General certified that such programs would be effective in reducing both drug abuse and the transmission of the AIDS virus. It did not bar studies or demonstrations pertaining to the needle exchange model.

At the conference on the ADAMHA bill, the House conferees insisted on repealing the ban on needle exchange altogether. But the full House voted to recommit the bill to conference with instructions to insert the Senate language on needle exchange programs. The motion to recommit was offered by Congressman GINGRICH after extensive consultation with the Bush administration.

It is significant that the Gingrich motion did not seek a complete ban on the use of Federal funds for needle exchange, but instead supported the Senate provision.

The conferees complied precisely with the explicit demand of the Gingrich motion.

The Senate language limiting the use of block grant funds for needle exchange was adopted by the conferees, and the amended conference report was passed overwhelmingly by both Houses of Congress. The Senate vote was 86 to 8, and the House vote was 358 to 60. President Bush signed the bill on July 10, just 2 months ago.

But today, the Senate is asked to use this appropriations bill to reverse that action. There is no reason for the Senate to reverse itself. We considered the issue thoroughly on the authorizing bill, and we settled it 2 months ago. We all know that our debates are often duplicative and much more time consuming than they should be. But this is ridiculous.

The policy adopted by this body when it passed the ADAMHA bill was a reasonable accommodation of competing interests. We can not apply a one-size-fits-all approval to this complex question of public health. A wide array of research suggests that needle exchange in some circumstances is the best public health strategy for combating the spread of disease and persuading addicts to enter treatment.

The measures twice passed by the Senate resolved this issue by prohibiting the general distribution of Federal funds for needle exchange, but permitting the Federal Government to study the effectiveness of such programs through demonstrations and other means.

The available evidence clearly justifies the Senate's position.

In New Haven, CT, a needle exchange program has resulted in a 33-percent reduction in the spread of AIDS. A program in Toronto, Canada, reported a 17-percent decline in AIDS. Similar success has been reported by pilot programs in Tacoma, WA, and Vancouver, Canada.

Contrary to the suggestion of Senator HELMS, this is solid evidence that needle exchange facilitates drug treatment not drug use. These programs bring addicts in contact with health authorities. In New Haven, 26 percent of participants requested drug treatment and 57 percent of them have either successfully completed treatment or are still participating in a treatment program.

In the District of Columbia, only addicts who are on a waiting list for treatment may participate in the needle program.

AIDS is a costly epidemic that has struck this country with devastating force. Strategies which reduce its transmission are enormously cost-effective.

New Haven estimates that it saved more than $8 million as a result of its $150,000 study of needle exchange. That is a cost-effectiveness ratio of 50 to 1. The President's Commission on AIDS and the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors have endorsed needle exchange programs, because they understand their benefit in appropriate cases.

I have offered a second-degree amendment that will basically restate the authorizing legislation on this subject that we passed 2 months. A vote for my amendment is a vote to ban the general use of funds for needle exchange programs, but to permit controlled studies by Federal researchers.

Members will therefore have an opportunity to cast a vote against the indiscriminate use of this controversial public health strategy, but in favor of further study.

I urge the adoption of the Kennedy second-degree amendment.

Mr. President, just very briefly, I want also to make a brief comment on the underlying amendment.

The Helms amendment is also exceedingly over-broad. It does not just bar the use of Federal funds for the needle exchange programs, instead it bars every State and locality in the country from using its own funds for this purpose if it chooses to do so.

Currently nine States have needle distribution programs operating in their cities. They are New York, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Oregon, Rhode Island, and Washington. All of these States, or the localities within these States, would have to choose between giving up this public health measure that they are spending their own money on, or face the loss of Federal funds in wide areas: Head Start Program and all the other programs that are funded by this appropriation.

Under the Helms amendment, they would not only lose all Federal drug-abuse funds, they would lose all Federal funds provided under this bill, and that would include all education money, all Head Start money, all job training money, maternal and child health care, and many others. That is an awfully harsh sanction for a State or city that simply wants to use its own money to experiment with a public health measure that may actually save lives by reducing the spread of AIDS.

If the Federal Government chooses not to spend its money for this activity through the block grant, that is fine. That is the decision we made in the authorizing legislation, and that is the decision that is contained in my amendment.

But there is nothing wrong with letting States fund this activity with their own money, and there is nothing wrong with having the Federal Government study the issue further.

A vote for my amendment is a vote for State discretion and for appropriate study of this issue.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

AMENDMENT NO. 3021 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3017

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I call for the regular order to return to amendment 3017.

Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT] proposes an amendment numbered 3021 to Amendment No. 3017.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, was further reading of the amendment dispensed with?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the reading has not been dispensed with.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike all after the word "None" and add the following: "of the funds appropriated under this Act may be expended by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to implement or administer the regulations affecting mandatory seatbelt use, mandatory motorcycle helmet use, and mandatory employer driver safety awareness programs, to be codified or proposed to be codified at parts 1910, 1915, 1917, 1918, 1926 and 1928 title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations."

This section shall become effective one day after the date of enactment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, what is the matter before the Senate at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is amendment No. 3021 to amendment No. 3017.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I demand the regular order with regard to the first committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first committee amendment is now pending.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from North Carolina please repeat his statement? The Senator from Ohio could not hear. Would the Senator from North Carolina please repeat the request.

AMENDMENT NO. 3022 TO COMMITTEE AMENDMENT ON PAGE 2, LINE 24.

(Purpose: To prohibit the use of Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act funds to provide homosexual support, outreach, or educational services to elementary or secondary school students)

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] proposes an amendment numbered 3022.

At the appropriate place in the first committee amendment insert the following:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or any other Act shall be used by any recipient of funds under this Act or any other Act to pay for homosexual educational, counseling, or support services in elementary or secondary schools, or to promote or encourage, either directly or indirectly, intravenous drug abuse or homosexual, bisexual, or heterosexual activity, whether pre-marital or extra-marital, in elementary or secondary schools. No youth shall be deemed at risk of substance abuse, for purposes of funding under this Act, solely on the basis of the youth's homosexuality.".

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have not seen the amendment, and we would like a little time to take a look at it.

Mr. HELMS. Sure.

Mr. HARKIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERRY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, while we are waiting for these other amendments that are pending, we have some amendments that we have agreed to on both sides. We would like to go ahead and finish those.

I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments be laid aside at this point for a number of amendments, that is, only the amendments that have been agreed to on both sides between Senator SPECTER and this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3023

(Purpose: To provide $40,000,000 in additional funding for Community Health Centers in fiscal year 1993)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. HOLLINGS, for himself, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. RUDMAN, Mr. BOND, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. KOHL, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. CRANSTON, Mr. BOREN, Mr. REID, Mr. LOTT, Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. ADAMS, and Mr. SPECTER, proposes an amendment numbered 3023.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, line 24, before the "." insert the following: ": Provided further, That of the funds made available for evaluation pursuant to section 2711 of the Public Health Service Act, $40,000,000 shall be made available for community health centers funded under sections 329 and 330 of the Public Health Service Act".

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment which I am offering for Senator HOLLINGS, myself and Senators BOND, DOMENICI, RUDMAN, LEAHY, AKAKA, CHAFEE, KOHL, MCCAIN, CRANSTON, BOREN, REID, LOTT, RIEGLE, ADAMS, and SPECTER would increase funding for community health centers by $40 million.

The funds would come from an account otherwise used for evaluation and studies.

I believe the funds are going to be put to better use if this amendment is passed. I had personally wanted to add $100 million for community health care programs in my transfer amendment that I offered, but since that amendment was not approved, this is the best we can do.

An additional $40 million for community health centers will provide essential health services for thousands of Americans.

I understand this amendment has been cleared by the minority side also.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise to thank Chairman HARKIN for working with me to help provide comprehensive health care to 400,000 more people this year through the Community Health Centers Program. With this amendment, we will add $40 million to community health centers, bringing the total Senate increase to $50.6 million.

Arthur Vandenberg said that, due to our Nation's vital interests, in foreign policy politics stops at the water's edge. Today, in the face of a crisis in the availability of basic, affordable health care to millions of Americans, politics similarly is giving way to unified action. More than 40 Senators of both parties have cosponsored health reform plans which propose significant expansions of community health centers. Indeed, taken with other bills that would expand health centers, 70 percent of the Senate is on record for expansion.

These Senators are responding to hard facts. According to the inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services, community health centers provide comprehensive health services to more than 6 million Americans for an average, yearly, preclient cost of $249. Ask anyone who does not have health insurance if this is not a good public investment. In fact, ask anyone who does have health insurance if this is not a good deal.

Besides compelling cost figures, these centers provide the services neighborhoods need. Centers are run by community boards composed mostly of consumers. They are open to anyone who walks in, and services are provided on a sliding fee scale.

In short, Mr. President, these centers represent cost-effective government that is in touch with the most vital needs of people today. Again, I am glad that the Senate can move forward in the fight for access to health care by bringing a much-needed $50 million increase for health centers to conference with the House, and I thank the chairman for his efforts.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I join my distinguished colleague in urging adoption of this amendment. We have labored mightily to find an appropriate offset. I think this is a very important funding addition.

I talked to Senator HOLLINGS, Senator BOND and Senator DOMENICI about it. They are all very anxious to move it forward. I think it is appropriate. We are going to have to move these offsets as we go through the conference process. But I think it does make sense.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am very proud to cosponsor this amendment to add $40 million to community health center funding and provide primary health care to perhaps 400,000 more needy Americans.

I introduced a bill last year—S. 1912—that would double the funding of these centers over a 5-year period.

That is what we need to do to ensure rural and low-income Americans can get primary health care in this country.

I am very pleased that the President requested a 16-percent increase in his budget for these centers, roughly following the path I set out in my bill.

But the Congress so far seems unwilling to make this a priority, despite all of the rhetoric about health care needs. In the House, they cut health center funding below the 1992 level.

And the committee-reported bill would provide less than a 2-percent increase.

This amendment would increase funding for these centers by 9 percent over 1992, far below what is needed to take care of all the unmet needs.

Nonetheless, this amendment would allow some 400,000 more Americans who might otherwise not get any care at all to get primary health care through these centers.

Community health centers are ready and waiting for us to provide them with the resources they need to do the whole job.

These centers already provide essential primary care services to some 6 million Americans.

And in New Mexico, there are 37 health centers providing care to over 100,000 New Mexicans every year.

Without these centers, literally tens of thousands of New Mexicans living in rural communities would have to travel 100 miles or more to see a doctor if their child got sick.

And there is simply no more cost-effective means to bring good primary health care to rural and poor Americans.

If we tried to provide access to care for these people through the Medicaid program, it would cost 6 times as much.

Unfortunately, with so many Americans going without health insurance and with rural communities losing more and more physicians and hospitals, the need for primary care services is far greater than current funding levels will support.

In New Mexico alone, 28 percent of the State's residents are not covered by health insurance, over half of the State's counties are medically underserved, and there are no physicians practicing in at least one county in the State.

These health centers provide those services we all need to stay healthy—prenatal care for pregnant women and their babies, childhood immunizations, screening tests for signs of poor health or diseases, treatment of common illnesses before they become more serious, and sound direction from a doctor about healthy behavior.

Yet our health care system underinvests in these basic services while pouring resources into new high-tech medicine that is often only marginally beneficial and very expensive.

I believe we need to reorient our priorities by investing more of our public funding in primary and preventive health care.

That way, Americans can stay healthy and avoid the costly treatment provided in the hospital emergency room.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, in medically undeserved urban areas, getting adequate health care is an important part of life and the health care safety net is an important part of the community. We need to ensure that families in our urban and rural areas have access to health care care through one the best, most cost-effective, public funded means possible today—our community health centers [CHC]. Health centers across the Nation are already providing primary and preventive care, emergency health services, preventive dental services, and more to those who need medical care and cannot afford it. We need to increase funding for the community health centers so that they can provide access to health care in our Nation's medically undeserved areas. I strongly believe that providing health insurance is not the whole answer to our health access problems. Providing a Medicaid card to everyone will not provide the doctors and clinics needed to provide that care in the inner city. For the people in these communities there should be a community health center there for them.

The community health centers already provide health care to 25 percent of the Nation's medically indigent—5.8 million Americans. But, we must do better. Communities with a CHC have seen their infant mortality rates decline by as much as 40 percent and their premature birth rate decline by as much 29 percent compared to communities without a CHC.

Patients who use community health centers receive more preventive care and have hospitalization rates that are 50 percent lower compared to those who use hospital outpatient clinics or emergency rooms as their primary source of care. Total hospital days are cut by as much as 62 percent and average length of hospital stay decreases by as much as 34 percent. CHC patients' costs for laboratory, x ray, and pharmacy services are two-thirds the national average for this population. Overall, Medicaid payments for CHC patients are reduced by over 40 percent per year.

We must strengthen the health safety net for those who fall through the cracks of the system and I believe the community health centers are clearly the best approach and they provide top quality health care for urban America.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment which will provide $40 million in additional funding for community health centers. It is an important effort to restore funding in the bill for community health centers. I supported the Harkin transfer amendment in part because it would have increased funding for CHC's by $100 million and I'm disappointed that we are not now able to increase CHC funding by that amount.

America needs more health centers. This amendment will help us improve access to health care in our underserved areas and that is an effort that every Member should support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Hearing none, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3023) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SPECTER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3024
AMENDMENT NO. 3025
AMENDMENT NO. 3026

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send to the desk three amendments and ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] proposes amendment numbers 3024, 3025, and 3026, en bloc.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendments be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments are as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 3024

On page 38, line 20, strike out the second "for" and insert in lieu thereof "in".

AMENDMENT No. 3025

On page 42, line strike out "with respect to" and insert in lieu thereof "as a result of".

On page 42, lines 1 and 2, strike out "of the requirements".

On page 42, line 2, strike out "at issue" and insert in lieu thereof "involving failure to recover overpayments from the Mercado family following the decision".

AMENDMENT No. 3026

On page 28, line 20, change the "period" to a "colon" and add the following: Provided further, that the Director of the National Institutes of Health is authorized, notwithstanding the provision of any other law, but consistent with the requirements of 42 CFR 46, for the purpose of research only, to authorize physicians licensed to practice medicine to use any medicine or medical procedure for which there is no evidence or reason to believe that such medicine or medical procedure is unsafe for the investigation of such medicine or medical procedure. Any physician so authorized by the Director may proceed with such medicine or medical procedure only if the patient is fully informed and provides written consent.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, these changes were suggested by the Department of Health and Human Services to clarify congressional intent. All three have been cleared by the other side.

The first amendment clarifies our intent that LIHEAP funding for the transition period October 1, 1993 to June 30, 1994 not be available for obligation until fiscal year 1994.

The second amendment clarifies our intent that relief be provided for the Mercado family only and not a broader class of AFDC recipients. The administration supports this amendment to prevent forcing Mrs. Mercado to turn over to the State of Connecticut $10,000 she saved for college education while on welfare.

The third amendment inserts language which was left out of the bill inconsistent with the intent expressed in the report regarding alternative medicine.

I urge adoption of the amendments.

Mr. SPECTER. I support the statements and associate myself with the comments of the distinguished Senator from Iowa. They are acceptable on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendments, en bloc.

The amendments (Nos. 3024, 3025, and 3026) were agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3027

(Purpose: To fund section 3(e) of the Impact Aid Statute)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment on behalf of the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. RUDMAN].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], for Mr. RUDMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 3027.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 54, line 23 after "section 2," insert the following: "$1,800,000, to remain available until expended, which shall be for payments under section 3(e) to local educational agencies funded under such section for fiscal year 1992,".

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this amendment is designed to take care of a school district in New Hampshire which was the only State left out. The amendment is for a relatively modest sum of $1.8 million. We have worked through the offsets and as usual the offsets are difficult, but the proposal is for Medicare contracts for $1.5 million and $220,000 for summer youth.

I was concerned about the summer youth and still am, although it is a relatively small sum. But I think it should be noted that the Senate mark is $95.295 million above the House mark, so that this is a place where we have considerable negotiating room and it is our best suggestion that that would accommodate all the competing interests and appropriate allocation priorities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3027) was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished Senator from Missouri [Mr. DANFORTH] be added as a cosponsor of the Hollings amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3028

(Purpose: To provide that up to $1,000,000 of National Cancer Institute funds may be used for the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory facility for proton radiation therapy treatment of cancer patients)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask the pending amendment be set aside and I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. LEVIN, for himself and Mr. RIEGLE, proposes an amendment numbered 3028.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Of the $2,010,439,000 provided for the National Cancer Institute, up to $1,000,000 may be used for expansion of an existing superconducting cyclotron at the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory for proton radiation therapy treatment of cancer patients.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of Senators LEVIN and RIEGLE. The amendment provides that up to $1 million of the moneys appropriated for the National Cancer Institute may be used for expansion of an existing superconducting cyclotron at the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory. This proposed expansion has nationwide implications as thousands of cancer patients are expected to benefit from this proton therapy.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, my amendment provides that up to $1 million of National Cancer Institute funds may be used for the expansion-project for cancer treatment by the consortium of Michigan State University's National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory; Wayne State University, and the University of Michigan. The expansion-project proposes to convert the present K-500 super-conducting cyclotron of the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory [NSCL] into a 250-MeV proton synchrocyclotron solely dedicated to proton cancer therapy. The planned conversion includes a building for an outpatient treatment facility with additional shielded radiation rooms and ancillary equipment.

Mr. President, the success of this proposed expansion has nationwide implications as thousands of cancer patients are expected to benefit from this proton therapy. According to medical experts, this life-saving technology is gaining acceptance for treatment in certain cases of inoperable prostate, bone, and soft tissue cancers, and for some salivary gland tumors. In September of last year, the first few patients on which the technology was used had advanced-stage malignant melanomas or head and neck tumors that were unlikely to respond to other types of therapies. Months later, the NSCL and medical team at Detroit's Harper Hospital expanded the protocols to include renal cell carcinomas, prostate cancers, and more hand and neck cancers.

Dr. Arthur T. Porter, chief of the Gershenson Radiation Oncology Center at Harper Hospital, and Chair of Wayne State University School of Medicine in Detroit has made particular note of the technological features which enhance the tumor-killing properties of neutrons without bringing harm to noncancerous tissue. According to Dr. Porter, and the other team of experts within the consortium, of all the ways of delivering radiation, proton beams have been shown to be the best in giving the most dose to the tumor and the least dose to the surrounding normal tissues. This allows the best chance of obtaining tumor destruction without complications.

Dr. Henry G. Blosser, professor of physics at the NSCL/MSU and inventor of the new cyclotron says another one of its significant features is the fact that it is "considerably smaller, lighter, more energy efficient, and easier to operate than a conventional cyclotron."

The consortium contributes unique and valued data to the project. This consortium has a proven track record in the field of particle radiation and will bring this important therapy to those patients who can best benefit from its use. An executive committee consisting of representatives from each participant organization will provide direction to the project.

Mr. President, NSCL is nationally and internationally recognized as the leading scientific resource for the development of superconducting cyclotron technology having developed the world's first superconducting cyclotron, the world's highest energy superconducting cyclotron, and the world's first medical superconducting cyclotron.

Mr. President, this joint project between the Gershenson Radiation Oncology Center at Harper Hospital/Wayne State University and NSCL/Michigan State University is a most worthy endeavor and deserves the support of this body.

I am pleased to have Senator RIEGLE as a cosponsor of the amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. I ask that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we examined the issue and it is acceptable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3028) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to and I move to lay it on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3029

(Purpose: To amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to restore institutions that have obtained candidacy status from recognized accrediting agencies or associations to the definition of an institution of higher education)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask the pending amendment be set aside and I send an amendment to the desk and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. BUMPERS, proposes an amendment numbered 3029.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 72 after line 22 insert the following:

SEC. . DEFINITION OF INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.

Section 1201(a)(5) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a)(5) is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "or if not so accredited, is an institution that has been granted preaccreditation status by such an agency or association that has been recognized by the Secretary for the granting of preaccreditation status, and the Secretary has determined that there is satisfactory assurance that the institution will meet the accreditation standards of such an agency or association within a reasonable time.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE. The amendment made by this section shall be effective on October 1, 1992.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send this amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator BUMPERS. It has been cleared on the other side. The amendment restores the candidacy status as a qualification for Federal financial aid.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I want to express my strong support for this effort to fix an error in the Higher Education Amendments of 1992.

I first learned of this problem when the president of Heartland Community College in Bloomington, IL, met with me a couple of weeks ago in Chicago. The Department of Education has interpreted a change that we made in the higher education bill to mean that new schools that have been granted candidacy status by an accrediting agency are no longer eligible for Federal financial aid. This week the Department sent letters to 232 schools across the country informing them that they are no longer eligible.

In order to achieve candidacy status, schools must go through a rigorous review very similar to actual accreditation. In making changes to the Higher Education Act, we did not intend to eliminate these schools from financial aid eligibility.

I also strongly favor the amendment to eliminate the restriction on financial aid officer discretion. Schools need to be able to make adjustments for students in special situations such as displaced homemakers and students with extraordinary medical and dental expenses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3029) was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. I understand this is a technical amendment, which relates to the authorization bill and it is all right on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3030

(Purpose: To restore financial aid administrator discretion with respect to the Pell grant program)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside and I send an amendment to the desk that has been cleared on both sides. The amendment is offered on behalf of Mr. PELL, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. ADAMS, and Ms. MIKULSKI.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mrs. KASSEBAUM, for herself, Mr. PELL, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. ADAMS, and Ms. MIKULSKI proposes an amendment numbered 3030.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 62, line 1, strike "Provided further" and all that follows through "Act:" on line 11.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment restores financial aid administrator discretion with respect to the Pell grant program.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, as my colleagues know, we only recently reauthorized the Higher Education Act. In fact, it is safe to say that the ink on the new law is barely dry.

One of the major accomplishments in reauthorization was a complete overhaul and simplification of the student aid application process. As a part of simplification, we strengthened the discretion of financial aid officers to use their professional judgment to determine the eligibility of students and families who face unusual circumstances in several key areas.

If you are an unemployed worker, if you are a displaced homemaker, if you have unusual and unexpected medical and dental expenses, if you are disabled and have increased educational expenses, or if you are a family with children in private elementary and secondary schools, financial aid officer discretion is critical. In each of those categories, your eligibility to receive a Pell grant will be determined in whole or in part through the discretion of the financial aid officer. Previously, these categories were covered on the application; they are now to be determined by the financial aid officer.

Unfortunately, the pending appropriations bill strikes financial aid officer discretion in the Pell Grant Program. In so doing, it strikes an unfair and unreasonable blow to unemployed workers at the very time they need our help most. For a nation in the midst of a deep recession, this is the wrong step at the wrong time.

Striking financial aid officer discretion also hurts women who heretofore may have been homemakers, and suddenly find themselves—through death, divorce or economic circumstances—needing education to prepare them to enter the work force.

If this provision remains a part of the bill, there will be no way for families who encounter sudden and unexpected medical expenses to have those expenses considered in determining their Pell grant eligibility.

Disabled individuals may face a higher cost of education because of their disability, and yet without financial aid officer discretion there will be no way to recognize those expenses and help them.

And, without financial aid discretion, families who send their children to private elementary and secondary schools will no longer be able to have the amount they pay in tuition considered in figuring their student aid eligibility.

Mr. President, I cannot emphasize too strongly how important it is that we remove the provision that strikes financial aid officer discretion. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this amendment to strike this language from the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. SPECTER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this is an important amendment to provide discretion to financial aid officers in determining eligibility for student financial aid. The concern has been that it could cost $40 million. We have worked it out so that it is budget neutral and an offset is not required. The financial aid officer's discretion is to raise but there also is discretion to reduce the grant award according to the authorization statute. An offset is not required under these conditions. I think it is an appropriate amendment and is acceptable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3030) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SPECTER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3031

(Purpose: Language to redistribute unspent SLIAG funds at the end of the program)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask to set the pending amendment aside.

I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. CRANSTON, for himself, Mr. SEYMOUR, and Mr. GRAHAM, proposes an amendment numbered 3031.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 39, after line 24, add the following: "Section 204(b)(4) of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 is amended by adding the following:

"Any funds not expended by States by December 30, 1994, shall be reallocated by the Secretary to States which had expended their entire allotments, based on each State's percentage share of total unreimbursed legalized alien costs in all States. Funds made available to a State pursuant to the preceding sentence of this paragraph shall not remain available after June 30, 1995."

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment on behalf of Senators CRANSTON, SEYMOUR, and GRAHAM will reallocate any State Legalization Impact Assistance Grants Program funds not expended by States by December 30, 1994, to States which have exhausted their SLIAG allotments. It is estimated at the end of the SLIAG Program many States will have a surplus of program funds, however some States will have a shortfall in funds. Under current law the surplus funds would be returned to the Treasury. States which have expended their SLIAG allocation will have no recourse to satisfy their unreimbursed costs. This amendment would simply reallocate the surplus SLIAG funds to States that will exhaust their SLIAG allotment.

Mr. GRAHAM. As a cosponsor of this amendment regarding the State Legalization Impact Assistance Grant Program, I want to clarify its intent with the sponsor of the amendment, Senator CRANSTON, and with the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, Senator HARKIN.

The amendment would allow any remaining allocated funds, at the end of the SLIAG Program after fiscal year 1994, to be reallocated. The affected States have virtually all endorsed the idea of reallocation once the SLIAG Program has expired, so I am pleased that we have adopted this amendment today.

Nevertheless, there has also been almost unanimous opposition among the affected States to any reallocation before the program has run its entire course. Although we have all been sensitive to the needs of States which have faced immediate shortfalls, the uncertainty of available new funding from year to year has led most States, in addition to the National Governors Association and the American Public Welfare Association, to oppose mid-program reallocation.

Now, the language in the amendment is quite clear: funds would not be reallocated until the end of the SLIAG Program. But I inquire of the Senator from California whether his intention is to seek reallocation at any time prior to that written in this amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. No, my intention in offering this amendment is strictly to ensure that reallocation take place at the conclusion of the SLIAG Program. In the spirit of the cooperative relationship we have established over the years in support of SLIAG funding, I will oppose any effort to alter the language in such a way that it would cause reallocation to take place at any time sooner than the end of fiscal year 1994.

Mr. GRAHAM. I appreciate that commitment, and I want to say that I have greatly valued the cooperative spirit to which the Senator has referred.

I would also like to pose a similar question to the chairman, particularly since the Senators from California and Florida will not be present in the conference on this bill.

Is it the Senator from Iowa's understanding that the Senate's intent in including this amendment in the Labor-HHS appropriations bill is to do nothing more than allow remaining funds at the conclusion of the SLIAG Program—that is, after fiscal year 1994—to be reallocated?

Mr. HARKIN. Yes; that was my understanding in agreeing to accept the amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM. I thank the chairman, and I hope he will hold firm to that language in the conference.

Mr. HARKIN. I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. SPECTER. It is acceptable on this side of the aisle, Mr. President.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3031) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3032

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask the pending amendment be set aside and I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. SIMON, proposes an amendment numbered 3032.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 40, line 10, after the DeConcini amendment No. 3006, the following: "Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of the United States Government receiving appropriated funds under this Act for fiscal year 1993 shall, during fiscal year 1993, obligate and expend funds for consulting services in excess of an amount equal to 92 percent of the amount estimated to be obligated and expended by such department, agency, or instrumentality for such services during fiscal year 1993: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the aggregate amount of funds appropriated by this Act to any such department, agency, or instrumentality for fiscal year 1993 is reduced by an amount equal to 8 percent of the amount expected to be expended by such department, agency or instrumentality during fiscal year 1993 for consulting services. As used in the preceding two provisos, the term 'consulting services' includes any services within the definition of 'Advisory and Assistance Services' in the Office of Management and Budget Circular A-120, dated January 4, 1988.".

On page 54, line 18, strike "$570,540,000" and insert "$576,540,000", and on line 15, strike "$751,756,000" and insert "$757,756,000".

Mr. HARKIN. This amendment adds $6 million to impact aid payments in general to the fund. It is offset with a 4-percent reduction in consultant services. I offer this amendment for Senator SIMON and urge its adoption.

Mr. SPECTER. No objection from this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3032) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SPECTER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

BLS

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I want to inform the Senate that the conference on the Labor-HHS bill may in addition to the amendments agreed to, consider the question of the prohibition of using funds by the Bureau of Labor statistics to use numbers or estimates adjusted by the Census Bureau on the basis of the postenumeration survey. Considerable concern has been raised over the accuracy of using statistics from the postenumeration survey. Use of those questionable numbers for the very important work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics is of great concern to this Senator and a number of others who have contacted me.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I agree with Senator HARKIN's concern about the Bureau of labor Statistics use of postenumeration survey based statistics. There are very real concerns about the inaccuracy of these numbers. I intend to work with Senator HARKIN to see if an acceptable provision can be developed in the conference that would assure that the Bureau of Labor not use these questionable statistics.

GENERAL CLINICAL RESEARCH CENTERS

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I seek recognition in order to discuss with the distinguished manager of the bill a concern that I have about the funding of certain programs at the National Institutes of Health. I am referring specifically in this context to the General Clinical Research Centers and the Biomedical Research Technology Program at the National Center for Research Resources at NIH.

As I am sure the Senator from Iowa is well aware, the GCRC's provide NIH-supported investigators at more than 70 universities across the country a mechanism to apply the knowledge gained in their basic research to the needs of real patients suffering from illness or injury. The BRTP Program, on the other hand, supports the development of technology—both the creation of new technologies applicable to biomedical research and the further improvement of already existing technology.

Both the GCRC and BTRP Programs are critical, in my view, to the maintenance of a strong infrastructure capable of supporting efficient and cost-effective programs of biomedical research and providing the technological means to keep these programs at the cutting edge. However, I am informed that the funding for these programs has not been keeping pace, particularly with the rest of NIH, in recent years. It is striking to me how this trend seems to confirm criticisms that are often voiced about the American economy in general—that our failure to invest is resulting in the decay of our national infrastructure; that we fall short when it comes to translating the knowledge gained from basic research into practical applications that are relevant to the marketplace; and that our industries often overlook the importance of critical technologies to manufacturing and other processes.

In view of these considerations, I hope that my good friend from Iowa would agree with these concerns and join with me in indicating to Dr. Healy that she do everything possible within her discretionary authority to maintain our capacity for cost-effective clinical research and to ensure that we continue our world leadership in biomedical research technology.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I want to respond to my good friend from Alabama and also to other colleagues who have expressed similar thoughts. I know that the Senator is aware of the difficult circumstances which we on the Committee on Appropriations faced in putting this bill together. We simply did not have enough money and, under these circumstances, there was a strong consensus that the highest priority at NIH must be given to research project grants.

Having said that, I do agree that more could be well spent to the clinical research or to technology development activities at the National Center for Research Resources. Accordingly, I am happy to join with him in indicating to the NIH Director that she should pay careful attention to these matters, both in managing NIH in 1993 and in the preparation of the budget request for 1994. In this regard, I want to assure the Senator from Alabama that the NIH strategic plan, currently under development, does address the matter of critical technologies. Thus, I do expect that we on the committee will receive good support next year from the NIH administration in this area and that this will help us be more responsive to the Senator's concern.

Mr. HEFLIN. I thank my good friend from Iowa, and I look forward to working with him next year to do what I can to help ensure that we develop a strong infrastructure for our biomedical research programs.

AIDS CLINICAL TRIAL GROUP PROGRAM

Mr. JOHNSTON. In fiscal year 1992, 35 AIDS clinical trial group centers for adults are receiving support from the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases [NIAID] to conduct studies to test the efficacy of potential drugs and drug combinations for the treatment of HIV infection and illnesses in adults and in children. Twenty-eight of the centers received funding through the competitive selection process. This decision provides funding for these centers for the next 4 years. Seven centers which had previously been funded but were not selected received funding from NIAID subsequent to this competition to continue their important programs and serve enrolled patients through December 31, 1992.

Each of these seven centers, as NIAID Director and renowned researcher Dr. Anthony Fauci pointed out to me in a letter dated February 28, 1992, "* * * submitted meritorious applications and received good technical evaluation scores during peer review." There was in fact no scientific reasons these units were discontinued. Instead, the only reason was budgetary: there simply were not enough funds available to fund them, particularly in light of the directive adopted last year to expand the number of pediatrics units from 15 to 24 within the existing pot of money for these programs.

As I understand it, it will require an additional $12.1 million for NIAID to support 35 adult centers—the current number—in fiscal year 1993 if no other allocations are changed. Under the committee's recommended funding levels and allocations, at best 30 such units can receive support—perhaps 5 less than are now supported.

I certainly understand the severe funding constraints the chairman is facing, and as he knows I strongly supported efforts he and others made earlier this year to shift funds from defense to domestic accounts so that we would not face reductions in critical domestic programs like this one.

Unfortunately, we did not win that battle. As I recall, we fell 10 votes short of the required 60 we needed, much to my disappointment.

While I understand the stark situation we are facing in domestic spending, and particularly with this bill, I am compelled to point out the consequences which the budget recommended for the Clinical Trials Group Program will have. As the chairman knows, under the committee's recommendation and accompanying report directives, a minimum of five of the seven adult centers which received a reprieve will go out of operation as of December 31, 1992. This means that those adults currently receiving treatment at these centers for AIDS will not have access to the cutting-edge experimental drugs and treatment therapies they now have, unless they can get to and be accepted into NIH in Bethesda, MD, or 1 of the other 30 adult ACTU centers.

Many of these patients have been very ill for a long time. For many of them the money and stamina required to relocate near, or travel to, another center is so great that they will drop out of the trials program altogether.

This is particularly a concern for those adult patient now being served at a center in New Orleans, located at the Tulane and LSU Medical Schools. On average since its establishment in 1987, this adult unit has been serving 135 active patients at all times, many of whom receive all their medical care from the center's research time. I'd also note that these patients come from throughout the southern Gulf State region—many from Louisiana, but also from Mississippi, southern Alabama, and the Florida panhandle region. If this unit in New Orleans closes, the nearest alternative treatment centers for these patients will be centers in Birmingham, AL—some 340 miles away—and in Galveston, TX—over 350 miles away. There is simply no close alternative for them.

This situation may also be true for some patients currently served at the other six defunded centers at Duke University, Penn State's Hershey Medical Center, St. Luke's Roosevelt Hospital in New York City, SUNU-Stony Brook on Long Island, the University of Cincinnati and the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester.

All seven of these centers have developed a large staff of physicians, researchers, nurses and other health professionals over the past 5 years with highly specialized skills and expertise in the treatment of AIDS. These researchers, doctors and nurses will now have to relocate to another center to continue their work on AIDS, or seek other less comprehensive support for their work. There is a good chance that some may refocus on other areas altogether.

If any of these centers close and patients or researchers leave the program, we will lose valuable data from their research efforts, something we surely all want to avoid.

Let me also point out that even though demographic considerations were a part of the competitive selection process, the seven defunded centers have enrolled more females, minorities, and IV drug users than is the average enrollment of these vulnerable group at all centers. The New Orleans Center, for example, has enrolled African-Americans into clinical trials at twice the average rate, 22 percent versus 12 percent.

I appreciate the committee's report directive to NIAID to "reallocate the necessary funds in 1993 for support of not less than two additional adult clinical trial units"—for a total of 30 such units—but I am very concerned that the remaining 5 will necessarily drop out. I wonder if the chairman would consider amending this directive to NIAID to a reallocation to continue seven additional adult units?

Mr. HARKIN. I certainly understand the concern of the Senator from Louisiana, and recognize his particular concern about the fate of the New Orleans center, which he has brought to my attention on several occasions.

I am also aware of the growing problem of AIDS in the southern gulf region, which this center serves. Louisiana ranks ninth in the country in the incidence of AIDS, and the Centers for Disease Control have reported an increase of 4.1 percent in the number of HIV-infected individuals in the Gulf South, with the sharpest rise among women and minorities.

Therefore, I am willing to take to conference an expanded directive to NIAID to fund at least two and up to an additional seven adult centers in fiscal year 1993.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I thank the chairman and believe this is a very fair solution. I believe it will also leave the issue open in conference, and I hope very much that additional funds can be allocated to NIAID as the conference works through the many issues it must, so that you will be able to provide sufficient funds to mandate that seven additional adult units be funded in fiscal year 1993.

In this respect I point out that although the adult clinical trials program is only 5 percent of the overall NIAID budget, many of the most important breakthroughs in AIDS research have come through this program. It would be a tragedy to lose these centers' expertise and promise for further progress. It would also be devastating to those who now have access to the hope these programs provide as they fight this debilitating disease to be cut off from this hope at the end of the year.

So I urge the Chairman, the conferees, and NIAID to try to find a way to see that enough resources are available for these centers to reapply for seven slots, so they will have a good chance of being continued beyond December 1992.

Mr. HARKIN. I can assure the Senator that we will try very hard to find additional funds to mandate that an additional seven adult centers are funded in fiscal year 1993 and I thank him for bringing his concerns about these centers and the patients they serve to my attention.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I support the Labor-HHS-Education funding bill we are considering. Nearly 4 years ago, on February 9, 1989, President Bush made his first address to the Nation after his inauguration. In his speech we expressed a commitment to education that I share. The President said:

> * * * I believe the best thing we can do is invest in our young people.* * * Education is critical to our future, both individually and as a nation. If we are to improve our standard of living, protect and defend our democratic freedoms, and strengthen our moral character as a nation, nothing is more important than education.

In the 4 years since that statement was made Federal education funding has increased by $10 billion, a 40-percent increase. Since 1989 State, local, and Federal spending combined has risen from $331.5 to $410 billion. The Senate's fiscal year 1993 bill provides $31.5 billion for education, which shows a tremendous Federal commitment to education. This bill is actually $700 million below the administration's request.

There are many positive aspects of the bill on the floor today. It increases funding for Federal education programs by $2 billion over fiscal year 1992. It provides funding to help illiterate adults learn to read through various programs, including programs in our community libraries, and to make educational opportunities available to preschool children who are at greatest risk.

I am pleased that the committee was able to provide an increase for the Chapter 1 Program. This program is extremely important to the State of Mississippi. Chapter 1 has successfully provided remedial reading and math programs to preschool, elementary and secondary students living in poor areas who are having difficulty keeping up with others. Statistics show that these children are at greatest risk of dropping out of school early. The Chapter 1 Program has not only helped these students achieve competency in basic skills, but it has also helped build self-esteem and provide a foundation for a productive future. Currently, the program serves over 5 million students in 14,000 school districts across the country.

The bill also provides a generous increase for the Star Schools Program. This program has brought state-of-the-art technology to many poor, rural school districts across the country. Through interactive communication technology students now have opportunities to study subjects that were previously not available to many school districts. In Mississippi, children residing in some of the poorest school districts in the country have had an opportunity to study such subjects as Japanese and advanced physics by some of the Nation's best teachers. I would like to thank the committee for their support for the Star Schools Program.

In addition, the bill provides a $600 million increase for the Head Start Program, the same figure requested by the administration for this important preschool program. The program gives disadvantaged children a better chance to build a solid foundation for learning.

The bill continues to support programs to strengthen historically black colleges and universities and other developing institutions of higher education. Support for this program continues to be a personal priority of mine.

I would like to thank the distinguished managers of the bill, Mr. HARKIN and Mr. SPECTER, for recommending funds for the third year to support teacher training programs of the National Writing Project. This program was authorized in 1991 to provide teachers of every discipline, grades kindergarten through college, with an opportunity to participate in summer and in-school writing clinics to help improve the teaching of writing in the Nation's schools and to emphasize the importance of writing in a student's ability to think and learn. The National Writing Project developed a teachers-teaching-teachers model which is now widely used for teacher enrichment. Federal funds are used to support the National Writing Project's 160 local sites, in 45 States which are affiliated with institutions of higher education.

Federal support has enabled the National Writing Project to expand to 11 new sites and to reactivate 2 sites which had closed due to lack of funding. For every Federal dollar invested in the writing project, 5 additional dollars are leveraged from State, university, school district, and other sources. Last year, 106,423 teachers participated in the program at a cost to the Federal Government of $18.34 per teacher. Approximately 7,506,500 American students of all ethnic and linguistic backgrounds benefited from Federal dollars for the National Writing Project.

Although I would have preferred higher levels of funding for some programs, in particular the Pell Grant Program, I believe this bill represents a commitment to education and the future of our Nation's young people. It has been crafted to make the best use of Federal resources in a time of tight budget constraints. Many important and worthy education programs are expanded by this legislation. The goal of the committee has been to increase the number of students served and to enhance the quality of these programs. The $31.5 billion increase this bill provides for education is one of the best investments we can make.

SMALL STATES TEACHING INITIATIVE

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I rise in support of H.R. 5677, the fiscal year 1993 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriation bill and to speak on behalf of the small States teaching initiative, an exciting new educational improvement program which was authorized earlier this year in the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992. Under the small States teaching initiative, the Secretary of Education was directed to provide funding to designated institutions in the Nation's 10 least-populated States to establish centers of excellence in teacher education.

In the State of Hawaii the small States teaching initiative is the product of the visionary work being conducted at the University of Hawaii. This institution believes that education reform must be initiated at the grassroots level and engage all of the stakeholders in a community: Parents, teachers, students, administrators, researchers, and elected officials. These institutions also believe that small States present ideal laboratory settings for experiments in educational innovation, and that land-grant extension models can best be used to stimulate the process of reform.

I know that as a result of severe fiscal constraints, the subcommittee was unable to provide fiscal year 1993 funding to support this program, or, in fact, any of the programs newly authorized in the Higher Education Act. I would hope that my friend and colleague from Iowa, the chairman of the subcommittee, will make every effort to find the resources to support this worthy program and eventually provide an appropriate level of funds to all of the new programs authorized in this year's Higher Education Act in this bill for fiscal year 1994.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, this evening the Senate is expected to pass the appropriations bill for fiscal year 1993 for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and related agencies. As a member of the subcommittee, I am well aware of the difficult decisions that had to be made by the Senator from Iowa who serves as the chairman of the subcommittee and the Senator from Pennsylvania who serves as the ranking member.

This bill provides $245.03 billion in new budget authority for the departments, a 12-percent increase over fiscal year 1992. Of that amount, approximately $8.2 billion is recommended for the programs within the Department of Labor, $207 billion was recommended for the Department of Health and Human Services, and $28.5 billion was recommended for the Department of Education. However, it is noteworthy that almost 75 percent of the funds available in this bill are automatic, that is, they are nondiscretionary amounts that fund entitlement programs.

Those numbers do not fully express the priorities for the people of Washington State that I advocated this year. They include $571 million for a dislocated worker assistance program the Department of Labor, much of which will help the distressed timber communities in Washington State that have suffered under the impacts of the Endangered Species Act. Also within the Department of labor, approximately $960 million was recommended for Job Corps which already has centers in Sedro Woolley, Moses Lake, and Fort Simcoe that serve disadvantaged Washingtonians between the ages of 16 and 21 by providing basic education, vocational training, job placements, medical support, and other services in a residential setting. The subcommittee recommendation includes funds for four new centers. Job Corps is the best chance that many kids have for jobs and economic opportunities, and it is my hope that the Seattle-Tacoma area will compete for and build a new center.

Within the Department of Health and Human Services, $544 million was recommended for community health centers and report language urging the Human Resources and Services Administration to consider rural areas in the Pacific Northwest when deciding new sites for community health centers. Approximately 30 nonprofit community health centers and migrant health centers operate in Washington State at over 50 health services delivery sites. A typical community health centers offers routine primary medical services, after hours on-call service and arrangements for hospitalization and approximately 200,000 Washingtonians where served by community and migrant health centers in 1990. Almost 50 percent of those had no health insurance and 22 percent were on Medicaid. Still, certain areas in Washington State are desperate for community health centers. Specifically, the Southwest Washington Health District serving Clark, Klickitat, and Skamania Counties has neither a community health center nor a migrant health center. In Clark County, there exists only 1.05 physicians of all specialities per 1,000 people, less than half the State average. It is my hope that this increase in funding for community health centers will provide services to Washington State families in need.

Another priority of mine in the area of rural health concerns funding for title VII, section 786 of the Public Health Service Act which funds family medicine residencies. The University of Washington School of Medicine is the central medical training institute for Washington, Alaska, Montana, and Idaho [WAMI]. Adequate funding for this program is essential for the encouragement of desperately needed family medicine personnel in the largely rural and undeserved WAMI region. In 1992, 20 percent of the University of Washington School of Medicine graduates selected family practice residency training programs, almost twice the national average of 11 percent. I am pleased that the subcommittee agreed to recommend last year's funding level of $36 million for this invaluable program which benefits Washington State families in rural and underserved areas.

The childhood immunization program is essential to preventing childhood diseases which can be avoided simply by making access to immunizations convenient and desirable for parents; $344 million was recommended for this crucial program that prevents childhood diseases and protects Washington State families.

One of my highest priorities this year was adequate funding for injury schools and trauma prevention. More than 150,000 Americans die from injuries each year and injury is the fourth leading cause of death behind cancer, heart diseases, and stroke. It is the leading cause of death through age 44 and is responsible for the excess child mortality in the United States. According to the CDC report, "Cost of Injury in the U.S.," the cost to our society from injuries amounts to $150 billion each year. I believe the time has come to make a serious commitment to preventing trauma.

The division of injury control within the center for environmental health and injury control funds 10 injury control research centers around the Nation. Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, WA., has an injury control research center that is known throughout the world for its studies on babywalker injuries, bicycle helmet safety, and the impact of firearms. Harborview receives approximately $700,000 annually in extramaural grants from the division of injury control. The Washington State Department of Health also receives a State capacity building grant to establish a statewide injury control program with a special emphasis on childhood injury prevention. Finally, children hospital and medical center receives a research project grant to conduct research on childhood head injuries.

I was pleased to learn that the division of injury control will finally receive independent, center status in fiscal year 1993. In order to support that new center and the dozen university-based research centers across the country, $34 million has been recommended by the subcommittee. I will continue to make injury control a major priority in order to eventually lessen the number of preventable deaths due to injury in Washington State.

A continuing priority of mine is adequate cancer funding. The National Cancer Act of 1971 committed the Nation to addressing cancer research as a national priority. Today there are over 8 million cancer survivors due to early detection and research. The overall survival rate from cancer has increased from 39 to 52 percent and nearly 70 percent of all children with cancer survive. The Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center located in Seattle, WA, is known throughout the world for its pioneering work in the area of bone-marrow transplants. Federal support of these cancer centers must continue if we are to provide hope to millions of cancer victims in the future. This year, I am pleased that the subcommittee has recommended over $2 billion for cancer research.

The State of Washington continues to receive a heavy refugee population that strains existing social services. The office of refugee resettlement [ORR] administers the Refugee Assistance Program which provides a comprehensive program of cash and medical assistance and social services for refugees. If Federal support of State agencies continues to erode in high immigrant States like Washington, the result will be the removal of a safety net for new refugees who risk their lives to begin anew in the United States. Private and State agencies already under pressure from dwindling Federal support will not be able to provide needed services. During the House-Senate conference on this appropriations bill I will fight to maintain the higher Senate recommendation of $405 million for refugee assistance.

Within the Department of Education, my priorities include impact aid which compensates school districts for the costs of educating children when enrollments and the availability of revenues from local sources have been adversely affected by the presence of Federal activities. Included in this program are: payments for "a" children; payments for "b" children; payments for Federal property (section 2); construction; and payments to school districts who are experiencing the closing of military bases. The average funding level for "a" payments to Washington State from 1988 to 1990 was about $21.3 million; behind only Alaska, Arizona, California, and New Mexico. The average funding level for "b" payments to Washington State from 1988 to 1990 was about $5.2 million; behind only California, New York, North Carolina, Texas, and Virginia. The Clover Park School District near Fort Lewis in Washington State is among the Nation's top recipients of impact aid money and will require more assistance as personnel and their families from closed California military bases transfer to Fort Lewis. The subcommittee has recommended $752 million for impact aid this year and, most importantly, there is report language to expedite the desperately needed renovation needed at schools on military bases, such as Fort Lewis in Washington State, that are owned by the Department of Education. I will continue to fight for adequate funding for impact aid school districts in Washington State and ensure that the Federal Government fulfills its obligations to impact aid students in Washington State.

Within the related agencies, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting serves an essential role in educating Americans of all ages. Stations such as KCTS in Seattle, WA, have the talent and the infrastructure to contribute to adult literacy, to prepare preschool children for school, to provide course materials and equity for K–12 students, and to involve our communities in solving the country's major educational and social problems. In rural areas of Washington State, the CPB provides access to otherwise impossible learning opportunities. I am pleased that the subcommittee recommended $310 million for this vital educational service to Washington State families.

Finally, Mr. President, I wish to thank the Members of the Senate for supporting the amendment that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI] and I introduced on the floor to restore the funding of the National Youth Sports Program [NYSP] to last year's level of $12 million. In 1992, 173 institutions of higher education served over 70,000 disadvantaged youths. NYSP is located in 44 States and 155 cities nationwide. In Washington State, the NYSP is in Pullman at Washington State University, in Spokane at Whitworth College and in Yakima at Yakima Valley Community College. The Yakima Valley Community College began last June and has provided needed services to 250 previously unserved low-income youths. Whitworth College began its program in June 1989 and over 1,000 youths have participated. This program includes health care personnel who identify preexisting medical conditions and ensure that youths receive medical care. The NYSP at Whitworth also transports youths from low-income areas onto the college campus. Since 1989, over 900 kids have participated in the program at Washington State University in Pullman.

Youngsters participate in a rigorous program of skills instruction and competition in a minimum of three sports, including the lifetime sport of swimming. The NYSP philosophy embraces the concept that mind and body must be nurtured together—a daily education component is a critical part of each NYSP project. NYSP is far more than a recreation program. Instruction is provided in alcohol and other drug abuse prevention, math/science education, personal health and nutrition, educational and career opportunities, and such subjects as teen pregnancy, AIDS, gangs, and suicide prevention to promote personal responsibility for health and social fitness. I am pleased this Senate has decided to support this invaluable program and I will continue to fight for its support during the Senate-House conference.

Mr. President, these programs that were priorities of mine are all worthy and necessary investments in the well-being of citizens of Washington State. The Job Corps provides jobs and economic opportunities; community health centers and family medicine residencies provide access to health in rural and underserved areas; the new Center for Injury Control and the National Cancer Institute provides lifesaving research; and impact aid and the corporation for public broadcasting offer better education: These programs have my support because they directly serve Washington State families and communities. I wish to thank again the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, the Senator from West Virginia, and the ranking member, Senator HATFIELD, as well as the chairman of the subcommittee, Senator HARKIN, and ranking member, Senator SPECTER, for their commitment to this difficult appropriations bill. I look forward to working together with them in the upcoming House-Senate conference.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT AND PREVENTION GRANTS FOR PREGNANT AND POST PARTUM WOMEN

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I would like to ask for clarification of report language accompanying the appropriations for grants for treatment and prevention of substance abuse in pregnant and post partum women. These grants were originally administered by the Office of Substance Abuse Prevention [OSAP] within the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration [ADAMHA]. However, in reauthorizing this and other programs and reorganizing ADAMHA, Public Law 102–321 restructured these grants to emphasize residential treatment in which women and their infants can stay together. While existing grants would continue to be administered by the successor to OSAP, new appropriations and any funds made available by expiring grants would be administered through the new Center for Substance Abuse Treatment [CSAT].

It is my understanding that the authorizing language now requires that any appropriations over the 1992 level—which was $52.6 million—would have to be used to fund residential treatment programs for pregnant and post partum women. However, any available funds under that ceiling could be used either for residential treatment or for outpatient/prevention programs. These funds would become available as existing grants expire. I ask the Senator from Iowa if that is his understanding as well.

Mr. HARKIN. I agree with the interpretation of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Then, Mr. President, I ask the Senator if he would clarify language regarding this program contained in the committee report accompanying the appropriations bill. That language directs all new grants be awarded for residential treatment. Such a scenario would mean that, as the old OSAP grants phase out, no funds could be used to support outpatient and prevention programs that are critical to a balanced approach to the problem of substance abuse among pregnant women. I believe CSAT should be directed to use all funds above the 1992 ceiling for residential treatment, as the authorizing legislation requires, but that it should be recognized that CSAT would have discretion to use funds that become available under the ceiling for outpatient and prevention programs.

Mr. HARKIN. I agree with the Senator that CSAT should be so directed and should have discretion over funds under the ceiling.

Mr. DODD. I further note, Mr. President, that prior to the reorganization mandated in the reauthorizing legislation, OSAP had approved several worthy proposals for funding but had not actually funded them. After being told that they would receive funds, these programs will now be forced to go through the entire application and approval process again, because the program has been shifted to CSAT. This will only delay further the delivery of services to a population sorely in need of them. I believe these proposals should be given priority in the new approval process, provided they meet the new requirements for funding eligibility. I ask the Senator from Iowa for his thoughts on this subject.

Mr. HARKIN. I agree with the Senator from Connecticut that, as long as the approved projects are eligible under the new authorizing language, the director of the treatment center may give them priority in awarding funds available for that type of project.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Senator from Iowa.

FUNDING FOR BIRTH DEFECTS PREVENTION AND IMPLEMENTING RECOMMENDATIONS BY THE U.S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE RELATING TO FOLIC ACID USE IN PREVENTING NEURAL TUBE DEFECTS

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, efforts to prevent birth defects are desperately needed. Just listen to the following sad story of an outbreak of birth defects that may have needlessly cost innocent lives. About 1 year ago, health professionals in Texas observed that six infants were born with anencephaly over a 6-week period. Anencephaly is a fatal neural tube birth defect characterized by an absence of brain tissue. After this information was reported to the Texas Department of Health, a subsequent study revealed that since 1989, at least 30 infants in south Texas had been born without most of their brains.

The tragic situation in south Texas underlines the need for a coordinated national effort to discover the causes of birth defects and develop prevention strategies. Without a birth defects registry, it is quite possible that somewhere in America today, infants are being born with serious birth defects that could have been prevented.

But today, I am here to urge that funding be made available for the implementation of the new recommendations by the U.S. Public Health Service urging all U.S. women of childbearing age to consume 0.4 mg. of folic acid daily to reduce their risk of having a pregnancy affected by spina bifida or other neural tube defects. Each year, 2,500 infants are born with spina bifida and anencephaly. Spina bifida is the leading cause of paralysis. The Centers for Disease Control estimates that implementation of this new recommendation will decrease neural tube defects by 50 percent. This action will save thousands of children and families the emotional cost associated with neural tube defects and prevent a terrible tragedy.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of a summary of the recommendation by the U.S. Public Health Service be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE USE OF FOLIC ACID TO REDUCE THE NUMBER OF CASES OF SPINA BIFIDA AND OTHER NEURAL TUBE DEFECTS

SUMMARY

Spina bifida and anencephaly are common and serious birth defects. Available evidence indicates that 0.4 mg (400 µg) per day of folic acid, one of the B vitamins, will reduce the number of cases of neural tube defects (NTDs). In order to reduce the frequency of NTDs and their resulting disability, the United States Public Health Service recommends that:

All women of childbearing age in the United States who are capable of becoming pregnant should consume 0.4 mg of folic acid per day for the purpose of reducing their risk of having a pregnancy affected with spina bifida or other NTDs. Because the effects of higher intakes are not well known but include complicating the diagnosis of vitamin B_{12} deficiency, care should be taken to keep total folate consumption at <1 mg per day, except under the supervision of a physician. Women who have had a prior NTD-affected pregnancy are at high risk of having a subsequent affected pregnancy. When these women are planning to become pregnant, they should consult their physicians for advice.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, funding is included in the bill to continue the research on spina bifida to study the use of folic acid to prevent neural tube defects. Further study on the use of folic acid is still needed, but, clearly, priority should go to taking steps to prevent the neural tube defects like spina bifida and I urge CDC to use some of its spina bifida moneys for an initiative in its disability prevention program to implement the new recommendations on folic acid.

Mr. HARKIN. I have seen the recommendations by the Centers for Disease Control. As a matter of fact, I included the funding for the study in spina bifida that has produced these results and I added $2 million in the fiscal year 1992 Labor-HHS bill to initiate the disabilities prevention program at CDC. I concur with my distinguished colleague that we should be doing more at home and will work with CDC to expand the Disabilities Prevention Program.

Mr. BOND. I thank the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] for his assistance in this matter and I would also like to take this opportunity to thank him for his efforts to fund birth defects prevention efforts in the bill. His support of these efforts has been so important and he should be commended for recognizing the need to eliminate the terrible tragedy of birth defects. His support has permitted important activities at the Centers for Disease Control to move forward and has made a significant difference in the Federal Government's efforts to prevent the leading cause of infant mortality.

LIHEAP

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, there are several matters regarding the LIHEAP Program that I would like to clarify with the distinguished Senator from Iowa. The first has to do with helping the States cope with the delayed availability of much of the program's funding. Over half of LIHEAP's funds would not be available until October 1993. Last year, we also had some delayed funding, and many States found it difficult to cope. In some States, utilities and Governors failed to agree on arrangements by which the LIHEAP Program could secure energy supplies for needy households on the basis of the State's pledge of payment by October 1.

While not the optimal situation, we can deal with the delayed funding if States and utilities work closely together. Utilities receive nearly $1 billion in LIHEAP funds directly. The effort and extension of credit involved in providing families with energy services pending State payment is of minimal cost compared to the value of the Federal benefits to the industry. All the vendors who accept these public moneys should participate, as does Northeast Utilities in Connecticut, in a plan to consider any LIHEAP benefits guaranteed to them in the future when billing LIHEAP clients.

In 1993, such cooperative arrangements will be crucial to the ability of families who depend on LIHEAP to make it through the winter. The uneven cooperation across States that occurred last year would be disastrous in the coming year. We, therefore, need strong leadership from the Secretary of Health and Human Services to help ensure that utilities across the country take part in such arrangements. I strongly urge the Secretary to meet with the chief executive officers of the major public utility organizations to encourage energy suppliers to serve eligible households while waiting for delayed State payments.

In addition, the Secretary should emphasize the importance of the utilities joining in partnerships to leverage additional LIHEAP resources. Once again this year, the committee has set aside $25 million for the LIHEAP leveraging program included in the 1990 LIHEAP reauthorization. States that leverage additional non-Federal resources for LIHEAP can receive incentive payments that ultimately benefit the utilities as well. We need a concerted effort from the top to get large energy providers involved. I ask the Senator from Iowa if he concurs in these objectives.

Mr. HARKIN. I agree with the Senator from Connecticut that it is critical that the Secretary exercise vigorous leadership in working with the States and utilities in the manner described by the Senator to achieve a level of cooperation that will ensure that families depending on LIHEAP are not hurt. I also concur with the Senator that the Secretary should take the lead in encouraging utilities and other energy providers to participate in leveraging activities which can stretch scarce Federal dollars.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, while utilities generally can absorb funding delays, incurring small carrying costs, only the largest of bulk fuel suppliers has a cash-flow that permits acceptance of a State promissory note on behalf of low-income households. Bulk fuels include fuel oil, bottled natural gas, and kerosene. Delayed funding, while necessary in light of budget realities, can only help clients of cooperating utilities and large energy companies keep the heat on in winter. The money provided October 1 is the only hope for most bulk fuel users.

In numerous States in New England and some in the South, bulk fuels comprise more than half the home energy used by the poor. Late payments cannot help these families when it most counts. The delay of over half of LIHEAP funding will put many New Englanders in particular at extreme risk.

It is my hope that the House-Senate conference can add outlays to the final measure so that at least 71 percent of funds can be delivered on time, as was the case in fiscal year 1992. However, if this is not possible, I would ask that the Senator consider developing report language in conference providing for distributing the funds available on October 1, 1992, based on States' bulk fuel usage and distributing the delayed funds to provide the balance of allotments in all States. Without such a measure, many LIHEAP families will literally be left out in the cold. I ask the Senator from Iowa for his thoughts on this problem.

Mr. HARKIN. I am aware of the precarious position bulk fuel users are in because of the delayed funding and will consider the suggestion of the Senator from Connecticut as we move through conference. We would have to look at this issue closely and obtain data from HHS about the problem and how various States are affected.

Mr. DODD. Finally, Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Iowa to clarify the terms of the $600 million in contingency funds that may be released on the President's submission of a formal budget request designating the need as an emergency. It is my understanding that this is not an all or nothing proposition. That is, the President could request less than $600 million if the situation warranted. I inquire of the Senator if that indeed was the committee's intent.

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator from Connecticut is correct. The committee intends that the President may request emergency funds in any amount up to and including $600 million.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Senator from Iowa.

IMPACT AID

Mr. SIMON. I would like to compliment the Senator from Iowa on all his hard work on the appropriations bill—especially in a year in which resources are so scarce. I share his concern about having to cut funding for important educational program.

One program that has been cut is impact aid, which is intended to defray the cost of educating military-dependent schoolchildren since many military personnel are tax-exempt. Impact aid is designed to ensure that communities affected by Federal activity have equal educational opportunity, but this need is not being met. While it is unfortunate that this program was cut, it is significant that the committee recommended $219 million more than the President's budget provided for this program of critical importance to military families.

I want to thank Senator HARKIN for accepting my proposal to increase the impact aid section (a) appropriation by bringing the Senate bill a full $10 million over the House bill for the section (a) program. It is my intent that this money be used to help North Chicago District 187 and Highland District 111. These districts are suffering from severe financial difficulties as a result of impact aid funding shortfalls. For example, 48 percent of North Chicago's students are from the Great Lakes Naval Training Center, but impact aid funds provide only 10 percent of their budget. This shortfall costs the district an additional $3 million per year and threatens its very existence.

This increase in the appropriation will provide the Senate conferees with the ability to fashion a compromise addressing the needs of these districts.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Senator for his kind comments and would like to compliment him on his tenacious efforts to protect school districts in his State. I particularly share his concern about the situation facing North Chicago District 187. This particularly needy district is losing up to $4,000 per year for each military child—despite passing a referendum to raise property taxes to one of the highest rates in Illinois.

I understand that inadequate impact aid funding forced North Chicago to cut 45 of 140 teachers in order to meet payroll. Highland Park and other Illinois districts, as well as school districts throughout the country, face similar problems. These students deserve better.

While I am sympathetic to the needs of these districts, I know that the Senator from Illinois is aware that this subcommittee has a policy against earmarks for specific districts. But I hope that this additional appropriation for the Impact Aid Program will provide the Department of Education with the means to assist financially strapped school districts that simply cannot survive without it.

Mr. SIMON. As the Senator knows, the House bill contains a proposal for $10 million to be set aside for schools that meet three criteria. The Chair of the House Education and Labor Committee had attempted to block this proposal for reasons similar to those outlined by the Senator from Iowa. I am pleased that Chairman FORD agreed to withdraw his objections after I discussed this issue with him.

This additional allocation for impact aid in the Senate bill will provide the conferees with flexibility to address this issue in conference.

I would also like to thank my colleague from Illinois, Senator DIXON, for his support of this amendment and his efforts to help the North Chicago and Highland Park school districts. Senator DIXON has sponsored a very important provision on the defense authorization bill that would shift responsibility for paying for the education of military children to the Defense Department. That change is long overdue.

Mr. HARKIN. I agree that this responsibility must be shifted to the Defense Department. Once again, I compliment the Senator from Illinois for his dedication to this issue.

SPECIAL PROJECTS OF NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE

Mr. KENNEDY. I would like to engage the chairman in a colloquy regarding funding for the Special Projects of National Significance or SPNS Program in title II of the Ryan White Act.

Mr. HARKIN. I am delighted to engage in a colloquy with the senior Senator from Massachusetts about the committee's intent with regard to this important program.

Mr. KENNEDY. As the chairman knows, this program is critical to our national efforts to develop the best and most cost-effective systems of care for the HIV-infected population. Under title II of the Ryan White Act, the Health Resources and Services Administration [HRSA] is permitted to take up to 10 percent of the funds available in title II for these special national demonstration projects.

It was the intent of the Senate Labor Committee, in drafting this provision, to give HRSA and the department some funds with which they could develop and model for the Nation new and innovative AIDS service programs. These funds have constituted the only discretionary to serve special populations such as women and children, incarcerated persons, native Americans, and rural individuals. This program has helped to fill in the gaps in services and develop the next generation of AIDS programs.

Mr. HARKIN. Yes; the committee was aware of the important work the SPNS projects now have underway. In fiscal year 1992, $5.7 million is being used to fund 26 projects around the country. Projects have been funded in North Carolina, Michigan, Indiana, New Mexico, Maryland, and New Jersey. By contrast, HRSA reviewed almost 150 grant applications in this area, a number which suggests the extent of the need for model AIDS service programs to address the needs of women, children, rural residents, and native Americans. Forty-five of these applications were approved for funding but due to budget constraints, less than half, or 22, were actually supported.

Mr. KENNEDY. In Massachusetts, we have two projects which are wonderful examples of the important work undertaken with these funds. The Massachusetts AIDS discrimination initiative located in Newton but serving the entire State works to inform individuals from diverse linguistic and cultural backgrounds who may experience HIV-related discrimination about their civil rights and to refer them to advocacy agencies that can assist them in resolving discrimination complaints and accessing needed services.

As the Senator knows, with the passage of the Americans With Disabilities Act, which you courageously sponsored, people with HIV infections are now protected from discrimination in employment, public accommodations, and the like. Through this model program Cambodian, Latino Portuguese, and Chinese-Americans with HIV as well as low-income disenfranchised black Americans are being educated about their rights under the ADA and other statutes and they are being connected with the legal resources and other social services they may need.

The other SPNS Program in my home State, which is known as the "No One Alone with HIV" or NOAH project, helps poor and disenfranchised families to cope with the psychological problems related to HIV infection. Unfortunately, to date, mental health issues have largely been ignored by the Federal Government in any comprehensive fashion in the context of AIDS. This project, however, which works through the Boston Department of Health and Hospitals and community-based clinics focuses on teaching doctors and nurses to address the emotional devastation of their patients, thereby improving the quality of the overall care.

These are the kind of powerful stories that are being told in communities across the country, made possible by the availability of SPNS funding.

Furthermore, the chairman mentions a figure of $5.7 million for these critical efforts, but that is not the full amount of funds made available by the Appropriations Committee for fiscal year 1992 under the SPNS set-aside in the Ryan White Act, is it?

Mr. HARKIN. No; the Senator is right. Based on the authorizing legislation, a total of $10.6 million or 10 percent of the Ryan White title II appropriation in fiscal year 1992 was available for SPNS projects. At the direction of the Congress in the appropriations process, however, $4.9 million was allocated to reimburse dental schools for their uncompensated AIDS care. Under this so-called dental SPNS Program dental schools submit reimbursement claims for AIDS-related care services by dental schools and that reimbursement claim is then paid by HRSA. Unlike the SPNS Program authorized by Congress in Ryan White, this is not a peer review, merit-based program. In 1992, 78 dental schools around the country received an average reimbursement of $53,000 under this program. Was it the intent of the authorizing committee that these critical projects should undergo peer review and that prospective grants should address cutting edge issues on HIV infection?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, it was.

MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH BLOCK GRANT

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the maternal and child health block grant has served as the backbone to our maternal and child health system across the country. As the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee has noted in the fiscal year 1993 appropriations report for the Department of Health and Human Services, we must invest in programs that support children.

The maternal and child health block grant is the country's core support for mothers and children. The MCH block grant provides funds to States to allow for a Federal/State partnership with each State developing its own program for improving the health of mothers and children, including adolescents, using a variety of approaches that allow for differences within and between States.

At least 24 States are currently using MCH block grant funds to support school-based health services. Since the 1930's, these funds have provided resources to support basic school health programs in most States. In my own State of Minnesota, both the Minneapolis and St. Paul School Districts have made school-based clinics a high priority for a number of years. The Health Start Program opened the doors to the first school-based clinic in St. Paul in 1973 and it now serves over 3,000 students in its school-based clinics. This program provides a one-step shopping model of comprehensive health and social services based on the needs of each school's community. For the past several years, the State of Minnesota has funded a grant program to encourage colocation of services in schools. And, colocation of services is also a high priority for "Minnesota 2000," our State's response to President Bush's "America 2000" initiative.

Mr. President, the chairman of the Labor-HHS Subcommittee has always been a strong advocate for our children. I want to ask the Senator whether he agrees that the MCH block grant should be used to promote school health services and to design integrated school health systems?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I share the Senator's concern about increasing the availability of health services for children. Providing services through schools seems like an efficient and effective way to reach children, and the MCH block grant is certainly an effective vehicle for providing these services under the current authority.

I know the Senator is trying to raise the authorization levels for the MCH program. As chairman of the Labor-HHS Subcommittee, I have worked to increase appropriations for the block grant. I added $100 million for the MCH block to my strategic children's initiative transfer amendment.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I thank the subcommittee chairman. I hope this will serve to acknowledge the importance of the MCH block grant and will encourage states to utilize their MCH block grant funds to help support school health services.

AGENCY STAFFING

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I want to clarify, with technically correct terminology, the two provisions in the bill aimed at reducing agency staffing. The first provision freezes staffing at last year's levels. In fiscal year 1993, aggregate departmental full time equivalent levels shall not exceed fiscal year 1992 actual usage levels. The second implements the 1 for 2 attrition policy recommended in this year's budget resolution. Only 50 percent of the vacancies occurring in full time permanent positions of the Departments of Labor, HHS and Education will be filled. Together, these provisions save $325 million which we have devoted toward valuable program areas throughout the bill.

However, I wish to reiterate committee report language that provides an exception to this policy only in those cases where specific FTE's are added and funded by the committee, and when employee salaries are reimbursed by other organizations.

> In those instances where positions have been specifically added by the Committee, the one-for-two hiring restriction will not apply until the positions have been filled, after which these positions will be subject to the hiring restrictions. The hiring restrictions would not apply to any positions qualifying as ceiling-exempt, or any special training program positions with limited appointments not to exceed 2 years.

EARLY CHILDHOOD STAFF TRAINING

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I want to commend Senator HARKIN and his staff on their work on the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and related agencies appropriations bill. Because of the size of the subcommittee's allocation, it was not possible this year to provide new line item appropriations to new programs.

I know the Senator cares deeply about child care, as I do. He was a cosponsor of my bill, the early childhood staff training and professionalization grants, which was included in the Higher Education Amendments of 1992. Those demonstration grants will allow States to plan and implement cohesive, service-integrated systems for training early childhood staff and for linking such training to career ladders that will keep good staff in the field. Quality of early childhood programs depends on quality staff. Quality early childhood programs will help us reach the first national education goal of school readiness.

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator is correct that I am a strong supporter of programs that will improve early childhood education and child care. This is a program that I would gladly support funding in a year when there are funds for new programs. As chairman of the subcommittee that appropriates funds for education programs, I will try very hard next year to appropriate adequate funds for this important education program.

FISCAL YEAR 1993 VOCATIONAL EDUCATION APPROPRIATIONS BASIC EDUCATION GRANTS

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I want to take this opportunity to clarify the intent of the committee regarding the Department of Education's vocational education basic grants program which is required by the 1990 Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act to make 0.25 percent of its basic allocation available to native Hawaiian programs. I bring this to your attention, because I understand that the Department of Education in its fiscal year 1993 budget request proposes to eliminate the $2,452,000 made available to native Hawaiian programs in fiscal year 1992 in this upcoming fiscal year.

The administration suggests that, "Consistent with the Department's position on other programs that focus solely on Hawaiian natives, no funding is requested for the Hawaiian natives set-aside." The Department of Education further notes that this population is counted in formula allocations under the basic State grants, community based organizations, and tech-prep programs and that native Hawaiians can receive services through those programs.

Mr. President, this is simply not the case. Program set-asides for Indian and native Hawaiian programs, particularly in the Department of Education, have been authorized under the chapter I programs, drug free schools and Communities Act programs, and the Bilingual Education Act, because State-funded programs rarely provided services to native people nor do they interact with Indian and native Hawaiian programs. This is because it is generally assumed by States that Federal resources are made directly available to Indian and native Hawaiian populations. The vocational education needs of Indians and native Hawaiians would clearly not be addressed if it were not for these statutorily-based formula allocations.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, Senator INOUYE is accurate in his statement regarding the administration's recommendation to eliminate funding for the native Hawaiian vocational education programs. Under the existing law, the amount which is required to be distributed for the native Hawaiian vocational education programs is 0.25 of the overall allocation. The amount which is recommended by our subcommittee for the basic grant would make $2,555,850 available to native Hawaiian vocational education programs in fiscal year 1993. I will work with Senator INOUYE to reserve at least the statutorily required amount for the native Hawaiian community in the fiscal year 1993.

Mr. INOUYE. I thank my esteemed colleague. By reserving the amount which is explicitly authorized under Public Law 101-392, we will be addressing the vocational education needs of the native Hawaiian community whose families comprise 30 percent of those receiving welfare in the State of Hawaii and who have double the unemployment rate of the State.

SLIAG FUNDING LEVEL

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am very concerned about the funding level for the State legalization impact assistance grants, [SLIAG], programs. The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, [IRCA], provided a total of $4 billion to be appropriated between fiscal year 1988 and fiscal year 1991 to reimburse State and local governments for the costs of health care, public assistance, literacy and education training for newly legalized aliens.

Last year the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education conference committee deferred $1.123 billion from fiscal year 1992 to fiscal year 1993. Despite this action, the conferees affirmed their support for SLIAG and expressed their intention to fund the program in fiscal year 1993:

> The deferral was based on the need to achieve outlay savings in 1992, and does not represent a permanent reduction in funds available to States. The conferees are also in agreement that further deferral of SLIAG funds would be detrimental to the objectives of the program and would place in jeopardy newly legalized aliens and their ability to complete the requirements of citizenship. Therefore, the conferees agree to provide sufficient funds for SLIAG in 1993, and direct the Secretary to distribute these funds no later than October 15, 1992.

Mr. President, I am extremely disappointed to find that the Senate has again failed to honor its commitment of last year. This year, the Senate has appropriated $150 million for SLIAG. This is $441 million lower than the House recommendation and $150 million lower than the President's budget recommendation.

California alone expects a shortfall of $675 million through fiscal year 1993. Therefore, the committee's recommendation is woefully inadequate to cover the unreimbursed SLIAG costs.

Cutting or further deferring SLIAG funds does not cause the demand for services or the related costs to disappear. Instead, it shifts the burden unfairly and inappropriately to State and local governments. Entire communities, not just the newly legalized community, suffer because the demand for services outpaces the combined ability of State and local governments to fund essential programs.

It is time the Federal Government honor its obligation under IRCA and I hope that the distinguished chairman of the Labor, Health and Human Services subcommittee can give me some assurances that the committee will work toward adopting the House recommendation for SLIAG funding of $561 million.

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator may be assured that in conference I will work with my colleagues in the House to increase the fiscal year 1993 funding level for the SLIAG programs. I understand States such as California are facing difficult budgetary constraints that will force them to cut other vital programs if funding for SLIAG is inadequate.

EDUCATION

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I would like to clarify with the distinguished chairman of the Labor, Health and Human Services Appropriations Subcommittee another issue relating to the expenditures of SLIAG funds.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 provides that States use not less than 10 percent of their SLIAG grants for payments to State educational agencies. Although States have the authority to reallocate SLIAG funds among the various categories authorized for funding, there has always been a clear intent that some SLIAG funds be allocated for educational services. Is that the understanding of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator from California is correct.

Mr. CRANSTON. Is it the committee's intention that SLIAG funds appropriated in the fiscal year 1993 bill be allocated by States to each of the three statutory categories consistent with the requirement of IRCA.

Mr. HARKIN. It is the intention of the committee that these funds be allocated consistent with the requirements of IRCA.

PRIORITIZATION OF SLIAG FUNDING REIMBURSEMENTS

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I would like to further clarify the prioritization of SLIAG funding reimbursements with the distinguished floor manager. Is the Senator from Iowa in agreement with House report language that all providers, State and local, are in an equal position with respect to reimbursements of costs incurred prior to October 1, 1992, and, therefore, prior year State and local costs will be fully reimbursed before reimbursing State and local costs for fiscal year 1993.

Mr. HARKIN. Yes, I am in agreement with the House report language regarding the prioritization of SLIAG program reimbursements.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa for making assurances and these clarifications regarding SLIAG and hope that you will work with the conferees to further increase funding for SLIAG and clarify these matters in the conference report.

TARGETED TRAINING GRANTS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, as you know, within the Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration Compliance Assistance Program, $1.2 million was provided for targeted training grants. This amount was included in the budget request, in the House bill and in the Senate bill. The Targeted Training Grants Program is an excellent program, and I am pleased the administration and the Congress realize its importance.

In 1991, a pilot worker safety program for people employed in the logging industry was established as one of the targeted training grants. This program has been very successful and was continued in 1992. Wisconsin, Maine, Mississippi, Idaho, and more recently, Alaska and Washington, have benefited from awards made under this program. Coming from a State whose single largest industry is wood products, I know how critically important safety education is to the logging industry. I urge the chairman to continue this program in 1993, and clarify whether $400,000 of the funds made available for targeted training grants in the fiscal year 1993 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill are to be used for a third round of competitive awards under the worker safety program for people employed in the logging industry. I am not requesting that additional funds be provided—just a clarification of what specific training grants the $1.2 million provided will support.

Mr. HARKIN. I appreciate the majority leader bringing the importance of this program to my attention and requesting a clarification. I agree that OSHA's targeted training grants program is very important, and that the worker safety program he is referring to, for people involved in the logging industry, has benefited many people involved in the logging industry across the country.

It should be emphasized that this is a competitive award, not an earmark, and is supported by the administration, the House, and the Senate. It is clear that OSHA should continue to provide funding for such a program in fiscal year 1993, and it was the committee's intent that this program be continued.

Mr. MITCHELL. I appreciate the distinguished chairman's clarification of this issue, and his willingness to recognize the importance of this program to the logging industry.

NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS' APPAREL INDUSTRY

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I bring to the Senate's attention the labor practices in the Northern Mariana Islands which I find to be very alarming and disturbing. Within the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands [CNMI] a territory of the United States, there exist labor conditions and practices that are in violation of the Commonwealth's laws and of basic human rights.

The garment and apparel industry in the CNMI is importing and exploiting Chinese laborers to work in the factories under deplorable conditions, and is allowing their products to be marketed in the United States with the "Made in the U.S.A." label. It has been documented by the Department of Labor that in the Tan family garment factories in Saipan, imported Chinese laborers work between 14–18 hour days, 7 days a week, at a wage which is below the $2.15 minimum wage established in the CNMI. The alien workers are housed in overcrowded, filthy barracks. I have two concerns. Primarily, I am outraged that such exploitation takes place under the protection of the United States flag.

I also have a concern for the effect on our American workers. The Amalgamated Textile and Clothing Workers Union maintains that the long hours and long weeks of the Saipan workers are the equivalent of some 12,000 to 20,000 jobs in the United States. I do not want our American textile workers to risk losing their jobs to the torturous garment factories of the CNMI.

I am very proud of the garment industry employees who work very diligently in North Carolina to produce clothing to which they proudly add the "Made In the U.S.A." label. I want them to continue to do so in North Carolina, and I resent, as I am sure many other North Carolinians do, too, that textile products manufactured in the CNMI, under such horrific conditions, can also bear the same "Made in the U.S.A." label.

The garment industry in the CNMI has grown significantly from 1985 to 1991. In 1985 the industry grossed $5.4 million; in 1991 that grew to $253 million. I am sure this industry has been able to thrive in the CNMI through its exploitation of its labor force.

We cannot allow this exploitation to continue. I urge the Department of Labor to step up its enforcement of the labor practices in the garment and apparel factories in the CNMI. I understand that there is currently only one Department of Labor official responsible for both Guam and the CNMI. The Department of Labor must provide for another wage and hour inspector solely for the CNMI. I would like to quote the U.S. attorney for Guam, Frederick A. Black, from his letter to the Department of Labor, February 13, 1992:

> For years we have had only one labor investigator for the two Asian-Pacific jurisdictions to which U.S. laws apply. I note that every day the local newspapers carry front page * * * a scandals regarding labor problems and violations. It appears that compliance to labor laws is the rare exception. One labor investigator, albeit a diligent and active one, cannot accomplish the necessary task of bringing these jurisdictions into compliance.

An additional Department of Labor wage and hour investigator is critically needed if we expect to ensure that the CNMI will begin to comply with labor regulations. I hope that the distinguished chairman of the Labor, HHS, and Education Appropriation Subcommittee shares my concern and my desire to see this problem corrected.

Mr. HARKIN. I want to thank the Senator from North Carolina for bringing this matter to the attention of the Senate and I want to give him my assurance that I will join him in strongly urging the Secretary of Labor to employ a second full-time hour and wage investigator in the Guam and CNMI region. The labor conditions which the Senator from North Carolina has described are intolerable. Any garment made in a CNMI factory under such conditions is definitely not deserving of the "Made in the U.S.A." label.

Mr. SANFORD. I thank the chairman and I appreciate his support for the textile workers of North Carolina.

OSHA STANDARDS ON BLOODBORNE PATHOGENS

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I wish to raise an issue with the distinguished chairman of the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education Subcommittee.

I understand that the committee report language for H.R. 5677 directs OSHA to revisit its bloodborne pathogen standard with respect to dentists. Specifically, the language states that "[m]any dentists feel that the standard intrudes into the area of professional judgment and the dentist's ability to provide care in the best possible manner." Dentists are not the only group that have expressed concern about OSHA's standard.

Today, for example, I met with representatives from Uplift, a group in Maine that provides services to individuals with developmental disabilities. While they expressed concern about the safety of their employees, they are also concerned that OSHA's standard poses an excessive burden on agencies serving people with developmental disabilities in part due to incorrect information about people with developmental disabilities. I would like to inquire if this issue was brought to the attention of the committee during consideration of the bill?

Mr. HARKIN. I do not believe so. Although we discussed reexamination of OSHA's standard with respect to dentists, we did not discuss its potential impact on the provision of services to people with developmental disabilities.

Mr. COHEN. I urge OSHA to also look at the standard as it applies to the field of developmental disabilities.

Mr. HARKIN. I also urge OSHA to look at the standard as it applies to developmental disabilities.

Mr. COHEN. I thank the chairman of the subcommittee.

BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I want to inform the Senate that the conference on the Labor-HHS bill may in addition to the amendments agreed to, consider the question of the prohibition of using funds by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to use numbers or estimates adjusted by the Census Bureau on the basis of the post-enumeration survey. Considerable concern has been raised over the accuracy of using statistics from the post-enumeration survey. Use of those questionable numbers for the very important work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics is of great concern to this Senator and a number of others who have contacted me.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I agree with Senator HARKIN's concern about the Bureau of Labor Statistics use of post-enumeration survey based statistics. There are very real concerns about the inaccuracy of these numbers. I intend to work with Senator HARKIN to see if an acceptable provision can be developed in the conference that would assure that the Bureau of Labor not use these questionable statistics.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3022

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, what is the pending business? Is it the first committee amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LAUTENBERG). It is the Helms amendment No. 3022, a second-degree amendment to the first committee amendment. Is there further debate?

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, may we have a clarification as to exactly what it is that is about to be voted on, a one- or two-word description? Is this the Boy Scouts amendment or the OSHA amendment?

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, we do not have a quorum. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I want to be sure about the numbers. I am going to send the clerk a copy of the amendment I think he is talking about to see if that is the pending amendment. We have so many amendments flying around here. This is the outreach amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will review the amendment to see if it is the same amendment.

The clerk reports that this is amendment No. 3022.

Mr. HELMS. I believe the managers of the bill are prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am prepared to accept this amendment, as I understand—well, I will let Senator SPECTER speak for himself.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I believe I have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we have looked at this amendment. Quite frankly, it comports basically with what is taking place right now. Maybe it clarifies it a little bit more. But I see no problems with it, and we accept the amendment.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, under a complicated agreement which has been worked out heretofore, this side of the aisle raises no objection to this amendment.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the pending amendment is identical to the amendment that the Senate adopted by voice vote February 20 on the Higher Education Act reauthorization bill, S. 1150. The amendment was subsequently dropped in the conference between the House and the Senate and, therefore, was not a part of that bill when it was signed by the President on July 23.

The amendment posed a clearcut question last February and it still does: Should the taxpayers' dollars authorized by Congress to fight drug abuse be misused to fund in our public schools so-called homosexual outreach projects which promote the homosexual lifestyle among our children and recruit junior and senior high school students into homosexuality?

I trust that all Senators will agree that funds authorized for fighting drug abuse should be used to fight drugs, not to promote homosexuality among schoolchildren.

But that is precisely what is going on in San Francisco, New York, and Ohio where Federal funds intended for substance-abuse prevention programs under the Drug Free Schools and Communities Act are being used instead to promote homosexuality in the schools. This flagrant misuse of Federal funds may be going in other States as well and the Department of Education is still looking into it.

Mr. President, New York City alone has diverted almost a half million dollars in Federal money intended for drug-abuse prevention to a homosexual group which, among its many disgusting activities, sponsors after-school parties for high school students at the local homosexual community center. A staff member of the group says the parties are meant to—I quote—"enable older gay activists [to meet] teenagers recruited from the New York City public schools."

San Francisco's school district, on the other hand, uses the Federal drug education money to pay the salary of a so-called director of support services for gay and lesbian youth who is tasked with the job of promoting homosexuality in each and every junior and senior high school in the city.

So-called homosexual support programs in the schools usually require students to attend mandatory seminars, often without their parents' knowledge, where they are told—falsely—that 1 in 10 of them is homosexual and that homosexuality is a perfectly acceptable lifestyle. Teachers are taught to accept homosexuality as not only normal, but desirable. They are also taught how to weave homosexual and lesbian literature and issues into their course subjects.

The San Francisco program—subsidized by the Federal Government—requires junior and senior high school librarians and counseling offices to keep on hand approving reading lists from the homosexual lobby about sexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality as well as a list of prohomosexual community groups. Every school is also required to have a gay and lesbian sensitive adult available to counsel all students with questions related to sexuality.

Since Senators may find it difficult to believe that school officials are diverting Federal funds out of drug abuse programs and into homosexual propaganda, let me describe for them the three examples that the Department of Education has documented for me so far.

It came to my attention in late 1991 that the San Francisco Unified School District had used $12,000 in Federal Drug-Free Schools Act funding—plus $8,000 from other Federal programs—to subsidize the salary of a so-called director of support services for gay and lesbian youth.

In a memo to the entire district, the superintendent of San Francisco's schools stated that the purpose of the district's federally subsidized Gay and Lesbian Youth Program was, among other things—now get this, Mr. President—to:

(1) Demystify sexuality and homosexuality, and recognize the contribution of Gay and Lesbian persons to our culture and history;

(2) Educate all school personnel and students on the intent and content of the district's anti-slur policy and assist in the enforcement of it; and

(3) To link Gay and Lesbian students and their families with culturally appropriate community resources.

Mr. President, as the little girl in the comic pages used to say: "I may frow up." I think a lot of American taxpayers will feel the same way about it.

Now, the project director—who is paid from Federal funds—has the following duties as spelled out in the superintendent's memo:

(1) To support designated Gay and Lesbian Sensitive Adults at each high school."

(2) To set up a telephone switchboard for information "on support services for Gay and Lesbian Youth."

(3) To respond to the need of middle and high school students related to gender identity.

Mr. President that's the first time I ever knew there were students who could not identify his or her own gender. I continue:

(4) Prepare an approved reading list about sexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality;

(5) Distribute a list of homosexual community groups to every middle and high school library and counseling office.

The school system's memo also requires the program to consult with a group called the Bay Area Network of Gay and Lesbian Educators. I might add parenthetically and disgustedly, they are using Federal funds to pay for this—Federal funds intended to fight drugs—which have been taken from your constituents and mine.

However, as bad as San Francisco is, the misuse of Federal drug fighting subsidies in the New York City schools is far worse. In July 1991, the Washington Times reported that the New York Governor's office had given the Gay and Lesbian Community Center in New York more than $500,000 since 1988 to run a program called—now get this—Youth Enrichment Services, which uses the acronym YES. The motto on the YES project's promotional brochure states that the project "Lets you say YES to being young and gay."

And from where, Mr. President, do the funds come to pay for this project? Well, the New York Governor's office acknowledges that most of the $500,000 came from the Federal Drug-Free Schools and Communities Program. They also admit that the project's purpose is to reach homosexual youth as young as age 13. But it gets worse.

With the help of funds taken from the taxpayers in North Carolina and every other State in the Union, the YES project sponsored after-school activities at the Gay and Lesbian Center in Manhattan that included events such as "Bridge the Gap Intergenerational Play Day" and "Coming Out, Then and Now," and "Intergenerational Pride Bunch," and finally, "Lesbian and Gay Pride Celebration."

This same Gay and Lesbian Center that received over half a million dollars in Federal drug education fund offers its adult clientele—at the same facility used by the teenage students—seminars such as the titled "101 Ways to Tie a Man to a Bed." Many of the center's activities revolve around an onsite cash bar, which is hardly consistent with the running of a taxpayer-funded program supposedly directed at preventing substance abuse.

Mr. President, when asked about these events, YES project staff members told the New York Guardian, a monthly statewide newspaper, that the "International Play Day" event was meant to—and I quote the staff person—"enable older gay activists [to meet] teenagers recruited from the New York City public schools." Let me emphasize that the staff member said they were "recruiting" teenagers from the public schools.

More importantly when the Guardian's reporters rightfully asked a YES staff member about possible sexual improprieties involving the teenage students at the federally subsidized seminars and parties, she brazenly asserted that "It can be the kids that are the pursuers and, oftentimes, is."

Mr. President, is there a child molester in this country that has not used that exact excuse to justify his crime? And again, this is going on with the help of taxes taken from the decent law abiding people of this Nation.

Mr. President, the Governor's office in the State of Ohio also diverted thousands of dollars in Federal drug-free school funds to support a so-called gay and lesbian high-risk youth prevention project at the Alphatha Healing Center in Columbus. The Governor's office justified misusing the funds by claiming that all the students served by the program are—get this—"victims of psychological abuse [as of result of] living in a straight society and having to deal with one's own sexuality."

Mr. President, how did this travesty of diverting funds meant to combat drugs into programs to promote homosexuality in the schools come about?

When Congress passed the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act of 1986, it certainly was my understanding from reading the legislation that Congress' intent was to educate students about the dangers of using illegal drugs.

Special attention was focused on students at the greatest risk of becoming drug users themselves, and in section 5122, as slightly modified in the Anti-Drug-Abuse Act of 1988, the 1986 act applied the term "high-risk youth" to such students and defined it to include only young people who are: school dropouts, pregnant, economically disadvantaged, repeated school failures, children of drug abusers, victims of physical or psychological abuse, suicidal, or who have experienced mental-health problems or long-term physical pain, or are violence-prone delinquents.

I do not see any mention of homosexuality. But, the law's detailed definition of high risk students did not stop the San Francisco school system; no, sir. The San Francisco school system—and this is a matter of record—circumvented Congress' definition of high-risk youth by unilaterally expanding the definition to include students at risk of HIV infection and those disproportionately at risk of verbal and physical assaults.

I think I understand the King's English, or simple English at least. Yet, the Department of Education in two letters to my office says Congress has given the Department no control over how school districts spend the tax dollars they receive under the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act.

This is somewhat puzzling Mr. President, because in the same letters the Department of Education acknowledges in their letters that, under the act—and this is what they wrote—"local drug prevention programs must be 'directly' related to alcohol and drug abuse education and prevention." Yet, the Department inexplicably fails to explain how these so-called homosexual education programs meet that requirement.

Mr. President, it is time to slam the door and say no more of this Mr. Government Bureaucrat or Governor or whoever, of whatever State. These tax dollars should not—and shall not, if I have anything to do with it—be used to encourage homosexuality.

And that, Mr. President, is what brings this Senator to the floor. It must be made perfectly clear to the Department of Education, the State education agencies, and all 50 Governor's offices, that in authorizing substance-abuse education funding under the Drug-Free Schools Act, Congress never meant for the funds to be hijacked and used to support homosexual school outreach programs.

If Senators want to pay for homosexual support programs in the schools, then let them propose a specific authorization and let us have a vote on it—and those Senators can answer for such a vote to the citizens back home.

But unless Congress is willing to specifically authorize spending for such programs in the schools, then the homosexual lobby should not be allowed to do it by stealing funds intended to help fight drug abuse.

Mr. President, Congress never intended or envisioned that the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act would be used to support so-called homosexual school outreach programs.

The pending amendment would ensure that those funds would once again be limited to drug abuse prevention and education programs as Congress originally intended them to be.

I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3022) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is now on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. I suggest the absence of a quorum, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at this point, in order to clarify for myself and possibly for other Senators, I want to ask the Parliamentarian and the distinguished occupant of the chair at this point, I am correct that the next order of business will be the Kennedy second-degree amendment.

Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HELMS. And that will be a rollcall vote. And then following that will be a freestanding amendment that I have pending, and a rollcall vote on that will be ordered.

Is that correct?

AMENDMENT NO. 3020

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the Kennedy amendment, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered—the second-degree amendment. The amendment is numbered 3020. And upon disposition of that amendment, the Senate will proceed with consideration of the Lott amendment, which is numbered 3021. It is second degree to the Helms amendment numbered 3017.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield——

Mr. HELMS. Very well. I just want to be sure to get the yeas and nays ordered on my first-degree amendment, to which Senator KENNEDY has offered a second-degree amendment.

I ask that it be in order that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I have not finished my parliamentary inquiry. And I apologize to the Chair.

As I understand it, the order of business will be the Kennedy second-degree amendment, and there will be a rollcall vote on that. Then there will be my freestanding amendment, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. Then comes the Lott second-degree amendment.

Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HELMS. And No. 4 will be a freestanding on OSHA. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Upon disposition of the Lott amendment, then the Helms amendment will be the pending question.

Mr. HELMS. Very well, Mr. President. And finally, there will be the Boy Scout amendment that caused so much controversy. That will be the end of the agreement.

Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HELMS. Is that the Senator's understanding?

Mr. HARKIN. I was just hoping, if the Senator will yield——

Mr. HELMS. Oh, yes; certainly.

Mr. HARKIN. I was hoping we might take that amendment now, since that is the regular order, which is the first amendment the Senator offered last night. If we can take that right now and dispose of that, then we can get on to all the other amendments on which I guess votes are going to be held.

Mr. HELMS. The Senator is talking about the Boy Scout amendment?

Mr. HARKIN. Yes.

Mr. HELMS. Very well. I am agreeable with that, if other Senators are.

Mr. HARKIN. Let us take that now. I ask for the regular order.

AMENDMENT NO. 3002

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present order of business is the Helms amendment 3002, which is an amendment to the first remaining committee amendment.

Is there further debate?

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I am not clear what it is that we are about to vote on. Is this the so-called Boy Scout amendment?

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator is correct; this is the so-called Boy Scout amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 3002

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this amendment is blatantly unconstitutional. It would set an ominous precedent for intrusive government regulation of private charities. I urge the Senate to reject it.

The amendment would require the Office of Personnel Management to drop from the Combined Federal Campaign any charity that has withdrawn support for the Boy Scouts because that organization bars homosexuals and atheists.

And regardless of how Members feel about the admissions rules of the Boy Scouts, we should not tell private charities like the United Way that they must continue to fund organizations which they have determined to be in violation of their own agency's antidiscrimination policy.

Let us understand clearly that the Combined Federal Campaign is designed to allow Federal employees to decide for themselves which charities their contributions will support.

If Federal employees disagree with the views or actions of a particular charity, they simply need not designate that charity. There is no Federal mandate of any kind that funds go to any particular charity.

For purposes of administering the Combined Federal Campaign, the Federal Government has no business dictating the specific policies and views of these charities—only in making sure that they are bona fide foundations. That is the spirit and purpose of the CFC. That principle is at the very heart of the freedom of expression and association protected by the first amendment.

In the 1985 case of Cornelius versus NAACP Legal Defense Fund, the Supreme Court ruled on a challenge to an Executive order barring legal defense and political advocacy organizations from the CFC. The Justices held that the campaign could adopt reasonable restrictions on the kinds of charities that could be included. But at the same time, they made it clear that the first amendment prohibits the campaign from discriminating against charitable organizations on the basis of the viewpoints of those organizations.

In her opinion for the Court, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor stated that—and I quote—"the Government violates the first amendment when it denies access to a speaker solely to suppress the point of view he espouses."

The pending amendment clearly violates that fundamental first amendment principle. Indeed, it directs the Office of Personnel Management and the CFC to flaunt the Constitution by excluding from the campaign charities that express their disagreement with the Boy Scouts' admission policy by withholding contributions.

This amendment would set an unsatisfactory precedent. Private charities support important social causes—often long before they enjoy universal acceptance; they should not be placed in fear that they will be excluded from a major fundraising drive like the Combined Federal Campaign for doing so. If we force the Untied Way out of the CFC, what charity will be safe? Whose beliefs will be next?

Federal employees contribute $250 million annually to the CFC—more than 50 percent of which goes to the United Way. These funds are making a critical difference in communities across this country—feeding the homeless, caring for the elderly, playing a major role in supporting hurricane victims in Florida, Louisiana, or Hawaii.

Is the Senate now prepared to deny this organization access to CFC funds simply because they have a policy of nondiscrimination?

Charities should be free to decide for themselves to whom they will contribute, free from Government interference. Indeed OPM regulations forbid the CFC to discriminate against charities on the basis of the political affiliation of the organization. OPM must include in the campaign any organization that meets the eligibility criteria.

The Helms amendment is flatly inconsistent with this rule and with the principle underlying the entire CFC program.

Finally, let me say to my colleagues that the time for the Senate to complete its business this year is short. There is still much important business to be done.

The pending amendment is a transparent effort to bog down this legislation with a controversial political issue. It seeks to stir popular prejudice, to divide us, and to distract us from the work that remains.

I urge the Senate to reject this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? Hearing none, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3002) was agreed to.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is now on the committee amendment, as amended.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, what is the amendment before the Senate at the moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the first committee amendment, as amended by the Helms amendment.

Mr. METZENBAUM. And is this the so-called OSHA amendment? Will the manager of the bill be good enough to explain?

Mr. HARKIN. If I might.

Mr. HELMS. Please do.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the pending amendment right now that will be before us in order will be the amendment in the second degree proposed by Senator KENNEDY to the amendment offered by Senator HELMS. That would be the first in order that we would take up right now, as I understand it.

I understand, Mr. President, we have to dispose of the first committee amendment on which——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARKIN. The last amendment was attached, and when we dispense with that, we can move on. So I call for the regular order on that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the first committee amendment, as amended.

The first committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3020

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the Kennedy amendment No. 3020.

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I understand that is now open for debate.

Am I correct, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARKIN. So, again, for the information of Senators, the first vote will be on the Kennedy amendment, a second-degree amendment. On disposing of that, then the vote will occur on the Helms first-degree amendment.

After that, the vote then would occur on the Lott second-degree amendment to the Helms first-degree amendment. Then after that, of course, would be the vote on the underlying first-degree amendment by Senator HELMS. The first amendment on which there is a pending Kennedy amendment has to do with needles, sterile needles, a shorthand way of defining it. The second amendment that Senator LOTT has amended has to deal with OSHA regulations.

So I think now we are ready to proceed, hopefully, with votes on those amendments.

Mr. HELMS. I am certainly ready.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 3020

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

NOT VOTING—2

So the amendment (No. 3020) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. NICKLES. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is not in order.

The Senator will withhold. Clear the well.

Bring the Senate in order.

Senators holding discussion in the well please discontinue the same and take it to the Cloakroom.

The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, you have done a masterful job. You have shut up about half of the U.S. Senate temporarily.

Let me say something to Senators, and I say this with all the grace that I possess. This vote is an illustration of what Mark Twain meant when he gave the advice that if you love the law, and if you like sausage, do not watch either one of them being made.

Senators walked in here and, through rote, they voted for an amendment they knew nothing about. I bet if you took Senators into a closet and said now tell me what this amendment was, not three of them could tell you what was in it.

I will take my sausage and eggs tomorrow morning. It is a good thing the President is going to veto this bill, because it is an utter disaster.

Let me tell you what you have just done. The question before the Senate with the two amendments regarding needles, was whether Senators believe we should use taxpayers' money to hand out needles to drug addicts or whether we believe it is time to get serious about drug abuse. Everybody is against illicit drugs, but then they say let us go out and create programs to give away needles and encourage more and more use of drugs by addicts.

In that regard, Senator KENNEDY's amendment tells the Government to hand out needles, under the cover of calling such a giveaway a demonstration project.

And my amendment certainly did not favor that. But that did not make the difference.

So what is the difference between the approach of Senator KENNEDY and the approach of this Senator on the subject of needles? The Senator thinks and says, and I admire him for standing up for what he believes, he thinks it is legitimate to set up programs where hypodermic needles are given to addicts, and I do not. His amendment gives up the war on drugs to fight AIDS and that is not acceptable.

Dr. Sullivan does not support this Kennedy approach. Now I was the only Senator who voted against Dr. Sullivan, before anybody brings that subject up, but he certainly changed my mind because of the law and order positions he has taken. Dr. Sullivan of HHS and Bob Martinez—the drug czar—say that Senator KENNEDY's suggestion cannot and will not work. Senator KENNEDY is plain wrong.

But he is right about one thing. The Helms amendment is tough. And I meant for it to be tough. I also meant for people to read what it said. Most Senators on this side of the aisle read it; none on the other side of the aisle did.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HELMS. No, I do not.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator please yield?

Mr. HELMS. To my fellow North Carolinian, yes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I just want to tell my friend that I take umbrage at what he said about sausage. I am an old meat cutter. I have made lots of sausage in my life. I was a meat cutter. I was a young meat cutter at that time. I made lots of sausage.

May I say to the Senator, the sausage I made, I would be glad to make it right out in public view, which I did. And more than that, sausage is my favorite breakfast meat.

So I hope that Senators will not be misled with respect to good pork sausage. And right now, my wife goes to the store and buys Jimmy Dean's pork sausage.

So I hope the Senator will not repeat what he just said about sausage. That is the thing that gives me umbrage.

Mr. HELMS. If it will please my friend, I cook Jimmy Dean pork sausage for Mrs. Helms every Saturday morning to go with her grits.

Mr. BYRD. But the Senator does like sausage.

Mr. HELMS. Yes. I say to my able friend though that there is an issue here we can't laugh about. If you aid and abet the drug trade by handing out needles, you lose under the Helms amendment, which is no longer viable because the second-degree amendment of Mr. KENNEDY just passed.

I cannot stand by and sanction any money going to hand out needles to addicts no matter what fancy words may be used to cover the addicts.

Mr. President, no matter what face you put on it, it is still unlawful.

There is no point in taking the Senate's time in voting twice on what amounts to be the same amendment. So I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays on the first-degree amendment, as modified by the second-degree amendment, be vitiated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Hearing none, the yeas and nays are vitiated.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Senate, and I thank the Senators.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I will not take the Senate's time very long, but I do want to respond to the point that has been made by the Senator from North Carolina.

The Senate has just voted for the position that has been embraced by the President of the United States when he signed the ADAMHA Act. President Bush effectively has supported this position that the Senate now went on record on; overwhelmingly the Senate went on record on.

It is a response to an amendment that was offered by a Republican from Georgia, Mr. GINGRICH, after consultation with the Bush administration and the Centers for Disease Control, after considerable negotiations with the administration, and as a result of the conference on its ADAMHA proposal.

Mr. President, we have done exactly, exactly, what the Senator from North Carolina has stated. We have prohibited the use of any Federal funds in this legislation, unless there is going to be a specific finding by the Surgeon General about the health implications and the prevention of AIDS or the health implications in terms of the drug use.

Now, there are nine different States or communities that at the present time have research programs. But this is what would happen in your State, those that care about the States, under the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina:

> Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds made available under this Act or an amendment made by this Act shall be allocated to any State, metropolitan area or rural area, if such State, metropolitan area or rural area, carries out any program for the distribution of sterile needles * * *.

What you are basically saying is, if a State or local community makes a judgment, in their own judgment, that they want to do something about experimentation and research, then, under the Helms amendment, they are prohibited, they are prohibited from participating in the Head Start Program, job training programs, all the others, if the State or local community does so.

Mr. President, that is a far reach from either limiting the existing fund under the existing law.

The fact is, in some States, in some local communities, the District of Columbia, for example, you are not permitted to have an exchange unless you are enrolled in a treatment program. And they have seen an important reduction in the incidence of AIDS.

New Haven has estimated their savings to the local community has been $8 million for a $150,000 research program.

Mr. President, I think we have provided the kind of protections here which I think all of us are very much concerned about. But I think, on the other hand, the kind of public health considerations should not be effectively prohibited. If this is going to be judged in terms of the public health by the Surgeon General, a research program that is offering some hope, some opportunity in terms of the reductions of substance abuse or AIDS, why should we be blocking it? That is basically what we have done.

The President of the United States never objected to it. He signed that law. The conference was passed overwhelmingly here in the U.S. Senate.

And, Mr. President, I think it really reflects the best public health policy. We did not have the opportunity, we talked earlier about this matter, but the vote did come quickly.

I appreciate the indulgence of the Members of the Senate about this bill.

I thank the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 3018, AS AMENDED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the Helms amendment, as amended.

The amendment (No. 3018), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SIMON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3021

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I believe it would be in order for me at this point to ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment, No. 3021.

So at this point, moving right along without further discussion, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT].

The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] are necessarily absent.

NOT VOTING—2

Gore
Wirth

So the amendment (No. 3021) was rejected.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SARBANES). The Chair recognizes the Senator from Iowa, the manager of the bill.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I understand that there is an underlying amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to the underlying amendment No. 3017.

The amendment (No. 3017) was rejected.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. LEAHY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Iowa.

AMENDMENT NO. 3033

(Purpose: To provide additional resources to the Health Care for the Homeless Program)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I have a couple of amendments that have been agreed to by the other side. The first is an amendment by Senator DOMENICI. I ask that the pending amendment be laid aside for reconsideration of an amendment I send to the desk on behalf of Senator DOMENICI.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the pending amendment is set aside. The clerk will report the amendment sent to the desk.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for Mr. DOMENICI, proposes an amendment numbered 3033.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, line 4, strike "$2,585,761,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,591,761,000; Provided, That the funding level for the National Institute of General Medical Sciences shall not exceed $824,529,000.".

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment puts an additional $6 million into health care for the homeless. Mr. DOMENICI used as an offset $6 million from the National Institute for General Medical Sciences, and we have accepted it on this side. I believe it has been accepted on the other side. I urge adoption.

HEALTH CARE FOR THE HOMELESS PROGRAM

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to the pending appropriations bill that will restore critical funds to the ongoing Health Care for the Homeless Program.

My amendment will restore this very important program to aid those who are homeless halfway to the level of the President's budget request for fiscal year 1993.

This amendment will add $6 million in budget authority and $3.3 million in outlays to the bill for health care services to homeless persons. In doing so, it will increase the program above essentially a freeze level approved by both the Senate and House Appropriations Committees.

Mr. President, the Health Care for the Homeless Program has been one of the most successful and effective of the Stewart B. McKinney-funded programs.

Nationwide, over 400,000 homeless adults and children every year receive a wide range of comprehensive health services with linkages to mental health, substance abuse, and entitlement programs.

This very basic care and focused treatment of illnesses that directly contribute to homelessness is a critical component of our Federal program to aid States and localities with the problem of homelessness.

Without the Health Care for the Homeless Program, already overloaded emergency rooms would be flooded with homeless people not knowing where else to turn for even routine health problems.

At a time when the appropriations committees are proposing to freeze this program, many of our cities are experiencing an increase in the number of people seeking help. A continuation of existing funding will significantly limit available services.

Because many of these programs depend upon charitable donations as well, it is often a struggle to keep the doors open five days a week.

When these doors close, the medical services, substance abuse programs, mental health case managers, social workers, dentists, and even our outreach efforts to homeless children are canceled.

Mr. President, this is not the first year that I have been before the Senate seeking to uphold the Congress' commitment to aid the homeless as embodied in the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Act.

It has been an ongoing effort to keep these programs up and running, but a continued trend of level funding these programs cannot be sustained. These very dedicated community programs are the front lines against homelessness. They desperately need our support.

I hope my colleagues will adopt my amendment to fund the homeless health centers program at $61.7 million for fiscal year 1993. These funds will provide critical ongoing support for existing projects and allow them to serve the homeless who seek this most basic assistance.

This amendment would be offset by a reduction in the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, which would still be $9.4 million above the fiscal year 1992 level.

Mr. President, I want to thank Senator HARKIN and Senator SPECTER for their assistance in getting this amendment passed. It should be obvious that we ought to maximize our efforts in health care for the homeless. This will put it up the President's level. Otherwise, it would be about $6 million and it really would put a very, very big damper on that program.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3033) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote and to lay it on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We now revert to the committee amendment on page 39, line 23.

AMENDMENT NO. 3034

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask that the pending amendment be set aside for an amendment that I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the pending amendment is set aside. The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] proposes an amendment number 3034.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 33 strike the provision beginning on line 20, and on page 51, line 20, strike "$125,000,000" and insert "$140,000,000".

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment is a technical amendment to accommodate the Finance Committee. Inadvertently, there was a portion of the Finance Committee's jurisdiction that was included in this bill. I say it was totally inadvertent. It was brought to our attention just a few moments ago. It was in the amount of $15 million. I need not go into all the details. But we then took that $15 million out that is within the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee. The offset that we used is in personnel attrition to allow for that $15 million offset that rightfully belongs in the purview of the Finance Committee.

I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3034) was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote and to lay it on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining committee amendments be agreed to en bloc, with the exception of the committee amendment on page 52, lines 9 through 23; and that the bill as thus amended be considered as original text for the purpose of further amendment, provided that no point of order be waived by reason of this agreement.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished chairman. That is agreeable on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments, with the exception of the one indicated by the Senator from Iowa, are agreed to, en bloc.

The committee amendments were agreed to en bloc, with the exception of excepted committee amendment on page 52, lines 9 through 23.

EXCEPTED COMMITTEE AMENDMENT ON PAGE 52, LINES 9 THROUGH 23

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question now before the Senate is the committee amendment on page 52, lines 9 through 23.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator DOLE I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I do ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment to set aside so that we may consider this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3035

(Purpose: To strike section 215)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

Mr. SPECTER. The provision would strike a provision the Department of Health and Human Services requested to implement the Social Security Act provisions regarding material relating to living and dead beneficiaries.

This provision was included in the House bill but is being stricken because of concerns raised by the authorizing committee. The amendment has been cleared on both sides, and is offered by me on behalf of Senator DOLE.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we understand the amendment. It is a good amendment. I concur with the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania. We accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3035) was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARKIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The business of the Senate now returns to the committee amendment on page 52, lines 9 through 23.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXCEPTED COMMITTEE AMENDMENT ON PAGE 73, LINE 14 REINSTATED

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, a few moments ago when we received the unanimous consent to adopt en bloc the remaining committee amendments, one committee amendment was excepted. That was the one on page 52, lines 9 through 23, which is the pending business before the Senate right now. Inadvertently included in that en bloc consent agreement was a committee amendment on page 73, line 14.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment on page 73, line 14, be excepted from the adoption en bloc; that it be reinstated; and that it be in order after the adoption of the committee amendment on page 52, lines 9 through 23.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

STATE LEGALIZATION IMPACT ASSISTANCE GRANTS

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I come to the floor to appeal to the Senate's sense of fairness. The Senate as an institution, is often referred to as the world's greatest deliberative body.

In one area, I think the Congress missed the mark and perhaps unknowingly, it has foisted a great fiscal burden onto the shoulders of a few states. I am talking about the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 or IRCA. And the reason I am standing here today is because of the State Legalization Impact Assistance Grant Program [SLIAG].

In fact, it seems like just yesterday that I came to the floor to offer an amendment to a Labor-HHS appropriations bill to help the Senate—and the Federal Government—make good on the promise that was made to the States in that landmark immigration bill.

I had intended to offer an amendment to boost the woefully inadequate number in this bill—$150 million—up to the number the House provides, $561 million. But, again, I can count. There are just a handful of States that are adversely affected by the cuts they have taken in SLIAG. It's clear I don't have the votes to shift $411 million from other programs. This is a tight bill. I understand the realities of reducing from valued programs that help the elderly, the frail, kids and other needy groups, even if it is done in the name of fairness.

Ironically, it's a shame people don't understand that the SLIAG funds serve these populations too. Some say that when you stand for fairness, you stand alone. On this issue, I know that feeling.

I think it's important that my colleagues understand the history behind the SLIAG Program. Mr. President, this was an integral part of the compromise that led to enactment of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

IRCA's legalization provisions have awarded the benefit of legal residency in the United States to an approximate 3.1 million persons. The California Department of Health and Welfare estimates that some 1.6 million amnesty recipients reside in California. Recall that amnesty recipients—eligible legalized aliens—are not illegal aliens. Through amnesty, they now have legal status.

Mr. President, the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. GRAHAM] would agree that the States and local governments were hesitant to agree to a sweeping amnesty program absent some assurance that the costs associated with this new population—costs for public assistance, health care, and education services—would be reimbursed by the Federal Government.

As the lead negotiator for the Nation's Governors, he negotiated a good deal and the States and local governments have kept faith. States and local governments have carried out their end of the deal, and they continue to provide the services envisioned under IRCA.

The States, were hesitant to embrace any amnesty program that did not protect them from the spiraling costs associated with this new population. Serving in the California Senate at the time, I recall vividly the internal debate. Home to a growing population of illegal immigrants, we saw the merits of providing amnesty. On the other hand, we feared the fiscal impact of such a policy. There were similar debates in other States.

In establishing SLIAG, the Congress recognized that this newly legalized population would pose a major cost consequence for State and local governments. Moreover, Congress affirmatively stated through the SLIAG provision that the Federal Government has a role to play in alleviating this fiscal impact.

So here's what the SLIAG compromise said: The law provided for $1 billion in each of fiscal years 1988 through 1992 for a total of $4 billion. The compromise also provided that any remaining balances—any unexpended SLIAG funds would be available to the States through fiscal year 1994. In other words, $4 billion would be available over a 7-year period. And as I stated earlier, States and communities moved forward to provide the essential services for this new population. But they did so counting on SLIAG for reimbursement. After all, that was the deal. That was the Federal Government's promise. That is the law.

This second component of the SLIAG agreement, the carryforward authority, expressly acknowledged the fact that as a reimbursement program, not all claims for services provided would be forthcoming in the first few years. That's where California and other similarly situated States find themselves today. We are now in the outyears of the program, but we have not seen claims for bona fide services disappear. In fact, they are increasing just as IRCA's legislative history anticipated, just as the law anticipated.

The demand for SLIAG-related services are there. Under the law, they must be provided, and—also under law—they should be reimbursed through SLIAG. That's what the States and local governments rightly expect. That's the deal they agreed to back in 1985 and 1986 when IRCA was debated and enacted. Again, that was the Federal Government's promise. That is the law.

So far so good. But there is one major problem associated with the enactment of any legislation and that is the implementation process through regulations. In all fairness to HHS, this was a major task. It takes time to draft, implement and work out the kinks of new regulations, especially regulations of this magnitude.

Well, there was a slow startup period and States were unable to begin drawing down their SLIAG funds as quickly as had been thought. After all States had to put into place their own systems for documenting costs and programs associated with the newly legalized population. As a consequence, by September 1989, there was a balance in the SLIAG account. After all, this is a reimbursement program.

And beginning with the fiscal year 1990 Labor-HHS appropriations bill, Congress decided to dip into the SLIAG fund and use it to fund all sorts of purposes. In fact, one Member who offered an amendment using SLIAG as an offset explained to the Senate, "We are just not finding that this money is necessary * * *."

No one bothered to check with the States and local governments who rely on SLIAG and were providing an entire array of services that under law were to be offset through SLIAG. No one wanted to recall that the program had only been up and running for 15 months.

So what happened next? Well, Mr. President, to put it mildly, the Senate went on a feeding frenzy, and cut $551 million from SLIAG. At the insistence of Senator GRAHAM of Florida and others, the Senate agreed to increase the following year SLIAG appropriation by this same amount, about $551 million.

In other words, the Senate, the Congress as a whole, said, we understand your problem, so we'll defer the money and take care of you next year. Well, Mr. President, next year has come and gone on two separate occasions. And during that time, a total of $1.123 billion owed to the SLIAG Program have been deferred. California alone faces a $576 million shortfall.

I came to the floor last year to try to reverse that trend. And I spent a goodly amount of time reciting all the reasons why the SLIAG Program should be funded. But California's pleas fell on deaf ears. No one cared. No one cared that the Governor and the legislature had just taken action to reduce California's $15 billion budget deficit. No one cares that California local governments are cutting programs and laying off workers to make ends meet.

It was obvious I did not have the votes to increase funding for the program, so I deferred offering that amendment in the hope that the issue could be resolved in the conference.

So the issue went to conference, and here's what the conferees to the fiscal year 1992 Labor-HHS appropriations bill said, and I quote:

> The bill includes language which defers $1,122,992,000 in funds appropriated for the State Legalization Impact Assistance Grant (SLIAG) Program from fiscal year 1992 to fiscal year 1993. The deferral was based on the need to achieve outlay savings in 1992, and does not represent a permanent reduction in funds available to states. The Conferees are aware that three states are going to experience a SLIAG funding shortfall in fiscal year 1992 and that additional states will run out of funds in fiscal year 1993. The Conferees are also aware that the deferral of fiscal year 1992 funds could result in cut-backs in financial, medical and educational assistance to newly legalized aliens. The Conferees are also in agreement that further deferral of SLIAG funds would be detrimental to the objectives of the program and would place in jeopardy newly legalized aliens and their ability to complete the requirements for citizenship. Therefore, the Conferees agree to provide sufficient funds in fiscal year 1993 and direct the Secretary to distribute the funds no later than October 15, 1992. This action will result in a five month deferral in the availability of funding for these states in the program as current allotments are expected to be sufficient through the end of 1992. State and local service providers should therefore be reassured by this action and should not diminish in any way activities to fully meet the needs of persons eligible for SLIAG services. The Conferees further note that the fiscal year 1993 appropriations may be used to reimburse costs incurred by States and local service providers on or after October 1, 1989.

So the conferees decided to defer all SLIAG funds, $1.123 billion. But they explicitly state that this will have an adverse impact on three States. Those States by the way are California, Colorado, and New York.

The conferees express their concern that this action—the deferral—will have an adverse effect on the newly legalized aliens themselves, that it "would place in jeopardy newly legalized aliens and their ability to complete the requirements for citizenship."

But the conferees agree to provide sufficient funds in fiscal year 1993, hence the bill before us, which I want to add only provides $150 million—this amount won't even cover the State of California's costs. California and other States are looking at immediate shortfalls.

This doesn't count county needs which are projected at $190 million in the upcoming year. So we have a grand total of $536 million, and that's just for California. It doesn't consider the needs of the other States. Well, I think we have established that $150 million doesn't come even close to covering the tab.

But let me get back to the conference report language to underline one other area where the Congress once again demonstrated its resolve to help States in this area. The language I cited earlier goes on to state—State and local service providers should therefore be reassured by this action and should not diminish in any way activities to fully meet the needs of persons eligible for SLIAG services. This is an insult to the people out there who are struggling to make this program work.

In other words, Mr. President, last year's bill says, "keep on serving those people, we know it's tough, but we'll be there next year to help you. We'll keep our promise." There's another way to say this—the check is in the mail. Maybe it's a check drawn from the House bank.

But once again, State and local service providers moved ahead to provide these needed services. After all, as anyone from local government can attest, States and local governments in good conscience cannot turn their backs on providing basic, survival services to these people.

So here we are today, Mr. President. Nothing has really changed except for the fact that States like California are out even more money, more services are being cut. Of course, the backdrop for this action in my State is the recently concluded budget in the State of California which, based on the report language cited above, assumes SLIAG funding. So, right off the bat, California is looking at an immediate shortfall.

Members of this body need to understand that State and local governments are powerless to protect themselves from the consequences of Federal immigration policy which is, by law, the sole responsibility of the Federal Government.

And I want Members to keep one thought in mind. California is home to more than half of the 2.7 million men, women, and children who were granted amnesty. In Los Angeles County alone, more than 1 out of every 10 residents—850,000 persons applied for amnesty. Let's put this number in perspective. This is about four times the population of Des Moines, IA. I do not mean this in a mean-spirited way, but it puts this dire need in perspective.

State and local governments have to balance their budgets. They can't throw their responsibilities onto others. They can't put off their promises until another day. That is why SLIAG funding is so important and essential to the fiscal sanity of the State of California, and others who have counted on and budgeted based on the SLIAG promise. But today, once again, the Congress is deferring its responsibility—breaking its promise and breaking the backs of local governments in my State. I have already indicated that the $150 million just doesn't work.

Mr. President, in 1990 the California Department of Education released a study regarding amnesty recipients. Here's what they found:

Some 86 percent of this population is functioning below the literacy benchmark for the State welfare population.

Many do not speak English and about one-third are illiterate in their own language.

The majority of amnesty recipients and 70 percent of seasonal agricultural workers did not have health coverage. In the event of a catastrophic need, it is the local publicly supported health care facility that bears the cost.

This is hardly the profile of a population that will not need continued assistance. To assert that these individuals will not need services because they will have lived and worked in the United States for more than 10 years is wrong. But again, the affected States are not asking for anymore than their fair share.

I mentioned the impact on the State, briefly. Let me talk about Los Angeles County for a moment. Due to the State of California's budget problems, the county's budget situation is dire. There is an over 10 percent unemployment rate in the country, in large part owing to the recent riots, which riveted the Nation's attention, and the loss of tens of thousands of defense-related and aerospace sector jobs. A loss of defense contracts has cut deeply into the country's revenue base.

Even without the loss of SLIAG, the county currently faces across-the-board cuts averaging 10 percent and the potential layoff of up to 12,000 county employees.

Let me add that the county has been a partner with the State. Together, they are fulfilling their end of the bargain; they do so daily in emergency rooms and hospitals, schools, community based organizations, and in other areas. In Los Angeles County alone, SLIAG cuts will force a major reduction in county health services, including major reductions in outpatient clinics and medical and surgical beds.

Moreover, the impact to communities statewide will be enormous. For instance, consider some of the following:

Pregnant women will not receive prenatal care, health education, nutrition, and child health services so critical to our next generation of Americans and Americans yet unborn.

Consider the fact, Mr. President, that over 20 percent of all hospital admissions in Los Angeles County last year were legalized aliens. And one of every 200 babies born in this county is born to an amnesty applicant in one Los Angeles County hospital.

Cutting SLIAG funds does not cause the demand for services or the related costs to disappear. It merely shifts the burden—unfairly and inappropriately—to a few States and local governments. When hospitals cannot be reimbursed, when people cannot receive the language training they need, when outlays for public assistance programs go unreimbursed, it is not a simple case of a legalized alien not receiving a service. There is a ripple effect. Entire communities are being penalized.

If we are to cut these funds, then we must be prepared to acknowledge the fact that we are creating an underclass of citizens who will not have the tools to fully participate in and benefit our society. How can you expect someone who is illiterate in their native language to become proficient in English with but 40 hours instruction? How can we expect healthy babies or basic health care when hospitals and clinics, absent reimbursement, will be forced to close down?

While rhetorical, these are very real questions that we must confront and for which we will be accountable should we not fulfill the Federal Government's promise under IRCA. I am not sure, Mr. President, that any Member in this Chamber would like to take credit for that.

Cutting SLIAG gives the Federal Government just one more opportunity to foist yet another fiscal burden onto the shoulders of States and local governments. And that's a bottom line of which no one can be proud.

Let's just assume the House number of $561 million is enacted into law. Under that scenario, four States will still end up with a shortfall in 1993: California stands to lose $302.8 million; Kansas would still lose $463,000; Colorado will lose $3.2 million and New York will lose over $55.5 million. The numbers are obviously worse under the Senate mark, and I ask that a table detailing states's shortfalls appear in the RECORD at this point. This chart shows who the losers are, and they are many, under the Senate bill.

These states should not be left holding an empty bag.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FISCAL YEAR 1993 SLIAG ALLOCATIONS AND DEFICITS ASSUMING $150,000,000 IN TOTAL FUNDING

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I had intended to offer an amendment that, quite simply, sought to target scarce SLIAG funds to the neediest States, those States who will, or already have, exhaust their SLIAG allocations. The chart I just referred to shows 11 losers. My amendment would have targeted all fiscal year 1993 SLIAG funds to the neediest States. But there is not even sufficient support for that in this body.

I won't offer my amendment. I know where the votes are. I cannot overstate the need for the conferees to once and for all stand up to this issue and solve it, as the law promises—It's time they kept their word.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

BLOODBORNE PATHOGENS

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, a year ago by a vote of 99–1 the Senate voted on an amendment to the fiscal year 1992 Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill which required OSHA to implement a final rule on occupational exposure to bloodborne pathogens, such as the AIDS virus and hepatitis B. These regulations are now in effect.

The Senate Appropriations Committee report on the fiscal year 1993 Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill H.R. 5677 states problems exist in complying with the regulations.

The committee specifically refers to difficulties rural health care providers in such remote regions as Alaska are having. Many of these areas do not have adequate water and sewer or commercial laundry services that would be necessary to comply with the laundry requirements of the regulations. For example, health care providers are required to bag any contaminated laundry at the location it is soiled, and then send it to a commercial laundry for washing. A lab coat worn during a visit by a dentist would fall under this classification. This makes it extremely difficult for health care providers in remote areas, that may have neither commercial laundries or running water, to comply. These communities are most often served by visiting health care professionals who drive or fly in to provide medical attention for serious problems. And, of course there are many communities in other parts of rural America that do not have ready access to commercial laundries.

The committee also directs OSHA to review the regulations as they apply to dentistry, citing the following concerns: First, restrictions that may be imposed on the dentist's ability to exercise professional judgment as it affects patient care; second, the medical records requirements; third, the use and laundry of personal protective equipment; fourth, whether or not dental saliva is classified as an infectious material; fifth, the need for a medical opinion on the necessity of administering hepatitis B vaccine; and the employer's obligation relating to the provision of the hepatitis B vaccination and postexposure evaluation and followup.

Not one of these areas, with the possible exception of dental saliva classification, is unique to the area of dentistry.

I have heard from many individuals, and health care organizations in Colorado and around the country concerning their difficulty in complying with the regulations. For example, Leonard Farr, CEO of the Penrose-St. Francis Healthcare System, wrote me:

> This rule is very unreasonable in its proposals and is a perfect example of bureaucratic overreaction. For example, as these rules are now written, it is my understanding that anyone dealing with any type of human fluids, any blood waste, et cetera, would have to be donned in protective coverings, including face shields * * * does this mean a nurse removing a patient off a bed pan would have to be gowned, gloved, and wearing a face shield before undertaking this task?

According to the American Society of Internal Medicine [ASIM], physicians are being overwhelmed by the ambiguity and the excessive amount of paperwork required by the regulations. For example, they have to keep a record of every time the table is cleansed between patients, the time and length of time the instruments are sterilized, and how often a trash can is cleaned out.

ASIM members also state that it is unclear what type of personal protective equipment is necessary for low-risk procedures. A procedure, such as an inflexible sigmodoscopic examination, may have minimal risk of blood exposure, yet in theory may require not just gloves but gowns, masks, and goggles as well.

The American College of OB-GYN's has had many calls from members asking questions such as: When is a piece of equipment—such as a nondisposable speculum—considered disinfected?

How long must it soak in disinfectant before it is sterile and ready for reuse?

What protective garments is an OB-GYN required to wear when performing in-office procedures such as a pap smear and what does the nurse who is holding the slide need to be wearing? Gloves and gown?

Is it acceptable for a physician to conduct the employee training of his or her staff? Can the physician use a video to help explain the regulations?

According to the Medical Group Management Association, OSHA has seriously underestimated the time and personnel necessary to comply with the regulations, including the written exposure control plan, the detailed policies and procedures, and the extensive staff training the regulations require employees to undertake.

For example, many small group practices have not had the staff available to dedicate to the approximately 50-60 hours necessary to complete the extensive manuals and implement the recordkeeping required by the regulation.

A cottage industry has sprung up to provide materials, equipment, seminars, et cetera, sometimes at considerable expense, to "ensure" that confused and frustrated physicians are in compliance.

According to the American Society of Internal Medicine, the regulations do not appropriately reflect the low risk factor associated with many procedures performed in physician offices. A general practitioner from California said:

> In my judgment, these new OSHA recommendations impose an unnecessary burden on an office where the most dangerous infectious disease we deal with is the common cold and where in 30 years of practice not one occupational illness has ever affected any of my employees.

The National Association of Community Health Centers has expressed concern over what constitutes reasonable anticipation of exposure to diseases such as hepatitis B. Because of this ambiguity many offices have been forced to vaccinate additional people in the office such as the clerical staff. Hepatitis B vaccine costs between $150 and $500 per person.

I had intended to offer a "sense of the Senate" amendment to the Labor-HHS appropriations bill to urge OSHA to solicit public comment on these regulations to make revisions that might be necessary.

While some problems are becoming obvious, the regulations have not been in place long enough to know their full effect. It is my hope that the conferees would include language in the committee report expanding its directive to OSHA to include all medical personnel, not just dentists, in its review of the bloodborne pathogens standard.

D'AMATO AMENDMENT NO. 3019

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, this is not the first time I have addressed the Senate on the issue of breast cancer—and I fear it will not be the last. But, I address the Senate today because the amendment before us is important to bring closer the day when we have a cure for a leading killer of our Nation.

Breast cancer is killing our mothers, our wives, and our daughters. One in nine American women is diagnosed with the disease, and indications are that those figures will worsen. Put another way: every 12 minutes in this country, a women dies of breast cancer; and every 3 minutes, a women is diagnosed with the disease. I regret to say, my State of Delaware has the highest breast cancer mortality rate in the Nation. Breast cancer is, simply, a public health crisis.

That is why I am supporting efforts to find better methods of detection, better treatments, and eventually a cure. I am a cosponsor of legislation to study why women in the Northeast, including Delaware, have a higher breast cancer mortality rate than the rest of the Nation. I am a cosponsor of a resolution urging insurance companies to cover the cost of mammograms, which is critical for early detection. And, I am a cosponsor of a bill to suspend the import duty on tamoxifen—a drug that has proved successful in preventing a recurrence of the disease.

But, we should not pretend that these steps represent the ultimate solution to this threat. Today, the Senate has the opportunity to make another step—a big step, but only a step—in finding that solution.

This amendment transfers $214 million from defense spending to breast cancer research. This would nearly double the funding level recommended by the Appropriations Committee, which was itself a significant increase over last year's funding. If this amendment is adopted, funding for breast cancer research in fiscal year 1993 will the historic level of $434 million.

While such a level, if adopted, will be a milestone, in many ways, it is also a tragedy. Tragic that such levels are needed. Tragic that 180,000 women will be diagnosed with the disease and that 46,000 will die this year alone. Tragic that a cure has proven so elusive. But, historic levels of breast cancer require nothing short of a historic research effort.

I urge my colleagues to support this increase in breast cancer research funding. I urge my colleagues to say to all women of America—because, frankly, all women are at risk—that our Nation is committed to facing this crisis, solving this problem, and curing this disease.

CORPORATION FOR PUBLIC BROADCASTING

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the public broadcasting system in our country has been one of the great successes of public/private partnerships. Federal money has provided essential funds for program development and production. Private foundations and corporations have made significant contributions, and individual viewers have phoned in their own generous pledges in a shared commitment to ensure that the quality and integrity that is the hallmark of public broadcasting will continue.

One of the reasons public broadcasting has become such a popular success in homes across America is the series of local public stations that exist in the cities and towns in all corners of the Nation. These stations are locally based and exist to serve their own communities. They cannot survive without the support of local viewers, so their programs reflect the needs, values and qualities of their own neighborhoods and communities.

Not long ago, we debated the reauthorization for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting here in the Senate. At that time, we offered a solid vote of support for CPB—publicly acknowledging the exceptional shows that Americans—young and old alike—have come to expect of public broadcasting.

After all, it is public broadcasting that has brought us shows with enduring appeal for children, such as Seasame Street, Mr. Rogers Neighborhood, Carmen Sandiego, Reading Rainbow, and Anne of Green Gables.

I would venture to say that every child in America will keep a special place in their young lives for Big Bird and the other residents of 123 Sesame Street.

Public broadcasting has also brought quality adult viewing, with a wide range of programming in opera, dance, documentaries, and drama. Many Americans who are unable to attend live theater performances have been able to see "Great Performances" solely because of public broadcasting. It is exactly this possibility for such cherished experiences that is the promise of public broadcasting.

Some of the new cable signals do provide similar quality programming through Bravo, and Arts and Entertainment. But only 60 percent of households subscribe to cable—and public broadcasting is available to any household with a television set.

Appropriate guidelines currently exist to govern grant-making decisions of the CPB. These ensure that awards are made competitively. The determining factors are excellence and the highest broadcasting standards. CPB is able to fund only a small number of applicants who seek support. With limited Federal funds we cannot support all worthy programs. But good public policy demands that we commit available resources to this worthwhile effort that means so much to the quality of life in our Nation.

CPB has a proud and honorable record. It has earned the respect and affection of teachers, parents, and children for its commitment to quality educational and entertaining programming.

It is time for the Senate to make a renewed commitment to CPB. The funds provided in this bill are wisely invested, and will be repaid a hundredfold.

It is a pleasure to speak in support of one of the great successes of the television age—public broadcasting.

NATIONAL YOUTH SPORTS PROGRAM

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona Mr. DECONCINI. I urge my colleagues to join us in swiftly approving this modest but worthwhile measure, which would restore funding for the National Youth Sports Program to the fiscal year 1992 level of $12 million.

For a number of years, I have been a great fan and advocate of the National Youth Sports Program. The skills the program helps our youth develop—in health, fitness, and problem solving—are exactly the skills they need to stay healthy and compete effectively in the 21st century.

Each year, this program—which is funded through the Department of Health and Human Services, in cooperation with the National Collegiate Athletic Association and 175 colleges and universities—provides thousands of at-risk youth, ages 10–16, with expert instruction in age-appropriate sports, health and nutrition, career planning, drug counseling, and a host of other important topics. In my own State of New Mexico this year, the NYSP served 600–700 children in Albuquerque, 281 children in Espanola, and 600 children in Las Vegas.

Mr. President, if this amendment is reject and the NYSP is funded at the committee-recommended level, more than 50 percent of the schools currently participating in the program—and thousands of deserving children—will be turned away this year. At a time when financially-strapped school districts are unable to adequately fund after-school and summer recreation programs, it is imperative that we do all we can to perpetuate the success of programs like the National Youth Sports Program. I strongly urge my colleagues to support this amendment and restore this program to its fiscal year 1992 level.

HIGH SCHOOL DROPOUTS

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, this morning an article appeared in the Washington Post that should be one more warning bell for our Nation as we head toward the 21st century. That article described a new study that showed that more than 1 in 10 young people, ages 16 to 19 years, is a high school dropout. But in some of our cities—including the capital of this Nation and the cities of Hartford and Bridgeport in my own State of Connecticut—the rate is as much as one in five. As we struggle to remain competitive internationally, these findings do not bode well for our need to have a well-prepared work force in the future. The prospects of the young people themselves are even more bleak.

We should keep in mind that these statistics are a snapshot in time. When we look at one particular age group, in this case ninth graders, and follow them over time, we find that 30 percent do not complete high school within 4 years. While some will finish school later, many are left without the tools they need for today's job market, much less tomorrow's.

When a young person drops out, his or her earnings prospects plummet. A high school dropout earns three-quarters the salary of a high school graduate. The unemployment rate for dropouts is twice that of high school graduates. The economic drain is staggering—just one class of dropouts costs $240 billion in lost earnings and taxes.

This is what dropouts can expect now. The future is even more dismal. By the year 2000, less than 1 percent of all new jobs will be available to those with less than a high school diploma. In fact, even that credential will not be enough for many jobs. By the turn of the century, three-quarters of new jobs will require education beyond high school.

Clearly, the students who are dropping out are not the only ones who lose. As a nation, we cannot hope to compete in the international economy if our young people are not adequately prepared to fill the demands of the workplace of the future.

Mr. President, these statistics underscore the need for the education reform. We need the innovations it would encourage, innovations that grow from the local community, to turn our schools around and make them places young people turn to for guidance, not turn away from in boredom. We need to start even earlier. As chairman of the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs, and Alcoholism, I have looked extensively at the need for early intervention programs that can make a real difference in a child's later life. Programs such as prenatal care and expanded access to Head Start may seem a far cry from the high technology workplace of the future, but in reality they are the foundation on which the work force to fill those jobs will be built. So, these discouraging statistics should wake us up to the critical importance of the appropriations bill we have been debating for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, as well as the Elementary and Secondary Reform Act, S. 2, for which I hope we will soon be considering a conference report.

IMPACT AID IN OKLAHOMA SCHOOLS

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, Senator NICKLES and I would like to call the attention of our colleagues to a problem we foresee for the State of Oklahoma relative to future funding of Public Law 81–874 impact aid in Oklahoma schools. Oklahoma is a large recipient of impact aid funds, receiving approximately $25.5 million each year. A major portion of these reimbursements is for educating children who reside on Indian lands. However, a problem has come to light within the last few months relative to the definition of Indian lands in our State.

The Indian Housing Authority [IHA] in Oklahoma primarily builds its housing units only on lands to which it can secure a clear deed. This means that when the IHA wants to build a mutual self-help home on Oklahoma Indian lands, it insists that the Indian family deed them the land the house is built on. The Bureau of Indian Affairs removes the title from restricted status and gives it to the IHA. The reason for this is clear: The IHA must be able to repossess the home if the Indian family defaults on their loan. When the IHA home is paid for in full, the title on the land reverts to restricted Indian property.

Since 1965, Oklahoma and the U.S. Department of Education [ED] have been considering these IHA titled lands as Indian lands under impact aid. This is obviously in accordance with congressional intent: IHA titled lands are not taxed, Indian students still reside on these lands, and simply because these lands do not meet ED's strict definition as either trust or restricted, they are still Indian lands as prior designated tribal property. Even so, ED now wants to stop Indian lands impact aid funding on these IHA titled lands because they are temporarily non-Indian trust or restricted. Mr. President, that change in funding could cost Oklahoma schools a devastating $12.7 million a year.

Although the current Labor/HHS appropriations bill protects Oklahoma for this year, we must have a change in definition to keep impact aid funding safe. I would like to stress the fact that we are not asking for any new money. In fact, the amendment Senator NICKLES and I were going to propose would have been completely budget neutral. We simply want to correct a problem that occurred because of the unique way Oklahoma's Indian lands are held in trust.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I want to echo the concerns of Senator BOREN on this issue. I understand that Senator HARKIN does not want to include legislative language on the Labor/HHS appropriations bill. Senator BOREN and I simply want to ensure that Senator PELL and other members of the Labor/HHS Authorization Committee understand how anxious we are to resolve this problem of definition and express our desire to work with them to resolve this issue.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I would like to thank the Senators from Oklahoma for their remarks. I appreciate their restraint in not offering an amendment at this time. I want to assure them that the Authorizing Education Subcommittee understands the nature of what we believe is a unique problem. It is my hope that we will resolve this issue next Congress when we reauthorize the Impact Aid Program.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I rise in strong opposition to this amendment which would prohibit the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to expend funds for the purpose of implementing or administering regulations affecting safety belt and motorcycle helmet use.

I commend the Appropriations Committee and the leadership of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], the chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education for striking this prohibition from the House bill.

The use of safety belts and motorcycle helmets save lives and reduces the severity of injuries. At my request and that of the distinguished chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, the General Accounting Office [GAO] evaluated the research studies that have been done on the effectiveness of safety belts and motorcycle helmets.

GAO's conclusion was that the research literature showed that safety belt use reduced both the fatality rate and the serious injury rate significantly; that State laws requiring safety belt and motorcycle helmet use reduced both fatalities and serious injuries; and that costs were reduced where crash victims used safety belt and motorcycle helmets.

Clearly, the use of safety belts and motorcycle helmets also saves employers money. Traffic crashes are the No. 1 killer of employees. Each fatality costs employers an estimated $110,500 in workers' compensation and a similar additional amount for uninsured costs. Injuries cost thousands more in health care costs and lost productivity. Employers pay for over 15 million days of lost time every year because of motor vehicle crashes. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration [NHTSA] estimates that automobile crashes cost employers over $1.9 billion each year.

Businesses of any size, but particularly small businesses, cannot afford these costs in a healthy, growing economy. They certainly cannot afford them in the current economy. NHTSA, working together with the business community has found that each dollar invested in a corporate safety belt program yields a $105 return on investment.

I urge the Senate to defeat this amendment and allow OSHA to go forward with, at a minimum, implementing that portion of the rule which would require employees to use safety belt and motorcycle helmets while on the job. This rule will save lives and save money.

IN OPPOSITION TO THE D'AMATO AMENDMENT

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I reluctantly must oppose the amendment offered by my colleague from New York. There is no question that additional funding for research into the causes of breast cancer and the establishment of a national breast cancer registry and tissue bank are desperately needed. The numbers alone speak to the problem. This year, one in nine American women will be diagnosed as having breast cancer.

Like many American families, my family has been touched by cancer. I am a cancer survivor, having been successfully treated for a malignant melanoma. During the past year, my wife, Priscilla underwent a mastectomy and 6 months of chemotherapy following breast cancer. Our daughter is a survivor of cervical cancer, and my mother is a survivor of breast cancer. There is, naturally, an inclination to support doing whatever is necessary to increase the funding for breast cancer research.

The defense budget is not simply another pot of money to fund domestic programs.

Defense spending accounts have been under the microscope for several years, and Congress has decided to significantly reduce military spending. The process of careful, albeit substantial, reductions in defense spending will continue when the DOD authorization bill comes before the Senate this evening. It is just wrong to arbitrarily cut defense spending.

Let me reiterate that I support increased funding for breast cancer research. If Congress determines breast cancer research is a priority, and I think it should be a priority, then it must make the tough decisions on where to find the funding within this $240 billion appropriations bill. We simply cannot tap into the defense budget every time we run short of funds for domestic programs.

Therefore, as much as I support increased funding for research into a disease which has impacted millions of American women, I must oppose the D'Amato amendment.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to compliment the Armed Services Committee on the Defense authorization bill reported to the Senate on July 24. In a year when slashing the defense budget is popular rhetoric, the committee has generated legislation to provide a smooth transition from a cold war defense structure and satisfy U.S. security needs.

I am particularly pleased the committee has decided to include $10 million for the development of a training program at the U.S. Army Armor Center in Kentucky. This initiative will allow National Guard soldiers to take advantage of the state-of-the-art tank and fighting vehicle simulators at Fort Knox. As the country increasingly relies on Reserve and Guard units, we need to guarantee they are well-trained, and that's the step we take in this bill. I am proud of the men and women of Fort Knox who serve our Nation and view it as a real tribute to them that the committee has decided to expand their mission.

Two years ago, I introduced a resolution in this body emphasizing the vital role of the Armor Center at Fort Knox in preparing our forces for combat. Language was included in the 1991 Defense authorization bill expressing the Senate's commitment to make Fort Knox the Nation's Armor Center.

I hope this body will move quickly on the Defense authorization bill and continue to provide ample funds for U.S. national security. I also hope this $10 million program is the first in a series of steps to make Fort Knox the country's principal focus for armor training and development.

The committee amendment on page 73, line 14, is excluded from the request that the amendments be adopted en bloc, making two committee amendments pending, first on page 52, line 9 through 23, and then on page 73, line 14.

Mr. HARKIN. Do I understand correctly that the pending business is the committee amendment at page 52, lines 9 through 23?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I urge adoption of the excepted committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the excepted committee amendment.

The excepted committee amendment, on page 52, lines 9 through 23, was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

EXCEPTED COMMITTEE AMENDMENT ON PAGE 73, LINE 14

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The business now before the Senate is the committee amendment on page 73, line 14.

Mr. MITCHELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine is recognized.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the only amendments remaining in order to this bill, in addition to the excepted committee amendment, be the following:

An amendment by Senator HATCH regarding Healthy Start; an amendment by Senator HATCH regarding labeling; and amendment by Senator LOTT regarding CPB; and that all other provisions of the existing consent agreement governing consideration of this bill remain in effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HATCH. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, the second amendment is not just labeling. It would provide for a year moratorium, so the FDA could not interfere in overregulating the sale of vitamins and minerals and herbal preparations, and so forth. I wanted to make that clear.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for his clarification.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the agreement governing consideration of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill be modified to remove from the list of amendments remaining in order the amendment by Senator LOTT regarding CPB.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I now ask for the regular order with respect to the Department of Defense authorization bill.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the request for the regular order, the clerk will state the Department of Defense authorization bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3114) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1993 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

Pending:

(1) Sasser/Bumpers/Jeffords modified amendment No. 2918, to reduce the amount provided for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

(2) Bumpers modified amendment No. 2919 (to amendment No. 2918), of a perfecting nature.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Armed Services as follows:

S. 3114

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993".

SEC. 2. ORGANIZATION OF ACT INTO DIVISIONS; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) DIVISIONS.—This Act is organized into three divisions as follows:

(1) Division A—Department of Defense Authorizations.

(2) Division B—Military Construction Authorizations.

(3) Division C—Department of Energy National Security Authorizations and Other Authorizations.

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

DIVISION A—DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AUTHORIZATIONS

TITLE I—PROCUREMENT

Subtitle A—Funding Authorizations

For outfitting, $385,321,000.

For post-delivery, $223,105,000.

For first destination transportation, $6,031,000.

(b) UNDISTRIBUTED REDUCTION.—The sum of the amounts provided under subsection (a) for fiscal year 1993 for the programs referred to in that subsection is reduced by $666,609,000 in order to be within the total amount authorized to be appropriated for that fiscal year under section 102(a)(3)(A).

(c) LIMITATION.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1994 pursuant to section 102(a)(3)(B) may be obligated for advance procurement for the aircraft carrier replacement program until the Secretary of Defense—

(1) submits to the congressional defense committees the national defense technology and industrial base assessment required by section 2263 of title 10, United States Code, as added by section 801(a) of this Act; and

(2) submits to the Congress the next report (after the date of the enactment of this Act) relating to roles and missions of the Armed Forces that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is required to submit to the Secretary under section 153(b) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 122. AN/SLQ-32 ELECTRONIC WARFARE SYSTEMS.

None of the funds appropriated pursuant to section 102(a)(4) may be obligated for the AN/SLQ-32A (V)3 system until the Commander, Operational Test and Evaluation Force, has determined that such system has been proven to be operationally effective during operational testing.

SEC. 123. AIRBORNE SELF PROTECTION JAMMER.

None of the funds appropriated pursuant to an authorization of appropriations contained in this Act and made available for the procurement of the Airborne Self Protection Jammer system or related support equipment may be obligated until the Director of the Office of Operational Test and Evaluation of the Department of Defense certifies to the Secretary of Defense that the Airborne Self Protection Jammer system is operationally suitable and effective.

SEC. 124. AV-8B HARRIER RADAR UPGRADE PROGRAM.

No funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993 may be obligated for the AV-8B radar upgrade program or for the remanufacture of AV-8B aircraft requiring installation of a new fuselage.

SEC. 125. MODIFICATION OF F-14 AIRCRAFT.

The unobligated balance of the funds appropriated to the Navy for fiscal year 1992 and made available for modification of F-14 aircraft may be obligated for the modification of existing F-14 aircraft with new engines, subject to such limitations as may be provided in appropriations Acts.

SEC. 126. STRATEGIC SEALIFT REPORT.

(a) REPORT.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Congress a report on the specific purposes for which the Secretary intends to obligate during fiscal year 1993 the funds available for the procurement of strategic sealift. The information in the report shall be presented by program, project, and activity.

(b) LIMITATION.—Funds appropriated to the Navy for procurement for shipbuilding and conversion and available for strategic sealift may not be obligated during fiscal year 1993 until 30 days after the date on which the Secretary of Defense submits the report required by subsection (a).

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

SEC. 131. C-17 AIRCRAFT PROGRAM.

(a) FUNDING FOR PROGRAM.—Of the amount appropriated pursuant to section 103(1), not more than $1,829,540,000 shall be available for the C-17 aircraft program, of which—

(1) not more than $1,623,935,000 shall be available for procurement other than advance procurement and procurement of spare parts; and

(2) not more than $205,605,000 shall be available for advance procurement.

(b) LIMITATION.—None of the funds provided under subsection (a) for the C-17 aircraft program (other than funds for advance procurement) may be obligated before—

(1) the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees the report referred to in section 133(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-190; 105 Stat. 1310);

(2) the Air Force has accepted delivery of the fifth production aircraft under that program;

(3) the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation of the Department of Defense—

(A) has evaluated the performance of the C-17 aircraft with respect to critical operational issues after the first 50 flight hours of flight testing conducted during initial operational testing and evaluation of the aircraft; and

(B) has provided to the Secretary of Defense and to the congressional defense committees an early operational assessment of the aircraft regarding overall suitability of the aircraft and deficiencies in the aircraft relative to (i) the initial requirements and specifications for the aircraft, and (ii) the current requirements and specifications for the aircraft;

(4) the Secretary of the Air Force—

(A) has convened the Scientific Advisory Board—

(i) to determine the technical feasibility of carrying out a service life extension program for the C-141 aircraft fleet; and

(ii) to review programmed depot maintenance policies and practices for the C-141 aircraft fleet; and

(B) has taken action to limit the retirement of any operationally capable C-141 aircraft until a decision is made concerning a service life extension for the C-141 fleet;

(5) the Secretary of Defense has convened a special Defense Acquisition Board to review the C-17 aircraft program;

(6) the special Defense Acquisition Board has submitted to the Secretary of Defense a report on the C-17 aircraft program, including the matters described in subsection (c); and

(7) the Secretary of Defense has submitted the report of that board, including the material referred to in subsection (c), to the congressional defense committees.

(c) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED IN REVIEW.—The review (referred to in subsection (b)(5)) that is conducted by the special Defense Acquisition Board shall include—

(1) an assessment by the Joint Requirements Oversight Council (JROC) of the adequacy of the requirements for the C-17 aircraft;

(2) an analysis by a federally funded research and development center of the cost and operational effectiveness of the C-17 aircraft program taking into consideration complementary mixes of other aircraft; and

(3) an affordability assessment of the program, performed by the Cost Analysis Improvement Group in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Program Analysis and Evaluation.

(d) PROHIBITION RELATING TO PRODUCTION CAPABILITY.—None of the funds provided under subsection (a) for the C-17 aircraft program may be used to increase the current rate at which the contractor could produce C-17 aircraft.

(e) INITIATIVE ON COST, PERFORMANCE, AND MANAGEMENT.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, acting through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, shall establish an initiative to maintain control over costs, contractor performance, and management performance within the C-17 aircraft program.

(2) The initiative shall include the following elements:

(A) The establishment of a management plan which provides for the decisions to commit to specified levels of production to be linked to progress in meeting specified program milestones, including testing milestones of such critical performance elements as—

(i) maximum range and maximum payload performance;

(ii) short airfield performance;

(iii) ground mobility in restricted airfield conditions;

(iv) low altitude parachute extraction capability;

(v) air drop capability; and

(vi) sustainable utilization rate performance.

(B) The establishment of a program for promoting increased interaction between the prime contractor and major program subcontractors on management and performance issues.

(C) The establishment of a senior management review group to report directly to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition on the status of aircraft capability, program management, schedule, and cost.

(D) The establishment of a full performance matrix.

(3) Not later than April 1, 1993, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the initiative. The report shall include a description of the measures taken to implement the initiative, including actions taken with respect to each of the elements specified in paragraph (2), and a description of the criteria and milestones to be used in evaluating actual program performance against specified program performance.

(f) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT.—(1) Of the amounts appropriated for the Air Force for fiscal year 1993 for the procurement of aircraft pursuant to the authorization in section 103(1), $232,000,000 may be made available for the C-17 aircraft program in addition to amounts provided under subsection (a).

(2) Funds made available pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be subject to the limitation in subsection (b) and the prohibition in subsection (d).

(3) None of the funds made available pursuant to paragraph (1) may be obligated unless the Inspector General of the Department of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees that the Air Force—

(A) took delivery of the fifth production aircraft not later than December 31, 1992; and

(B) has taken delivery of all C-17 aircraft in production lot III and has flown all of those aircraft from the final assembly site on or before August 31, 1993.

SEC. 132. CORRECTION OF FUEL LEAKS ON C-17 PRODUCTION AIRCRAFT.

(a) CERTIFICATION OF CONTRACTOR CORRECTION UNDER WARRANTY.—The Secretary of Defense shall (except as otherwise provided under subsection (b)) certify to the congressional defense committees that the repair of the fuel leaks on production C-17 aircraft will be carried out by the contractor (under the warranty provisions of the production contract for such aircraft) at no additional cost to the Government and with no additional consideration to the contractor for production aircraft under the C-17 program by reason of the repair of the C-17 fuel leaks.

(b) ALTERNATIVE TO CERTIFICATION.—If the Secretary of Defense is unable to make the certification referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary—

(1) shall carry out the repair of the fuel leaks at an Air Logistics Center in the United States; and

(2) shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report notifying the committees that the Secretary is unable to make such a certification and setting forth a schedule for conducting the repair of the fuel leaks pursuant to paragraph (1).

SEC. 133. F-16 SPARE PARTS AND SUPPORT EQUIPMENT.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Air Force may sell any component, part, assembly, or material procured with funds appropriated for fiscal year 1990, 1991, or 1992 for advance procurement for F-16 aircraft and made available for the 24 F-16 aircraft identified for procurement in fiscal year 1993 by the Department of Defense in the document entitled "Procurement Programs (P-1)," dated January 29, 1992. The proceeds of the sale of such components, parts, assemblies, and material shall be available for the procurement of spare parts and support equipment for F-16 aircraft and for the liquidation of any liability of the Federal Government resulting from the termination of production of F-16 aircraft.

Subtitle E—Defense Agency Programs

SEC. 141. FUNDING FOR CERTAIN TACTICAL INTELLIGENCE PROGRAMS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 104, $166,700,000 shall be available for modernizing EP-3 Aries aircraft or RC-135 Rivet Joint aircraft.

(b) ELECTION OF SYSTEM.—The Secretary of Defense shall determine whether to use all of the funds provided under subsection (a) for modernizing EP-3 Aries aircraft or to use all of such funds for modernizing RC-135 Rivet Joint aircraft. Such funds may not be used for modernizing both such aircraft systems.

(c) TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—(1) To the extent provided in appropriations Acts, and subject to the limitation in paragraph (2), the Secretary of Defense may transfer $166,700,000 to the Navy for procurement of aircraft or to the Air Force for procurement of aircraft.

(2) The Secretary of Defense may not transfer any funds under paragraph (1) until the date 30 days after the date on which the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a report containing the Secretary's determination on which of the two aircraft systems referred to in subsection (a) is better for meeting the tactical intelligence requirements of the commanders of the combatant commands.

(3) The transfer authority in paragraph (1) is in addition to any other transfer authority provided in this or any other Act.

SEC. 142. MH-47E/MH-60K HELICOPTER MODIFICATION PROGRAMS.

(a) REQUIRED TESTING.—Notwithstanding the requirements of subsections (a)(2) and (b) of section 2366 of title 10, United States Code, and the requirements of subsection (a) of section 2399 of such title—

(1) operational test and evaluation and survivability testing of the MH-60K helicopter under the MH-60K helicopter modification program shall be completed prior to full materiel release of the MH-60K helicopters for operational use; and

(2) operational test and evaluation and survivability testing of the MH-47E helicopter under the MH-47E helicopter modification program shall be completed prior to full materiel release of the MH-47E helicopters for operational use.

(b) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED LAW.—Section 143 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-109; 105 Stat. 1313) is repealed.

Subtitle F—Strategic Programs

SEC. 151. TRIDENT II MISSILE.

(a) LIMITATION.—None of the funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization in section 102(a)(2) and made available for the advance procurement of Trident II missiles may be obligated until the report described in subsection (b), which was to have been submitted to the congressional defense committees not later than March 1, 1992, has been submitted to those committees.

(b) COVERED REPORT.—The report referred to in subsection (a) is the report, referred to in Senate Report No. 102-113, 102d Congress, 1st session, on the cost savings that could be obtained through multiyear procurement of the balance of the Trident II missiles to be produced at rates of 48, 60, and 72 missiles per year.

SEC. 152. NONSTEALTHY HEAVY BOMBER MODERNIZATION.

(a) SURVIVABILITY AND EFFECTIVENESS TESTING.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall prepare and implement a plan for testing of the survivability and operational effectiveness of nonstealthy heavy bombers against a set of defenses and defended target arrays that are representative of a broad range of potential targets and defenses that such bombers might encounter during conventional conflicts during the next 20 years.

(2) The Secretary shall carry out paragraph (1) with the assistance of the Secretary of the Air Force, the Vice Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation of the Department of Defense, and the independent panel established pursuant to section 121(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101-189; 103 Stat. 1379).

(3) The aircraft to be tested under the testing plan required under paragraph (1) include—

(A) B-52H bombers;

(B) B-1B bombers containing the current version of the ALQ-161 electronic countermeasures suite; and

(C) subject to paragraph (5), the one B-1B that contains an electronic countermeasures suite modified to the "CORE" configuration.

(4) The testing plan shall—

(A) be designed to encompass—

(i) cued and uncued defenses;

(ii) individual air defense systems as well as multiple air defenses; and

(iii) survivability and operational effectiveness with and without external assets for suppression or disruption of simulated enemy air defenses;

(B) require quantitative measurements that are adequate to permit extrapolation of test data to untested scenarios with reasonable confidence levels;

(C) be designed to permit the evaluation of alternative tactics for bomber penetration and weapons delivery and alternative tactics for defenses; and

(D) be designed to permit the evaluation of the contribution of advanced conventional munitions currently under development to the survivability and effectiveness of the aircraft.

(5) The Secretary may exempt the B-1B referred to in paragraph (3)(C) from testing under the testing plan if the Secretary determines, before implementing the testing plan, to terminate the procurement of the CORE electronics countermeasures system.

(b) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Upon the conclusion of the testing program provided for in the testing plan, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report, in unclassified and classified forms, on—

(A) the results of the testing and the implications of those results for—

(i) the future force structure requirements for nonstealthy heavy bombers, taking into account the capabilities of other weapon systems;

(ii) advanced conventional munitions capabilities; and

(iii) cost-effective measures, modifications, and upgrades for enhancing the survivability and operational effectiveness of the nonstealthy heavy bombers to be retained in the force structure; and

(B) the deficiencies in the numbers, performance, capability, and fidelity of air defense threats and threat simulators available for the operational testing, together with a detailed analysis of the cost and lead-times necessary for obtaining for testing purposes an adequate representation of current and likely future air defenses.

(2) Within 60 days after the date of the submission of the report under paragraph (1), the Comptroller General of the United States shall review the report and the recommendations in the report and shall provide the congressional defense committees with his views on the report.

(c) FUNDING.—Of the funds made available pursuant to section 103 for fiscal year 1993, not more than $50,200,000 shall be available for modification of the B-1B bomber program, not more than $50,000,000 shall be available for interim contractor support, and not more than $70,000,000 shall be available for modifications of B-52 bomber aircraft.

(d) LIMITATION ON EXPENDITURE OF B-1B BOMBER FUNDS.—The Secretary of Defense may not obligate funds for the procurement of the "CORE" electronic countermeasures system until—

(1) the report required under subsection (b) is submitted to the congressional defense committees and a period of 60 days after the date of the submission elapses; and

(2) the Secretary certifies in writing to the congressional defense committees that the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation of the Department of Defense has reviewed the CORE electronic countermeasures system proposed to be acquired and has determined that the system is operationally suitable and operationally effective in meeting all B-1B defensive avionics system requirements.

SEC. 153. B-2 BOMBER AIRCRAFT PROGRAM.

(a) AMOUNT FOR PROGRAM.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 103(1), not more than $2,686,572,000 may be obligated for procurement for the B-2 bomber aircraft program.

(b) B-2 BUYOUT AND CURTAILMENT.—The funds referred to in subsection (a) may be obligated only for the purpose of completing procurement for the B-2 bomber aircraft program and paying all curtailment costs under the B-2 aircraft program.

(c) LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF B-2 AIRCRAFT.—A total of not more than 20 deployable B-2 bomber aircraft plus 1 test aircraft may be procured.

(d) LIMITATION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS.—None of the funds referred to in subsection (a) may be obligated unless and until—

(1) the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees—

(A) the reports and certifications referred to in section 131(b)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-190; 105 Stat. 1306);

(B) the report under subsection (e); and

(C) the report under subsection (f); and

(2) 30 days have elapsed since the date of the submission of the reports under subsections (e) and (f).

(e) REPORT ON LOW OBSERVABILITY AND SURVIVABILITY.—The report referred to in subsection (d)(1)(B) is a report submitted by the Secretary of Defense to the congressional defense committees that contains the following matters:

(1) The Secretary's assessment of the extent to which the B-2 aircraft will meet the original operational performance objectives that were established for the B-2 aircraft in order to ensure the high survivability of the aircraft, including an accounting of the specific low observability objectives that were not fulfilled in a B-2 flight test conducted during July 1991 and the effect on survivability (if any) of the currently projected low observable characteristics of the B-2 aircraft.

(2) A full description of the information upon which the assessment required by paragraph (1) is based, including all relevant flight test data.

(3) A full description of any actions planned to be taken to improve the B-2 aircraft's low observability capabilities beyond the capabilities that have been demonstrated in flight testing before the date of the submission of the report under this subsection, and the associated costs and benefits.

(4) A quantitative assessment by the Secretary of Defense of the likelihood that a B-2 aircraft having the low observable characteristics projected for the aircraft can survive in the execution in the future of its primary mission as a penetrating nonnuclear bomber as compared to the likelihood that a B-2 aircraft meeting all of the specifications contained in the current development contract can survive in the execution of such a mission.

(f) REPORT ON COST OF PROGRAM FOR 20 B-2 AIRCRAFT.—The report referred to in subsection (d)(1)(C) is a report submitted by the Secretary of Defense to the congressional defense committees that describes the total amount of the research, development, test, and evaluation costs, procurement costs, and other acquisition costs that are associated with a B-2 aircraft program to result in 20 deployable aircraft, including the costs of all planned modifications and retrofits, tooling, preplanned product improvements, support equipment, interim contractor support, initial spares, and any Government liability associated with curtailment.

(g) GAO REVIEW.—(1) The Comptroller General of the United States shall—

(A) review each report submitted pursuant to subsection (e) and (f); and

(B) provide the congressional defense committees with his comments on such reports.

(2) The Secretary of Defense shall transmit a copy of the reports to the Comptroller General at the same time that he transmits the reports to the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 154. SPACE SYSTEMS INVESTMENT STRATEGY.

(a) COST REDUCTION STRATEGY.—The Secretary of Defense shall develop a strategy for achieving substantial reductions in the cost of developing, acquiring, and supporting space systems operated by the Department of Defense.

(b) OPTIONS TO BE CONSIDERED.—In developing the strategy, the Secretary shall consider options to achieve reductions by fiscal year 2000 to amounts that are up to 25 percent below the costs incurred for such space systems in fiscal year 1992, measured in constant dollars.

(c) REPORT REQUIRED.—At the earliest practicable date, but not later than March 1, 1993, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the strategy required under subsection (a) and any recommendations that the Secretary considers appropriate regarding such strategy.

SEC. 155. GROUND WAVE EMERGENCY NETWORK.

Section 132 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 104 Stat. 1501) is amended by striking out "October 1, 1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 1993".

Subtitle G—Chemical Demilitarization Program

SEC. 161. CHEMICAL WEAPONS STOCKPILE DISPOSAL PROGRAM.

(a) CHANGE IN STOCKPILE ELIMINATION DEADLINE.—Section 1412(b)(5) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1986 (50 U.S.C. 1521(b)(5)), is amended by striking out "July 31, 1999" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 2004".

(b) EVALUATION OF ALTERNATIVE TECHNOLOGIES.—Not later than December 31, 1993, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report on the potential alternatives to the use of the Army's baseline disassembly and incineration process for the disposal of lethal chemical agents and munitions. The report shall include the following:

(1) An analysis of the report of the Committee on Alternative Chemical Demilitarization Technologies of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Science.

(2) Any recommendations that the National Academy of Sciences makes to the Army regarding the report of that committee and the Secretary's evaluation of those recommendations.

(3) A comparison of the baseline disassembly and incineration process with each alternative technology evaluated in the report of such committee that the National Academy of Sciences recommends for use in the Army Chemical Stockpile Disposal Program, taking into consideration each of the following factors:

(A) Safety.

(B) Environmental protection.

(C) Cost effectiveness.

(4) For each alternative technology recommended by the National Academy of Sciences, the date by which the Army could reasonably be expected to systematize, construct, and test the technology, obtain all necessary environmental and other permits necessary for using that technology for the disposal of lethal chemical agents and munitions, and have the technology available for full-scale chemical weapons destruction and demilitarization operations.

(5) A description of alternatives to incineration that are being developed by Russia for use in its chemical demilitarization program and an assessment of the extent to which such alternatives could be used to destroy lethal chemical weapons in the United States inventory of such weapons.

(c) LIMITATION.—(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the Army may not carry out any site preparation for or construction of a disassembly and incinerator chemical agents disposal facility until the report required under subsection (b) is submitted to Congress.

(2) The limitation in paragraph (1) does not apply to any disassembly and incineration chemical agent disposal facility (of the 8 such facilities identified in the Army Chemical Stockpile Disposal Program) at which site preparation or construction has commenced before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) The limitation in paragraph (1) does not apply to:

(A) Facility design activities.

(B) The obtaining of environmental permits.

(C) Project planning.

(D) Procurement of equipment for installation in a facility.

(d) DESTRUCTION OF NONSTOCKPILE CHEMICAL MATERIAL.—(1)(A) Not later than February 1, 1993, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report setting forth the Army's plans for destroying all chemical warfare material of the United States not covered by section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1986 (50 U.S.C. 1521), that would be required to be destroyed if the United States became a party to a chemical weapons convention described in subparagraph (B).

(B) The chemical weapons convention referred to in subparagraph (A) is a chemical weapons convention that is substantially the same as the final draft of the proposed international Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) tabled by the Chairman of the United Nations Conference on Disarmament Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons on June 22, 1992 (CD/CW/WP.400/Rev.1).

(2) The chemical warfare material covered by the report shall include the following:

(A) Binary chemical munitions.

(B) Buried chemical munitions.

(C) Chemical munitions recovered from ranges.

(D) Chemical weapons production facilities.

(E) All other chemical warfare material referred to in paragraph (1).

(3) The report shall include the following:

(A) A list of all suspected locations (including ranges) of buried or unexpended chemical munitions.

(B) An estimate of the number of such munitions and, of that number, how many of such munitions are planned to be destroyed.

(C) An inventory of the former chemical weapons production facilities and previously contaminated storage containers and the plans for destroying those facilities and containers.

(D) An inventory of the binary chemical munitions and the plans for destroying those munitions.

(E) The locations at which the chemical warfare materials and facilities referred to subparagraphs (A) through (D) will be destroyed.

(F) A description of the use, if any, that will be made of the Chemical Agent and Munitions Disposal System (CAMDS) facility in the destruction of those chemical warfare materials, as well as possible future uses of that facility for the destruction of conventional munitions or for research and development of possible alternative technologies for the destruction of chemical munitions.

(G) For the chemical warfare materials that cannot be destroyed in place or on site, a description of the means to be used for transporting the materials to disposal facilities.

(H) An estimate of the cost of destroying such chemical warfare materials and facilities.

(I) An estimate of the time that will be necessary to destroy such chemical warfare materials and facilities and the Secretary's determination of the likelihood that such materials and facilities can be destroyed by December 31, 2004.

(J) A determination as to whether it is a realistic option to transport chemical agents and munitions currently stored at low-volume disposal sites to other locations for destruction instead of destroying those munitions at those sites, taking into consideration safety, cost effectiveness, and the potential obligations of the United States under a chemical weapons convention to transport substantial quantities of chemical warfare munitions and materials not in the United States stockpile of lethal chemical agents and munitions to various locations for destruction.

(4) As used in paragraph (3)(J), the term "low-volume disposal site" means any chemical agent disposal site identified in the Army Chemical Stockpile Disposal Program where 5 percent or less of the total United States stockpile of unitary chemical weapons is stored.

SEC. 162. PHYSICAL AND CHEMICAL INTEGRITY OF THE CHEMICAL WEAPONS STOCKPILE.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than May 1, 1993, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report on the physical and chemical integrity of the existing chemical weapons that are contained in the chemical weapons stockpile of the United States and are stored within the 8 chemical weapons storage sites within the continental United States.

(b) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report shall include the following matters:

(1) A critical analysis of the near-term, mid-term, and long-term storage life of all chemical materials and chemical munitions contained within the storage sites referred to in subsection (a).

(2) For each class of chemical munitions and chemical agents, an analysis of the overall frequency of leaks of the munitions and agents and the frequency of leaks of the munitions and agents at each storage site.

(3) For each class of munition and agent and for each storage site, a description of the finite risks and potential harm to human health and environmental quality that are associated with such catastrophic events as container breach, spontaneous munition ignition, and leak.

(4) A critical analysis of the risks associated with the storage of the chemical munitions and chemical agents in each class of chemical munitions and chemical agents that are stored at each storage site through December 31, 2004.

(5) A discussion of actions that could be taken to minimize or eliminate the risks identified in paragraphs (1) through (4), including a discussion of actions to relocate or destroy chemical weapons at regional disposal facilities.

TITLE II—RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Subtitle A—Authorizations

SEC. 201. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 for the use of the Armed Forces for research, development, test, and evaluation as follows:

(1) For the Army, $5,303,744,000.

(2) For the Navy, $8,921,805,000.

(3) For the Air Force, $14,070,731,000.

(4) For the Defense Agencies, $10,645,659,000, of which—

(A) $261,707,000 is authorized for the activities of the Deputy Director, Defense Research and Engineering (Test and Evaluation); and

(B) $12,983,000 is authorized for the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation.

SEC. 202. AMOUNT FOR BASIC RESEARCH AND EXPLORATORY DEVELOPMENT.

(a) FISCAL YEAR 1993.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 201, $4,179,179,000 shall be available for basic research and exploratory development projects.

(b) BASIC RESEARCH AND EXPLORATORY DEVELOPMENT DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term "basic research and exploratory development" means work funded in program elements for defense research and development under Department of Defense category 6.1 or 6.2.

SEC. 203. MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT.

Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 201, $433,600,000 shall be available for manufacturing technology development as follows:

(1) For the Army, $61,000,000.

(2) For the Navy, $108,400,000.

(3) For the Air Force, $146,200,000.

(4) For the Office of the Secretary of Defense, $118,000,000.

SEC. 204. STRATEGIC ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 201, $200,000,000 shall be available for the Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

SEC. 211. V-22 OSPREY AIRCRAFT PROGRAM.

(a) FISCAL YEAR 1993 FUNDING.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 201 or otherwise made available for the Navy for fiscal year 1993 for research, development, test, and evaluation, $755,000,000 may be used only for development, manufacture, and operational testing of 3 production representative V-22 Osprey aircraft in addition to the 3 production representative V-22 Osprey aircraft for which funds were authorized to be appropriated, and were appropriated, for fiscal year 1992.

(b) USE OF FUNDS FOR CURRENT AND PRIOR FISCAL YEARS.—The amount made available for fiscal year 1993 for the V-22 Osprey aircraft program pursuant to subsection (a) and the unobligated balances of the amounts that were authorized to be appropriated, and were appropriated, for preceding fiscal years and made available for the V-22 Osprey aircraft program may be used only for—

(1) the development and manufacture of a total of 6 production representative aircraft for operational testing; and

(2) the operational testing of such aircraft.

SEC. 212. REPORT ON V-22 OSPREY AIRCRAFT PROGRAM.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Commandant of the Marine Corps shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the crash of the V-22 Osprey prototype aircraft that occurred on July 20, 1992.

(b) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report shall include a discussion of the following matters:

(1) The cause or causes of the crash.

(2) The extent to which a redesign of a system might be required to correct the condition or conditions that caused the crash.

(3) The effects of the crash on the cost, schedule, and technical risk of the V-22 Osprey development and testing program.

(c) SUBMITTAL DATE.—The Commandant shall submit the report on or before September 1, 1992. If the Commandant expects to be unable to submit the report by that date, the Commandant shall notify the congressional defense committees of that expectation not later than August 16, 1992. The Commandant shall include in the notification the date on which he expects to submit the report.

(d) LIMITATION.—Not more than 50 percent of the amount appropriated for the Navy for fiscal year 1993 and made available for the V-22 Osprey aircraft program may be obligated until the Commandant has submitted the report required by subsection (a).

SEC. 213. SPECIAL OPERATIONS VARIANT OF THE V-22 OSPREY AIRCRAFT.

Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 201(4), $15,000,000 shall be available for research, development, test, and evaluation in connection with the special operations variant of the V-22 Osprey aircraft.

SEC. 214. SHIPBOARD ELECTRONIC WARFARE PROGRAMS.

The Secretary of Defense shall specify in the Department of Defense budget request for fiscal year 1994 a separate program element for electronic warfare programs involving ship self-defense.

Subtitle C—Missile Defense Program

SEC. 221. MISSILE DEFENSE ACT AMENDMENTS.

(a) IMPLEMENTATION OF GOAL.—Section 233 of the Missile Defense Act of 1991 (part C of title II of Public Law 102-190; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note) is amended in subsection (b) by striking out "(b)" and all that follows through the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) ACTIONS OF THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE.—

"(1) THEATER MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEMS.—The Secretary of Defense shall develop advanced theater missile defense systems for deployment.

"(2) INITIAL ABM DEPLOYMENT.—The Secretary shall develop for deployment a cost-effective, operationally effective, and ABM Treaty-compliant antiballistic missile system at a single site as the initial step toward deployment of an antiballistic missile system described in section 232(a)(1) designed to protect the United States against limited ballistic missile threats, including accidental or unauthorized launches or Third World attacks. The system components to be developed shall include—

"(A) 100 ground-based interceptors, the design of which is to be determined by competition and downselection for the most capable interceptor or interceptors;

"(B) fixed, ground-based, antiballistic missile battle management radars; and

"(C) optimum utilization of space-based sensors, including sensors capable of cueing ground-based antiballistic missile interceptors and providing initial targeting vectors, and other sensor systems that are not prohibited by the ABM Treaty, including specifically the Ground Surveillance and Tracking System.".

(b) FOLLOW-ON TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH.—Subsection (c) of section 234 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(c) TRANSFER OF MANAGEMENT RESPONSIBILITY FOR RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT OF FAR-TERM FOLLOW-ON TECHNOLOGIES.—

"(1) TRANSFER REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—As the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization (SDIO) transitions from a broadly based research organization to a focused acquisition agency, maintaining responsibility for research and development of far-term follow-on technologies in that organization could distract management and result in funding shortfalls as the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization's priorities increasingly center on near-term deployment architectures. Accordingly, the Secretary of Defense shall transfer management and budget responsibility for research and development of all far-term follow-on technologies currently under the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization to the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) or the appropriate military department, unless he determines and certifies to the congressional defense committees that transfer of a particular far-term follow-on technology currently under the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization would not be in the national security interests of the United States.

"(B) Definition.—In subparagraph (A), the term 'far-term follow-on technology' means a technology not likely to be incorporated into a weapon system within 10 to 15 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

"(2) Report required.—

"(A) In general.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report identifying—

"(i) those programs, projects, and activities under the Other Follow-On Technologies program element for fiscal year 1993 which he is transferring to a military department or the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency; and

"(ii) those programs, projects, and activities under the Other Follow-On Technologies program element which the Secretary certifies are necessary in the national security interests of the United States to maintain under the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization.

"(B) Definition.—In subparagraph (A), the term 'programs, projects, and activities under the Other Follow-On Technologies program element for fiscal year 1993' means the programs, projects, and activities listed under the Other Follow-On Technologies program element for fiscal year 1993 in the report submitted to the congressional defense committees on July 2, 1992 pursuant to section 233(b)(3) of this Act.".

(c) Research, Development, Test, and Evaluation Objectives for SDI Program Elements.—Section 236 of such Act is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking out "by fiscal year 1996" in the second sentence;

(2) in subsection (b)(1), by striking out all after "United States,"; and

(3) in subsection (d), by inserting "but which are not likely to be incorporated into weapons within 10 to 15 years after the date of the enactment of this Act" before the period at the end.

(d) Review of Follow-On Deployment Options.—Section 238 of such Act is amended by striking out "of fiscal year 1996" in the first sentence.

SEC. 222. STRATEGIC DEFENSE INITIATIVE FUNDING.

(a) Total Amount.—Of the amounts appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993, not more than $4,300,000,000 may be obligated for the Strategic Defense Initiative, as follows:

(1) Of the amounts appropriated pursuant to title I for fiscal year 1993 or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for procurement for fiscal year 1993, not more than $62,500,000 may be obligated for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

(2) Of the amounts appropriated pursuant to section 201 for fiscal year 1993 or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for research, development, test, and evaluation for fiscal year 1993, not more than $4,237,500,000 may be obligated for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

(b) Specific Amounts for the Program Elements.—Of the amount set forth in subsection (a)—

(1) not more than $2,090,000,000 shall be available for programs, projects, and activities within the Limited Defense System program element;

(2) not more than $997,500,000 shall be available for programs, projects, and activities within the Theater Missile Defenses program element;

(3) not more than $350,000,000 shall be available for programs, projects, and activities within the Space-Based Interceptors program element;

(4) not more than $400,000,000 shall be available for programs, projects, and activities within the Other Follow-On Systems program element; and

(5) not more than $400,000,000 shall be available for programs, projects, and activities within the Research and Support Activities program element.

(c) Transfer Authorities.—(1) Before the submission of the report required under subsection (e) and notwithstanding the limitations set forth in subsection (b), the Secretary of Defense may transfer funds among the program elements named in subsection (b).

(2) The total amount that may be transferred to or from any program element named in subsection (b)—

(A) may not exceed 10 percent of the amount provided in such subsection for the program element from which the transfer is made; and

(B) may not result in an increase of more than 10 percent of the amount provided in such subsection for the program element to which the transfer is made.

(3) Transfer authority may not be used for a decrease in funds identified in subsection (b)(2) for Theater Missile Defenses.

(4) Amounts transferred pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes as the amounts to which transferred.

(d) Construction of Authority in Relation to User Operational Evaluation System.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize the exercise of any option to fabricate or field elements of a User Operational Evaluation System at the initial anti-ballistic missile defense site.

(e) Reporting Requirement.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the allocation of funds appropriated for the Strategic Defense Initiative for fiscal year 1993. The report shall specify the amount of such funds allocated for each program, project, and activity under each program element.

SEC. 223. DEVELOPMENT AND TESTING OF ANTI-BALLISTIC MISSILE SYSTEMS OR COMPONENTS.

(a) Use of Funds.—(1) Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993, or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense from any funds appropriated for fiscal year 1993 or for any fiscal year before 1993, may not be obligated or expended—

(A) for any development or testing of anti-ballistic missile systems or components except for development and testing consistent with the development and testing described in the July 1992 SDIO Report; or

(B) for the acquisition of any material or equipment (including any long lead materials, components, piece parts, test equipment, or any modified space launch vehicle) required or to be used for the development or testing of anti-ballistic missile systems or components, except for material or equipment required for development or testing consistent with the development and testing described in the July 1992 SDIO Report.

(2) The limitation under paragraph (1) shall not apply to funds transferred to or for the use of the Strategic Defense Initiative for fiscal year 1993 if the transfer is made in accordance with section 1001 of this Act.

(b) Definition.—In this section, the term "July 1992 SDIO Report" means the report entitled, "1992 Report to Congress on the Strategic Defense Initiative," prepared by the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization and submitted to certain committees of the Senate and House of Representatives by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 224 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101-189; 103 Stat. 1398; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note).

Subtitle D—Other Matters

SEC. 231. MEDICAL COUNTERMEASURES AGAINST BIOWARFARE THREATS.

(a) Funding.—Of the amounts appropriated pursuant to section 201 for fiscal year 1993, not more than $59,670,000 shall be available for the medical component of the Biological Defense Research Program (BDRP) of the Department of Defense.

(b) Limitations.—(1) Funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993 may be obligated and expended for product development, and for research, development, testing, and evaluation, of medical countermeasures against biowarfare threat agents only in accordance with this section.

(2) Of the funds made available pursuant to subsection (a), not more than $10,000,000 may be obligated or expended for research, development, testing, or evaluation of medical countermeasures against far-term validated biowarfare threat agents.

(3) Of the funds made available pursuant to subsection (a) and not made available pursuant to paragraph (2) for the purpose set out in that paragraph—

(A) not more than 80 percent may be obligated and expended for product development, or for research, development, testing, or evaluation, of medical countermeasures against near-term validated biowarfare threat agents; and

(B) not more than 20 percent may be obligated or expended for product development, or for research, development, testing, or evaluation, of medical countermeasures against mid-term validated biowarfare threat agents.

(c) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "validated biowarfare threat agent" means a biological agent that—

(A) is named in the biological warfare threat list published by the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA); and

(B) is identified as a biowarfare threat by the Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army for Intelligence in accordance with Army regulations applicable to intelligence support for the medical component of the Biological Defense Research Program.

(2) The term "near-term validated biowarfare threat agent" means a validated biowarfare threat agent that has been, or is being, developed or produced for weaponization within 5 years, as assessed and determined by the Defense Intelligence Agency.

(3) The term "mid-term validated biowarfare threat agent" means a validated biowarfare threat agent that is an emerging biowarfare threat, is the object of research by a foreign threat country, and will be ready for weaponization in more than 5 years and less than 10 years, as assessed and determined by the Defense Intelligence Agency.

(4) The term "far-term validated biowarfare threat agent" means a validated biowar-

fare threat agent that is a future biowarfare threat, is the object of research by a foreign threat country, and could be ready for weaponization in more than 10 years and less than 20 years, as assessed and determined by the Defense Intelligence Agency.

(5) The term "weaponization" means incorporation into usable ordnance or other militarily useful means of delivery.

TITLE III—OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

Subtitle A—Authorizations of Appropriations

SEC. 301. OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE FUNDING.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for expenses, not otherwise provided for, for operation and maintenance in amounts as follows:

(1) For the Army, $14,191,715,000.

(2) For the Navy, $20,371,281,000.

(3) For the Marine Corps, $1,453,515,000.

(4) For the Air Force, $16,876,477,000.

(5) For the Defense Agencies, $8,384,605,000.

(6) For the Army Reserve, $1,033,773,000.

(7) For the Naval Reserve, $878,792,000.

(8) For the Marine Corps Reserve, $74,821,000.

(9) For the Air Force Reserve, $1,213,887,000.

(10) For the Army National Guard, $2,251,213,000.

(11) For the Air National Guard, $2,512,475,000.

(12) For the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, $2,700,000.

(13) For the Defense Inspector General, $125,500,000.

(14) For Drug Interdiction and Counter-Drug Activities, Defense, $1,263,400,000.

(15) For the Court of Military Appeals, $5,893,000.

(16) For Environmental Restoration, Defense, $1,513,200,000

(17) For Humanitarian Assistance, $25,000,000.

(18) For the Defense Health Program, $9,507,072,000.

(19) For support for the 1996 Summer Olympics, $2,000,000.

(20) For support for the 1993 World University Games, $6,000,000.

(21) For support for the 1994 World Cup Games, $9,000,000.

SEC. 302. WORKING CAPITAL FUNDS.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for providing capital for the Defense Business Operations Fund, $1,123,800,000.

SEC. 303. ARMED FORCES RETIREMENT HOME.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 from the Armed Forces Retirement Home Trust Fund the sum of $62,728,000 for the operation of the Armed Forces Retirement Home, including the United States Soldiers' and Airmen's Home and the Naval Home.

SEC. 304. HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE.

(a) Purpose.—(1) Funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization in section 301(17) shall be available for the purposes of section 2551 of title 10, United States Code, including the transportation of humanitarian relief for the people of Afghanistan and Cambodia.

(2) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to section 301(17) for such purpose, not more than $3,000,000 shall be available for distribution of humanitarian relief supplies to displaced persons or refugees who are noncombatants, including those affiliated with the Cambodian non-Communist resistance, at or near the border between Thailand and Cambodia.

(b) Authority To Transfer Funds.—Under section 2551(b) of title 10, United States Code, the Secretary of Defense may transfer not more than $3,000,000 of the funds referred to in subsection (a)(1).

(c) Codification of Authority and Administrative Provisions.—(1) Chapter 151 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2551. Humanitarian assistance

"(a) Authorized Assistance.—To the extent provided in defense authorization Acts, funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for a fiscal year for humanitarian assistance shall be used for the purpose of providing transportation of humanitarian relief and for other humanitarian purposes worldwide.

"(b) Authority To Transfer Funds.—To the extent provided in defense authorization Acts for a fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense may transfer to the Secretary of State funds appropriated for the purpose of this section to provide for—

"(1) the payment of administrative costs incurred in providing the transportation described in subsection (a); and

"(2) the purchase or other acquisition of transportation assets for the distribution of humanitarian relief supplies in the country of destination.

"(c) Transportation of Humanitarian Relief.—(1) Transportation for humanitarian relief provided with funds appropriated for the purposes of this section shall be provided under the direction of the Secretary of State.

"(2) Transportation for humanitarian relief provided with funds appropriated for the purposes of this section shall be provided by the most economical commercial or military means available, unless the Secretary of State determines that it is in the national interest of the United States to provide transportation other than by the most economical means available. The means used to provide such transportation may include the use of aircraft and personnel of the reserve components of the armed forces.

"(d) Availability of Funds.—Funds appropriated for humanitarian assistance for the purposes of this section shall remain available until expended, to the extent provided in appropriation Acts.

"(e) Status Reports.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall submit (at the times specified in paragraph (2)) to the Committees on Armed Services and Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committees on Armed Services and Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives a report on the provision of humanitarian assistance pursuant to this section.

"(2)(A) Whenever there is enacted a defense authorization Act that contains an authorization of appropriations for humanitarian assistance, a report referred to in paragraph (1) shall be submitted as provided in that paragraph not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of that Act.

"(B) In addition to reports submitted as provided in subparagraph (A), a report shall be submitted under paragraph (1) not later than June 1 of each year.

"(3) Each report required by paragraph (1) shall cover all provisions of law, contained in defense authorization Acts, that authorize appropriations for humanitarian assistance to be available for the purposes of this section. A report submitted after all amounts appropriated pursuant to such a provision of law have been obligated shall not cover that provision of law.

"(4) Subject to paragraph (3), a report required by paragraph (1) shall contain (as of the date on which the report is submitted) the following information:

"(A) The total amount of funds obligated for humanitarian relief under this section.

"(B) The number of scheduled and completed flights for purposes of providing humanitarian relief under this section.

"(C) A description of any transfer (including to whom the transfer is made) of excess nonlethal supplies of the Department of Defense made available for humanitarian relief purposes under section 2547 of this title.

"(f) Report Regarding Relief for Unauthorized Countries.—In any case in which the Secretary of Defense provides for the transportation of humanitarian relief to a country to which the transportation of humanitarian relief has not been specifically authorized by law, the Secretary shall notify the Committees on Appropriations and on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Secretary's intention to transport humanitarian relief to that country. The notification shall be submitted not less than 15 days before the commencement of the transportation of the humanitarian relief to that country.

"(g) Definition.—In this section, the term 'defense authorization Act' means an Act that authorizes appropriations for one or more fiscal years for military activities of the Department of Defense, including the activities described in paragraph (7) of section 114(a) of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 151 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"2551. Humanitarian assistance.".

(d) Repeal of Superseded Reporting Requirement.—Section 304 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102–190; 105 Stat. 1333) is amended by striking out subsection (f).

SEC. 305. SUPPORT FOR THE 1994 WORLD CUP GAMES.

(a) Authority To Provide Support.—The Secretary of Defense may provide logistical support and personnel services in connection with the 1994 World Cup Games to be held in the United States.

(b) Pay and Nontravel-Related Allowances.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the costs for pay and nontravel-related allowances of members of the Armed Forces for the support and services referred to in subsection (a) may not be charged to appropriations made pursuant to the authorization in section 301(21).

(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply in the case of members of a reserve component called or ordered to active duty to provide logistical support and personnel services for the 1994 World Cup Games.

SEC. 306. TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

(a) Authority.—The Secretary of Defense, to the extent provided in appropriations Acts, may transfer funds as provided in this section during fiscal year 1993.

(b) From the Defense Business Operations Fund.—(1) Not more than $3,054,000,000 may be transferred from the Defense Business Operations Fund to appropriations for operations and maintenance for fiscal year 1993 in amounts as follows:

(A) For the Army, $2,229,000,000.

(B) For the Navy, $94,500,000.

(C) For the Marine Corps, $58,500,000.

(D) For the Air Force, $672,000,000.

(2) A transfer under this subsection may be made only—

(A) to the extent that the military department concerned has received credit on the books of the Defense Business Operations Fund for unneeded secondary items returned to the Fund by that military department; or

(B) if the Secretary of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees that the military department concerned has, to the greatest extent practicable, returned for credit on the books of the Defense Business Operations Fund all secondary items not needed by that military department that were under the control of such military department on October 1, 1992.

(c) FROM THE NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE TRANSACTION FUND.—Not more than $612,000,000 may be transferred from the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund to appropriations for operation and maintenance of Defense Agencies for fiscal year 1993.

(d) TREATMENT OF TRANSFERS.—Amounts transferred under this section—

(1) shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes and the same period as the amounts in the accounts to which transferred;

(2) shall be deemed to increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for the account to which the amount is transferred by an amount equal to the amount transferred; and

(3) may not be expended for an item that has been denied authorization of appropriations by Congress.

(e) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—An increase under subsection (d)(2) in an amount authorized to be appropriated is in addition to an increase in that amount that results from a transfer of an authorization of appropriations pursuant to section 1001.

Subtitle B—Environmental Provisions

SEC. 311. EVALUATION OF USE OF CHLOROFLUOROCARBONS AND HALONS BY THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) EVALUATION.—The Director of the Defense Logistics Agency shall evaluate the use of class I substances by the military departments and Defense Agencies. In carrying out the evaluation, the Director shall—

(1) determine the quantity of each class I substance that—

(A) is held in the inventory of each military department and Defense Agency on December 31, 1992;

(B) will be used by each military department and Defense Agency during 1992; and

(C) will be used by each military department and Defense Agency in each of 1993, 1994, and 1995;

(2) determine the quantity of each class I substance in the inventory of the military departments and Defense Agencies in each of 1993, 1994, and 1995 that can be reclaimed or recycled and reused by the military departments and Defense Agencies;

(3) determine the type and quantity of class I substances whose use will be critical to the missions of the military departments and Defense Agencies after 1995;

(4) determine the type and quantity of class I substances that must be stockpiled after 1995 in order to ensure the availability of such substances for the missions referred to in paragraph (3);

(5) review the plans, if any, to reclaim, recycle, reuse, and maintain the stockpile referred to in paragraph (4); and

(6) identify each specific site, facility, or vessel in connection with which the President will seek an exemption pursuant to section 604(f) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7671c(f)) to permit the continued production or use of class I substances, and the type and quantity of each class I substance that will be produced or used in connection with the site, facility, or vessel.

(b) REPORT.—The Director of the Defense Logistics Agency shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the status of the evaluation not later than April 1, 1993.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the term "class I substance" means any substance listed under section 602(a) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7671a(a)).

SEC. 312. REMOVAL OF REQUIREMENTS FOR USE OF OZONE-DEPLETING SUBSTANCES IN CERTAIN MILITARY PROCUREMENTS.

(a) PROHIBITION ON CONTRACTS REQUIRING USE OF OZONE-DEPLETING SUBSTANCES.—(1) No Department of Defense contract awarded, modified, amended, or extended on or after June 1, 1993, may include a specification or standard that requires the use of an ozone-depleting substance or that can be met only through the use of such a substance unless the inclusion of the specification or standard in the contract is approved by the senior acquisition official for the procurement covered by the contract. The senior acquisition official may grant the approval only if the senior acquisition official determines (based upon the certification of an appropriate technical representative of the official) that a suitable substitute for the ozone-depleting substance is not currently available.

(2) The senior acquisition official authorized to grant an approval under paragraph (1) shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense. A senior acquisition official may not delegate the authority provided in such paragraph.

(3) Beginning on October 1, 1993, each official who grants an approval authorized under paragraph (1) shall submit to the Secretary of Defense a quarterly report on all approvals granted during the quarter. The report shall include a brief description of the specifications or standards so approved.

(4) The Secretary shall promptly transmit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a compilation of the reports for each quarter that are submitted to the Secretary under paragraph (3). The Secretary shall transmit the compilation in classified and unclassified forms.

(b) COST RECOVERY.—In any case in which a Department of Defense contract is modified or a specification or standard for such a contract is waived at the request of a contractor in order to permit the contractor to use in the performance of the contract a substitute for an ozone-depleting substance or an alternative technology for a technology involving the use of an ozone-depleting substance, the Secretary of Defense may reimburse the contractor for the reasonable direct and indirect costs incurred by the contractor in the use of such substitute or alternative technology, including research and development costs, costs to justify and obtain the modification or waiver, and costs of converting to the use of the substitute substance or alternative technology for the performance of that contract. Reimbursements under this subsection shall be consistent with the Federal Acquisition Regulation.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "ozone-depleting substance" means any class I substance listed under section 602(a) of the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 7671a(a)).

SEC. 313. RISK SHARING IN ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION CONTRACTS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) AUTHORITY UNDER NATIONAL DEFENSE CONTRACTS PROVISIONS.—Environmental restoration activities at military installations and former military installations shall be deemed to be functions that facilitate the national defense under the provisions of Public Law 85-804 (50 U.S.C. 1431).

(b) REQUIREMENT FOR RISK SHARING.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of a military department shall ensure, when appropriate, that contracts entered into by the Secretary of a military department for environmental restoration activities at military installations and former military installations provide for the military department and the contractors, subcontractors, and sureties on the contracts (and subcontracts under such contracts) to share the risk of liability resulting from such activities.

(c) AUTHORITY FOR CONTRACT PROVISION.—To carry out the requirement in subsection (b), the Secretary of a military department shall—

(1) identify the proposed contracts for environmental restoration activities at military installations and former military installations, or the portions of such proposed contracts, for which it is advisable to provide for the indemnification of the contractors, subcontractors, or sureties on the contracts (and any subcontractors of such contractors or subcontractors);

(2) include in the solicitations for proposals or bids for such contracts a clear statement that the United States will provide such indemnification to such contractors, subcontractors, and sureties; and

(3) in the event that the Secretary enters into such contracts, provide such indemnification.

(d) IMPLEMENTATION.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall—

(1) prescribe regulations to carry out the requirements of this section; and

(2) submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a plan for the implementation of such requirements.

(e) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "military installation" has the meaning given such term in section 2687(e)(1) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 314. REQUIREMENT FOR IDENTIFICATION OF LAND ON WHICH NO HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES OR PETROLEUM PRODUCTS OR THEIR DERIVATIVES WERE STORED, RELEASED, OR DISPOSED OF.

Section 120(h) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9620(h)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) IDENTIFICATION OF UNCONTAMINATED PROPERTY.—(A) In the case of real property owned by the United States that is part of a military installation on which is located a site listed on the National Priority List and on which the United States plans to terminate military operations, the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States with jurisdiction over the property shall identify the real property on which neither hazardous substances nor petroleum products or their derivatives were stored for 1 year or more, are known to have been released, or were disposed of. Such identification shall be based on an investigation of the real property to determine or discover the presence or likely presence of a release or threatened release of any hazardous substance or any petroleum product and its derivative, including aviation fuel and motor oil, on the real property. The identification shall consist, at a minimum, of—

"(i) a completed preliminary assessment and site investigation; or

"(ii) a review of each of the following sources of information concerning the current and previous uses of the real property:

"(I) A detailed search of Federal Government records pertaining to the property.

"(II) The recorded chain of title documents regarding the real property.

"(III) Aerial photographs that may reflect prior uses of the real property and that are reasonably obtainable through State or local government agencies.

"(IV) A visual inspection of the real property and any buildings, structures, equipment, pipe, pipeline, or other improvements on the real property, and a visual inspection of properties immediately adjacent to the real property.

"(V) A physical inspection of property adjacent to the real property, to the extent permitted by owners or operators of such property.

"(VI) Reasonably obtainable Federal, State, and local government records of each adjacent facility where there has been a release of any hazardous substance or any petroleum product or its derivatives, including aviation fuel and motor oil, and which is likely to cause or contribute to a release or threatened release of any hazardous substance or any petroleum product or its derivatives, including aviation fuel and motor oil, on the real property.

"(VII) Interviews with current or former employees involved in operations on the real property.

Such identification shall also be based on sampling, if appropriate under the circumstances. The results of the identification shall be provided immediately to the Administrator and State and local government officials and made available to the public.

"(B) The identification required under subparagraph (A) shall not be complete until concurrence in the results of the identification is obtained from the Administrator and from the appropriate State official.

"(C) The identification required under subparagraph (A) shall be made not later than 18 months after the military installation is selected for closure pursuant to the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (10 U.S.C. 2687 note) or within 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, whichever is later. The concurrence from an appropriate State official required under subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to be obtained if, within 90 days after receiving a request for the concurrence, the State official has not acted (by either concurring or declining to concur) on the request for concurrence.

"(D) In the case of the sale of or transfer of title of any parcel of real property identified under subparagraph (A), the deed entered into for the sale or transfer of such property by the United States to any other person or entity shall contain—

"(i) a covenant warranting that any response action or corrective action found to be necessary as a result of the discovery, after the date of such sale or transfer, of previously unidentified hazardous substances or petroleum derivatives that were released or disposed of as a result of the actions of previous Federal Government operations, shall be conducted by the United States; and

"(ii) a clause granting the United States access to the property in any case in which a response action or corrective action is found to be necessary after such date at such property, or such access is necessary to carry out a response action or corrective action on adjoining or other property.

"(E) The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States with jurisdiction over the real property subject to this section may sell, lease, or otherwise transfer any right, title, or interest to the real property identified under subparagraph (A) without regard to whether the real property is or has been listed as a site on the National Priorities List.

"(F) Nothing in this paragraph shall affect, preclude, or otherwise impair the termination of Federal Government operations on real property owned by the United States.

"(G) In this paragraph, the term 'military installation' has the meaning given that term in section 2687(e)(1) of title 10, United States Code.".

SEC. 315. CLARIFICATION OF COVENANT WARRANTING THAT REMEDIAL ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN.

(a) CLARIFICATION.—Paragraph (3) of section 120(h) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9620(h)(3)) is amended by adding after the last sentence the following: "For purposes of subparagraph (B)(i), all remedial action described in such subparagraph has been taken if the construction and installation of an approved remedial design has been completed and the Administrator has determined that the remedy is operating properly and successfully. The carrying out of long-term pumping and treating, or operation and maintenance, after the Administrator has determined the remedy is operating properly and successfully, does not preclude the transfer of the property.".

(b) ACCESS TO PROPERTY.—Paragraph (3) of such section is further amended—

(1) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (B)(ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(2) by adding after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) a clause granting the United States access to the property in any case in which a response action is found to be necessary at such property after the date of such transfer, or such access is necessary to carry out a response action on adjoining or other property after such date.".

SEC. 316. REQUIREMENT TO NOTIFY STATES OF CERTAIN LEASES.

Section 120(h) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9620(h)), as amended by section 314, is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) NOTIFICATION OF STATES REGARDING CERTAIN LEASES.—In the case of real property owned by the United States and used as a military facility on which any hazardous substance or any petroleum product or its derivatives (including aviation fuel and motor oil) was stored for one year or more, is known to have been released, or was disposed of, and on which the United States plans to terminate military operations, the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States having jurisdiction over the property shall notify the State in which the property is located of any lease entered into by the United States that will encumber the property beyond the date of termination of operations on the property. Such notification shall be made to the State at least 90 days before entering into the lease and shall include the length of the lease, the name of the person to whom the property is leased, and a description of the uses that will be allowed under the lease of the property and buildings and other structures on the property.".

SEC. 317. INDEMNIFICATION OF TRANSFEREES OF CLOSING DEFENSE PROPERTY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (b), the Secretary of Defense shall hold harmless, defend, and indemnify in full the persons and entities described in paragraph (2) from and against all suits, claims, demands or actions, liabilities, judgments, and costs and other fees arising out of, or in any manner predicated upon, the release or threatened release of any hazardous substance or pollutant or contaminant as a result of Department of Defense activities at any military installation (or portion thereof) that is closed pursuant to a base closure law.

(2) The persons and entities described in this paragraph are the following:

(A) Any State (including any officer, agent, or employee of the State) that acquires ownership or control of any facility at a military installation (or any portion thereof) described in paragraph (1).

(B) Any political subdivision of a State (including any officer, agent, or employee of the State) that acquires such ownership or control.

(C) Any other person or entity that acquires such ownership or control.

(D) Any successor, assignee, transferee, lender, or lessee of a person or entity described in subparagraphs (A) through (C).

(b) EXCEPTION.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall not hold harmless, defend, or indemnify any person or entity described in subsection (a)(2) from any suit, claim, demand or action, liability, judgment, or cost or other fee arising out of a release or threatened release described in subsection (a)(1) to the extent that such person or entity (or any officer, agent, or employee of the entity) caused or contributed to such release or threatened release.

(2) No indemnification may be afforded under this provision which is not subject to and consistent with chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, including any procedural requirements or defense.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The terms "facility", "hazardous substance", "release", and "pollutant or contaminant" have the meanings given such terms under paragraphs (9), (14), (22), and (33) of section 101 of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980, respectively (42 U.S.C. 9601 (9), (14), (22), and (33)).

(2) The term "military installation" has the meaning given such term under section 2687(e)(1) of title 10, United States Code.

(3) The term "base closure law" means the following:

(A) The Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

(B) Title II of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

(C) Section 2687 of title 10, United States Code.

(D) Any provision of law authorizing the closure or realignment of a military installation enacted on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 318. PROHIBITION ON USE OF ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION FUNDS FOR PAYMENT OF FINES AND PENALTIES.

None of the funds appropriated for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 301(16) may be used for the payment of fines or penalties unless the act or omission for which a fine or penalty is imposed arises out of activities funded by that appropriation.

SEC. 319. MODIFICATION OF CONTRACT INDEMNIFICATION AUTHORITY.

(a) MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITY.—Subsection (a) of section 2354 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting "or any contract or contract under a program (including contracts for activities other than research and development) carried out under chapter 160 of this title," after "or both,".

(b) PAYMENT AUTHORITY.—Subsection (d)(2) of such section is amended by inserting "or for contracts or programs carried out under chapter 160 of this title, as the case may be," after "or both,".

SEC. 320. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO ISSUE SURETY BONDS FOR CERTAIN ENVIRONMENTAL PROGRAMS.

(a) TITLE 10.—Section 2701(j) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out "December 31, 1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1995".

(b) CERCLA.—Section 119 of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9619) is amended—

(1) in subsection (e)(2)(C), by striking out "January 1, 1993" and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1996,"; and

(2) in subsection (g)(5), by striking out "December 31, 1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1995".

SEC. 321. PROHIBITION ON THE PURCHASE OF SURETY BONDS AND OTHER GUARANTIES FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) PROHIBITION.—No funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993 may be obligated or expended for the purchase of surety bonds or other guaranties of financial responsibility in order to guarantee the performance of any direct function of the Department of Defense.

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 335 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102–190; 105 Stat. 1342) is amended by striking out "or fiscal year 1993".

SEC. 322. LEGACY RESOURCE MANAGEMENT FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the Legacy Fellowship Program in Natural and Cultural Resource Management (in this section referred to as the "Legacy Fellowship Program"). The Legacy Fellowship Program is a part of the Legacy Resource Management Program established pursuant to section 8120 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1991 (Public Law 101–511; 104 Stat. 1905).

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the Legacy Fellowship Program are as follows:

(1) To support the purposes of the Legacy Resource Management Program set forth in section 8120(b) of such Act.

(2) To provide training to civilian personnel and military personnel in the management of natural and cultural resources.

(c) FELLOWS.—(1) The Legacy Fellowship Program shall be composed of not less than 3 fellows who shall be appointed by the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Environment. Such fellows shall be appointed from among qualified persons in the military and civilian sectors.

(2)(A) Each fellow who is an officer or employee of the United States shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for the services as an officer or employee of the United States. Any such service shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(B) The Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense shall fix (in an amount the Deputy Assistant Secretary determines appropriate) the compensation of the fellows, if any, who are not officers or employees of the United States. Such fellows shall not be considered employees of the Federal Government other than for purposes of chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code.

(3) Fellows shall serve for a term of one year and may be reappointed for an additional term of one year.

(4) The Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense shall assign the fellows to an agency, office, or other entity (other than the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Environment) that is responsible for the implementation of the Legacy Resource Management Program in the Department of Defense. Upon assignment, the fellow shall assist the agency, office, or entity in carrying out the purposes of the Legacy Resource Management Program.

(d) FUNDING.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated in fiscal year 1993 for the Department of Defense and made available for the Legacy Resource Management Program, $100,000 may be used for the Legacy Fellowship Program. Such funds shall be available for obligation without fiscal year limitation.

SEC. 323. SUPPLEMENTAL AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1992.

In addition to the amounts otherwise authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years 1992 and 1993 in this Act there is authorized to be appropriated for such fiscal years—

(1) for Environmental Restoration, Defense, the total amount of $447,500,000; and

(2) for the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990 the total amount of $35,000,000.

Subtitle C—Defense Economic Diversification, Conversion, and Stabilization

SEC. 331. REVISION OF AUTHORITIES RELATING TO THE ECONOMIC ADJUSTMENT COMMITTEE.

(a) PERMANENT CHAIRMAN.—Subsection (b) of section 4004 of the Defense Economic Diversification, Conversion, and Stabilization Act of 1990 (division D of Public Law 101–510; 10 U.S.C. 2391 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) CHAIRMAN.—The Secretary of Defense shall be the Chairman of the Committee.".

(b) EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.—Section 4004 of such Act is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(2) by adding after subsection (b) the following new subsection (c):

"(c) EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.—The Chairman shall establish an Executive Council of the Committee from appropriate representatives of the Department of Defense, the Department of Commerce, the Department of Labor, and the Small Business Administration. Under the direction of the Chairman, the Executive Council shall develop policies and procedures to ensure that communities, businesses, and workers substantially and seriously affected by reductions in defense expenditures are advised of the assistance available to such communities, businesses, and workers under programs administered by such departments and that agency.".

(c) NOTIFICATION OF ECONOMIC ADJUSTMENT PLANNING.—Section 4101(a) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out paragraph (1);

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) as paragraphs (1) and (2), respectively;

(3) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (1) (as so redesignated);

(4) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (2) (as so redesignated) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or"; and

(5) by adding at the end the following new paragraph (3):

"(3) the lack of any follow-on contracts or other defense-related contract activity.".

SEC. 332. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR CERTAIN DEFENSE STABILIZATION ACTIVITIES.

(a) ASSISTANCE THROUGH THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION.—Section 4103(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101–510; 10 U.S.C. 2391 note) is amended by inserting "and for fiscal year 1993 $150,000,000" after "$50,000,000".

(b) DEFENSE CONVERSION ADJUSTMENT.—Section 4203(a) of such Act (10 U.S.C. 2391 note) is amended by inserting "and $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1993" after "fiscal year 1991".

SEC. 333. ASSISTANCE TO LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES THAT BENEFIT DEPENDENTS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES.

(a) ASSISTANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall provide financial assistance to local educational agencies in States as provided in this section.

(b) SCHOOLS WITH SIGNIFICANT NUMBERS OF MILITARY DEPENDENT STUDENTS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall provide financial assistance to an eligible local educational agency if, without such assistance, that agency will be unable (as determined by the Secretary of Defense in consultation with the Secretary of Education) to provide the students in the schools of the agency with a level of education that is equivalent to the minimum level of education available in the schools of the other local educational agencies in the same State.

(2) A local educational agency is eligible for assistance under this subsection for a fiscal year if—

(A) at least 30 percent (as rounded to the nearest whole percent) of the students in average daily attendance in the schools of that agency in that fiscal year are military dependent students described in section 3(a) or 3(b) of Public Law 81–874 (20 U.S.C. 238(a)); or

(B) by reason of a consolidation or reorganization of local educational agencies, the local educational agency is a successor of a local educational agency that, for fiscal year 1992—

(i) was eligible to receive payments in accordance with Department of Defense Instruction 1342.18, dated June 3, 1991; and

(ii) satisfied the requirement in subparagraph (A).

(c) ADJUSTMENT PAYMENTS RELATED TO BASE CLOSURES AND REALIGNMENTS.—To assist communities in making adjustments resulting from reductions in the size of the Armed Forces, the Secretary of Defense shall transfer to the Secretary of Education funds to make payments to local educational agencies that are entitled to receive under section 3 of Public Law 81–874 (20 U.S.C. 238) payments adjusted in accordance with subsection (e) of such section by reason of conditions described in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of paragraph (1) of such subsection that result from closures and realignments of military installations.

(d) REPORT ON IMPACT OF BASE CLOSURES ON EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.—(1) Not later than February 15 of each of 1993, 1994, and 1995, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall submit to Congress a report on the local educational agencies affected by the closures and realignment of military installations and by redeployments of members of the Armed Forces.

(2) Each report shall contain the following:

(A) The number of dependent children of members of the Armed Forces or civilian employees of the Department of Defense who entered the schools of the local educational agencies during the preceding school year as a result of closures, realignments, or redeployments.

(B) The number of dependent children of such members or employees who withdrew from the schools of the local educational agencies during that school year as a result of closures, realignments, or redeployments.

(C) The amounts paid to the local educational agencies during that year under Public Law 81-874 (20 U.S.C. 236 et seq.) or any other provision of law authorizing the payment of financial assistance to local communities or local educational agencies on the basis of the presence of dependent children of such members or employees in such communities and in the schools of such agencies.

(D) The projected transfers of such members and employees in connection with closures, realignments, and redeployments during the 12-month period beginning on the date of the report, including—

(i) the installations to be closed or realigned;

(ii) the installations to which personnel will be transferred as a result of closures, realignments, and redeployments; and

(iii) the effects of such transfers on the number of dependent children who will be included in determinations with respect to the payment of funds to each affected local educational agency under subsections (a) and (b) of section 3 of Public Law 81-874 (20 U.S.C. 238).

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "local education agency" has the meaning given that term in section 1471(12) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2891(12)).

(2) The term "State" has the meaning given that term in section 3(d)(3)(D)(i) of Public Law 81-874 (20 U.S.C. 238(d)(3)(D)(i)).

(3) The term "military dependent student" means a student that is a dependent child of a member of the Armed Forces.

(f) FUNDING.—Of the amounts appropriated for the Department of Defense for operation and maintenance in fiscal year 1993 pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 301—

(1) $50,000,000 shall be available for providing assistance to local educational agencies under subsection (b); and

(2) $8,000,000 shall be available for making payments to local educational agencies under subsection (c).

Subtitle D—Department of Defense Civilian Personnel Transition Initiatives

SEC. 341. REEMPLOYMENT IN THE COMPETITIVE SERVICE.

(a) REEMPLOYMENT AFTER REDUCTION IN FORCE.—Subchapter I of chapter 35 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 3505. Reemployment after reduction in force for certain employees

"(a) For purposes of this section, the term—

"(1) 'employee' means an employee of the Department of Defense, including each military department, serving under an appointment without time limitation, who has been currently employed for a continuous period of at least 12 months; and

"(2) 'Secretary concerned' means—

"(A) the Secretary of the Army with respect to employees of the Department of the Army;

"(B) the Secretary of the Navy with respect to employees of the Department of the Navy;

"(C) the Secretary of the Air Force with respect to employees of the Department of the Air Force; and

"(D) the Secretary of Defense with respect to all other employees of the Department of Defense.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (c), if the Secretary concerned separates an employee from employment under regulations for a reduction in force under section 3502(a) of this title, and within 2 years after the date of such separation—

"(1) seeks to employ a person for a position in the competitive area which was the employee's competitive area at the time of the separation and the separated employee is qualified for appointment to that position, the Secretary shall offer the separated employee reemployment in such position before offering employment to any other person for such position; or

"(2) seeks to employ a person for the position from which such employee was separated or to perform the duties performed by such employee, the Secretary may not employ a contract employee or a temporary employee for such position or to perform the duties which were performed by the separated employee.

"(c) If the Secretary concerned separates employees from employment in positions in a competitive area under regulations for a reduction in force under section 3502(a) of this title, and within 2 years after the date of the last such separation seeks to employ persons in all or some of such positions, but not in a sufficient number to result in the reemployment of all such separated employees, the Secretary, before offering employment in any of those positions to any other persons, shall offer such separated employees (if qualified) reemployment in accordance with sections 3309 through 3317 of this title (and any other provision of law relating to the employment of preference eligibles) and on the basis of seniority in Federal Service.".

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 35 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3504 the following:

"3505. Reemployment after reduction in force for certain employees.".

SEC. 342. REEMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE.

(a) REQUIREMENT THAT A GOVERNMENT-WIDE LIST OF VACANT POSITIONS BE MAINTAINED.—(1)(A) Subchapter I of chapter 33 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 3329. Government-wide list of vacant positions

"(a) For the purpose of this section, the term 'agency' means an Executive agency, excluding the General Accounting Office and any agency (or unit thereof) whose principal function is the conduct of foreign intelligence or counterintelligence activities, as determined by the President.

"(b) The Office of Personnel Management shall establish and keep current a comprehensive list of all announcements of vacant positions in the competitive service within each agency that are to be filled by appointment for more than one year and for which applications are being (or will soon be) accepted from outside the agency's work force.

"(c) Included for any position listed shall be—

"(1) a brief description of the position, including its title, tenure, location, and rate of pay;

"(2) application procedures, including the period within which applications may be submitted and a contact point for additional information; and

"(3) any other information which the Office considers appropriate.

"(d) The list shall be available to members of the public.

"(e) The Office shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this section. Any requirement under this section that agencies notify the Office as to the availability of any vacant positions shall be designed so as to avoid any duplication of information otherwise required to be furnished under section 3327 of this title or any other provision of law.".

(B) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 33 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3328 the following:

"3329. Government-wide list of vacant positions.".

(2) No later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall begin providing the information on the list referred to in section 3329 of title 5, United States Code (as added by this subsection) by means of a toll-free telephone number (commonly referred to as an 800 number).

(b) TEMPORARY MEASURES TO FACILITATE REEMPLOYMENT OF CERTAIN DISPLACED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—(1) For the purpose of this subsection—

(A) the term "agency" means an Executive agency (as defined by section 105 of title 5, United States Code), excluding the General Accounting Office and the Department of Defense; and

(B) the term "displaced employee" means any individual who is—

(i) an employee of the Department of Defense who has been given specific notice that such employee is to be separated due to a reduction in force; or

(ii) a former employee of the Department of Defense who was involuntarily separated therefrom due to a reduction in force.

(2) In accordance with regulations which the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe, consistent with otherwise applicable provisions of law, an agency shall, in filling a vacant position for which a qualified displaced employee has applied in timely fashion, give full consideration to the application of the displaced employee before selecting any applicant for employment from outside the agency for the position.

(3) A displaced employee is entitled to consideration in accordance with this subsection for the 12-month period beginning on the date such employee receives the specific notice referred to in paragraph (1)(B)(i), except that, if the employee is separated pursuant to such notice, the right to such consideration shall continue through the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of separation.

(4)(A) This subsection shall apply to any individual who—

(i) became a displaced employee within the 12-month period ending immediately before the date of enactment of this Act; or

(ii) becomes a displaced employee on or after the date of enactment of this Act and before October 1, 1997.

(B) In the case of a displaced employee described in subparagraph (A)(i), for purposes of computing any period of time under paragraph (3), the date of the specific notice described in paragraph (1)(B)(i) (or, if the employee was separated as described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) before the date of enactment of this Act, the date of separation) shall be deemed to have occurred on such date of enactment.

(C) Nothing in this subsection shall be considered to apply with respect to any position—

(i) which has been filled as of the date of enactment of this Act; or

(ii) which has been excepted from the competitive service because of its confidential, policy-determining, policy-making or policy-advocating character.

SEC. 343. REDUCTION-IN-FORCE NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3502 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d)(1) Except as provided in subsection (e), an employee may not be released from employment due to a reduction in force, unless—

"(A) such employee and such employee's exclusive representative for collective-bargaining purposes (if any) are given written notice, in conformance with the requirements of paragraph (2), at least 60 days before such employee is so released; and

"(B) if the reduction in force would involve the separation of a significant number of employees, the requirements of paragraph (3) are met at least 60 days before any employee is so released.

"(2) Any notice under paragraph (1)(A) shall include—

"(A) the personnel action to be taken with respect to the employee involved;

"(B) the effective date of the action;

"(C) a description of the procedures applicable in identifying employees for release;

"(D) the employee's ranking relative to other competing employees, and how that ranking was determined; and

"(E) a description of any appeal or other rights which may be available to the employee.

"(3) Notice under paragraph (1)(B)—

"(A) shall be given to—

"(i) the appropriate State dislocated worker unit or units (referred to in section 311(b)(2) of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1661(b)(2)); and

"(ii) the chief elected official of such unit or each of such units of local government as may be appropriate; and

"(B) shall consist of written notification as to—

"(i) the number of employees to be separated from service due to the reduction in force (broken down by geographic area or on such other basis as may be required under the regulations prescribed pursuant to paragraph (4));

"(ii) when those separations shall occur; and

"(iii) any other matter which might facilitate the delivery of rapid response assistance or other services under the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.).

"(4) The Office shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this subsection. The Office shall consult with the Secretary of Labor on matters relating to the Job Training Partnership Act.

"(e)(1) Subject to paragraph (3), upon request submitted under paragraph (2), the President may, in writing, shorten the period of advance notice required under subsection (d)(1) (A) and (B), with respect to a particular reduction in force, if necessary because of circumstances not reasonably foreseeable.

"(2) A request to shorten notice periods shall be submitted to the President by the head of the agency involved and shall indicate the reduction in force to which the request pertains, the number of days by which the agency head requests that the periods be shortened, and the reasons why the request is necessary.

"(3) No notice period may be shortened to less than 30 days under this subsection.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to any personnel action taking effect on or after the last day of the 90-day period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 344. ALLEVIATION OF ADVERSE EFFECTS OF BASE CLOSURES ON EMPLOYEES AT THE BASE.

(a) 1990 CLOSURE AND REALIGNMENT ACT.—Section 2905 of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101–510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) ASSISTANCE FOR ADVERSELY AFFECTED EMPLOYEES.—(1) Unless a civilian employee of the Department of Defense employed at a military installation being closed or realigned under this part earlier receives an actual notice of termination, the date determined by the Secretary of Defense under paragraph (2) shall be considered to be the date of notice of termination to the employee for purposes of determining the employee's eligibility for assistance under the defense conversion adjustment program under section 325 of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1662d).

"(2) The date referred to in paragraph (1) is the date that is 12 months before the date on which the military installation is to be closed or the realignment of the installation is to be completed, as the case may be.".

(b) 1988 CLOSURE AND REALIGNMENT ACT.—Section 204 of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (title II of Public Law 100–526; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) ASSISTANCE FOR ADVERSELY AFFECTED EMPLOYEES.—(1) Unless a civilian employee of the Department of Defense employed at a military installation being closed or realigned under this part earlier receives an actual notice of termination, the date determined by the Secretary of Defense under paragraph (2) shall be considered to be the date of notice of termination to the employee for purposes of determining the employee's eligibility for assistance under the defense conversion adjustment program under section 325 of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1662d).

"(2) The date referred to in paragraph (1) is the date that is 12 months before the date on which the military installation is to be closed or the realignment of the installation is to be completed, as the case may be.".

SEC. 345. OTHER EMPLOYEE ASSISTANCE.

(a) DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE EMPLOYEE SEPARATION BENEFITS.—(1) Subchapter IX of chapter 55 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§5597. Employee separation benefits for certain employees

"(a) For purposes of this section, the term—

"(1) 'employee' means an employee of the Department of Defense, including each military department, serving under an appointment without time limitation who has been currently employed for a continuous period of at least 12 months; and

"(2) 'Secretary concerned' means—

"(A) the Secretary of the Army with respect to an employee of the Department of the Army;

"(B) the Secretary of the Navy with respect to an employee of the Department of the Navy;

"(C) the Secretary of the Air Force with respect to an employee of the Department of the Air Force; and

"(D) the Secretary of Defense with respect to all other employees of the Department of Defense.

"(b) The Secretary concerned may authorize the payment of a civilian employee separation benefit to an employee who separates voluntarily from employment, by retirement or resignation, in accordance with the provisions of this section and any regulations prescribed by such Secretary.

"(c) Subject to subsection (g), a civilian employee separation benefit under this section may be offered to—

"(1) all employees at an installation or organization of the Department of Defense that is to be closed or reduced in force;

"(2) all employees in one or more occupational series or grades, or combinations or subdivisions thereof, at an installation or organization of the Department of Defense, when the Secretary concerned determines that the voluntary separation of such employee would—

"(A) increase placement opportunities for other employees affected by the closure or reorganization of installations or organizations of the Department of Defense;

"(B) reduce the need for involuntary separations as a result of such closure or reorganization; or

"(C) otherwise serve the personnel management needs of the Department of Defense.

"(d) An offer of a civilian employee separation benefit under this section shall be limited to a specific period of time, and the benefit shall be payable only to an employee whose voluntary separation, by resignation, or retirement, is effective during such period.

"(e) A civilian employee separation benefit under this section shall be paid in a lump sum, and shall be the lesser of—

"(1) an amount equal to the amount the employee would be entitled to receive under section 5595(c) of this title if the employee were entitled to payment under such section; or

"(2) $20,000.

"(f)(1) The Secretary concerned shall take such actions as may be necessary to ensure that any employee to whom a civilian employee separation benefit is offered under this section is able to consider such offer freely without duress or coercion of any kind.

"(2) A declination of an offer of a civilian employee separation benefit under this section shall not have any effect on an employee's rights and benefits under any other provision of law.

"(g) An employee who retires entitled to an immediate annuity under section 8336 or 8412 of this title is not eligible to receive a separation benefit under this section.

"(h) The Secretary concerned may prescribe such regulations as he determines necessary for the administration of this section.

"(i) No civilian employee separation benefit may be paid under this section with respect to a separation occurring after December 31, 1997.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 55 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 5596 the following:

"5597. Employee separation benefits for certain employees.".

(b) RESTORATION OF CERTAIN LEAVE.—Section 6304(d) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) For the purpose of this subsection, the closure of an installation of the Department of Defense, during the period beginning on October 1, 1992, and ending on December 31, 1997, shall be deemed to create an exigency of the public business and any leave that is lost by an employee of such installation by operation of this section (regardless of whether such leave was scheduled) shall be restored to the employee and shall be credited and available in accordance with paragraph (2).".

(c) REPORT.—At the end of each of fiscal year 1993 through fiscal year 1998, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the President, the Congress, and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management a report on the effectiveness and costs of carrying out the amendments made by this section.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall be effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 346. CONTINUED HEALTH BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 8905a(d) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(A) by striking "An individual" and inserting "Except as provided in paragraph (4), an individual";

(2) in paragraph (2) by striking "in accordance with paragraph (1))" and inserting "in accordance with paragraph (1) or (4), as the case may be)"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(4)(A) If the basis for continued coverage under this section is an involuntary separation from a position in or under the Department of Defense due to a reduction in force—

"(i) the individual shall be liable for not more than the employee contributions referred to in paragraph (1)(A)(i); and

"(ii) the agency which last employed the individual shall pay the remaining portion of the amount required under paragraph (1)(A).

"(B) This paragraph shall apply with respect to any individual whose continued coverage is based on a separation occurring on or after the date of enactment of this paragraph and before—

"(i) October 1, 1997; or

"(ii) February 1, 1998, if specific notice of such separation was given to such individual before October 1, 1997.".

(b) SOURCE OF PAYMENTS.—Any amount which becomes payable by an agency as a result of the enactment of subsection (a) shall be paid out of funds or appropriations available for salaries and expenses of such agency.

SEC. 347. THRIFT SAVINGS PLAN BENEFITS OF EMPLOYEES SEPARATED BY A REDUCTION IN FORCE.

(a) BENEFITS.—Section 8433(b) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting "any employee who separates from Government employment pursuant to regulations under section 3502(a) of this title or procedures under section 3595(a) of this title in a reduction in force," after "chapter 81 of this title,".

(b) PROTECTIONS FOR SPOUSES.—Section 8435(c)(2)(A) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting ", or who separates from Government employment pursuant to regulations under section 3502(a) of this title or procedures under section 3595(a) of this title in a reduction in force," after "8451 of this title".

SEC. 348. SKILL TRAINING PROGRAMS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) AUTHORITY.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretaries of the military departments, and the Secretary of Defense with respect to employees of Department of Defense other than employees of the military departments, may provide not more than one year of training in training facilities of the Department to civilian employees of the Department of Defense who are separated from employment as a result of a reduction in force or a closure or realignment of a military installation.

(2) Training may be provided under this subsection during the period beginning on October 1, 1992, and ending on September 30, 1995.

(b) REGISTER OF TRAINING PROGRAMS.—Not later than February 1, 1993, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, shall publish a register of the skill training programs carried out by the Department of Defense. The register shall—

(1) include a list of the skill training programs;

(2) provide information on the location of such programs, the training provided under such programs, and the number of persons who may receive training under such programs; and

(3) identify the programs that provide training in skills that are useful to employees in the civilian work force.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

SEC. 351. LIMITATIONS ON THE USE OF DEFENSE BUSINESS OPERATIONS FUND.

(a) EXTENSION OF LIMITATION ON PERIOD OF MANAGEMENT.—Section 316(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102–190; 105 Stat. 1338; 10 U.S.C. 2208 note) is amended by striking out "the date of the enactment of this Act and ending on April 15, 1993" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 5, 1991, and ending on April 15, 1994".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 316(a) of such Act is further amended by inserting "(in this section referred to as the 'Fund')" before the period at the end of the first sentence.

(2) Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 316(b) of such Act are amended by striking out "the date of the enactment of this Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 5, 1991".

SEC. 352. LIMITATION ON OBLIGATIONS AGAINST DEFENSE BUSINESS OPERATIONS FUND.

(a) LIMITATION.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may not incur obligations against the supply management divisions of the Defense Business Operations Fund of the Department of Defense during fiscal year 1993 in a total amount in excess of 65 percent of the total amount derived from sales from such divisions during that fiscal year.

(2) For purposes of determining the amount of obligations incurred against, and sales from, such divisions during fiscal year 1993, the Secretary shall exclude obligations and sales for fuel, commissary and subsistence items, retail operations, repair of equipment, and the cost of operations.

(b) EXCEPTION.—The Secretary of Defense may waive the limitation described in subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that such waiver is critical to the national security of the United States. The Secretary shall immediately notify Congress of any such waiver and the reasons for such waiver.

SEC. 353. ANNUAL REPORT ON SECURITY AND CONTROL OF SUPPLIES.

(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—Subsection (a) of section 2891 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out "for each of fiscal years 1989, 1990, and 1991" and inserting in lieu thereof "for each of fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994".

SEC. 355. PROMOTION OF CIVILIAN MARKSMANSHIP.

(a) AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY.—(1) Section 4308 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 4308. Promotion of civilian marksmanship: authority of the Secretary of the Army

"(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of the Army, under regulations approved by him upon the recommendation of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, shall provide for—

"(A) the operation and maintenance of indoor and outdoor rifle ranges and their accessories and appliances;

"(B) the instruction of citizens of the United States in marksmanship, and the employment of necessary instructors for that purpose;

"(C) the promotion of practice in the use of rifled arms, the maintenance and management of matches or competitions in the use of those arms, and the issue (without cost to the United States) of the arms, ammunition, targets, and other supplies and appliances necessary for those purposes to gun clubs under the direction of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice that provide training in the use of rifled arms to youth, the Boy Scouts of America, 4–H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, and other youth-oriented organizations for training and competition;

"(D) the award to competitors of trophies, prizes, badges, and other insignia;

"(E) the loan or sale at fair market value of caliber .30 rifles, caliber .22 rifles, and air rifles, and the sale of ammunition at fair market value, to gun clubs that—

"(i) are under the direction of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice; and

"(ii) provide training in the use of rifled arms;

"(F) the sale at fair market value of arms (including surplus M–1 Garand rifles), ammunition, targets, and other supplies and appliances necessary for target practice to citizens of the United States over 18 years of age who are members of a gun club under the direction of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice;

"(G) the maintenance of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, including provision for its necessary expenses and those of its members and for the Board's expenses incidental to the conduct of the Board's annual meetings;

"(H) the procurement of necessary supplies, appliances, trophies, prizes, badges, and other insignia, clerical and other services, and labor; and

"(I) the transportation of employees, instructors, and civilians to give or to receive instruction or to assist or engage in practice in the use of rifled arms, and the transportation and subsistence, or an allowance instead of subsistence, of members of teams authorized by the Secretary to participate in matches or competitions in the use of rifled arms.

"(2) Under the authority of paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary of the Army may issue for use in training and marksmanship competitions caliber .22 ammunition and caliber .30 ammunition to gun clubs that—

"(A) are under the direction of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice; and

"(B) provide training in the use of rifled arms to youth or to such youth-oriented organizations as the Boy Scouts of America, 4-H clubs, and Future Farmers of America.

"(b) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may—

"(1) provide personnel services (in addition to pay and nontravel-related allowances for members of the armed forces) in carrying out the Civilian Marksmanship Program; and

"(2) impose reasonable fees for persons and gun clubs participating in any program conducted by the Secretary for the promotion of marksmanship among civilians.

"(c) AMOUNTS COLLECTED.—Amounts collected by the Secretary under the Civilian Marksmanship Program, including the proceeds from the sale of arms, ammunition, targets, and other supplies and appliances under subsection (a), shall be credited to the appropriation available for the support of the Civilian Marksmanship Program and shall be available to carry out such program.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to pay the personnel costs and other expenses of the Civilian Marksmanship Program in such fiscal year to the extent that the amounts available out of the revenues collected under the program are insufficient to defray such costs and expenses.

"(e) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term 'Civilian Marksmanship Program' means the program carried out by the Secretary of the Army under this section and sections 4310 through 4312 of this title and includes the National Matches and small-arms firing schools referred to in section 4312 of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 401 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 4308 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4308. Promotion of civilian marksmanship: authority of the Secretary of the Army.".

(b) AVAILABILITY OF RIFLE RANGES FOR ARMED FORCES AND CIVILIANS.—(1) Section 4309 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§4309. Rifle ranges: availability for use by members and civilians

"(a) RANGES AVAILABLE.—All rifle ranges constructed in whole or in part with funds provided by the United States may be used by members of the armed forces and by persons capable of bearing arms.

"(b) MILITARY RANGES.—(1) In the case of a rifle range referred to in subsection (a) that is located on a military installation, the Secretary concerned may establish reasonable fees for the use by civilians of that rifle range to cover the material and supply costs incurred by the armed forces to make that rifle range available to civilians.

"(2) Fees collected pursuant to paragraph (1) in connection with the use of a rifle range shall be credited to the appropriation available for the operation and maintenance of that rifle range and shall be available for the operation and maintenance of that rifle range.

"(3) Use of a rifle range referred to in paragraph (1) by civilians may not interfere with the use of the range by members of the armed forces.

"(c) REGULATIONS.—Regulations to carry out this section with respect to a rifle range shall be prescribed, subject to the approval of the Secretary concerned, by the authorities controlling the rifle range.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 401 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 4309 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4309. Rifle ranges: availability for use by members and civilians.".

(c) PAYMENT OF EXPENSES FOR NATIONAL MATCH COMPETITORS.—(1) Section 4313 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§4313. National matches and small-arms school: expenses

"(a) JUNIOR COMPETITORS.—(1) Junior competitors at National Matches, small-arms firing schools, and competitions in connection with National Matches and special clinics under section 4312 of this title may be paid a subsistence allowance in such amount as the Secretary of the Army shall prescribe.

"(2) A junior competitor referred to in paragraph (1) may be paid a travel allowance, in such amount as the Secretary of the Army shall prescribe, instead of travel expenses and subsistence while traveling. The travel allowance for the return trip may be paid in advance.

"(3) For the purposes of this subsection, a junior competitor is a competitor who is under 18 years of age or is a member of a gun club organized for the students of a college or university.

"(b) RESERVE COMPONENT PERSONNEL.—Appropriated funds available for the Civilian Marksmanship Program (as defined in section 4308 of this title) may be used to pay the personnel costs and travel and per diem expenses of a member of a reserve component for any active duty performed by the member in a fiscal year in support of the program after the end of that member's scheduled period of annual training for that fiscal year.".

(2) The item relating to section 4313 in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 401 of such title is amended by striking out "rifle".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—(1) This section and the amendments made by this section shall take effect on the earlier of—

(A) the date of the enactment of this Act; or

(B) October 1, 1992.

(2) If under paragraph (1) the amendments made by this section take effect before October 1, 1992, the amendments made by section 328 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 104 Stat. 1533) shall not take effect.

(3) If under paragraph (1) the amendments made by this section take effect on October 1, 1992, the amendments made by this section shall be considered executed immediately following the amendments made by section 328 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 104 Stat. 1533).

(B) by striking out "from such country (before the computation of offsetting balances)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(before the computation of offsetting balances) with a country which is not a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but with which the United States has one or more acquisition or cross-servicing agreements".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act and shall apply to acquisitions of logistics support, supplies, and services under chapter 138 of title 10, United States Code, that are initiated on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 363. PREFERENCE FOR PROCUREMENT OF ENERGY EFFICIENT ELECTRIC EQUIPMENT.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR PREFERENCE.—(1)(A) Chapter 141 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2410c. Preference for energy efficient electric equipment

"(a) When cost effective, in establishing a new requirement for electric equipment referred to in subsection (b) and in procuring electric equipment referred to in that subsection, the Secretary of a military department or the head of a Defense Agency, as the case may be, shall provide a preference for the procurement of the most energy efficient electric equipment available that meets the requirement or the need for the procurement, as the case may be.

"(b) Subsection (a) applies to the following electric equipment:

"(1) Electric lamps.

"(2) Electric ballasts.

"(3) Electric motors.

"(4) Electric refrigeration equipment.".

(B) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding after the item relating to section 2410b the following new item:

"2410c. Preference for energy efficient electric equipment.".

(2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply to procurements for which solicitations are issued on or after the date that is 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) ELECTRIC LIGHTING DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a demonstration program for using energy efficient electric lighting equipment.

(2) The Secretary shall designate 50 facilities owned or leased by the Department of Defense for participation in the demonstration program under this subsection.

(3) The head of each facility designated pursuant to paragraph (2) and the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency shall jointly audit the electric lighting equipment at the facility in order—

(A) to identify any potential improvements that would increase the energy efficiency of electric lighting at that facility; and

(B) to determine the costs of, and the savings that would result from, such improvements.

(4) Except as provided in subsection (d)(4), on the basis of the results of the audit the head of the facility shall promptly convert to the use of electric lighting equipment at the facility that is more energy efficient than the existing electric lighting equipment to the extent that the conversion is cost effective.

(5) Energy efficient electric lighting equipment used under the demonstration program may include compact fluorescent lamps, energy efficient electric ballasts and fixtures, and other energy efficient electric lighting equipment.

(c) REFRIGERATION EQUIPMENT DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a demonstration program for using energy efficient refrigeration equipment.

(2) The Secretary shall designate 50 facilities owned or operated by the Department of Defense for participation in the demonstration program under this subsection.

(3) The head of each facility designated pursuant to paragraph (2) and the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency shall jointly audit the refrigeration equipment at the facility in order—

(A) to identify any potential improvements that would increase the energy efficiency of the refrigeration equipment at that facility; and

(B) to determine the costs of, and the savings that would result from, such improvements.

(4) Except as provided in subsection (d)(4), on the basis of the results of the audit the head of the facility shall promptly convert to the use of refrigeration equipment at the facility that is more energy efficient than the existing refrigeration equipment to the extent that the conversion is cost effective.

(d) GENERAL PROVISIONS FOR DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall make the designations under subsections (b)(2) and (c)(2) not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The Secretary of Defense may designate a facility described in subsections (b)(2) and (c)(2) for participation in the demonstration program under subsection (b) and the demonstration program under subsection (c).

(3) The audits required by subsections (b)(3) and (c)(3) shall be completed not later than January 1, 1994.

(4) The head of a facility may not carry out a conversion described in subsection (b)(4) or (c)(4) if the conversion prevents the head of the facility from carrying out others improvements relating to energy efficiency that are more cost effective than that conversion.

TITLE IV—MILITARY PERSONNEL AUTHORIZATIONS

Subtitle A—Active Forces

SEC. 401. END STRENGTHS FOR ACTIVE FORCES.

(a) The Armed Forces are authorized strengths for active duty personnel as of September 30, 1993, as follows:

(1) The Army, 598,900, of whom not more than 88,855 shall be commissioned officers.

(2) The Navy, 535,800, of whom not more than 67,455 shall be commissioned officers.

(3) The Marine Corps, 181,900, of whom not more than 18,440 shall be commissioned officers.

(4) The Air Force, 449,900, of whom not more than 84,970 shall be commissioned officers.

SEC. 402. WAIVER AND TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

(a) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Defense may waive an end strength prescribed in section 401 for any of the Armed Forces to the extent that the Secretary considers the waiver necessary to prevent personnel imbalances that would impair the long term combat readiness of that armed force.

(b) TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—(1) Upon determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in order to prevent involuntary separations from the Armed Forces that would otherwise be necessary solely for the purpose of reducing the size of the Armed Forces below the authorized end strengths provided in section 401, the Secretary may transfer amounts appropriated to the Department of Defense pursuant to authorizations of appropriations in this division for fiscal year 1993. Amounts so transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes as the appropriations to which transferred.

(2) A transfer made from one appropriation account to another under the authority of this section shall be deemed to increase the amount authorized for the appropriation account to which transferred by the amount transferred.

(3) The Secretary of Defense shall promptly notify Congress of transfers made under the authority of this subsection.

SEC. 403. AUTHORITY TO ADJUST END STRENGTHS.

Subsection (c) of section 115 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1) Subject to paragraphs (1) and (2), the strength of an armed force at the end of a fiscal year may vary from the end strength authorized for that armed force pursuant to paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) for such fiscal year to the extent that the Secretary of Defense determines that the variance is in the national interest.

"(2) The strength of the active-duty personnel of an armed force at the end of a fiscal year shall be within 0.5 percent below and 0.5 percent above the end strength authorized for that armed force pursuant to subsection (a)(1) for that fiscal year.

"(3) The strength of the Selected Reserve personnel of a reserve component at the end of a fiscal year shall be within 2 percent below or 2 percent above the end strength authorized for the Selected Reserve of that reserve component pursuant to subsection (a)(2) for that fiscal year.".

SEC. 404. REPEAL OF REQUIREMENTS FOR MINIMUM NUMBERS OF MEDICAL PERSONNEL.

The following provisions of law that limit reductions in the number of medical personnel of the Department of Defense are repealed:

(1) Section 711 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (10 U.S.C. 115 note).

(2) Section 718(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (10 U.S.C. 115 note).

SEC. 405. LIMITED EXCLUSION OF JOINT SERVICE REQUIREMENTS FROM A LIMITATION ON THE STRENGTHS FOR GENERAL AND FLAG OFFICERS ON ACTIVE DUTY.

(a) Exclusion.—Section 526 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) Limited Exclusion for Joint Duty Requirements.—(1) The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff may designate up to 8 general officer and flag officer positions within joint duty requirements for exclusion from the limitations in subsection (a) that are applicable on and after October 1, 1995. General officers and flag officers in positions so designated may not be counted for the purposes of such limitations.

"(2) This subsection shall cease to be effective on October 1, 1998."

(b) Technical Amendment.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out "(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(b) Authorized Increase.—".

Subtitle B—Reserve Forces

SEC. 411. END STRENGTHS FOR SELECTED RESERVE.

(a) In General.—The Armed Forces are authorized strengths for Selected Reserve personnel of the reserve components as of September 30, 1993, as follows:

(1) The Army National Guard of the United States, 425,450.

(2) The Army Reserve, 296,230.

(3) The Naval Reserve, 141,545.

(4) The Marine Corps Reserve, 42,230.

(5) The Air National Guard of the United States, 119,400.

(6) The Air Force Reserve, 82,400.

(7) The Coast Guard Reserve, 15,150.

(b) Adjustments.—Section 115 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) The end strengths prescribed by law for the Selected Reserve of any reserve component for any fiscal year shall be proportionately reduced by—

"(A) the total authorized strength of units organized to serve as units of the Selected Reserve of such component which are on active duty (other than for training) at the end of that fiscal year; and

"(B) the total number of individual members not in units organized to serve as units of the Selected Reserve of such component who are on active duty (other than for training or for unsatisfactory participation in training) without their consent at the end of that fiscal year.

"(2) Whenever such units or such individual members are released from active duty, the end strength prescribed for the Selected Reserve of such reserve component for the fiscal year in which released shall be proportionately increased by the total authorized strengths of such units and by the total number of such individual members.".

(c) Temporary Prohibition on Eliminating Reserve Component Units.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), no unit in the Selected Reserve of the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marine Corps may be inactivated during fiscal year 1993.

(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply to the following:

(A) An inactivation of a unit which is the direct result of the closure or realignment of a military installation required pursuant to law.

(B) An inactivation of a reinforcing unit in the Naval Reserve that is associated directly with a decommissioned unit in the active component of the Navy.

(C) An inactivation of an aviation unit as a direct result of the phasing out of a weapon system from the active components and the reserve components by the end of fiscal year 1993.

(3) A unit of the Selected Reserve of the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marine Corps may not be inactivated pursuant to an exception in paragraph (2) until the Secretary of Defense has submitted to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives the rationale for the proposed inactivation of that unit and the specific exception that applies.

SEC. 412. END STRENGTHS FOR RESERVES ON ACTIVE DUTY IN SUPPORT OF THE RESERVE COMPONENTS.

Within the end strengths prescribed in section 411(a), the reserve components of the Armed Forces are authorized, as of September 30, 1993, the following number of Reserves to be serving on full-time active duty or, in the case of members of the National Guard, full-time National Guard duty for the purpose of organizing, administering, recruiting, instructing, or training the reserve components:

Subtitle C—Officer Personnel Policy

SEC. 521. OFFICER PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT PLANS.

(a) REPORT ON PLANNED OFFICER ACCESSIONS.—(1) Not later than April 1, 1993, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the plans of the military departments for the procurement of officer personnel during each of fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

(2) The report shall contain for each fiscal year for each military department the following:

(A) For each program of officer training resulting in a commission, the number of persons to be commissioned.

(B) Of the persons to be commissioned under the Reserve Officer Training Corps program, the number of persons receiving scholarships under that program and the number of persons not receiving scholarships under the program.

(C) Of the number of persons to be commissioned—

(i) the number necessary to meet immediate needs for active component personnel;

(ii) the number necessary to meet immediate needs for personnel for the Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve of the reserve components; and

(iii) the number that will be assigned directly into the Individual Ready Reserve of the reserve components.

(b) REPORT ON PLANNED OFFICER ASSIGNMENTS.—Not later than April 1, 1993, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the types of assignments that the military departments plan for the commissioned officers who commence active duty for their initial period of obligated active duty service during each of fiscal years 1993 through 1997 after being commissioned upon completion of an officer training program, stated by officer training program. The report shall contain an analysis of the number of officers that are to be assigned for skills training and the number of officers that are to be assigned directly to occupational positions.

SEC. 522. EVALUATION OF EFFECTS OF OFFICER STRENGTH REDUCTIONS ON OFFICER PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REVIEW.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for a federally funded research and development center that is independent of the military departments to review the officer personnel management system of each of the military departments and to determine and evaluate the effects of the post-Cold War officer strength reductions on that officer personnel management system.

(b) MATTERS TO BE CONSIDERED.—The review and evaluation shall include, for the officer personnel management system of each military department, the effects of the officer strength reductions on the following:

(1) The timing and opportunities for officer promotions.

(2) The expected lengths of officer careers.

(3) Other features of the officer personnel management system under the Defense Officer Personnel Management Act (Public Law 96-513; 94 Stat. 2835) and the provisions of law added and amended by that Act.

(4) Any other aspects of the officer personnel management system that the federally funded research and development center personnel conducting the review and evaluation consider appropriate or as directed by the Secretary of Defense.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 1993, the federally funded research and development center shall submit to the Secretary of Defense a report on the results of the review and evaluation. Within 60 days after receiving the report, the Secretary shall transmit the report to the congressional defense committees. The Secretary may submit to such committees any comments that the Secretary considers appropriate regarding the matters contained in the report.

(d) FUNDING.—Funds appropriated for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to title II and made available for federally funded research and development centers shall be available for the conduct of the review and evaluation under this section.

SEC. 523. TEST ASSIGNMENT OF FEMALE MEMBERS TO COMBAT AIRCRAFT POSITIONS.

Section 550 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (105 Stat. 1370; 10 U.S.C. 113 note) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c);

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection (b):

"(b) ASSIGNMENTS TO COMBAT AIRCRAFT.—The Secretary of Defense shall require the conduct of test assignments of female members of each armed force to duty in combat aircraft of that armed force."; and

(3) in subsection (c), as redesignated by paragraph (1), by inserting "and pursuant to subsection (b)" after "subsection (a)".

SEC. 524. SELECTIVE EARLY RETIREMENT.

Section 638a(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3) In the case of an action under subsection (b)(2), the Secretary of the military department concerned may submit to a selection board convened pursuant to that subsection—

"(A) the names of all eligible officers described in that subsection in a particular grade and competitive category; or

"(B) the names of all eligible officers described in that subsection in a particular grade and competitive category who are also in particular year groups, specialties, or retirement categories, or any combination thereof, within that competitive category.".

SEC. 525. RETIREMENT OF CERTAIN LIMITED DUTY OFFICERS OF THE NAVY.

(a) REGULAR NAVY COMMANDERS.—Section 633 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: "During the period beginning on July 1, 1993, and ending on October 1, 1995, the preceding sentence shall not apply to an officer of the Navy designated for limited duty to whom section 6383 of this title applies.".

(b) REGULAR NAVY CAPTAINS.—Section 634 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: "During the period beginning on July 1, 1993, and ending on October 1, 1995, the preceding sentence shall not apply to an officer of the Regular Navy designated for limited duty to whom section 6383(a)(4) of this title applies.".

(c) MAXIMUM TENURE.—Subsection (a) of section 6383 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(a)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) Except as provided in subsection (i), each regular officer of the Navy designated for limited duty who is serving in the grade of commander, has failed of selection for promotion to the grade of captain for the second time, and is not on a list of officers recommended for promotion to the grade of captain shall—

"(A) if eligible for retirement as a commissioned officer under any provision of law, be retired under that provision law on the date requested by the officer and approved by the Secretary of the Navy, except that the date of retirement may not be later than the first day of the seventh month beginning after the month in which the President approves the report of the selection board in which the officer is considered as having failed for promotion to the grade of captain for a second time; or

"(B) if not eligible for retirement as a commissioned officer, be retired on the date requested by the officer and approved by the Secretary of the Navy after the officer becomes eligible for retirement as a commissioned officer, except that the date of retirement may not be later than the first day of the seventh calendar month beginning after the month in which the officer becomes eligible for retirement as a commissioned officer.

"(3) Except as provided in subsection (i), if not retired earlier, a regular officer of the Navy designated for limited duty who is serving in the grade of commander and is not on a list of officers recommended for promotion to the grade of captain shall be retired on the last day of the month following the month in which the officer completes 35 years of active naval service, exclusive of active duty for training in a reserve component.

"(4) Except as provided in subsection (i), each regular officer of the Navy designated for limited duty who is serving in the grade of captain shall, if not retired sooner, be retired on the last day of the month following the month in which the officer completes 38 years of active naval service, exclusive of active duty for training in a reserve component.

"(5) Paragraphs (2) through (4) shall be effective only during the period beginning on July 1, 1993, and ending on October 1, 1995.".

(d) LIMITATION ON DEFERRED RETIREMENT.—Subsection (i) of section 6383 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following: "During the period beginning on July 1, 1993, and ending on October 1, 1995, an officer of the Navy in the grade of commander or captain whose retirement is deferred under this subsection and who is not subsequently promoted may not be continued on active duty beyond age 62 or, if earlier, 28 years of active commissioned service if in the grade of commander or 30 years of active commissioned service if in the grade of captain.".

Subtitle D—Active Forces Transition Enhancements

SEC. 531. ENCOURAGEMENT FOR CONTINUING PUBLIC AND COMMUNITY SERVICE.

(a) Permanent Program.—(1) Chapter 58 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1143 the following new section:

"§1143a. Encouragement of postseparation public and community service: Department of Defense

"(a) In General.—The Secretary of Defense shall implement a program to encourage members and former members of the armed forces to enter into public and community service jobs after discharge or release from active duty.

"(b) Personnel Registry.—The Secretary shall maintain a registry of members and former members of the armed forces discharged or released from active duty who request registration for assistance in pursuing public and community service job opportunities. The registry shall include information on the particular job skills, qualifications, and experience of the registered personnel.

"(c) Registry of Public Service and Community Service Organizations.—The Secretary shall also maintain a registry of public service and community service organizations. The registry shall contain information regarding each organization, including its location, its size, the types of public and community service positions in the organization, points of contact, procedures for applying for such positions, and a description of each such position that is likely to be available. Any such organization may request registration under this subsection and, subject to guidelines prescribed by the Secretary, be registered.

"(d) Assistance To Be Provided.—(1) The Secretary shall actively attempt to match personnel registered under subsection (b) with public and community service job opportunities and to facilitate job-seeking contacts between such personnel and the employers offering the jobs.

"(2) The Secretary shall offer personnel registered under subsection (b) counselling services regarding—

"(A) public service and community service organizations; and

"(B) procedures and techniques for qualifying for and applying for jobs in such organizations.

"(3) The Secretary may provide personnel registered under subsection (b) with access to the interstate job bank program of the United States Employment Service if the Secretary determines that such program meets the needs of separating members of the armed forces for job placement.

"(e) Consultation Requirement.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall consult closely with the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, the Secretary of Education, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, appropriate representatives of State and local governments, and appropriate representatives of businesses and nonprofit organizations in the private sector.

"(f) Delegation.—The Secretary, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Labor, may designate the Secretary of Labor as the executive agent of the Secretary of Defense for carrying out all or part of the responsibilities provided in this section. Such a designation does not relieve the Secretary of Defense from the responsibility for the implementation of the provisions of this section.

"(g) Definitions.—In this section, the term 'public service and community service organization' includes the following organizations:

"(1) Any organization that provides the following services:

"(A) Elementary, secondary, or postsecondary school teaching or administration.

"(B) Support of such teaching or school administration.

"(C) Law enforcement.

"(D) Public health care.

"(E) Social services.

"(F) Any other public or community service.

"(2) Any nonprofit organization that coordinates the provision of services described in paragraph (1).".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1143 the following new item:

"1143a. Encouragement of postseparation public and community service: Department of Defense.".

(b) Department of Veterans Affairs Responsibilities.—Section 1142(b)(4) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", including the public and community service jobs program carried out under section 1143a of this title".

(c) Preseparation Assistance by the Department of Labor.—Section 1144(b) of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) Provide information regarding the public and community service jobs program carried out under section 1143a of this title.".

SEC. 532. TEACHER CERTIFICATION CREDIT FOR MILITARY EXPERIENCE.

(a) Uniform State Standards and Procedures.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall—

(A) develop proposed uniform standards and procedures for the granting of appropriate credit for service in the Armed Forces under State teacher certification or licensing procedures; and

(B) coordinate with appropriate agencies of each State to encourage the incorporation of such uniform standards and procedures into the State's teacher certification or licensing requirements.

(2) The uniform standards should reflect the value to the teaching profession of relevant skills and experience derived from service in the Armed Forces.

(b) Delegation to the Secretary of Education.—The Secretary, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Education, may designate the Secretary of Education as the executive agent of the Secretary of Defense for carrying out all or part of the responsibilities provided in subsection (a). Such a designation does not relieve the Secretary of Defense from the responsibility for the implementation of such subsection.

SEC. 533. PROGRAM OF EDUCATIONAL LEAVE RELATING TO CONTINUING PUBLIC AND COMMUNITY SERVICE.

(a) Program.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense after consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and subject to subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary concerned may grant to an eligible member of the Armed Forces a leave of absence for a period not to exceed one year for the purpose of permitting the member to pursue a program of education or training (including an internship) for the development of skills that are relevant to the performance of public and community service. A program of education or training referred to in the preceding sentence includes any such program that is offered by the Department of Defense or by any civilian educational or training institution.

(b) Eligibility Requirement.—(1) A member may not be granted a leave of absence under this section unless the member agrees in writing—

(A) diligently to pursue employment in public service and community service organizations upon the separation of the member from active duty in the Armed Forces; and

(B) to serve in the Ready Reserve of an armed force, upon such separation, for a period of 4 months for each month of the period of the leave of absence.

(2)(A) A member may not be granted a leave of absence under this section until the member has completed any period of extension of enlistment or reenlistment, or any period of obligated active duty service, that the member has incurred under section 708 of title 10, United States Code.

(B) The Secretary concerned may waive the limitation in subparagraph (A) for a member who enters into an agreement with the Secretary for the member to serve in the Ready Reserve of a reserve component for a period equal to the uncompleted portion of the member's period of service referred to in that subparagraph. Any such period of agreed service in the Ready Reserve shall be in addition to any other period that the member is obligated to serve in a reserve component.

(c) Treatment of Leave of Absence.—A leave of absence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of subsections (c) and (d) of section 708 of title 10, United States Code.

(d) Exclusion From End Strength Limitation.—A member of the Armed Forces, while on leave granted pursuant to this section, may not be counted for purposes of any provision of law that limits the active duty strength of the member's armed force.

(e) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "Secretary concerned" has the meaning given such term in section 101 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The term "eligible member of the Armed Forces" means a member of the Armed Forces who is eligible for an educational leave of absence under section 708(e) of such title.

(3) The term "public service and community service organization" has the meaning given such term in section 1143a of such title (as added by section 531(a)).

(f) Expiration.—The authority to grant a leave of absence under subsection (a) shall expire on September 30, 1995.

SEC. 534. TEMPORARY EARLY RETIREMENT AUTHORITY.

(a) Retirement for 15 to 20 Years of Service.—(1) The Secretary of the Army may, upon the member's request, retire a member of the Army who has the following years of service:

(A) In the case of a regular or reserve commissioned officer, between 15 and 20 years of service computed under section 3926 of title 10, United States Code.

(B) In the case of an enlisted member, between 15 and 20 years of service computed under section 3925 of such title.

(C) In the case of a warrant officer, between 15 and 20 years of active service computed under section 511 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, as amended (70 Stat. 114).

(2) The Secretary of the Navy may, upon the member's request, retire a member of the Navy or Marine Corps who has the following years of active service:

(A) In the case of a commissioned officer or enlisted member, between 15 and 20 years.

(B) In the case of a warrant officer, between 15 and 20 years computed under section 511 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, as amended (70 Stat. 114).

(3) The Secretary of the Air Force may, upon the member's request, retire a member of the Air Force who has the following years of service:

(A) In the case of a regular or reserve commissioned officer, between 15 and 20 years of service computed under section 8926 of title 10, United States Code.

(B) In the case of an enlisted member, between 15 and 20 years of service computed under section 8925 of such title.

(C) In the case of a warrant officer, between 15 and 20 years of active service computed under section 511 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, as amended (70 Stat. 114).

(b) ADDITIONAL ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENT.—In order to be eligible for retirement under subsection (a), a member of the Armed Forces shall register on the registry maintained under section 1143a(b) of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 531(a)) and receive counselling regarding public and community service job opportunities from the Secretary of Defense or another source approved by the Secretary.

(c) COMPUTATION OF RETIRED PAY.—A member or former member of the Armed Forces retired under subsection (a) shall be entitled to retired pay computed under the provisions of chapter 71, 371, 571, or 871 of title 10, United States Code, that would be applicable to such member or former member if—

(1) the member or former member had been retired under section 1293 (in the case of a retired warrant officer), 3911 (in the case of a retired commissioned Army officer), 3914 (in the case of a retired enlisted member of the Army), 6323 (in the case of a retired commissioned officer of the Navy), 8911 (in the case of a retired commissioned Air Force officer), or 8914 (in the case of a retired enlisted member of the Air Force) of such title upon completion of 20 years of service creditable for purposes of eligibility for retirement; or

(2) in the case of a retired enlisted member of the Regular Navy or Regular Marine Corps, the retired enlisted member had been retired under section 6326 of such title upon completion of 30 years of active service in the Armed Forces creditable for purposes of eligibility for retirement.

(d) FUNDING.—(1) Notwithstanding section 1463 of title 10, United States Code, and to the extent provided in appropriations Acts, the Secretary of each military department shall provide in accordance with this section for the payment of retired or retainer pay payable during the fiscal years covered by the other provisions of this subsection to members of the armed force under the jurisdiction of that Secretary who are being retired under the authority of this section.

(2) In each fiscal year in which the Secretary of a military department retires a member of the Armed Forces under the authority of this section, the Secretary shall credit to a subaccount (which the Secretary shall establish) within the appropriation account for that fiscal year for pay and allowances of active duty members of the armed force under the jurisdiction of that Secretary such amount as is necessary to pay the retired or retainer pay payable to such member for the entire initial period (determined under paragraph (3)) of the entitlement of that member to receive retired or retainer pay.

(3) The initial period applicable under paragraph (2) in the case of a retired member referred to in that paragraph is the number of years (and any fraction of a year) that is equal to the difference between 20 years and the number of years (and any fraction of a year) of service that were completed by the member (as computed under the provision of law referred to in subsection (a) that is applicable to that member) before being retired under this section.

(4) The Secretary shall pay the member's retired or retainer pay for such initial period out of amounts credited to the subaccount under paragraph (2). The amounts so credited with respect to that member shall remain available for payment for that period.

(e) COORDINATION OF BENEFITS.—A member of the Armed Forces retired under this section is not entitled to benefits under section 1174, 1174a, or 1175 of title 10, United States Code.

(f) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority under subsection (a) shall terminate on October 1, 1995.

SEC. 535. INCREASED EARLY RETIREMENT RETIRED PAY FOR PUBLIC OR COMMUNITY SERVICE.

(a) RECOMPUTATION OF RETIRED PAY.—(1) If a member or former member of the Armed Forces retired under section 534(a) or any other provision of law authorizing retirement from the Armed Forces (other than for disability) before the completion of at least 20 years of active duty service (as computed under the applicable provision of law) is employed by a public service or community service organization listed on the registry maintained under section 1143a(c) of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 531(a)), within the period of the member's enhanced retirement qualification period, the member's or former member's retired or retainer pay shall be recomputed effective on the first day of the first month beginning after the date on which the member or former member attains 62 years of age.

(2) For purposes of recomputing a member's or former member's retired pay—

(A) the years of the member's or former member's employment by a public service or community service organization referred to in paragraph (1) during the member's or former member's enhanced retirement qualification period shall be treated as years of active duty service in the Armed Forces; and

(B) in applying section 1401a of title 10, United States Code, the member's or former member's years of active duty service shall be deemed as of the date of retirement to have included the years of employment referred to in subparagraph (A).

(3) Section 1405(b) of title 10, United States Code, shall apply in determining years of service under this subsection.

(4) In this subsection, the term "enhanced retirement qualification period", with respect to a member or former member retired under a provision of law referred to in paragraph (1), means the period beginning on the date of the retirement of the member or former member and ending the number of years (including any fraction of a year) after that date which when added to the number of years (including any fraction of a year) of service credited for purposes of computing the retired pay of the member or former member upon retirement equals 20 years.

(b) SBP ANNUITIES.—(1) Effective on the first day of the first month after a member or former member of the Armed Forces retired under a provision of law referred to in subsection (a)(1) attains 62 years of age or, in the event of death before attaining that age, would have attained that age, the base amount applicable under section 1447(2) of title 10, United States Code, to any Survivor Benefit Plan annuity provided by that member or former member shall be recomputed. For the recomputation the total years (including any fraction of a year) of the member's or former member's active service shall be treated as having included the member's or former member's years (including any fraction of a year) of employment referred to in subsection (a)(1) as of the date when the member or former member became eligible for retired pay under this section.

(2) In this subsection, the term "Survivor Benefit Plan" means the plan established under subchapter II of chapter 73 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 536. OPPORTUNITY FOR CERTAIN ACTIVE-DUTY PERSONNEL TO ENROLL IN MONTGOMERY GI BILL PROGRAM WHILE BEING VOLUNTARILY SEPARATED FROM SERVICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Subchapter II of chapter 30 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 3018A the following new section:

"§3018B. Opportunity for certain active-duty personnel to enroll while being voluntarily separated from service

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an individual who—

"(1) is voluntarily discharged from the Armed Forces with an honorable discharge, or voluntarily released from active duty under honorable conditions (as characterized by the Secretary concerned), pursuant to a request for separation approved under section 1174a or 1175 of title 10,

"(2) before applying for benefits under this section, has completed the requirements of a secondary school diploma (or equivalency certificate) or has successfully completed the equivalent of 12 semester hours in a program of education leading to a standard college degree,

"(3) in the case of any individual who has made an election under section 3011(c)(1) of this title, withdraws such election pursuant to procedures which the Secretary of each military department shall provide in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense for the purpose of carrying out this section,

"(4) in the case of any person enrolled in the educational benefits program provided by chapter 32 of this title makes an irrevocable election, pursuant to procedures referred to in paragraph (3) of this subsection, to receive benefits under this section in lieu of benefits under such chapter 32, and

"(5) elects to receive assistance under this section pursuant to regulations referred to in paragraph (3) of this subsection, is entitled to basic educational assistance under this chapter.

"(b) An election or withdrawal of election permitted under subsection (a) of this section is not effective unless—

"(1) in the case of an individual separated from active duty more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the individual makes the election or withdrawal before the separation;

"(2) in the case of an individual separated from active duty on or after the date of the enactment of this section and within 90 days after that date, the individual makes the election or withdrawal within 90 days after the separation; and

"(3) in the case of an individual separated from active duty before the date of the enactment of this section, the individual makes the election or withdrawal within 90 days after such date.

"(c)(1) An individual described in subsection (a) of this section who makes a withdrawal referred to in subsection (a)(3) of this section shall pay $1,200 to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. In the case of an individual who makes the withdrawal of election before being separated, any portion of the obligation to pay $1,200 may be discharged by reduction of that individual's basic pay.

"(2) Amounts received by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be credited to the appropriation available for the fiscal year in which received for the Department of Veterans Affairs for the payment of readjustment benefits.

"(d) A withdrawal of election referred to in subsection (a)(3) of this section is irrevocable.

"(e)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, an individual who is enrolled in the educational benefits program provided by chapter 32 of this title and who makes the election described in subsection (a)(4) of this subsection shall be disenrolled from such chapter 32 program as of the date of such election.

"(2) For each individual who is disenrolled from such program, the Secretary shall refund—

"(A) as provided in section 3223(b) of this title, to the individual the unused contributions made by the individual to the Post-Vietnam Era Veterans Education Account established pursuant to section 3222(a) of this title; and

"(B) to the Secretary of Defense the unused contributions (other than contributions made under section 3222(c) of this title) made by such Secretary to the Account on behalf of such individual.

"(3) Any contribution made by the Secretary of Defense to the Post-Vietnam Era Veterans Education Account pursuant to section 3222(c) of this title on behalf of any individual referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection shall remain in such Account to make payments of benefits to such individual under section 3015(e) of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 30 of such title is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3018A the following new item:

"3018B. Opportunity for certain active-duty personnel to enroll while being voluntarily separated from service.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 3013(d) of such title is amended by inserting "or 3018B" after "section 3018A".

(2) Section 3015(e) of such title is amended by inserting "or 3018B" after "section 3018A".

(3) Section 3035(b)(3) of such title is amended—

(A) in the matter above subparagraph (A), by inserting "or 3018B" after "section 3018A"; and

(B) in subparagraph (B), by inserting "or 3018B(a)(3)" after "section 3018A(a)(3)".

SEC. 537. ELIMINATION OF RECOUPMENT REQUIREMENT FOR RESERVE DUTY.

Paragraph (2) of section 1175(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), a member entitled to voluntary separation incentive payments who is also entitled to basic pay for active service shall forfeit an amount of voluntary separation incentive payable for the same period that is equal to the total amount of basic pay received.

"(B) Subparagraph (A) does not apply with respect to—

"(i) annual training; or

"(ii) active duty for training that is not active duty for a period of more than 30 days.".

SEC. 538. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR CERTAIN EMPLOYMENT, JOB TRAINING, AND OTHER ASSISTANCE.

Section 1144(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking out "$4,000,000 for fiscal year 1991" and all that follows through the period and inserting in lieu thereof "$11,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and $8,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994 and 1995."; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking out "$1,000,000 for fiscal year 1991" and all that follows through the period and inserting in lieu thereof "$6,500,000 for each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.".

SEC. 539. CONTINUED HEALTH COVERAGE FOR MEMBERS AND DEPENDENTS UPON THE SEPARATION OF THE MEMBERS FROM ACTIVE DUTY AND FOR EMANCIPATED CHILDREN OF MEMBERS.

(a) MEMBERS AND EMANCIPATED CHILDREN.—(1) Chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1078 the following new section:

"§1078a. Continued health benefits coverage

"(a) PROVISION OF CONTINUED HEALTH COVERAGE.—The Secretary of Defense and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall jointly carry out a program in accordance with this section to provide persons described in subsection (b) with temporary health benefits under the program of continued health benefits coverage provided for former civilian employee of the Federal Government and other persons under section 8905a of title 5.

"(b) ELIGIBLE PERSONS.—The persons referred to in subsection (a) are the following:

"(1) A member of the armed forces who—

"(A) is discharged or released from active duty (or full-time National Guard duty), whether voluntarily or involuntarily, under other than adverse conditions, as characterized by the Secretary concerned;

"(B) immediately preceding that discharge or release, is entitled to medical and dental care under section 1074(a) of this title (except in the case of a member discharged or released from full-time National Guard duty); and

"(C) after that discharge or release and any period of transitional health care provided under section 1145(a) of this title, would not otherwise be eligible for any benefits under this chapter.

"(2) A person who—

"(A) ceases to meet the requirements for being considered an unmarried dependent child of a member or former member of the armed forces under section 1072(2)(D) of this title;

"(B) on the day before ceasing to meet those requirements, was covered under a health benefits plan under this chapter or transitional health care under section 1145(a) of this title as a dependent of the member or former member; and

"(C) would not otherwise be eligible for any benefits under this chapter.

"(c) NOTIFICATION OF ELIGIBILITY.—(1) The Director, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, shall prescribe regulations to provide for persons described in subsection (b) to be notified of eligibility to receive health benefits under this section.

"(2) In the case of a member who becomes (or will become) eligible for continued coverage under subsection (b)(1), the regulations shall provide for the Secretary concerned to notify the member of the member's rights under this section as part of preseparation counseling conducted under section 1142 of this title or any other provision of other law.

"(3) In the case of a child of a member who becomes eligible for continued coverage under subsection (b)(2), the regulations shall provide that—

"(A) the member may submit to the Secretary concerned a written notice of the child's change in status (including the child's name, address, and such other information as the Director may require); and

"(B) the Secretary concerned shall, within 14 days after receiving that notice, inform the child of the child's rights under this section.

"(d) ELECTION OF COVERAGE.—In order to obtain continued coverage under this section, an appropriate written election (submitted in such manner as the Director may prescribe) shall be made as follows:

"(1) In the case of a member described in subsection (b)(1), the written election shall be submitted to the Director before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the later of—

"(A) the date of the discharge or release of the member from active duty;

"(B) the date on which the period of transitional health care applicable to the member under section 1145(a) of this title ends; or

"(C) the date the member receives the notification required pursuant to subsection (c).

"(2) In the case of a person described in subsection (b)(2), the written election shall be submitted to the Director before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the later of—

"(A) the date on which the person first ceases to meet the requirements for being considered an unmarried dependent child under section 1072(2)(D) of this title, or

"(B) the date the person receives the notification pursuant to subsection (c), except that if the Secretary concerned determines that the person's parent has failed to provide the notice referred to in subsection (c)(3)(A) with respect to the person in a timely fashion, the 60-day period under this paragraph shall be based only on the date under subparagraph (A).

"(e) COVERAGE OF DEPENDENTS.—A person eligible under subsection (b)(1) to elect to receive coverage may elect coverage either as an individual or, if appropriate, for self and dependents. A person eligible under subsection (b)(2) may elect only individual coverage.

"(f) CHARGES.—(1) Under arrangements satisfactory to the Director, a person receiving continued coverage under this section shall be required to pay into the Employees Health Benefits Fund established under section 8909 of title 5 an amount equal to the sum of—

"(A) the amount determined under section 8905a(d)(1)(A)(i) of title 5;

"(B) an amount, not in excess of 10 percent of the amount referred to in subparagraph (A), that is necessary for administrative expenses, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Director; and

"(C) such additional amount determined by the Director to be necessary to ensure that outlays from the Fund as a result of the program established under this section do not exceed amounts paid under this paragraph.

"(2) If a person elects to continue coverage under this section before the end of the applicable period under subsection (d), but after the person's coverage under this chapter (including any transitional extensions of coverage) expires, coverage shall be restored retroactively, with appropriate contributions (determined in accordance with paragraph (1)) and claims (if any), to the same extent and effect as though no break in coverage had occurred.

"(g) CONTRIBUTION.—Subject to the availability of appropriations for the purpose of this section, if the basis for continued coverage under this section for a member of the armed forces under subsection (b)(1) is involuntary separation approved under section 1174a or 1175 of this title, contributions shall be made in accordance with subsection (f)(1), except that—

"(1) the amount to be paid by the member shall be equal to the employee contribution referred to in section 8905a(d)(1)(A)(i) of title 5; and

"(2) the Secretary of Defense shall pay into the Employees Health Benefits Fund, under arrangements satisfactory to the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, an amount equal to—

"(A) the agency contribution referred to in section 8905a(d)(1)(A)(i) of title 5; and

"(B) the amount described in subsection (f)(1)(B).

"(h) PERIOD OF CONTINUED COVERAGE.—(1) Continued coverage under this section may not extend beyond—

"(A) in the case of a member described in subsection (b)(1), the date which is 18 months after the date the member ceases to be entitled to care under section 1074(a) of this title and any transitional care under section 1145 of this title, as the case may be; and

"(B) in the case of a person described in subsection (b)(2), the date which is 36 months after the date on which the individual first ceases to meet the requirements for being considered an unmarried dependent child under section 1072(2)(D) of this title.

"(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(B), if a person ceases to meet the requirements for being considered an unmarried dependent child of a member described in subsection (b)(1) during a period of continued coverage of that member for self and dependents under this section, extended coverage of that person under this section may not extend beyond the date which is 36 months after the date the member became ineligible for medical and dental care under section 1074(a) of this title and any transitional health care under section 1145(a) of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1078 the following new item:

"1078a. Continued health benefits coverage.".

(b) TRANSITIONAL PROVISIONS.—The Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall provide a period for the enrollment for health benefits coverage under this section by members and former members of the Armed Services for whom the availability of transitional health care under section 1145(a) of title 10, United States Code, expires before section 1078a of such title, as added by subsection (a), is implemented.

(c) TERMINATION OF APPLICABILITY OF OTHER CONVERSION HEALTH POLICIES.—(1) No person may purchase a conversion health policy under section or 1145(b) of title 10, United States Code, on or after the date on which the Director of the Office of Personnel Management announces that section 1078a of such title is implemented. A person covered by such a conversion health policy on that date may cancel that policy and enroll in a health benefits plan under section 1078a of such title.

(2) No person may be covered concurrently by a conversion health policy under such section 1145(b) of title 10, United States Code, and a health benefits plan under section 1078a of such title.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 1078a of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall take effect on October 1, 1992.

Subtitle E—Guard and Reserve Transition Initiatives

SEC. 541. FORCE REDUCTION TRANSITION PERIOD DEFINED.

In this subtitle, the term "force reduction transition period" means the period beginning on October 1, 1991, and ending on September 30, 1995.

SEC. 542. MEMBER OF SELECTED RESERVE DEFINED.

In this subtitle, the term "member of the Selected Reserve" means—

(1) a member of a unit in the Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve; and

(2) a Reserve designated pursuant to section 268(b) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 543. RESTRICTION ON RESERVE FORCE REDUCTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—During the force reduction transition period, no unit in the Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve of the Armed Forces may be inactivated and no member of the Selected Reserve may be involuntarily discharged from a reserve component of the Armed Forces or involuntarily transferred from the Selected Reserve before the Secretary of Defense has promulgated, implemented, and transmitted to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives regulations that govern the treatment of members of the Selected Reserve assigned to such units and members of the Selected Reserve that are being subjected to such actions.

(b) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to actions completed before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the prohibition in section 411(c).

SEC. 544. TRANSITION PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

(a) PURPOSE OF PLAN.—The purpose of the regulations referred to in section 543 shall be to ensure that the members of the Selected Reserve are treated with fairness, with respect for their service to their country, and with attention to the adverse personal consequences of Selected Reserve unit inactivations, involuntary discharges of such members from the reserve components of the Armed Forces, and involuntary transfers of such members from the Selected Reserve.

(b) SCOPE OF PLAN.—The regulations shall include—

(1) such provisions as are necessary to implement the provisions of this subtitle and the amendments made by this subtitle; and

(2) such other policies and procedures for the recruitment of personnel for service in the Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve, and for the reassignment, retraining, separation, and retirement of members of the Selected Reserve, as are appropriate for satisfying the needs of the Selected Reserve together with the purpose set out in subsection (a).

(c) MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS FOR PLAN.—The regulations shall include the following:

(1) The giving of a priority to personnel referred to in section 543(a) for reassignment to Selected Reserve units not being inactivated.

(2) The giving of a priority to such personnel for transfer among the reserve components of the Armed Forces in order to facilitate reassignment to such units.

(3) A requirement that the Secretaries of the military departments take diligent actions to ensure that members of the reserve components of the Armed Forces are informed in easily understandable terms of the rights and benefits conferred upon such personnel by this subtitle, by the amendments made by this subtitle, and by such regulations.

(4) Such other protections, preferences, and benefits as the Secretary of Defense considers appropriate.

(d) UNIFORM APPLICABILITY.—The regulations shall apply uniformly to the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps.

SEC. 545. INAPPLICABILITY TO CERTAIN DISCHARGES AND TRANSFERS.

The protections, preferences, and benefits provided for in regulations prescribed in accordance with this subtitle do not apply with respect to a member of the Selected Reserve who is discharged from a reserve component of the Armed Forces or is transferred from the Selected Reserve to another category of the Ready Reserve, to the Standby Reserve, or to the Retired Reserve—

(1) at the request of the member unless such request was made and approved under a provision of this subtitle or section 1331a of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 547);

(2) because the member no longer meets the qualifications for membership in the Selected Reserve set forth in any provision of law as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act;

(3) under adverse conditions, as characterized by the Secretary of the military department concerned; or

(4) if the member—

(A) is immediately eligible for retired pay based on military service under any provision of law;

(B) is serving as a military technician, as defined in section 8401(30) of title 5, United States Code, and would be immediately eligible for an unreduced annuity under the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 83 of such title, relating to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability System, or the provisions of chapter 84 of such title, relating to the Federal Employees' Retirement System; or

(C) is eligible for separation pay under section 1174 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 546. FORCE REDUCTION PERIOD RETIREMENTS.

(a) TEMPORARY SPECIAL AUTHORITY.—During the period referred to in subsection (b), the Secretary concerned may grant a member of the Selected Reserve under the age of 60 years the annual payments provided for under this section if—

(1) as of October 1, 1991, that member has completed at least 20 years of service computed under section 1332 of title 10, United States Code, or after that date and before October 1, 1995, such member completes 20 years of service computed under that section;

(2) the member satisfies the requirements of paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 1331(a) of title 10, United States Code; and

(3) the member applies for transfer to the Retired Reserve—

(A) in the case of a member who has not received the notice required by section 1331(d) of that title before the date of the enactment of this Act, within one year after receiving such notice; and

(B) in the case of a member who received such a notice before the date of the enactment of this Act, within one year after that date.

(b) Period of Applicability.—The period referred to in subsection (a) is, with respect to a member of the Selected Reserve, the force reduction transition period, the period provided under paragraph (3) of that subsection for the member to submit an application, and the period necessary for taking action on that application.

(c) Annual Payment Period.—An annual payment granted to a member under this section shall be paid for 5 years, except that if the member attains 60 years of age during the 5-year period the entitlement to the annual payment shall terminate on the member's 60th birthday.

(d) Computation of Annual Payment.—(1) The annual payment for a member shall be equal to the amount determined by multiplying the product of 12 and the applicable percent under paragraph (2) by the monthly basic pay to which the member would be entitled if the member were serving on active duty as of the date the member is transferred to the Retired Reserve.

(2)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B) the percent applicable to a member for purposes of paragraph (1) is 5 percent plus 0.5 percent for each full year of service, computed under section 1332 of title 10, United States Code, that a member has completed in excess of 20 years before transfer to the Retired Reserve.

(B) The maximum percent applicable under this paragraph is 10 percent.

(e) Applicability Subject to Needs of the Service.—(1) Subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary concerned may limit the applicability of this section to any category of personnel defined by the Secretary concerned in order to meet a need of the armed force under the jurisdiction of the Secretary concerned to reduce the number of members in certain grades, the number of members who have completed a certain number of years of service, or the number of members who possess certain military skills or are serving in designated competitive categories.

(2) A limitation under paragraph (1) shall be consistent with the purpose set forth in section 544(a).

(f) Nonduplication of Benefits.—A member transferred to the Retired Reserve under the authority of section 1331a of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 547), may not be paid annual payments under this section.

(g) Funding.—To the extent provided in appropriations Acts, payments under this section in a fiscal year shall be made out of amounts available to the Department of Defense for that fiscal year for the pay of reserve component personnel.

(h) Health Care Benefits.—A member of the Retired Reserve receiving annual payments under this section shall be treated as a member of the uniformed services entitled to retired or retainer pay for the purposes of the provisions of chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 547. RETIREMENT WITH 15 YEARS OF SERVICE.

(a) Authority.—Chapter 67 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1331 the following new section:

"§ 1331a. Temporary special retirement qualification authority

"(a) Retirement With At Least 15 Years of Service.—For the purposes of section 1331 of this title, the Secretary of a military department may—

"(1) during the period described in subsection (b), determine to treat a member of the Selected Reserve of a reserve component of the armed force under the jurisdiction of that Secretary as having met the service requirements of subsection (a)(2) of that section and provide the member with the notification required by subsection (d) of that section if the member—

"(A) as of October 1, 1991, has completed at least 15, and less than 20, years of service computed under section 1332 of this title; or

"(B) after that date and before October 1, 1995, completes 15 years of service computed under that section; and

"(2) upon the request of the member submitted to the Secretary within one year after the date of the notification referred to in paragraph (1), transfer the member to the Retired Reserve.

"(b) Period of Authority.—The period referred to in subsection (a)(1) is the period beginning on the date of the enactment of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993 and ending on October 1, 1995.

"(c) Applicability Subject to Needs of the Service.—(1) The Secretary of the military department concerned may limit the applicability of subsection (a) to any category of personnel defined by the Secretary in order to meet a need of the armed force under the jurisdiction of the Secretary to reduce the number of members in certain grades, the number of members who have completed a certain number of years of service, or the number of members who possess certain military skills or are serving in designated competitive categories.

"(2) A limitation under paragraph (1) shall be consistent with the purpose set forth in section 544(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993.

"(d) Exclusion.—This section does not apply to persons referred to in section 1331(c) of this title.

"(e) Regulations.—The authority provided in this section shall be subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1331 the following new item:

"1331a. Temporary special retirement qualification authority.".

SEC. 548. SEPARATION PAY.

(a) Eligibility.—Subject to section 545, a member of the Selected Reserve who, after completing at least 6 years of service computed under section 1332 of title 10, United States Code, and before completing 15 years of service computed under that section, is involuntarily discharged from a reserve component of the Armed Forces or is involuntarily transferred from the Selected Reserve is entitled to separation pay.

(b) Amount of Separation Pay.—(1) The amount of separation pay which may be paid to a person under this section is 15 percent of the product of—

(A) the years of service credited to that person under section 1333 of title 10, United States Code; and

(B) 62 times the daily equivalent of the monthly basic pay to which the person would have been entitled had the person been serving on active duty at the time of the person's discharge or transfer.

(2) In the case of a person who receives separation pay under this section and who later receives basic pay, compensation for inactive duty training, or retired pay under any provision of law, such basic pay, compensation, or retired pay, as the case may be, shall be reduced by 75 percent until the total amount withheld through such reduction equals the total amount of the separation pay received by that person under this section.

(c) Relationship to Other Service-Related Pay.—Subsections (g) and (h) of section 1174 of title 10, United States Code, shall apply to separation pay under this section.

(d) Regulations.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations, which shall be uniform for the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, for the administration of this section.

SEC. 549. WAIVER OF CONTINUED SERVICE REQUIREMENT FOR MONTGOMERY GI BILL BENEFITS.

(a) In General.—The eligibility of a person referred to in subsection (b)—

(1) to be provided educational assistance under chapter 106 of title 10, United States Code, may not be terminated under section 2134(2) of that title or

(2) to be provided educational assistance under chapter 30 of title 38, United States Code, may not be terminated under section 3012(a) of that title, on the basis of the termination of that person's status as a member of the Selected Reserve under the circumstances described in subsection (b).

(b) Applicability.—Subsection (a) applies to a member of the Selected Reserve who, before completing the years of service in the Selected Reserve agreed to under section 2132(a) of title 10, United States Code, or the years of service required by section 3012(a) of title 38, United States Code, as the case may be, ceases to be a member of the Selected Reserve during the force reduction transition period by reason of the inactivation of his unit of assignment or by reason of involuntarily ceasing to be designated as a member of the Selected Reserve pursuant to section 268(b) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 550. COMMISSARY AND EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES.

The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations to authorize a person who involuntarily ceases to be a member of the Selected Reserve during the force reduction transition period to continue to use commissary and exchange stores in the same manner as a member of the Selected Reserve for a period of one year after the later of—

(1) the date on which that person ceases to be a member of the Selected Reserve; or

(2) the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 551. TEMPORARY CONTINUATION OF SERVICEMEN'S GROUP LIFE INSURANCE.

(a) Continued Coverage.—For the purposes of section 1968(a) of title 38, United States Code, the 120-day period of coverage provided for under paragraph (4) of such section shall be extended to a 365-day period of coverage in the case of a former member of the Selected Reserve referred to in subsection (b).

(b) Eligibility.—Subsection (a) applies to a person who involuntarily ceases to be a member of the Selected Reserve during the force reduction transition period and is ready, willing, and able to perform the training described in section 1965(5)(B) of title 38, United States Code.

(c) Payment of Premiums.—The total amount of the cost attributable to insuring a person under this section shall be paid from any funds available to the Department of Defense for the pay of reserve component personnel that the Secretary of Defense determines appropriate.

(d) Implementation.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall take any contracting and other actions that are necessary to ensure that the provisions of this section are implemented promptly.

SEC. 552. APPLICABILITY AND TERMINATION OF BENEFITS.

(a) Applicability Subject to Needs of the Service.—(1) Subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the military department concerned may limit the applicability of a benefit provided under sections 548 through 551 to any category of personnel defined by the Secretary concerned in order to meet a need of the armed force under the jurisdiction of the Secretary concerned to reduce the number of members in certain grades, the number of members who have completed a certain number of years of service, or the number of members who possess certain military skills or are serving in designated competitive categories.

(2) A limitation under paragraph (1) shall be consistent with the purpose set forth in section 544(a).

(b) Inapplicability to Certain Separations and Reassignments.—Sections 548 through 551 do not apply with respect to personnel who cease to be members of the Selected Reserve under adverse conditions, as characterized by the Secretary of the military department concerned.

(c) Termination of Benefits.—The eligibility of a member of a reserve component of the Armed Forces (after having involuntarily ceased to be a member of the Selected Reserve) to receive benefits and privileges under sections 548 through 551 terminates upon the involuntary separation of such member from the Armed Forces under adverse conditions, as characterized by the Secretary of the military department concerned.

SEC. 703. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING HEALTH CARE POLICY FOR THE UNIFORMED SERVICES.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) members and former members of the uniformed services, and their dependents and survivors, should have access to health care under the health care delivery system of the uniformed services regardless of the age or health care status of the person seeking the health care;

(2) such health care delivery system should include a comprehensive managed care plan;

(3) the comprehensive managed care plan should involve medical personnel of the uniformed services (including reserve component personnel), civilian health care professionals of the executive agency of such uniformed services, medical treatment facilities of the uniformed services, contract health care personnel, and the medicare system;

(4) the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Secretary of Transportation should continue to provide active duty personnel of the uniformed services with free care in medical treatment facilities of the uniformed services and to provide the other personnel referred to in paragraph (1) with health care at minimal cost to the recipients of the care; and

(5) the Secretaries referred to in paragraph (4) should offer additional health care options to the personnel referred to in paragraph (1) including, in the case of persons eligible for medicare under title XVIII of the Social Security Act, options providing for—

(A) the reimbursement of the Department of Defense by the Secretary of Health and Human Services for health care services provided such personnel at medical treatment facilities of the Department of Defense; and

(B) the sharing of the payment of the costs of contract health care by the Department of Defense and the Department of Health and Human Services, with one such department being the primary payer of such costs and the other such department being the secondary payer of such costs.

SEC. 704. MILITARY HEALTH CARE FOR PERSONS RELIANT ON HEALTH CARE FACILITIES AT BASES BEING CLOSED AND REALIGNED.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish a joint services working group on the provision of military health care to persons who rely for health care on health care facilities at military installations being closed or realigned.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The members of the working group shall include the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs, the Surgeon General of the Army, the Surgeon General of the Navy, the Surgeon General of the Air Force, or a designee of each such person, and one independent member appointed by the Secretary of Defense from among private citizens whose interest in matters within the responsibility of the working group qualify that person to represent all personnel entitled to health care under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

(c) DUTIES.—(1) In the case of each closure or realignment of a military installation that will adversely affect the accessibility of health care in a facility of the uniformed services for persons entitled to such health care under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, the working group shall solicit the views of such persons regarding suitable substitutes for the furnishing of health care to those persons under that chapter.

(2) In carrying out paragraph (1), the working group—

(A) shall conduct meetings with persons referred to in that paragraph, or representatives of such persons;

(B) may use reliable sampling techniques;

(C) shall visit the areas where closures and realignments of military installations will adversely affect the accessibility of health care in a facility of the uniformed services for persons referred to in paragraph (1) and shall conduct public meetings; and

(D) shall ensure that members of the uniformed services on active duty, members and former members of the uniformed services entitled to retired or retainer pay, and dependents and survivors of such members and retired personnel are afforded the opportunity to express views.

(d) RECOMMENDATIONS.—With respect to each closure and realignment of a military installation referred to in subsection (c), the working group shall submit to the Congress and the Secretary of Defense the working group's recommendations regarding the alternative means for continuing to provide accessible health care under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, to persons referred to in that subsection.

(e) APPLICATION OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—The provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to the joint services working group established pursuant to this section.

SEC. 705. PROGRAMS RELATING TO THE SALE OF PHARMACEUTICALS.

(a) PHARMACEUTICALS BY MAIL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the administering Secretaries, shall—

(1) establish a program that permits eligible persons to obtain prescription pharmaceuticals by mail in connection with medical care furnished to such persons under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code; and

(2) conduct the program in two or more regions selected by the Secretary, each of which consists of two or more States.

(b) RETAIL PHARMACY NETWORK.—(1) Not later than 18 months after such date, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the administering Secretaries, shall carry out the demonstration project described in paragraph (2).

(2) Under the demonstration project, the Secretary shall enter into one or more contracts or otherwise provide for the supply of prescription pharmaceuticals to eligible persons through a network of local retail pharmacies. The Secretary shall carry out the demonstration project in a region (selected by the Secretary) consisting of two or more States.

(c) ELIGIBLE PERSONS.—A person eligible to obtain pharmaceuticals under the program under subsection (a) or the demonstration project under subsection (b) is any person living in a State covered by the program or project who—

(1) is entitled to medical care under a contract for medical care entered into by the Secretary of Defense under section 1079 or 1086 of title 10, United States Code; or

(2) is over 65 years of age and resides in an area (as determined by the Secretary) that is affected by the closure of a health care facility of the uniformed services as a result of the closure or realignment of the military installation at which such facility is located.

(d) PURCHASE FEES.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the administering Secretaries, shall determine for the program and the demonstration project—

(A) subject to paragraph (2), the pharmaceuticals that may be obtained by eligible persons under the program or the demonstration project; and

(B) an appropriate fee, charge, or copayment to be paid by such persons for such pharmaceuticals obtained under the program or demonstration project.

(2) The Secretary shall, to the maximum extent practicable, ensure that the pharmaceuticals obtained under the program and the project are generic pharmaceuticals. The Secretary may provide that name brand pharmaceuticals be obtained in such circumstances as the Secretary of Defense determines appropriate.

(e) REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the establishment of the program under subsection (a) and the demonstration project under subsection (b), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the following:

(1) In the case of the program, the results of the program, recommendations, if any, for revision of the program, and a plan (including a schedule) for implementing the program throughout the United States.

(2) In the case of the demonstration project, the results of the project and the recommendations of the Secretary with respect to the advisability of making the project permanent.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms "uniformed services" and "administering Secretaries" have the meanings given those terms in section 1072 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 706. ANNUAL BENEFICIARY SURVEY.

The administering Secretaries referred to in section 1072 of title 10, United States Code, shall conduct annually a formal survey of persons receiving health care under chapter 55 of such title in order to determine the following:

(1) The availability of health care services to such persons through the health care system provided for under that chapter, the types of services received, and the facilities in which the services were provided.

(2) The familiarity of such persons with the services available under that system and with the facilities in which such services are provided.

(3) The health of such persons.

(4) The level of satisfaction of such persons with that system and the quality of the health care provided through that system.

(5) Such other matters as the administering Secretaries determine appropriate.

(a) DEMONSTRATION PROJECT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall jointly conduct a demonstration project that provides for the Secretary of Health and Human Services to reimburse the Department of Defense for health care services furnished to medicare-eligible persons at a health care facility of the Department of Defense under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT AMOUNT.—The amount of the reimbursement paid under the demonstration project for any item or service provided at a health care facility of the Department of Defense may not exceed 85 percent of the amount of the reimbursement that would be paid to a provider of services for the applicable diagnosis-related group under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c et seq.).

(c) SOURCE OF REIMBURSEMENT PAYMENTS.—Payments under the demonstration project shall be made out of the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund.

(d) PROJECT REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The demonstration project shall be conducted for a period of 4 years.

(2) At least 3, and not more than 7, health care facilities referred to in subsection (a) shall participate in the demonstration project.

(e) USE OF REIMBURSEMENTS.—The amounts paid to the Department of Defense under the demonstration project for health care services furnished at a health care facility of the department shall be available to the commander of that facility for the fiscal year in which the reimbursement is received and the following fiscal year. Such amounts shall be available for—

(1) furnishing health care services at that facility;

(2) expanding the amount and types of health care services furnished at that facility; and

(3) improving the efficiency of the use of space at that facility.

(f) REPORT.—(1) The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide by contract for a person outside the Federal Government to evaluate the results of the demonstration project.

(2) Not later than 1 year before the termination of the demonstration project, the person performing the evaluation required by paragraph (1) shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the project. The report shall contain—

(A) a discussion of the results of the projects;

(B) the person's conclusions regarding the advisability of providing for permanent implementation of a reimbursement procedure for health care services furnished at a health care facility of the Department of Defense similar to the procedure tested under the demonstration project; and

(C) any recommendations for legislation that the person considers appropriate.

(g) DEFINITION.—In this section:

(1) The term "medicare-eligible person" means a person who is eligible for benefits under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c et seq.).

(2) The term "provider of services" has the meaning given that term in section 1079(j)(2) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 711. STUDY ON RISK-SHARING CONTRACTS FOR HEALTH CARE.

Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall—

(1) carry out a study of the feasibility and advisability of entering into risk-sharing contracts with eligible organizations described in section 1876 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395mm) to furnish health care services to persons entitled to health care in a facility of a uniformed service under section 1074(b) or 1076(b) of title 10, United States Code;

(2) if the Secretary determines that entry into such contracts is feasible and advisable, develop a plan for the entry into such contracts in accordance with the Secretary's determinations under the study; and

(3) submit to Congress a report on the results of the study and on the plan.

SEC. 712. COMPREHENSIVE STUDY OF THE MILITARY MEDICAL CARE SYSTEM.

Section 733 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (10 U.S.C. 1071 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) A comprehensive review of the Federal employees health benefits program under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, in order to determine whether furnishing health care under a similar program to persons entitled to health care under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, would result in the effective provision of health care to such persons and would be cost effective."; and

(2) in subsection (d)—

(A) by redesignating paragraph (12) as paragraph (13); and

(B) by inserting after paragraph (11) the following new paragraph (12):

"(12) A discussion of the results of the review under subsection (b)(3) and the Secretary's recommendations of the basis of those results.".

SEC. 713. NATIONAL CLAIMS PROCESSING CENTER FOR CHAMPUS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the administering Secretaries, shall provide by contract for the operation of a claims processing center to be known as the "National Centralized Claims Processing System for CHAMPUS". The contract shall provide for the center to commence operations not later than 5 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The Secretary shall use competitive procedures for entering into the contract under paragraph (1).

(b) CENTER ACTIVITIES.—The claims processing center shall—

(1) maintain in electronic and written form appropriate information on health care services provided to covered beneficiaries by or through third parties under CHAMPUS or any alternative CHAMPUS program or demonstration project, including information on—

(A) the services to which such beneficiaries are entitled or eligible under an insurance plan, medical service plan, or health plan under CHAMPUS;

(B) the insurers, medical services, or health plans that provide such services; and

(C) the services available to beneficiaries under each insurance plan, medical service plan, or health plan, and the payment required of the beneficiaries and the insurer, medical service, or health plan for such services under the plan;

(2) receive in electronic or written form claims submitted by insurers, medical services, and health plans for services provided to covered beneficiaries;

(3) process, adjudicate, and pay (by electronic or other means) such claims; and

(4) provide the information described in paragraphs (1) and (2) and information on the matters referred to in paragraph (3) by telephone or other electronic means to covered beneficiaries, insurers, medical services, and health plans.

(c) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that claims submitted as described in subsection (b)(2) conform to the requirements applicable to claims submitted to the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to medical care provided under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c et seq.).

(d) IDENTIFICATION CARD.—The Secretary shall take appropriate actions to determine whether the use by covered beneficiaries of a standard identification card containing electronically readable information will enhance the capability of the claims processing center to carry out the matters set forth in subsection (b).

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The terms "administering Secretaries" and "covered beneficiary" have the meanings given such terms in paragraphs (3) and (5) of section 1072 of title 10, United States Code, respectively.

(2) The term "CHAMPUS" means the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, as defined in paragraph (4) of that section.

SEC. 714. ALTERNATIVE HEALTH CARE DELIVERY METHODOLOGIES.

(a) CONTINUATION OF HEALTH CARE REFORM INITIATIVES.—(1) During fiscal years 1993 through 1996, the Secretary of Defense shall continue to test a broad array of reform options for furnishing health care to persons who are eligible to receive health care under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The health care reform options tested in accordance with paragraph (1) shall include CHAMPUS alternatives, the CHAMPUS Reform Initiative, catchment area management, coordinated care, and such other options as the Secretary of Defense considers appropriate.

(3) During fiscal year 1994, the Secretary shall conduct a study of the health care reform options tested as described in paragraph (1). The study shall compare the cost effectiveness of such options and the extent to which the persons who received health care under those options are satisfied with that health care. The Secretary shall report the results of the study to Congress.

(b) CONTINUATION OF CHAMPUS REFORM INITIATIVE IN HAWAII AND CALIFORNIA.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that a replacement or successor contract for the CHAMPUS Reform Initiative contract applicable to California and Hawaii is awarded in sufficient time for the contractor to begin to provide health care in California and Hawaii under the replacement or successor contract not later than August 1, 1993.

(2) The Secretary shall use competitive procedures for awarding a replacement or successor contract under paragraph (1).

(3)(A) Not later than June 1, 1994, the Secretary of Defense shall provide by contract for a person outside the Federal Government to perform an evaluation of the conduct of the CHAMPUS Reform Initiative in Hawaii and California. The evaluation shall cover each of the fiscal years during which the initiative is carried out in such States under the replacement or successor contract referred to in paragraph (1) and under the predecessor contracts. The evaluation shall include a comparison of the cost savings and claims experience resulting in each such fiscal year from carrying out the initiative in such States.

(B) Not later than 1 year after the date on which the contract for evaluation is entered into under subparagraph (A), the person making the evaluation shall submit to the Secretary of Defense and to Congress a report on the results of the evaluation.

(c) INCLUSION OF POSITIVE INCENTIVES FOR ENROLLMENT UNDER THE COORDINATED CARE PROGRAM.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall modify the Policy Guidelines on the Department of Defense Coordinated Care Program to provide covered beneficiaries with additional positive incentives to enroll in the coordinated care program of the Department of Defense.

(2) The incentives may include—

(A) a reduction of the copayment and deductibles prescribed under sections 1079 and 1086 of title 10, United States Code, for covered beneficiaries who enroll in the coordinated care program;

(B) alternative cost-sharing requirements for certain types of care; and

(C) an expansion of the benefits provided under the coordinated care program beyond the benefits authorized under CHAMPUS.

(2) The modifications required under paragraph (1) shall permit health care demonstration projects in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act (including the CHAMPUS Reform Initiative, the catchment area management projects, the CHAMPUS select fiscal intermediary program in the Southeast Region, and the managed health care programs established in the Tidewater region of Virginia) and future managed care health care incentives undertaken by the Department of Defense to offer covered beneficiaries not enrolled in the coordinated care program the opportunity to use a preferred provider network of health care providers.

(3) In determining what level and types of positive incentives are likely to induce covered beneficiaries to enroll in the coordinated care program, the Secretary shall take into consideration the extent to which covered beneficiaries not enrolled in the program are permitted to choose health care providers without prior referral or approval.

(4) Subject to the availability of space and facilities and the capabilities of the medical or dental staff, the Secretary of Defense may not deny access to military treatment facilities to covered beneficiaries who do not enroll in the coordinated care program. However, the Secretary may establish reasonable admission preferences for covered beneficiaries enrolled in the program as an incentive to encourage enrollment.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "CHAMPUS" has the meaning given the term "Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services", as defined in section 1072(4) of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The term "covered beneficiary" has the meaning given that term in section 1072(5) of such title.

(3) The term "CHAMPUS Reform Initiative" has the meaning given that term in section 702(d)(1) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987 (10 U.S.C. 1073 note).

(4) The term "catchment area management" means the methodology provided for demonstration in accordance with section 731 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989 (10 U.S.C. 1092 note).

(5) The term "Policy Guidelines on the Department of Defense Coordinated Care Program" means the Policy Guidelines on the Department of Defense Coordinated Care Program that were issued by the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs on January 8, 1992.

SEC. 715. MEDICAL AND DENTAL CARE FOR CERTAIN INCAPACITATED DEPENDENTS.

(a) EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN INCAPACITATED DEPENDENTS FROM CHAMPUS COVERAGE.—Section 1086(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by inserting "and 1072(2)(I)" after "section 1072(2)(E)"; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by inserting "or 1072(2)(I)" after "section 1072(E)".

(b) APPLICABILITY OF EXCLUSION.—Section 1072(2) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(D) an unmarried legitimate child, including an adopted child or stepchild, who—

"(i) has not passed his twenty-first birthday;

"(ii) has not passed his twenty-third birthday, is enrolled in a full-time course of study at an institution of higher learning approved by the administering Secretary and is, or was at the time of the member's or former member's death, in fact dependent on him for over one-half of his support; or

"(iii) is incapable of self-support because of a mental or physical incapacity that occurs while a dependent of a member or former member under clause (i) or (ii) and is, or was at the time of the member's or former member's death, in fact dependent on him for over one-half of his support;";

(2) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (G);

(3) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (H) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "and"; and

(4) by inserting after subparagraph (H) the following new subparagraph:

"(I) an unmarried legitimate child, including an adopted child or stepchild, who is incapable of self-support because of a mental or physical incapacity that did not exist while the child was a dependent of a member or former member under subparagraph (D)(i) or (D)(ii) and is, or was at the time of the member's or former member's death, dependent on him for over one-half of his support.".

SEC. 716. REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH SERVICES IN MEDICAL FACILITIES OF THE UNIFORMED SERVICES OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1074c the following new section:

"§ 1074d. Reproductive health services in medical facilities of the uniformed services outside the United States

"(a) PROVISION OF SERVICES.—A member of the uniformed services who is on duty at a station outside the United States (and any dependent of the member who is accompanying the member) is entitled to the provision of any reproductive health service in a medical facility of the uniformed services outside the United States serving that duty station in the same manner as any other type of medical care.

"(b) PAYMENT FOR SERVICES.—(1) In the case of any reproductive health service for which appropriated funds may not be used, the administering Secretary shall require the member of the uniformed service (or dependent of the member) receiving the service to pay the full cost (including indirect costs) of providing the service.

"(2) If payment is made under paragraph (1), appropriated funds shall not be considered to have been used to provide a reproductive health service under subsection (a). The amount of such payment shall be credited to the accounts of the facility at which the service was provided.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1074c the following new item:

"1074d. Reproductive health services in medical facilities of the uniformed services outside the United States.".

TITLE VIII—ACQUISITION POLICY, ACQUISITION MANAGEMENT, AND RELATED MATTERS

Subtitle A—Defense Conversion Policy for the National Defense Technology and Industrial Base

SEC. 801. NATIONAL DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE POLICIES AND PLANNING.

(a) POLICIES AND PLANS FOR THE NATIONAL DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE.—Part IV of subtitle A of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 134 the following new chapter 135:

"CHAPTER 135—NATIONAL DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE

"Subchapter	Sec.
"I. Policies and Planning	2261
"II. Dual-Use Technologies	2271
"III. Manufacturing Technology	2281
"IV. Miscellaneous Technology Base Policies and Programs	2291
"V. Definitions	2300

"SUBCHAPTER I—POLICIES AND PLANNING

"Sec.
"2261. Policy.
"2262. National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council.
"2263. National defense technology and industrial base assessment.
"2264. National defense technology and industrial base plan.
"2265. National Defense Center for Analysis of the Technology and Industrial Base.

"§ 2261. Policy

"(a) POLICY OBJECTIVES FOR THE NATIONAL DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE.—It is the policy of Congress that the national defense technology and industrial base be capable of meeting the following national security objectives:

"(1) Supplying and equipping the force structure of the armed forces that is necessary to achieve the objectives set forth in the national security strategy report submitted to Congress by the President pursuant to section 104 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404a), the policy guidance of the Secretary of Defense provided pursuant to section 113(g) of this title, and the multiyear defense program submitted to Congress by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 114a of this title.

"(2) Sustaining production, maintenance, repair, and logistics for operations of various durations and intensity.

"(3) Maintaining advanced research and development activities to provide the armed forces with systems capable of ensuring technological superiority over potential adversaries.

"(4) Reconstituting within a reasonable period the capability to develop and produce supplies and equipment, including technologically advanced systems, in sufficient quantities to prepare fully for a major war, major national emergency, or major mobilization of the armed forces before the commencement of that war, national emergency, or mobilization.

"(b) POLICY OBJECTIVES RELATING TO DEFENSE CONVERSION.—It is the policy of Congress that the United States seek to achieve the national defense technology and industrial base objectives set forth in subsection (a) through enhanced opportunities for conversion of defense-dependent businesses and industrial and technology base sectors to dual-use capabilities.

"(c) CIVIL-MILITARY INTEGRATION POLICY.—It is the policy of Congress that the United States attain the national defense technology and industrial base objectives set forth in subsection (a) through acquisition policy reforms that have the following objectives:

"(1) Relying, to the maximum extent practicable, upon the commercial national defense technology and industrial base that is required to meet the national security needs of the United States.

"(2) Reducing the reliance of the Department of Defense on technology and industrial sectors that are economically dependent on Department of Defense business.

"(3) Reducing Federal Government barriers to the use of commercial products, processes, and standards.

"§ 2262. National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is a National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council.

"(b) COMPOSITION.—The Council is composed of the following members:

"(1) The Secretary of Defense, who shall serve as Chairman.

"(2) The Secretary of Energy.

"(3) The Secretary of Commerce.

"(c) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Council shall have the following responsibilities:

"(1) To provide overall policy guidance and direction to the military departments and the Defense Agencies, to ensure effective cooperation among departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and to provide advice and recommendations to the President, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Energy concerning—

"(A) the capabilities of the national defense technology and industrial base to meet the national security objectives of the United States;

"(B) programs for achieving the defense conversion objectives set forth in section 2261(b) of this title; and

"(C) changes in acquisition policy that strengthen the national defense technology and industrial base.

"(2) To prepare annually the assessment and plan required by sections 2263 and 2264 of this title, respectively.

"§ 2263. National defense technology and industrial base assessment

"(a) COMPREHENSIVE ASSESSMENT.—The National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council shall prepare a comprehensive annual assessment of the capability of the national defense technology and industrial base to attain each of the objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(b) SECTOR CAPABILITY ANALYSIS.—(1) The annual assessment shall include a sector capability analysis composed of the following matters:

"(A) An analysis of the role of each sector in attaining each of the objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(B) An analysis of the current and projected capability of each sector to attain each such objective for each of the following periods:

"(i) The fiscal year during which the assessment is submitted to Congress pursuant to section 2264(1) of this title.

"(ii) The following fiscal year.

"(iii) The multiyear period covered by the multiyear defense program submitted under section 114a of this title during the fiscal year referred to in clause (i).

"(2) The analysis required by paragraph (1)(B) shall include, for each sector for each period described in paragraph (1)(B), an analysis of the present and projected capabilities of prime contractors, subcontractors, the Defense Industrial Reserve under section 2292 of this title, and departments and agencies of the Federal Government with respect to each of the following:

"(A) Research and development, including research and development regarding the critical technologies identified under subsection (f).

"(B) Application of critical technologies to the production of goods and the furnishing of services.

"(C) Test and evaluation.

"(D) Low rate production.

"(E) High volume production.

"(F) Repair and maintenance.

"(G) Design and prototyping.

"(H) Work force skills and capabilities.

"(c) Foreign Dependency Considerations.—In the preparation of the annual assessment the Council shall consider, for each sector, the following factors:

"(1) The availability of essential raw materials, special alloys, composite materials, components, subsystems, production equipment, facilities, special tooling, and production test equipment for—

"(A) the sustained production of systems fully capable of meeting the performance objectives established for those systems;

"(B) the uninterrupted maintenance and repair of such systems; and

"(C) the sustained operation of such systems.

"(2) The identification of items specified in paragraph (1) that are available only from sources outside the national defense technology and industrial base.

"(3)(A) The availability of alternatives for obtaining such items from within the national defense technology and industrial base if such items become unavailable from sources outside the national defense technology and industrial base.

"(B) An analysis of any military vulnerability that could result from the lack of reasonable alternatives.

"(4) The effects on the national defense technology and industrial base that result from foreign acquisition of firms in the United States.

"(d) Financial Condition Analysis.—(1) The assessment shall include an analysis of the present and projected financial condition of each sector, for each period described in subsection (b)(1)(B).

"(2) In the analysis of the financial condition of each sector, the Council shall specifically consider the following matters:

"(A) Trends in the following:

"(i) Profitability.

"(ii) Levels of capital investment.

"(iii) Expenditures on research and development.

"(iv) Levels of debt.

"(B) The effects of actual and potential commercial sales.

"(C) The consequences of mergers, acquisitions, and takeovers.

"(D) The effects of Department of Defense financial policies, including the following:

"(i) Policies relating to progress payments or other financing by the Department of Defense.

"(ii) Policies relating to the return on contractor investment.

"(iii) Policies relating to the allocation of contract risk between the Department of Defense and a contractor.

"(E) The effects of expenditures in the sector by departments and agencies of the Federal Government other than the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy (for national security programs).

"(F) The analysis required by subsection (e).

"(e) Analysis of Impact of Department of Defense Reductions.—(1) The annual assessment shall include an analysis of the impact of the terminations and significant reductions of major research and development programs and procurement programs of the Department of Defense on the capability of each sector to attain each of the objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(2) The programs referred to in paragraph (1) are those programs in which a termination or significant reduction in expenditures—

"(A) has taken place in the fiscal year before the fiscal year in which the annual assessment is submitted to Congress pursuant to section 2264(l) of this title; or

"(B) is provided for—

"(i) in the budget submitted pursuant to section 1105(a) of title 31 in that fiscal year; and

"(ii) in the multiyear defense program submitted with such budget pursuant to section 114a of this title.

"(3) In this subsection, the term 'significant reduction', with respect to expenditures for a program for a fiscal year, means that the amount provided for that program for that fiscal year in the budget, Acts authorizing appropriations, appropriations Acts, or the multiyear defense program for that fiscal year is less than the amount provided for that program for the preceding fiscal year in the budget, Acts authorizing appropriations, appropriations Acts, or the multiyear defense program, respectively, for that preceding fiscal year by at least—

"(A) the greater of—

"(i) the amount equal to 10 percent of the amount provided for that preceding fiscal year; or

"(ii) $5,000,000; or

"(B) a lesser amount determined significant by the Secretary of Defense or the Council.

"(f) Critical Technology Analysis.—(1) The annual assessment shall include a critical technology analysis that identifies the product and process technologies that are most critical for attaining the technology and industrial base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title. The number of technologies so identified may not exceed 20. The analysis shall be prepared in consultation with the Critical Technologies Institute.

"(2) For each technology, the analysis shall include the following:

"(A) The reasons for selection of that technology as a technology critical to the Department of Defense.

"(B) The potential dual-use applications of that technology.

"(C) The relationship between the activities of the Department of Defense and other Federal agencies in the development of that technology.

"(D) The potential contributions that the private sector can be expected to make from its own resources in connection with the development of civilian applications for such technology.

"(E) A comparison of the position of the United States to the positions of other nations in the development of that technology, including the potential contributions that other nations can make to meeting the needs of the United States for that technology.

"(g) Sector Viability Analysis.—(1) The annual assessment shall include an analysis, for each of the periods described in subsection (b)(1)(B), of the following matters:

"(A) The extent to which each sector is—

"(i) dependent on defense expenditures to ensure continued viability;

"(ii) dependent on a mix of defense and nondefense Federal Government expenditures to ensure continued viability;

"(iii) dependent on a mix of Federal Government expenditures and other Federal Government programs to ensure continued viability; and

"(iv) sufficiently integrated with the commercial marketplace to ensure continued viability regardless of the level of Federal Government expenditures in the sector.

"(B) The extent to which each sector is capable of—

"(i) ongoing production with a present capability for high volume production;

"(ii) maintenance of a production base that can be converted to high volume production within a reasonable period of time; or

"(iii) reconstitution of a production base that can reinstate high volume production within a reasonable period of time.

"(2) The analysis shall specifically identify any sectors and any entities within sectors that should be considered for inclusion in the Defense Industrial Reserve under section 2292 of this title.

"(3) In this section:

"(A) The term 'defense expenditure' means an expenditure by—

"(i) the Department of Defense; or

"(ii) the Department of Energy for a national security program.

"(B) The term 'continued viability' means the capability to attain the technology and industrial base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(h) Issuance.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe by regulation a schedule for the completion of the annual assessment that ensures sufficient time for the consideration of the assessment in the preparation of the annual national defense technology and industrial base plan required by section 2264 of this title.

"§ 2264. National defense technology and industrial base plan

"(a) In General.—The National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council shall prepare an annual plan for ensuring, to the maximum extent practicable, that the policies and programs of the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, and other departments and agencies of the Federal Government are planned, coordinated, funded, and implemented in a manner designed to attain each of the technology and industrial base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title. The Council shall take into account the annual national defense technology and industrial base assessment prepared pursuant to section 2263 of this title in preparing the annual plan.

"(b) Sector Viability Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, for each of the following:

"(1) Programs and policies of the Federal Government that are necessary to ensure the continued viability of each sector that is identified in the annual assessment as being economically dependent in whole or in part upon Federal Government programs or policies.

"(2) Programs and policies of the Federal Government that are necessary in each such sector—

"(A) to reduce each economic dependency of such sector on foreign sources that could create a military vulnerability; and

"(B) to provide for alternative sources in the event that the foreign sources become unavailable.

"(3) The composition and management of the Defense Industrial Reserve under section 2292 of this title.

"(c) Manufacturing Technology Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, for the following:

"(1) The National Defense Manufacturing Technology Program established under section 2281 of this title.

"(2) The support of manufacturing extension programs under section 2283 of this title.

"(3) Programs to enhance basic research in scientific disciplines relating to manufacturing technology through—

"(A) encouraging research in colleges and universities in the United States and in associated centers of excellence; and

"(B) establishing technology transfer mechanisms, and technology education and training mechanisms, that ensure that the results of such research are readily available to United States industry.

"(4) Programs for encouraging the use of computer-integrated manufacturing to improve manufacturing quality, reduce manufacturing costs, reduce production lead times, and improve maintenance.

"(5) Programs for enhancing Department of Defense use of concurrent engineering practices in the design and development of weapon systems.

"(6) Programs providing incentives for firms in the national defense technology and industrial base to use advanced manufacturing technology and processes and to invest in improved productivity.

"(d) Critical Technologies Guidance.—For each defense critical technology, the plan shall contain the following:

"(1) Specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, with respect to the development of the technology.

"(2) The specific funding requirements of the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, and other departments and agencies of the Federal Government for the development of the technology for the 5 fiscal years following the fiscal year in which the plan is submitted pursuant to subsection (l).

"(3) A designation of the lead organization within the Department of Defense or the Department of Energy to be responsible for the development of the technology.

"(4) A summary description of the lead organization's plan for the development of the technology, including the milestone goals.

"(e) Integrated Financing Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, to ensure that the financial policies of the Department of Defense and Department of Energy (for national security programs), including the policies identified in section 2263(d)(2)(D) of this title, are designed to meet the industrial and technology base policies set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(f) Civil-Military Integration Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, to encourage the effective integration of commercial products and processes into Federal Government acquisition practices with respect to the following:

"(1) Expanding the use of commercial specifications in place of Federal Government specifications.

"(2) Increasing the use of commercial manufacturing processes instead of processes specified by the Federal Government.

"(3) Reducing the extent of unique government regulatory requirements relating to accounting and acquisition.

"(4) Identifying and ensuring the effective application by the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy (for national security programs) of research, technologies, products, information, and practices developed by other departments and agencies of the Federal Government, State and local governments, colleges and universities, nonprofit organizations, and commercial enterprises.

"(5) Identifying effective mechanisms for transferring technology and related information, to the maximum extent practicable, from the Department of Defense and Department of Energy to other departments and agencies of the Federal Government, State and local governments, colleges and universities, nonprofit organizations, and commercial enterprises.

"(6) Ensuring, to the maximum extent practicable, that technology and related information are so transferred.

"(g) Defense Conversion Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, for providing sectors and businesses at least partially dependent economically on national security expenditures with Federal Government assistance to convert from that dependence to economic viability without such dependence.

"(h) Technology and Industrial Base Work Force Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, to enhance the skills and capabilities of the work force in the national defense technology and industrial base.

"(i) Major Program Acquisition Guidance.—The plan shall provide specific guidance, including goals, milestones, and priorities, for enhancing the effectiveness of the major defense acquisition program regulations prescribed pursuant to section 2439 of this title.

"(j) Acquisition Reform Guidance.—(1) The plan shall include any recommended legislation that the Council considers appropriate for eliminating any adverse effect of Federal law on the capability of the national defense technology and industrial base to attain the objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(2) The plan shall provide specific guidance to ensure that maximum use is made of authority to waive regulations or conduct test programs in pursuit of such objectives.

"(k) Funding.—The plan shall ensure effective implementation of the guidance issued under this section by establishing funding priorities for each area of guidance identified under subsections (b) through (h) for each of the periods described in section 2263(b)(1)(B) of this title.

"(l) Issuance.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall provide the annual plan to the Secretaries of the military departments and the heads of the other elements of the Department of Defense not later than the date on which the Secretary provides such officials with the guidance required by section 113(g)(1) of this title. The Secretary of Energy and the Secretary of Commerce shall provide such guidance to appropriate officials within their respective departments.

"(2) The Secretary of Defense shall transmit to Congress, not later than March 31 of each year—

"(A) the plan prepared under this section, including any changes necessary to reflect the budget submitted by the President during that year under section 1105 of title 31; and

"(B) the national defense technology and industrial base assessment prepared pursuant to section 2263 of this title that pertains to such plan and budget.

"(3) The plan and assessment shall be submitted to Congress in classified and unclassified forms. Proprietary information that may be withheld from disclosure under section 552 of title 5 shall be provided only in the classified version.

"§ 2265. National Defense Center for Analysis of the Technology and Industrial Base

"(a) Establishment.—(1) The National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council shall establish a federally funded research and development center to be known as the 'National Defense Center for Analysis of the Technology and Industrial Base'.

"(2) The Center shall be an element of the defense acquisition university structure established under section 1746 of this title.

"(3) As determined by the Chairman of the Council, the Center shall be—

"(A) administered as a separate entity by an organization managing another federally funded research and development center; or

"(B) incorporated as a nonprofit membership corporation consisting of a consortium of other federally funded research and development centers and other nonprofit entities.

"(4) The Chairman shall ensure that there is appropriate consultation and coordination between the Center and the Critical Technologies Institute.

"(b) Operating Committee.—The Center shall have an operating committee composed of 3 members as follows:

"(1) The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, or his designee, who shall serve as Chairman of the operating committee.

"(2) An official designated by the Secretary of Energy.

"(3) An official designated by the Secretary of Commerce.

"(c) Duties.—The duties of the Center shall include, with respect to the national defense technology and industrial base, the following:

"(1) The assembly of timely and authoritative information.

"(2) Initiation of studies and analyses.

"(3) Provision of technical support and assistance to—

"(A) the Council in the preparation of the annual assessment required by section 2263 of this title and the annual plan required by section 2264;

"(B) the defense acquisition university structure and its elements; and

"(C) other departments and agencies of the Federal Government in accordance with guidance established by the Council.

"(4) Dissemination, through the National Technical Information Service of the Department of Commerce, of unclassified information and assessments for further dissemination within the Federal Government and to the private sector.".

(b) Technology and Industrial Base Planning for Major Defense Programs.—(1) Chapter 144 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2438 the following new section:

"§ 2439. Major programs: technology and industrial base plans

"(a) Acquisition Plan Requirements.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations requiring consideration of the national defense technology and industrial base in the development and implementation of acquisition plans for each major defense acquisition program.

"(b) CONTENT OF ACQUISITION PLANS.—The acquisition plan for each major defense acquisition program shall include provisions for the following:

"(1) An analysis of the capabilities of the national defense technology and industrial base to develop, produce, maintain, and support such program, including consideration of the factors set forth in section 2263(c) of this title.

"(2) Consideration of requirements for efficient manufacture during the design and production of the systems to be procured under the program.

"(3) The use of advanced manufacturing technology, processes, and systems during the research and development phase and the production phase of the program.

"(4) To the maximum extent practicable, the use of contract solicitations that encourage competing offerors to acquire, for use in the performance of the contract, modern technology, production equipment, and production systems (including hardware and software) that increase the productivity of the offerors and reduce life-cycle costs.

"(5) Encouragement of investment by United States domestic sources in advanced manufacturing technology production equipment and processes through—

"(A) recognition of the contractor's investment in advanced manufacturing technology production equipment and processes in the development of the contract objective; and

"(B) increased emphasis in source selections on the efficiency of production.

"(6) Expanded use of commercial manufacturing processes rather than processes specified by the Department of Defense.

"(7) Elimination of barriers to, and facilitation of, the integrated manufacture of commercial items and items being produced under Department of Defense contracts.

"(8) Expanded use of commercial products as set forth in section 2325 of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of that chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2438 the following new item:

"2439. Major programs: technology and industrial base plans.".

(c) IMPLEMENTATION.—(1) Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations, including milestones for actions, to ensure the timely and thorough collection of information, completion of assessments, and issuance of plans required by the provisions of subchapter I of chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a).

(2)(A) The first annual assessment required by section 2263 of such title shall be completed not later than September 30, 1993.

(B) The first annual plan required by section 2264 of such title shall be completed not later than November 15, 1993.

(C) The Secretary may prescribe regulations authorizing the presentation of information in a preliminary form in the first annual assessment and the first annual plan to the extent that the necessary information cannot reasonably be collected, analyzed, or presented in accordance with section 2263 or 2264, respectively, of title 10, United States Code, by the dates specified in subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(3) The National Defense Technology and Industrial Base Council shall establish the National Defense Center for Analysis of the Technology and Industrial Base not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act. The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that a contract solicitation is issued and a contract is awarded in a timely manner to facilitate the establishment of the Center within the period set forth in the preceding sentence.

SEC. 802. DEFENSE DUAL-USE TECHNOLOGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS.

(a) DEFENSE DUAL-USE TECHNOLOGIES.—(1) Chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 801(a)), is amended by adding after subchapter II the following:

"SUBCHAPTER II—DUAL-USE TECHNOLOGIES

"Sec.
"2271. Defense dual-use critical technology partnerships.
"2272. Commercial-military integration partnerships.
"2273. Regional technology alliances assistance program.
"2274. Office for Foreign Defense Critical Technology Monitoring and Assessment.
"2275. Overseas foreign critical technology monitoring and assessment financial assistance program.
"2276. Encouragement of technology transfer.".

(2) Section 2523 of title 10, United States Code, (relating to defense dual-use critical technology partnerships) is—

(A) transferred to subchapter II of chapter 135 of such title (as added by paragraph (1));

(B) inserted following the table of sections; and

(C) redesignated as section 2271.

(3) Subchapter II of such chapter, as added by paragraph (1) and amended by paragraph (2), is further amended by inserting after section 2271 the following new section:

"§ 2272. Commercial-military integration partnerships

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PARTNERSHIPS.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a program providing for the establishment of cooperative arrangements (hereinafter in this section referred to as 'partnerships') between the Department of Defense and entities referred to in section 2271(b) of this title in order to encourage and provide for research, development, and application of technologies to attain the national defense technology and industrial base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(b) ASSISTANCE AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary may make grants, enter into contracts, and enter into cooperative agreements and other transactions pursuant to section 2371 of this title in order to establish the partnerships.

"(2) The Secretary may not enter into a partnership under this section for a period longer than 5 years.

"(3) The Secretary may provide a partnership with technical and other assistance to facilitate the achievement of the purposes of this section, subject to the limitations in subsection (c).

"(c) FINANCIAL COMMITMENT OF NON-FEDERAL GOVERNMENT PARTICIPANTS.—(1) The Secretary shall ensure that the amount of funds provided by the Secretary under a partnership does not exceed maximum authorized percentage of the total cost of partnership activities.

"(2) The maximum authorized percentage of Federal Government funding referred to in paragraph (1) for each year of a partnership is as follows:

"(A) 50 percent in the first year.
"(B) 40 percent in the second year.
"(C) 30 percent in the third year.
"(D) 20 percent in the fourth year.
"(E) 10 percent in the fifth year.

"(3)(A) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to provide for consideration of in-kind contributions by non-Federal Government participants in a partnership for the purpose of determining the share of the partnership costs that has been or is being undertaken by such participants.

"(B) The regulations shall also ensure that the in-kind contributions of nonprofit institutions and small businesses are considered included, to the maximum extent practicable, in the non-Federal Government share of the cost of the partnership.

"(d) SELECTION PROCESS.—Competitive procedures shall be used in the establishment of partnerships.

"(e) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The criteria for the selection of a proposed partnership for establishment under this section shall include the following:

"(1) The extent to which the program proposed to be conducted by the partnership advances and enhances the national defense industrial and technology base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(2) The technical excellence of the program proposed to be conducted by the partnership.

"(3) The qualifications of the personnel proposed to participate in the partnership's research activities.

"(4) A likelihood that there will not be timely private sector investment in activities to achieve the goals and objectives of the proposed partnership other than through the partnership.

"(5) The potential effectiveness of the partnership in the further development and application of each technology proposed to be developed by the partnership for the industrial and technology base.

"(6) The extent of the financial commitment of the eligible firms to the proposed partnership.

"(7) The likelihood that the partnership will develop technologies that are sufficiently viable in the commercial sector so that such technologies will be available to meet the future reconstitution requirements and other needs of the Department of Defense described in the annual national defense technology and industrial base plan prepared under section 2264 of this title.

"(8) The likelihood that, within 5 years after the establishment of the partnership (or a lesser period established by the Secretary), Federal Government funding of the partnership will not be necessary.

"(9) Such other criteria as the Secretary prescribes.

"(f) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Defense and the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, the Director of Defense Research and Engineering shall perform the duties of the Secretary of Defense under this section.".

(4) Section 2524 of title 10, United States Code (relating to critical technology application centers) is—

(A) transferred to subchapter II of chapter 135, as added by paragraph (1) and amended by paragraphs (2) and (3);

(B) inserted at the end of that subchapter; and

(C) amended—

(i) by striking out the section heading and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"§ 2273. Regional technology alliances assistance program";

(ii) by striking out "regional critical technology application centers" in subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "regional technology alliances";

(iii) by striking out "regional critical technology application center" in subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof "regional technology alliance";

(iv) by striking out "critical technology application center" and "center" each time such terms appear and inserting in lieu thereof "regional technology alliance"; and

(v) by striking out "2523" in subsection (g) and inserting in lieu thereof "2271".

(5) Section 2525 of title 10, United States Code (relating to the Office for Foreign Defense Critical Technology Monitoring and Assessment), and section 2526 of such title (relating to the overseas foreign critical technology monitoring and assessment financial assistance programs) are—

(A) transferred to subchapter II of chapter 135 of such title, as added by paragraph (1) and amended by paragraphs (2) through (4);

(B) inserted at the end of that subchapter; and

(C) redesignated as sections 2274 and 2275, respectively.

(6) Subsection (a) of section 2274 of such title (as redesignated by paragraph (5)) is amended by inserting "Critical" after "Foreign Defense".

(7) Section 2363 of title 10, United States Code (relating to encouragement of technology transfer), is—

(A) transferred to subchapter II of chapter 135 of such title, as added by paragraph (1) and amended by paragraphs (1) through (5);

(B) inserted at the end of that subchapter; and

(C) redesignated as section 2276.

(b) FUNDING.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 201—

(1) $100,000,000 shall be available for defense dual-use critical technology partnerships;

(2) $50,000,000 shall be available for commercial-military integration partnerships;

(3) $100,000,000 shall be available for defense regional technology alliances; and

(4) $2,000,000 shall be available for the overseas critical technology monitoring and assessment financial assistance program.

SEC. 803. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF TECHNOLOGY TRANSITION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—(1) Subchapter II of chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 802), is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 2277. Office of Technology Transition

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish within the Office of the Secretary of Defense an Office of Technology Transition.

"(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the Office shall be to ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that technology developed for national security purposes is integrated into the private sector of the United States in order to enhance the national defense technology and industrial base.

"(c) SPECIFIC DUTIES.—The head of the Office shall ensure that the Office—

"(1) monitors all research and development activities that are carried out by or for the military departments and Defense Agencies, including research and development that is conducted by or for—

"(A) the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization;

"(B) the Advanced Research Projects Agency; and

"(C) the Defense Nuclear Agency;

"(2) identifies all such research and development activities that use technologies, or result in technological advancements, having potential nondefense commercial applications;

"(3) serves as a clearinghouse for, coordinates, and otherwise actively facilitates the transition of such technologies and technological advancements from the Department of Defense to the private sector;

"(4) conducts its activities in consultation and coordination with the Department of Energy; and

"(5) provides private firms with assistance to resolve problems associated with security clearances, proprietary rights, and other legal considerations involved in such a transition of technology.

"(d) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services and on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives an annual report on the activities of the Office at the same time that the budget is submitted to Congress by the President pursuant to section 1105 of title 31. The report shall contain a discussion of the accomplishments of the Office during the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year in which the report is submitted.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of subchapter II of such chapter (as added by section 802) is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2276 the following:

"2277. Office of Technology Transition.".

(b) SCHEDULE FOR ESTABLISHMENT.—The Office of Technology Transition shall commence operations within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the establishment of the Office of Technology Transition. The report shall contain a description of the organization of the Office, the staffing of the Office, and the activities undertaken by the Office.

(2) Notwithstanding section 2277(d) of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a))—

(A) the first report under that section shall be submitted not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(B) no additional report is necessary under that section in the fiscal year in which such first report is submitted.

SEC. 804. DEFENSE DUAL-USE MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY PROGRAMS.

(a) NATIONAL DEFENSE MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM.—(1) Chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code, as added by section 801(a) and amended by sections 802 and 803, is further amended by adding after subchapter II the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER III—MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY

"Sec.
"2281. National Defense Manufacturing Technology Program.
"2282. Defense advanced manufacturing technology partnerships.
"2283. Manufacturing extension programs.

"§ 2281. National Defense Manufacturing Technology Program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish a National Defense Manufacturing Technology Program to—

"(1) provide centralized guidance and direction, including goals, milestones, and priorities, to the military departments and the Defense Agencies on all matters relating to manufacturing technology;

"(2) direct the development and implementation of Department of Defense plans, programs, projects, activities, and policies that promote the development and application of advanced technologies to manufacturing processes, tools, and equipment;

"(3) improve the manufacturing quality, productivity, technology, and practices of businesses providing goods and services to the Department of Defense;

"(4) promote dual-use manufacturing processes;

"(5) disseminate to such businesses information concerning improved manufacturing improvement concepts, including information on such matters as best manufacturing practices, product data exchange specifications, computer-aided acquisition and logistics support, and rapid acquisition of manufactured parts;

"(6) sustain and enhance the skills and capabilities of the manufacturing work force; and

"(7) ensure appropriate coordination between the manufacturing technology programs and industrial preparedness programs of the Department of Defense and similar programs undertaken by other departments and agencies of the Federal Government or by the private sector.

"(b) RELATIONSHIP TO NATIONAL DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE PLAN.—The Secretary shall ensure that the program is developed and implemented in accordance with the manufacturing technology guidance set forth in the national defense technology and industrial base plan prepared under section 2264 of this title.

"(c) ANNUAL REVISIONS.—The Secretary shall revise the program not later than March 15 of each year. Each revision shall identify each manufacturing technology program, project, or activity of the Department of Defense and the amounts provided for each such program, project, and activity in the budget submitted by the President under section 1105 of title 31 for the fiscal year beginning in that year.

"(d) PROGRAM LIMITATION.—A manufacturing technology program, project, or activity of the Department of Defense may be conducted only to the extent provided for in the National Defense Manufacturing Technology Program. However, such a program, project, or activity may be conducted in excess of the limitation in the preceding sentence if it is designated by the Secretary of Defense as a higher priority matter.

"(e) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Defense, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition shall perform the duties of the Secretary of Defense under this section.".

(2) Section 203(d) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102–190; 105 Stat. 1315) is repealed.

(b) DEFENSE ADVANCED MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY PARTNERSHIPS.—(1) Section 2518 of title 10, United States Code (relating to defense advanced manufacturing technology partnerships), is—

(A) transferred to subchapter III of chapter 135 of such title, as added by subsection (a)(1);

(B) inserted at the end of that subchapter;

(C) redesignated as section 2282; and

(D) amended in subsection (d)(1) by striking out "section 2523(f)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 2271(f)".

(2) Of the amounts made available pursuant to section 203(4), $25,000,000 shall be available for defense advanced manufacturing technology partnerships under section 2282 of title 10, United States Code, as transferred and redesignated by paragraph (1).

(c) MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION PROGRAMS.—(1) Section 2517 of title 10, United States Code (relating to manufacturing extension programs), is—

(A) transferred to subchapter III of chapter 135 of such title, as added by subsection (a)(1) and amended by subsection (b);

(B) inserted at the end of that subchapter; and

(C) redesignated as section 2283.

(2) Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 201, $100,000,000 shall be available for support of manufacturing technology extension programs under section 2283 of title 10, United States Code, as transferred and redesignated by paragraph (1).

(d) DEFENSE MANUFACTURING EDUCATION PROGRAMS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 201—

(1) $25,000,000 shall be available for defense manufacturing engineering education grants under section 2196 of title 10, United States Code, and

(2) $5,000,000 shall be available for the manufacturing managers in the classroom program under section 2197 of such title.

SEC. 805. NATIONAL DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE DUAL-USE ASSISTANCE EXTENSION PROGRAMS.

(a) EXTENSION PROGRAMS.—Chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code, as added by section 801(a) and as amended by sections 802, 803, and 804, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER IV—MISCELLANEOUS TECHNOLOGY BASE POLICIES AND PROGRAMS

"Sec.

"2291. Defense dual-use assistance extension program.

"2292. Defense Industrial Reserve.

"§ 2291. Defense dual-use assistance extension program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation and coordination with the Secretary of Energy and the Secretary of Commerce, shall establish a program to achieve the national defense technology and industrial base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title by providing support to entities referred to in subsection (b) for programs described in that subsection.

"(b) PROGRAMS SUPPORTED.—The Secretary may provide support under this section for programs sponsored by the Federal Government, regional entities, States, local governments, and private entities and nonprofit organizations that assist businesses economically dependent on Department of Defense business to acquire dual-use capabilities through the provision under those programs of the following services:

"(1) Assistance in converting from government-oriented management, production, training, and marketing practices to commercial practices.

"(2) Assistance in acquiring and using public and private sector resources, literature, and other information concerning—

"(A) research, development, and production processes and practices;

"(B) identification of technologies and products having the potential for defense and nondefense commercial applications;

"(C) marketing practices and opportunities;

"(D) identification of potential suppliers, partners, and subcontractors;

"(E) identification of opportunities for government support, including support through grants, contracts, partnerships and consortia;

"(F) enhancement of work force skills and capabilities; and

"(G) trade and export assistance.

"(c) ASSISTANCE AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary may make grants, enter into contracts, enter into cooperative agreements and other transactions pursuant to section 2371 of this title, and transfer funds to another department or agency of the Federal Government in carrying out this section.

"(2) Subject to subsection (d), the Secretary may provide a program referred to in subsection (b) with technical and other assistance.

"(d) FINANCIAL COMMITMENT OF NON-DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PARTICIPANTS.—(1) The Secretary shall ensure that the amount of funds provided by the Department of Defense for a program under this section does not exceed the maximum authorized percentage of the combined amount provided by the Department of Defense and all other sources of funding for the program for any year.

"(2) The maximum authorized percentage of Department of Defense funding referred to in paragraph (1) for each year of Department of Defense assistance for a program under this section is as follows:

"(A) 50 percent in the first year.

"(B) 40 percent in the second year.

"(C) 30 percent in the third and following years.

"(e) SELECTION PROCESS.—Competitive procedures shall be used in the selection of programs to receive assistance under this section.

"(f) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The criteria for the selection of a program to receive assistance under this section shall include the following:

"(1) The extent to which the program advances and enhances the national defense industrial and technology base objectives set forth in section 2261 of this title.

"(2) The technical excellence of the program.

"(3) The qualifications of the personnel proposed to participate in the partnership's research activities.

"(4) A likelihood that there will not be timely private sector investment in activities that is sufficient to achieve the goals and objectives of the programs.

"(5) The potential effectiveness of the program in the conversion of businesses from capabilities that make the companies economically dependent on Department of Defense business to capabilities having defense and nondefense commercial applications.

"(6) The ability of the program to assist businesses adversely affected by significant reductions in Department of Defense spending.

"(7) The extent of the financial commitment by sources other than the Department of Defense.

"(8) The extent to which the program would supplement, rather than duplicate, other available services.

"(9) The likelihood that, within 5 years after the commencement of assistance for a program under this section (or a lesser period established by the Secretary), Department of Defense assistance will not be necessary to sustain the program.

"(10) Such other criteria as the Secretary prescribes.

"(g) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Defense, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition shall perform the duties of the Secretary of Defense under this section.

"(h) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—This section shall cease to be effective on September 30, 1997.".

(b) FUNDING.—(1) Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 201, $200,000,000 shall be available for defense dual-use extension programs under section 2291 of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), of which not less than $50,000,000 shall be made available to regional, State, and local government programs.

(2) Of funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993 by this Act, the Secretary may transfer not more than $50,000,000 to the appropriations made available for the support of defense dual-use extension programs under such section 2291. Amounts so transferred shall be merged with, and be available for the same purpose and the same period as, the appropriations to which transferred. The authority to transfer funds under this paragraph is in addition to any other transfer authority provided for the Secretary of Defense under this or any other Act.

SEC. 806. ADDITIONAL STATUTORY REORGANIZATION.

(a) TECHNOLOGY AND INDUSTRIAL BASE AMENDMENTS.—(1)(A) Subchapter IV of chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code, as added by section 805, is amended by adding at the end, without text, the following new section:

"§ 2292. Defense Industrial Reserve".

(B) The text of section 2 of the Defense Industrial Reserve Act (50 U.S.C. 451) is—

(VII) by striking out "(6) authorize" and inserting in lieu thereof "(F) authorize";

(VIII) by striking out "(7) authorize" and all that follows through "(B) such institution" and inserting in lieu thereof "(G) authorize and regulate the lending of any such property to any nonprofit educational institution or training school whenever (i) the program proposed by such institution or school for the use of such property will contribute materially to national defense, and (ii) such institution";

(IX) by striking out "(b)(1) The Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "(2)(A) The Secretary";

(X) by striking out "(A) storage" and inserting in lieu thereof "(i) storage";

(XI) by striking out "(B) repair" and inserting in lieu thereof "(ii) repair";

(XII) by striking out "(C) overhead" and inserting in lieu thereof "(iii) overhead"; and (XIII) by striking out "(2) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations" and inserting in lieu thereof "(B) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations".

(D) The text of section 3 of that Act (50 U.S.C. 452) is—

(i) transferred to section 2292;

(ii) inserted following subsection (b), as designated in the amendment made by subparagraph (C)(iii)(I); and

(iii) amended by striking out "As used in this Act—" and inserting in lieu thereof "(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:".

(2) Chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code, as added by section 801(a) and amended by sections 802, 803, 804, and 805 and by paragraph (1), is further amended by inserting at the end the following subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER V—DEFINITIONS

"Sec.

"2300. Definitions.

"§ 2300. Definitions

"In this chapter:

"(1) The term 'national defense technology and industrial base' means the persons and organizations that are engaged in research, development, production, or maintenance activities the majority of which are conducted within the United States and Canada.

"(2) The term 'dual-use' with respect to products, services, standards, processes, or acquisition practices, means products, services, standards, processes, or acquisition practices, respectively, that are capable of meeting requirements for private sector commercial acquisitions as well as public sector acquisitions.

"(3) The term 'dual-use critical technology' means a critical technology that has military applications and nonmilitary commercial applications.

"(4) The terms 'technology and industrial base sector' and 'sector' mean a group of public or private persons and organizations that engage in, or are capable of engaging in, similar research, development, or production activities.

"(5) The terms 'Federal laboratory' and 'laboratory' have the meaning given the term 'laboratory' in section 12(d)(2) of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a(d)(2)).

"(6) The term 'critical technology' means a technology that is—

"(A) a national critical technology; or

"(B) a defense critical technology.

"(7) The term 'national critical technology' means a technology that appears on the list of national critical technologies contained in the most recent biennial report on national critical technologies submitted to Congress by the President pursuant to section 603(d) of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6683(d)).

"(8) The term 'defense critical technology' means a technology that appears on the list of critical technologies contained, pursuant to subsection (f) of section 2263 of this title, in the most recent national defense technology and industrial base assessment submitted to Congress by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 2264(l) of this title.

"(9) The term 'eligible firm' means a company or other business entity that, as determined by the Secretary of Commerce—

"(A) conducts a significant level of its research, development, engineering, and manufacturing activities in the United States; and

"(B) is a company or other business entity the majority ownership or control of which is by United States citizens or is a company or other business of a parent company that is incorporated in a country the government of which—

"(i) encourages the participation of firms so owned or controlled in research and development consortia to which the government of that country provides funding directly or provides funding indirectly through international organizations; and

"(ii) affords adequate and effective protection for the intellectual property rights of companies incorporated in the United States.

Such term includes a consortium of such companies or other business entities, as determined by the Secretary of Commerce.

"(10) The term 'manufacturing technology' means techniques and processes designed to improve manufacturing quality, productivity, and practices, including quality control, shop floor management, inventory management, and worker training, as well as manufacturing equipment and software.

"(11) The term 'manufacturing extension program' means a public or private, nonprofit program for the improvement of the quality, productivity, and performance of United States-based small manufacturing firms in the United States.

"(12) The term 'United States-based small manufacturing firm' means a company or other business entity that, as determined by the Secretary of Commerce—

"(A) engages in manufacturing;

"(B) has less than 500 employees; and

"(C) is an eligible firm.".

(3) The annual national defense technology and industrial base assessment submitted to Congress pursuant to section 2264(l) of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 801(a)), during each year through 1995 shall include a specific assessment of the capability of the domestic textile and apparel industrial base of the United States to support national defense mobilization requirements. Each such assessment shall include the following:

(A) An identification of textile and apparel mobilization requirements of the Department of Defense that cannot be satisfied on a timely basis by domestic industries.

(B) An assessment of the effect that any inadequacy in the textile and apparel industrial base would have on a mobilization.

(C) Recommendations for ways to alleviate any such inadequacy that the Secretary considers critical to national defense mobilization requirements.

(b) CONFORMING REORGANIZATION OF TITLE 10.—(1) Part IV of subtitle A of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by redesignating the chapter 135 (relating to encouragement of aviation) in effect on the day before date of the enactment of this Act as chapter 151; and

(B) by transferring such chapter, as so redesignated, within part IV of such subtitle so as to appear in sequence immediately before chapter 152.

(2) Such chapter is amended as follows:

(A) Sections 2271, 2272, 2273, 2274, 2275, 2276, 2277, 2278, and 2279 are redesignated as 2531, 2532, 2533, 2534, 2535, 2536, 2537, 2538, and 2539, respectively.

(B) Subsection (a) of section 2532, as so redesignated, is amended by striking out "section 2271" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 2531".

(C) Subsection (a) of section 2533, as so redesignated, is amended by striking out "section 2272" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 2532".

(D) Subsection (b) of section 2534, as so redesignated, is amended by striking out "sections 2272(f) and 2279 of this title but are not subject to section 2271(a)-(d) and 2272(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 2532(f) and 2539 of this title but are not subject to section 2531(a)-(d) and 2532(a)".

(c) TRANSFERS OF SECTIONS.—(1) Section 2504 of title 10, United States Code, is—

(A) transferred to subchapter II of chapter 138 of such title;

(B) inserted at the end of that subchapter;

(C) redesignated as 2350j; and

(D) amended in subsection (a)(1) by striking out "defense industrial base" and inserting in lieu thereof "defense technology and industrial base".

(2) Section 2505 of such title is—

(A) transferred to chapter 141 of such title, as amended by section 363 of this Act;

(B) inserted at the end of that chapter; and

(C) redesignated as section 2410d.

(3) Section 2507 of such title is—

(A) transferred to chapter 141 of such title, as amended by paragraph (2);

(B) inserted at the end of that chapter; and

(C) amended—

(i) by striking out subsection (c); and

(ii) by striking out the section heading and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"§ 2410e. Miscellaneous limitations on the procurement of goods other than United States goods".

(4)(A) Section 2506 of such title is amended—

(i) in subsection (a)—

(I) by striking out "(a) Funds" and inserting in lieu thereof "(c) PROCUREMENT OF NON-AMERICAN GOODS GENERALLY.—(1) Funds";

(II) by striking out "(as defined in subsection (c))" in the matter above paragraph (1); and

(III) by redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), and (7) as subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), and (G), respectively;

(ii) in subsection (b), by striking out "(b) Consideration of the matters referred to in paragraphs (1) through (6) of subsection (a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(2) Consideration of the matters referred to in subparagraphs (A) through (F) of paragraph (1)"; and

(iii) in subsection (c)—

(I) by striking out "(c) In this section," and inserting in lieu thereof "(3) In this subsection,"; and

(II) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively;

(B) The text of such section, as so amended, is transferred to section 2410e of title 10, United States Code, as added by paragraph (3), and is inserted following subsection (b) of that section.

(d) CONFORMING REPEALS.—(1) Section 2330 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(2)(A) Part IV of subtitle A of such title is amended by striking out chapters 148, 149, and 150.

(B) The tables of chapters at the beginning of subtitle A of such title and part IV of such subtitle are amended by striking out the items relating to chapters 148, 149, and 150.

(3) The Defense Industrial Reserve Act (50 U.S.C. 450 et seq.) is repealed.

(e) TABLES OF SECTIONS.—(1) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 137 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 2330.

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of subchapter II of chapter 138 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following:

"2350j. Defense memoranda of understanding and related agreements.".

(3) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 139 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 2363.

(4) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 141 of such title, as amended by section 363 of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"2410d. Offset policy: notification.
"2410e. Miscellaneous limitations on the procurement of goods other than United States goods.".

SEC. 807. SMALL BUSINESS INNOVATION RESEARCH PROGRAM IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) AMOUNTS AVAILABLE.—For each fiscal year after fiscal year 1993, funds authorized to be appropriated to a military department or a Defense Agency of the Department of Defense for research, development, test and evaluation shall be available for research activities and for research and development activities under the Small Business Innovation Research Program in amounts as follows:

(1) For fiscal year 1993, 1.5 percent of the extramural budget of such military department or Defense Agency for such activities for that fiscal year.

(2) For fiscal year 1994, 2 percent of the extramural budget of such military department or Defense Agency for such activities for that fiscal year.

(3) For fiscal year 1995, and each fiscal year thereafter, 2.5 percent of the extramural budget of such military department or Defense Agency for such activities for that fiscal year.

(b) LIMITATION ON PROGRAM AWARDS.—Amounts paid to a small business concern by the Department of Defense under the Small Business Innovation Research Program for a project—

(1) in phase I under the program may not exceed $100,000; and

(2) in phase II under the program may not exceed $750,000.

(c) COMMERCIAL APPLICATIONS STRATEGY.—Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, shall develop and issue a strategy for effectuating the transition of successful projects under the Small Business Innovation Research Program from phase II under the program into phase III under the program.

(d) PROGRAM MANAGEMENT.—The Director of Defense Research and Engineering and the Director of the Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization of the Department of Defense shall be responsible for the participation of the military departments and Defense Agencies in the Small Business Innovation Research Program.

(e) EXTENSION OF PROGRAM.—Section 5 of Public Law 97-219 (15 U.S.C. 638 note) is amended—

(1) by striking out "Effective October 1, 1993, paragraphs" and inserting in lieu thereof "Paragraphs"; and

(2) by striking out "are repealed" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall cease to be effective with respect to departments and agencies of the Federal Government other than the Department of Defense on October 1, 1993, and are repealed effective October 1, 2000".

(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "Small Business Innovation Research Program" means the Small Business Innovation Research Program carried out pursuant to paragraphs (4) through (7) of subsection (b) of section 9 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638) and subsections (e) through (k) of such section.

(2) The term "extramural budget" has the meaning given that term in subsection (e)(1) of such section.

(3) The term "phase I", with respect to the Small Business Innovation Research Program, means the first phase described in subsection (e)(4)(A) of such section.

(4) The term "phase II", with respect to the Small Business Innovation Research Program, means the second phase described in subsection (e)(4)(B) of such section.

(5) The term "phase III", with respect to the Small Business Innovation Research Program, means the third phase described in subsection (e)(4)(C) of such section.

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE AND APPLICABILITY.—This section shall take effect on October 1, 1992.

SEC. 808. DUAL-USE DEFENSE CONVERSION PRIORITY.

During fiscal year 1993, the Secretary of Defense shall give priority in the allocation of funds under subchapters II, III, and IV of chapter 135 of title 10, United States Code (as added by sections 802 through 805) and the Small Business Innovation Research Program referred to in section 807, to the maximum extent practicable, to programs, projects, and activities that provide significant assistance for converting the capabilities of businesses that are economically dependent on Department of Defense business to capabilities having defense and nondefense commercial applications.

SEC. 809. STATUTORY CHARTER FOR THE ADVANCED RESEARCH PROJECTS AGENCY.

(a) STATUTORY CHARTER.—(1) Subchapter II of chapter 8 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 203. Advanced Research Projects Agency

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Advanced Research Projects Agency is a Defense Agency.

"(b) DIRECTOR.—(1) The head of the agency is the Director.

"(2) The Director is appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Secretary of Defense shall recommend persons for appointment to the position of Director.

"(3) Subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Defense, the Director shall perform the functions and duties provided in subsection (d).

"(c) DEPUTY DIRECTOR.—(1) There is a Deputy Director of the agency who is appointed by the Director with the approval of the Secretary of Defense.

"(2) The Deputy Director shall perform such duties and exercise such authority as may be prescribed by the Director with the approval of the Secretary of Defense.

"(3) When there is a vacancy in the office of Director or in the absence or disability of the Director, the Deputy Director shall act as Director and perform the duties, and exercise the authority, of the Director until a successor is appointed or the absence or disability ceases.

"(d) FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES.—(1) The Advanced Research Projects Agency is the central research and development organization of the Department of Defense. It is a primary responsibility of the agency to maintain the technological superiority of the United States over the potential adversaries of the United States.

"(2) The agency shall—

"(A) together with United States industry, Federal laboratories, and colleges and universities, pursue—

"(i) imaginative and innovative research and development projects having significant potential for both military and commercial applications; and

"(ii) imaginative and innovative research and development projects having significant potential solely for military applications;

"(B) support and stimulate a national technology base that—

"(i) serves both civilian and military purposes through enhanced technology sharing and otherwise; and

"(ii) by so serving both purposes, increases the productivity of both the civilian and military sectors;

"(C) manage and direct the conduct of basic and applied research and development that exploits scientific breakthroughs and demonstrates the feasibility of revolutionary approaches for improved cost and performance of advanced technology having future military applications, including advanced technology also having future civilian applications; and

"(D) stimulate increased emphasis on prototyping in defense systems and subsystems—

"(i) by conducting prototype projects embodying technology that might be incorporated in joint programs, programs in support of deployed forces, or selected programs of the military departments; and

"(ii) on request of the Secretary of a military department, by assisting that military department in any prototyping program of the military department.

"(3) The agency may, when requested and supported by a department or agency of the Federal Government not primarily involved in the performance of national security functions, manage and direct the conduct of basic and applied research and development of any other advanced technology that can be applied to increase the capability of that department or agency to attain mission objectives of the department or agency.

"(e) OTHER DUTIES.—The agency shall perform any additional duties that the Secretary of Defense assigns.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of subchapter II of such chapter is amended by inserting at the end the following:

"203. Advanced Research Projects Agency.".

(c) REFERENCE IN OTHER LAW.—Any reference in any other law to the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency shall be deemed to refer to the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

Subtitle B—Acquisition Assistance Programs

SEC. 811. SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION CERTIFICATE OF COMPETENCY PROGRAM.

Section 8(b)(7) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(b)(7)) is amended by striking out the sentence following subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"In the case of a contract entered into pursuant to the provisions of chapter 137 of title 10, United States Code, other than pursuant to simplified procedures referred to in section 2304(g) of such title, the Government procurement officer entering into the contract is not required to refer a determination of nonresponsibility made by that officer to the Administration unless the small business concern requests a determination of its responsibility, and the issuance of a certificate of responsibility, by the Administration. The solicitation for the contract shall contain a notice of the right of a small business concern to request the Administration to make a determination of its responsibility. For the purposes of that contract, the Administration is not required to process a request for certification of responsibility of a small business concern that is not submitted by that small business concern.".

SEC. 812. TEST PROGRAM FOR NEGOTIATION OF COMPREHENSIVE SMALL BUSINESS SUBCONTRACTING PLANS.

(a) EXTENSION OF PROGRAM.—Subsection (e) of section 834 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (15 U.S.C. 637 note) is amended by striking out "September 30, 1993" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1994".

(b) FISCAL YEAR 1994 PARTICIPANTS.—Such section is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (h); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection (g):

"(g) FISCAL YEAR 1994 PARTICIPANTS.—Only those contracting activities and contractors who negotiated subcontracting plans under demonstration projects conducted under the test program before October 1, 1993, may participate in demonstration projects conducted under the test program in fiscal year 1994.".

SEC. 813. EXTENSION OF TEST PROGRAM OF CONTRACTING FOR PRINTING-RELATED SERVICES FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY.—Section 843(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1989 (44 U.S.C. 502 note) is amended by striking out "October 1, 1993" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 2000".

(b) SECTION HEADING.—The heading of section 843 of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 843. CONTRACT GOAL FOR DISADVANTAGED SMALL BUSINESSES IN PRINTING-RELATED SERVICES.".

SEC. 814. CONTRACT GOAL FOR DISADVANTAGED SMALL BUSINESSES AND CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.

(a) EXTENSION OF REQUIREMENT.—Section 1207 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking out "and 1993" and inserting in lieu thereof "1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000"; and

(2) by striking out subsection (h).

(b) ACTIONS TO ATTAIN GOAL.—Subsection (e) of such section is amended—

(1) in the matter above paragraph (1), by striking out "subsection (a)—" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a):";

(2) in paragraph (1), by striking out the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "and shall actively monitor and assess the progress of the military departments, Defense Agencies, and prime contractors of the Department of Defense in attaining such goal. In making the assessment, the Secretary shall evaluate the extent to which use of the authority provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) and compliance with the requirement in paragraph (4) is effective for facilitating the attainment of the goal."; and

(3) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by inserting "(A)" after "(3)"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) Under procedures prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, a person may request the Secretary to determine whether the use of small disadvantaged business set asides by a contracting activity of the Department of Defense has caused a particular industry category to bear a disproportionate share of the progress made toward attainment of the goal established for that contracting activity for the purposes of this section. Upon making a determination that there has been that result, the Secretary shall take appropriate actions to limit the contracting activity's use of set asides in awarding contracts in that particular industry category.".

(c) SECTION HEADING.—The heading for such section is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1207. CONTRACT GOAL FOR DISADVANTAGED SMALL BUSINESSES AND CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.".

(d) FUNDING.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to title II of this Act, $15,000,000 shall be available for such fiscal year for infrastructure assistance to historically Black colleges and universities and minority institutions under section 1207(c)(3) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note).

SEC. 815. PILOT MENTOR-PROTEGE PROGRAM.

(a) FUNDING.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to title I of this Act, $55,000,000 shall be available for the pilot Mentor-Protege Program established pursuant to section 831 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note).

(b) MAJOR DEFENSE ACQUISITION PROGRAMS.—Of the amount provided in subsection (a), $25,000,000 shall be available for the direct reimbursement of developmental assistance costs incurred by mentor firms under major defense acquisition programs (as defined in section 2430 of title 10, United States Code) in the participation of such firms in the pilot Mentor-Protege Program.

(c) REGULATIONS.—(1) Congress finds that the Secretary of Defense—

(A) has not published the Department of Defense policy for the pilot Mentor-Protege Program as required by the amendment made to section 831(k) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note) by section 814(b)(4) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-190; 105 Stat. 1425); and

(B) has not prescribed regulations for the reimbursement of the costs a mentor firm may incur under section 831(g)(2) of that Act.

(2) Congress expects the Secretary of Defense to publish the policy and prescribe the regulations.

(3) Within 15 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall publish in the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation the Department of Defense policy for the pilot Mentor-Protege Program and the regulations, directives, and administrative guidance pertaining to such program as such policy, regulations, directives, and administrative guidance existed on December 6, 1991. Proposed modifications to that policy and any amendments of the matters published pursuant to the preceding sentence that are proposed in order to implement any of the amendments made by this section shall be published for public comment within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall be published in final form within 120 days after such date.

(d) DETERMINATIONS OF ELIGIBILITY.—Section 831 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(o) ELIGIBILITY OF PROTEGE FIRMS FOR CERTAIN ASSISTANCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Small Business Administration may not determine a disadvantaged small business concern to be ineligible to receive any assistance authorized under the Small Business Act on the basis that such business concern has participated in the Mentor-Protege Program or has received assistance pursuant to any developmental assistance agreement authorized under such program.

"(p) LIMITATION ON DUPLICATIVE REVIEW.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Small Business Administration may not require a firm that is entering into, or has entered into, an agreement under subsection (e) as a protege firm to submit the agreement, or any other document required by the Secretary of Defense in the administration of the Mentor-Protege Program, to the Small Business Administration for review, approval, or any other purpose.".

(e) STATUS DETERMINATIONS.—Section 831(c)(3) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note) is amended by striking out the second sentence and all that follows through "Administration" in the third sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The Secretary of Defense shall determine the status of such business concern as a disadvantaged small business concern pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary. If at any time the business concern is determined by the Secretary".

(f) NONAFFILIATION TREATMENT.—Subsection (h) of section 831 the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (10 U.S.C. 2301 note) is repealed.

SEC. 816. PROCUREMENT TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT PROGRAM.

(a) AVAILABILITY OF AUTHORIZED APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 301(5), $9,000,000 shall be available for fiscal year 1993 for carrying out the provisions of chapter 142 of title 10, United States Code.

(b) SPECIFIC PROGRAMS.—Of the amounts provided for in subsection (a), $600,000 shall be available for fiscal year 1993 for the purpose of carrying out programs sponsored by eligible entities referred to in subparagraph (D) of section 2411(1) of title 10, United States Code, that provide procurement technical assistance in distressed areas referred to in subparagraph (B) of section 2411(2) of such title. If there is an insufficient number of satisfactory proposals for cooperative agreements in such distressed areas to allow for effective use of the funds made available in accordance with this subsection in such areas, the funds shall be allocated among the

Subtitle C—Miscellaneous Acquisition Policy Matters

(b) MINIMUM AMOUNT CRITERIA FOR MAJOR DEFENSE ACQUISITION PROGRAMS.—Section 2430 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by designating the existing text as subsection (a);

(2) in paragraph (2) of that subsection, as so designated—

(A) by striking out "$200,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$300,000,000";

(B) by striking out "1980" both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "1990"; and

(C) by striking out "$1,000,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,800,000,000"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(b) The Secretary of Defense may adjust the amounts (and the base fiscal year) provided in subsection (a)(2) on the basis of Department of Defense escalation rates. An adjustment under this subsection shall be effective after the Secretary transmits a written notification of the adjustment to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives.".

(c) SELECTED ACQUISITION REPORTS.—(1) Subsection (a) of section 2432 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(3) The term 'major contract', with respect to a major defense acquisition program, means each of the six largest prime, associate, or Government-furnished equipment contracts under the program that is in excess of $40,000,000.".

(2) Subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(3)(A) The Secretary of Defense may waive the requirement for submission of Selected Acquisition Reports for a program for a fiscal year if—

"(i) the program has not entered full scale development or engineering and manufacturing development;

"(ii) a reasonable cost estimate has not been established for such program; and

"(iii) the system configuration for such program is not well defined.

"(B) The Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a written notification of each waiver under subparagraph (A) for a program for a fiscal year not later than 60 days before the President submits the budget to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31 in that fiscal year.".

(3) Subsection (c)(2) of such section is amended by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The Secretary of Defense may approve changes in the content of the Selected Acquisition Report if the Secretary provides such Committees with written notification of such changes at least 60 days before the date of the report that incorporates the changes.".

(4) Subsection (c)(3)(C) of such section is amended by striking out clauses (i) through (vii) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(i) Specification of the baseline production rate, defined as the rate or rates to be achieved at full rate production as assumed in the decision to proceed with production (commonly referred to as the 'Milestone III' decision).

"(ii) Specification, for each of the two budget years of production under the program, of the minimum sustaining production rate, defined as the production rate for each budget year that is necessary to keep production lines open while maintaining a base of responsive vendors and suppliers.

"(iii) Specification, for each of the two budget years of production under the program, of the maximum production rate, defined as the production rate for each budget year that is attainable with the facilities and tooling programmed to be available for procurement under the program or otherwise to be provided with Government funds.

"(iv) Specification, for each of the two budget years of production, of the current production rate, defined as the production rate for each budget year for which the report is submitted, based on the budget submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31.

"(v) Estimation of any cost variance—

"(I) between the budget year procurement unit costs at the production rate specified pursuant to clause (iv) and the budget year procurement unit costs at the minimum sustaining production rate specified pursuant to clause (ii); and

"(II) between the total remaining procurement cost at the production rate specified pursuant to clause (iv) and the total remaining procurement cost at the minimum sustaining production rate specified pursuant to clause (ii).

"(vi) Estimation of any cost variance—

"(I) between the budget year procurement unit costs at the current production rate specified pursuant to clause (iv) and the budget year procurement unit costs at the maximum production rate specified pursuant to clause (iii); and

"(II) between the total remaining procurement cost at the current production rate specified pursuant to clause (iv) and the total remaining procurement cost at the maximum production rate specified pursuant to clause (iii).

"(vii) Estimation of quantity variance—

"(I) between the budget year quantities assumed in the minimum sustaining production rate specified pursuant to clause (ii) and the current production rate specified pursuant to clause (iv); and

"(II) between the budget year quantities assumed in the maximum production rate specified pursuant to clause (iii) and the current production rate specified pursuant to clause (iv).".

(d) UNIT COST REPORTS.—(1) Subsection (a)(4)(C) of section 2433 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out "(e)(2)(B)(ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(e)(2)(B)".

(2) Subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out "7 days (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and legal public holidays)" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "30 calendar days".

(3) Paragraphs (1)(A), (1)(B), (2)(A), and (2)(B) of subsection (c) of such section are amended by striking out "more than" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "at least".

(4) Subsection (d) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "more than" each place it appears in paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "at least"; and

(B) in paragraph (3) of such subsection—

(i) by striking out "more than" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "at least"; and

(ii) by striking out "program within 30 days" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "program. In the case of a determination based on a quarterly report submitted in accordance with subsection (b), the Secretary shall submit the notification to Congress within 45 days after the end of the quarter. In the case of a determination based on a report submitted in accordance with subsection (c), the Secretary shall submit the notification to Congress within 45 days after the date of that report. The Secretary shall include in the notification the date on which the determination was made.".

(5) Subsection (e) of such section is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking out subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), whenever the Secretary concerned determines under subsection (d) that the program acquisition unit cost or the current procurement unit cost of a major defense acquisition program has increased by at least 15 percent, a Selected Acquisition Report shall be submitted to Congress for the first fiscal-year quarter ending on or after the date of the determination or for the fiscal-year quarter which immediately precedes the first fiscal-year quarter ending on or after that date. The report shall include the information described in section 2432(e) of this title and shall be submitted in accordance with section 2432(f) of this title.";

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking out "current program acquisition cost" and inserting in lieu thereof "program acquisition unit cost or current procurement unit cost"; and

(C) in paragraph (3), by striking out "more than" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "at least".

SEC. 823. REVISION OF RULES CONCERNING SEVERANCE PAY FOR FOREIGN NATIONALS.

(a) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—Section 2324(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph (3):

"(3)(A) Pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary and subject to the availability of appropriations, the head of an agency awarding a covered contract may waive the application of the provisions of paragraphs (1)(M) and (1)(N) to that contract if the head of the agency determines that—

"(i) the application of such provisions to the contract would adversely affect the continuation of a program, project, or activity that provides significant support services for members of the armed forces stationed or deployed outside the United States;

"(ii) the contractor has taken (or has established plans to take) appropriate actions within the contractor's control to minimize the amount and number of incidents of the payment of severance pay by the contractor to employees under the contract who are foreign nationals; and

"(iii) the payment of severance pay is necessary in order to comply with a law that is generally applicable to a significant number of businesses in the country in which the foreign national receiving the payment performed services under the contract or is necessary to comply with a collective bargaining agreement.

"(B) The head of an agency shall include in the solicitation for a covered contract a statement regarding whether a waiver has been granted under subparagraph (A) in the case of that contract.

"(C) Subparagraph (A) does not apply with respect to a contractor that is owned or controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or nationals of a foreign country, as determined by the head of the agency awarding the contract to such contractor. The head of the agency shall make such determination in accordance with the criteria and policy guidance referred to in paragraph (2)(C).".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply to covered contracts (as defined in section 2324 of title 10, United States Code) that are entered into on or after that date.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), if the applicable head of an agency makes the determinations referred to in paragraph (3)(A) of section 2324(e) of title 10, United States Code (as amended by subsection (a)), with respect to a covered contract that was in force during the period beginning on October 1, 1991, and ending on the date of the enactment of this Act, the provisions of paragraphs (1)(M) and (1)(N) of such section shall not apply to the costs, if any, incurred by the contractor for the payment under the contract of severance pay to foreign national employees whose employment under the contract was terminated during such period.

(c) REPORT ON USE OF WAIVER AUTHORITY.—Not later than March 15 of each year, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report describing the use of the waiver authority provided in section 2324(e)(3)(A) of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), during the preceding year.

SEC. 824. PROHIBITION ON PURCHASE OF UNITED STATES DEFENSE CONTRACTORS BY ENTITIES CONTROLLED BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No entity controlled by a foreign government may purchase or otherwise acquire a company engaged in interstate commerce in the United States that—

(1) is performing a Department of Defense contract, or a Department of Energy contract under a national security program, that cannot be performed satisfactorily unless that company is given access to information in a proscribed category of information; or

(2) during the previous fiscal year, was awarded—

(A) Department of Defense prime contracts in an aggregate amount in excess of $500,000,000; or

(B) Department of Energy prime contracts under national security programs in an aggregate amount in excess of $500,000,000.

(b) INAPPLICABILITY TO CERTAIN CASES.—The limitation in subsection (a) shall not apply to a purchase or other acquisition if—

(1) the Secretary of Defense determines that the purchase or other acquisition is necessary in order to ensure the availability of critical supplies or services that would not otherwise be reasonably available to the Department of Defense;

(2) the Secretary of Defense determines that the purchase or other acquisition is not detrimental to the national security interests of the United States; and

(3) the purchase or other acquisition is not suspended or prohibited pursuant to section 721 of the Defense Production Act of 1950 (50 U.S.C. App. 2170).

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "entity controlled by a foreign government" includes—

(A) any domestic or foreign organization or corporation that is effectively owned or controlled by a foreign government, and

(B) any individual acting on behalf of a foreign government, as determined by the President.

(2) The term "proscribed category of information" means a category of information that—

(A) with respect to Department of Defense contracts—

(i) includes special access information;

(ii) is determined by the Secretary of Defense to include information the disclosure of which to an entity controlled by a foreign government is not in the national security interests of the United States; and

(iii) is defined in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense for the purposes of this section; and

(B) with respect to Department of Energy contracts—

(i) is determined by the Secretary of Energy to include information described in subparagraph (A)(ii); and

(ii) is defined in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Energy for the purposes of this section.

SEC. 825. PROHIBITION ON AWARD OF CERTAIN DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AND DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY CONTRACTS TO COMPANIES OWNED BY AN ENTITY CONTROLLED BY A FOREIGN GOVERNMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A Department of Defense contract or Department of Energy contract under a national security program may not be awarded to a company owned by an entity controlled by a foreign government if it is necessary for that company to be given access to information in a proscribed category of information in order to perform the contract.

(b) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may waive the application of subsection (a) to a contract award if the Secretary determines that the waiver is essential to the national security interests of the United States.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "entity controlled by a foreign government" includes—

(A) any domestic or foreign organization or corporation that is effectively owned or controlled by a foreign government, and

(B) any individual acting on behalf of a foreign government, as determined by the Secretary concerned.

(2) The term "proscribed category of information" means a category of information that—

(A) with respect to Department of Defense contracts—

(i) includes special access information;

(ii) is determined by the Secretary of Defense to include information the disclosure of which to an entity controlled by a foreign government is not in the national security interests of the United States; and

(iii) is defined in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense for the purposes of this section; and

(B) with respect to Department of Energy contracts—

(i) is determined by the Secretary of Energy to include information described in subparagraph (A)(ii); and

(ii) is defined in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Energy for the purposes of this section.

(3) The term "Secretary concerned" means—

(A) the Secretary of Defense, with respect to Department of Defense contracts; and

(B) the Secretary of Energy, with respect to Department of Energy contracts.

SEC. 826. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE INVENTION DISPOSITION POLICY.

(a) POLICY.—To the extent permitted by law, the policy of the Department of Defense with respect to the disposition of any invention usable in the manufacture of products that is made in the performance of a federally funded research and development contract, grant, or cooperative agreement award shall be the same or substantially the same as is applied to small business firms and nonprofit organizations under chapter 18 of title 35, United States Code.

(b) WAIVER.—In awards not subject to chapter 18 of title 35, United States Code, any of the rights of the Federal Government or obligations of the performer described in sections 202 through 204 of that title may be waived or omitted if, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, it is determined that—

(1) the interests of the United States and the general public will be better served by the waiver or omission, including such cases as when the waiver or omission is necessary to obtain a uniquely or highly qualified performer; or

(2) the award involves cosponsored, cost-sharing, or joint venture research and development, and the performer, cosponsor, or joint venturer is making a substantial contribution of funds, facilities, or equipment to the work performed under the award.

(c) REQUIREMENT FOR CONFIDENTIALITY.—The Secretary of Defense should protect the confidentiality of invention disclosure, patent applications, and utilization reports required in performance or in consequence of awards to the extent permitted by section 205 of title 35, United States Code, or other applicable laws.

SEC. 827. CERTIFICATION OF CLAIMS FOR SHIPBUILDING CONTRACTS.

(a) CERTIFICATION.—Section 2405 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) If a certification referred to in subsection (b) with respect to a shipbuilding contract is determined to be deficient because of the position, status, or scope of authority of the person executing the certification, the contractor may resubmit the certification. The resubmitted certification shall be based on the supporting data that existed when the original certification was submitted. The appropriateness of the person executing the resubmitted certification shall be determined on the basis of applicable law in effect at the time of the resubmission.

"(2) If a certification is resubmitted pursuant to paragraph (1) within 30 days after the date on which the contracting officer for the contract notifies the contractor in writing of the deficiency in the original certification, the resubmitted certification shall be deemed to have been submitted at the time the original certification was submitted.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to certifications determined to be deficient on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) In the case of a certification referred to in subsection (b) of section 2405 of title 10, United States Code, that has been determined to be deficient for a reason set forth in subsection (c)(1) of that section (as added by subsection (a)) before the date of the enactment of this Act, a certification resubmitted pursuant to such subsection (c)(1) within 180 days after that date shall be deemed to have been submitted on the date of the submission of the original certification.

SEC. 828. AUTHORITY FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE TO SHARE EQUITABLY THE COSTS OF CLAIMS UNDER INTERNATIONAL ARMAMENTS COOPERATION PROGRAMS.

(a) AMENDMENT TO THE ARMS EXPORT CONTROL ACT.—Section 27(c) of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2767(c)) is amended in the second sentence by striking out "and administrative costs" and inserting in lieu thereof "costs, administrative costs, and costs of claims".

(b) AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 10.—(1) Section 2350a(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting "(including the costs of claims)" after "project" the second place it appears.

(2) Section 2350d(c) of such title is amended by inserting "and costs of claims" after "administrative costs".

SEC. 829. ADVANCE NOTIFICATION OF CONTRACT PERFORMANCE OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) NOTIFICATION REQUIRED.—(1) Chapter 141 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by section 806, is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2410f. Advance notification of contract performance outside the United States

"(a) NOTIFICATION.—(1) A firm that is performing a Department of Defense contract for an amount exceeding $10,000,000, or is submitting a bid or proposal for such a contract, shall notify the Department of Defense in advance of any intention of the firm or any subcontractor of the firm to perform outside the United States any part of the contract that exceeds $500,000 in value and could be performed inside the United States.

"(2) If a firm submitting a bid or proposal for a Department of Defense contract is required to submit a notification under this subsection, the notification shall be included in the bid or proposal.

"(b) RECIPIENT OF NOTIFICATION.—The firm shall transmit the notification—

"(1) in the case of a contract of a military department, to such officer or employee of that military department as the Secretary of the military department may direct; and

"(2) in the case of any other Department of Defense contract, to such officer or employee of the Department of Defense as the Secretary of Defense may direct.

"(c) AVAILABILITY OF NOTIFICATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the notifications (or copies) are maintained in compiled form for a period of 5 years and are available for use in the preparation of the national defense technology and industrial base assessment carried out under section 2263 of this title.

"(d) INAPPLICABILITY TO CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS.—This section shall not apply to contracts for military construction.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter, as amended by section 806, is further amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"2410f. Advance notification of contract performance outside the United States.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 2410d of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), shall take effect 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 830. ALLOWABLE COSTS.

(a) PENALTIES.—Section 2324 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a) The Secretary of Defense shall require that a covered contract provide that if the contractor submits to the Department of Defense a proposal for settlement of indirect costs incurred by the contractor for any period after such costs have been accrued and if that proposal includes the submission of a cost which is unallowable because the cost violates a cost principle in the Federal Acquisition Regulation or the Department of Defense Supplement to the Federal Acquisition Regulation, the cost shall be disallowed.

"(b)(1) If the Secretary determines that a cost submitted by a contractor in its proposal for settlement is expressly unallowable under a cost principle referred to in subsection (a) that defines the allowability of specific selected costs, the Secretary shall assess a penalty against the contractor in an amount equal to—

"(A) the amount of the disallowed costs allocated to covered contracts; plus

"(B) interest (to be computed based on regulations issued by the Secretary) to compensate the United States for the use of any funds which the contractor has been paid in excess of the amount to which the contractor was entitled.

"(2) If the Secretary determines that a proposal for settlement of indirect costs submitted by a contractor includes a cost determined to be unallowable in the case of such contractor before the submission of such proposal, the Secretary shall assess a penalty against the contractor in an amount equal to two times the amount of the disallowed cost allocated to covered contracts.

"(c) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations providing for a penalty under subsection (b) to be waived in the case of a contractor's proposal for settlement of indirect costs when—

"(1) the contractor withdraws the proposal before the formal initiation of an audit of the proposal by the Federal Government and resubmits a revised proposal; or

"(2) the amount of unallowable costs subject to the penalty is insignificant.

"(d) An action of the Secretary under subsection (a) or (b)—

"(1) shall be considered a final decision for the purposes of section 6 of the Contract Disputes Act of 1978 (41 U.S.C. 605); and

"(2) is appealable in the manner provided in section 7 of such Act (41 U.S.C. 606).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply, as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, with respect to proposals for settlement of indirect costs for contractor fiscal years for which the Federal Government has not formally initiated an audit of the proposals before that date.

SEC. 831. SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a science and technology fellowship program in accordance with this section in order to enhance the ability of the Department of Defense to recruit and retain employees who are highly qualified in fields of science and technology.

(b) NUMBER OF FELLOWSHIPS.—The Secretary of Defense may designate up to 25 employees of the Department of Defense as science and technology fellows.

(c) COVERED POSITIONS.—In order to be eligible for designation as a science and technology fellow, an employee shall be serving in a science or technology position in the Department of Defense that involves the performance of duties likely to result in significant restrictions under law on the employment activities of that employee after leaving Government service.

(d) SUPPORT FOR 2-YEAR PERIOD OF RESEARCH AND TEACHING.—After a science and technology fellow completes 2 years of Federal Government service as an employee in a science or technology position in the Department of Defense, the Secretary of Defense shall support the employment of the fellow, in accordance with subsection (e), in research or teaching in a field related to Federal Government science and technology policy for 2 years.

(e) FORMS OF SUPPORT.—(1) If the fellow engages in research or teaching referred to in subsection (d) in the defense acquisition university structure of the Department of Defense or any other institution of professional education of the Federal Government, the Secretary of Defense shall continue the fellow as an employee of the Department of Defense in a grade or level at least equal to the grade or level of the position in which the fellow served in the Department of Defense as a fellow before undertaking such research or teaching.

(2) If the fellow terminates employment as a Federal employee and engages in research or teaching referred to in subsection (d) in a nonprofit institution of higher education, the Secretary of Defense shall pay the fellow a stipend at least equal to the rate of pay and the equivalent of the employee benefits that the fellow would have received under paragraph (1) if the fellow were engaging in that research or teaching in an institution of professional education of the Federal Government.

SEC. 832. ADVISORY AND ASSISTANCE SERVICES FOR OPERATIONAL TEST AND EVALUATION.

Paragraph (3) of section 2399(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after "(3)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The limitation in subparagraph (A) does not apply to a contractor that has participated in such development, production, or testing solely as a representative of the Federal Government.".

SEC. 833. REGULATIONS RELATING TO SUBSTANTIAL CHANGES IN THE PARTICIPATION OF A MILITARY DEPARTMENT IN A JOINT ACQUISITION PROGRAM.

(a) REGULATIONS REQUIRED.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations that prohibit each military department participating in a joint acquisition program approved by the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition from terminating or substantially reducing its participation in such program without the approval of the Under Secretary.

(b) CONTENT OF REGULATIONS.—The regulations shall include the following provisions:

(1) A requirement that, before any such termination or substantial reduction in participation is approved, the proposed termination or reduction be reviewed by the Joint Requirements Oversight Council of the Department of Defense.

(2) A provision that authorizes the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition to require a military department approved for termination or substantial reduction in participation in a joint acquisition program to continue to provide some or all of the funding necessary for the acquisition program to be continued in an efficient manner.

SEC. 834. RESTRICTION ON PURCHASE OF SONOBUOYS.

(a) LIMITATION.—The Secretary of Defense may not procure a sonobuoy manufactured in a foreign country unless United States firms that manufacture sonobuoys are permitted to compete on an equal basis with foreign manufacturing firms for the sale of sonobuoys in that foreign country.

(b) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may waive the limitation in subsection (a) with respect to a particular procurement of sonobuoys if the Secretary determines that such procurement is in the national security interests of the United States.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "United States firm" has the meaning given such term in section 2505(d)(1) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 835. SHIPBUILDING TOTAL PROGRAM REPORTING.

Section 2431 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) In the application of subsection (b)(2) to reports regarding a shipbuilding program, the term 'units to be procured until procurement is completed' means the greater of—

"(1) the number of ships used in the cost and operational effectiveness analysis that supports a Milestone I decision for the program;

"(2) the number of ships used in the cost and operational effectiveness analysis that supports a Milestone II decision for the program; or

"(3) the total number of ships that would be procured under the program if the latest multiyear defense program submitted under section 114a of this title were implemented.".

TITLE IX—DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

Subtitle A—General Matters

SEC. 901. REPORT OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF ON ROLES AND MISSIONS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) REPORT.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall transmit to Congress a copy of the first report relating to the roles and missions of the Armed Forces that is submitted to the Secretary by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under section 153(b) of title 10, United States Code, after January 1, 1992.

(2) The Secretary shall transmit the report, together with his views on the report, within 30 days after receiving the report.

(b) ADDITIONAL MATTERS.—In addition to the matters required under such section 153(b), the Chairman shall include in the report referred to in subsection (a) the Chairman's comments and recommendations regarding the following matters:

(1) The extent to which the efficiency of the Armed Forces in carrying out its roles and missions can be enhanced by the elimination or reduction of duplication in the capabilities of, or by the consolidation or streamlining of organizations and activities within, the military departments and Defense Agencies.

(2) Changes in the operational tempo of forces stationed in the continental United States and changes in deployment patterns and operational tempo of forces deployed outside the United States.

(3) Changes in the readiness status of units based upon time-phased force deployment plans.

(4) Transfers of functions from the active components of the Armed Forces to the reserve components of the Armed Forces.

SEC. 902. VICE CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF.

(a) DESIGNATION AS A MEMBER OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF.—Section 151(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (5) as paragraphs (3) through (6), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph (2):

"(2) The Vice Chairman.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 154 of such title is amended—

(A) in subsection (c), by striking out "such" and inserting in lieu thereof "the duties prescribed for him as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and such other";

(B) by striking out subsection (f); and

(C) by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (f).

(2) Section 155(a)(1) of such title is amended by striking out "and the Vice Chairman."

SEC. 903. ASSISTANT TO THE CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF FOR NATIONAL GUARD AND RESERVE AFFAIRS.

Section 155 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) ASSISTANT FOR NATIONAL GUARD AND RESERVE AFFAIRS.—(1) The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff shall establish on the Joint Staff the position of Assistant to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for National Guard and Reserve Affairs.

"(2) The Assistant to the Chairman shall be a commissioned officer in the reserve components.

"(3) The Assistant to the Chairman shall be the principal adviser to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on matters concerning the reserve components.

"(4) The staff of the Assistant to the Chairman shall be members of the reserve components within the end strengths authorized by law for the number of Reserves serving on full-time active duty or, in the case of members of the National Guard, full-time National Guard duty for the purpose of organizing, administering, recruiting, instructing, or training the reserve components.".

SEC. 904. ORGANIZATION OF THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS.

(a) CONSOLIDATION OF NAVY HEADQUARTERS MANAGEMENT STRUCTURE.—The Secretary of the Navy shall consolidate and streamline the Navy headquarters establishments within the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations to reflect changes in the roles and missions of the Department of the Navy.

(b) ASSISTANT CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS FOR EXPEDITIONARY WARFARE.—(1) Section 5037 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) One of the Assistant Chiefs of Naval Operations shall be the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Expeditionary Warfare who shall be detailed from officers on the active-duty list of the Marine Corps.

"(2) An officer assigned to the position of Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Expeditionary Warfare, while so serving, has the grade of lieutenant general without vacating his permanent grade. The Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Expeditionary Warfare shall be appointed to that grade by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, for service in that position.

"(3) The principal duty of the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Expeditionary Warfare shall be to supervise the performance of all responsibilities of the Chief of Naval Operations regarding expeditionary warfare, including responsibilities regarding amphibious lift, mine warfare, naval fire support, aviation support, and other missions essential to supporting expeditionary warfare.".

(2) The Chief of Naval Operations shall transfer duties, responsibilities, and staff from other personnel within the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations as necessary to fully support the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Expeditionary Warfare.

(3) Paragraph (4) of section 525(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by inserting "or referred to in subparagraph (C)" after "subparagraph (B)"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Subparagraph (C) applies to the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Expeditionary Warfare in addition to officers designated under subparagraph (B).".

SEC. 905. CERTIFICATIONS RELATING TO THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR SPECIAL OPERATIONS AND LOW INTENSITY CONFLICT AND THE SPECIAL OPERATIONS COMMAND.

(a) CERTIFICATIONS.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall (except as otherwise provided under subsection (b)) certify to the congressional defense committees the following:

(1) That the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations and Low Intensity Conflict and the commander of the special operations command established pursuant to section 167 of title 10, United States Code, have been assigned the duties and functions specified for the Assistant Secretary and that commander, respectively, under law, the Unified Command Plan, and Department of Defense Directive No. 5138.3 (dated January 4, 1988).

(2) That the Assistant Secretary and the special operations command have been authorized the number of personnel necessary for the Assistant Secretary and the commander of the special operations command to perform such respective duties and functions.

(b) ALTERNATIVE TO CERTIFICATION.—If the Secretary of Defense is unable to make the certifications referred to in subsection (a) within the 120-day period provided in that subsection, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report notifying the committees that the Secretary is unable to make such certifications and setting forth the actions that the Secretary will take in order to enable the Secretary to make such certifications after the expiration of that period.

SEC. 906. JOINT OFFICER PERSONNEL POLICY.

(a) FIVE-YEAR EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY RELATING TO JOINT DUTY ASSIGNMENT AS PREREQUISITE FOR PROMOTION TO GENERAL OR FLAG OFFICER.—Section 619(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out "January 1, 1994" in paragraphs (1) and (2)(E) and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1999".

(c) LENGTH OF JOINT DUTY ASSIGNMENTS.—(1) Subsection (f) of section 664 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"(f) FULL TOUR OF DUTY.—An officer shall be considered to have completed a full tour of duty in a joint duty assignment upon the successful completion by that officer of a joint duty assignment, or of an assignment within the officer's military department, if the officer is certified as having gained significant experience in joint matters in that assignment by—

"(1) in the case of an assignment in a unit or organization in a combatant command, the commander of the combatant command;

"(2) in the case of an assignment in a Defense Agency, the head of that Defense Agency; or

"(3) in the case of any other assignment, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.".

(2) Subsection (d)(1)(D) of that section is amended to read as follows:

"(D) a reassignment for unusual personal reasons (including extreme hardship and medical conditions) beyond the control of the officer or the armed forces or a reassignment to another joint duty assignment.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 664 of such title is amended by striking out paragraph (3) of subsection (d) and subsections (g) and (h).

(2) Section 668(b)(1) of such title is amended by striking out "exclude—" and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof "exclude assignments for joint training or joint education.".

SEC. 907. JOINT DUTY CREDIT FOR EQUIVALENT DUTY IN OPERATIONS DESERT SHIELD AND DESERT STORM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, upon a recommendation made in accordance with paragraph (3), shall credit an officer of the Armed Forces of the United States who has completed service described in paragraph (2) as having completed a full tour of duty in a joint duty assignment for the purposes of chapter 38 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) Paragraph (1) applies to any officer who, after August 1, 1990, and before October 1, 1991, performed service in an assignment in the Persian Gulf combat zone that—

(A) provided significant experience in joint matters; or

(B) involved frequent professional interaction of that officer with (i) units and members of any of the armed forces other than the officer's armed force, or (ii) an allied armed force.

(3) The Secretary shall take action under paragraph (1) in the case of any officer if that action is recommended, with the concurrence of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, by the Chief of Staff of the Army (for an officer in the Army), the Chief of Naval Operations (for an officer in the Navy), the Chief of Staff of the Air Force (for an officer in the Air Force), or the Commandant of the Marine Corps (for an officer in the Marine Corps).

(b) INAPPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN REPORTING AND POLICY REQUIREMENTS.—Officers for whom joint duty credit has been granted pursuant to subsection (a) shall not be counted for the purposes of paragraphs (7), (8), (9), (11), or (12) of section 667 of title 10, United States Code, and subsections (a)(3) and (b) of section 662 of such title.

(c) INFORMATION ON EXERCISE OF AUTHORITY TO BE INCLUDED IN FISCAL YEAR 1993 ANNUAL REPORT.—The annual report submitted to Congress by the Secretary of Defense for fiscal year 1993 under section 113(c) of title 10, United States Code, shall include the following information:

(1) The total number of officers granted joint duty credit pursuant to subsection (a).

(2) The total number of such officers for each armed force.

(3) The total number of officers in each grade and each occupational specialty who have been granted joint duty credit pursuant to subsection (a).

(4) For each armed force, the total number of such officers in each grade and each occupational specialty who have been granted such credit.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "joint matters" has the meaning given such term in section 668(a) of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The term "Persian Gulf combat zone" means the area designated by the President as the combat zone for Operation Desert Shield, Operation Desert Storm, and related operations for purposes of section 112 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 908. CINC INITIATIVE FUND.

(a) AUTHORIZED RECIPIENTS OF FUNDS.—Subsection (a) of section 166a of title 10, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking out "funds, upon request," and all that follows through the period and inserting in lieu thereof "funds to the commander of a combatant command, upon the request of the commander, or to the Director of the Joint Staff with respect to an area or areas not within the area of responsibility of a commander of a combatant command.".

(b) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Subsection (b)(7) of such section is amended by inserting "(including transportation, translation, and administrative expenses)" before the period at the end.

(c) PRIORITY.—Subsection (c) of such section is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following:

"(c) PRIORITY.—The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in considering requests for funds in the CINC Initiative Fund or the provision of funds to the Director of the Joint Staff under subsection (a), should give priority consideration to—

"(1) requests for funds to be used for activities that would enhance the war fighting capability, readiness, and sustainability of the forces assigned to the commander requesting the funds; and

"(2) the provision of funds to be used for activities with respect to an area or areas not within the area of responsibility of a commander of a combatant command that would reduce the threat to, or otherwise increase, the national security of the United States.".

(d) LIMITATIONS.—Subsection (e)(1)(C) of such section is amended to read as follows:

"(C) not more than $5,000,000 may be used to provide military education and training (including transportation, translation, and administrative expenses) to military and related civilian personnel of foreign countries as authorized by subsection (b)(7).".

SEC. 909. DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR EQUAL OPPORTUNITY.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REESTABLISHMENT OF POSITION.—The Secretary of Defense shall reestablish within the Office of the Secretary of Defense the position of Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity and provide for the official in that position to carry out the same or similar duties that were formerly carried out by the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity before that position was abolished.

(b) STAFF SUPPORT.—The Secretary shall provide staff for the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity in a sufficient number and with sufficient qualifications to enable the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense to perform the duties of the position effectively.

(c) USE OF RESOURCES AVAILABLE.—The Secretary shall carry out the requirements of this section with the existing resources available to the Department of Defense.

SEC. 910. DELIVERY OF LEGAL SERVICES WITHIN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

Not later than 10 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall rescind or revise the memorandum of the Deputy Secretary of Defense entitled "Ensuring Execution of the Laws and Effective Delivery of Legal Services", dated March 3, 1992.

SEC. 911. COMMISSION ON THE CONDUCT AND REVIEW OF INVESTIGATIONS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall establish a Commission on the Conduct and Review of Investigations in the Department of Defense.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The Commission shall be composed of 11 persons who have significant experience in the conduct or review of major investigations, as follows:

(1) Five officials of the Department of Defense, one of whom shall be the Inspector General of the Department of Defense and one of whom shall be the General Counsel of the Department of Defense.

(2) Three former officials of the Department of Defense who, during their Department of Defense service, had substantial responsibility for the conduct or review of major investigations.

(3) Three individuals who, during current or past service in the Federal Government, have had significant experience in the conduct or review of major investigations primarily involving Federal agencies other than the Department of Defense.

(c) DUTIES.—The Commission shall—

(1) review Department of Defense policies, procedures, and practices concerning the conduct and review of investigations; and

(2) in accordance with subsection (e)(1), make any recommendations for changes in such policies, procedures, and practices that the Commission considers appropriate.

(d) REVIEW.—The matters reviewed by the Commission shall include the following:

(1) The training and qualifications of investigative personnel.

(2) The division of responsibilities among organizations with investigative, audit, and inspection functions within the Department of Defense.

(3) The coordination of activities among such organizations.

(4) Procedures for ensuring that such organizations are capable of, and responsive to, the needs of the unified combatant commands, the Defense Agencies, and other joint organizations.

(5) Procedures for ensuring that prompt and thorough investigations are conducted of allegations of misconduct concerning classified matters, operational matters, and the performance of persons in the chain of command.

(6) Procedures for ensuring that investigative organizations are not subject to improper command influence while also ensuring that such organizations are responsive to the investigative and inspection needs of the chain of command.

(7) Procedures for ensuring that there is timely and thorough coordination between organizations conducting investigations and officials within the chain of command who will be responsible for acting on the results of such investigations.

(8) Procedures for ensuring that there is a timely determination as to whether an investigation should be undertaken by a court of inquiry or other formal administrative board procedure.

(9) Procedures for ensuring that the rights of persons under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, administrative procedures, and other applicable laws and regulations are protected during the course of an investigation and subsequent review procedures.

(10) Guidance for ensuring that military and civilian officials in the chain of command receive timely instruction and advice on the procedures for undertaking appropriate management actions during the pendency of an investigation without interfering with the investigation or engaging in unlawful command influence.

(11) Procedures for ensuring that investigative materials are organized and presented in a manner that facilitates timely action by reviewing authorities.

(12) Such other matters related to the duties of the Commission as may be specified by the Secretary of Defense or the Commission.

(e) REPORT.—(1) Not later than November 15, 1993, the Commission shall transmit to the Secretary of Defense a report containing the results of its review under subsection (c) and its recommendations in accordance with that subsection.

(2) The Secretary shall transmit the report of the Commission, together with his comments and recommendations, to the congressional defense committees not later than December 15, 1993.

SEC. 912. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON COOPERATION BETWEEN THE ARMY AND THE MARINE CORPS.

(a) FINDINGS.—With respect to the roles and missions of the Army and Marine Corps, the Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Both the Army and the Marine Corps have long and proud traditions of service to the United States in times of war and peace.

(2) The Marine Corps and the Army provide complementary military capabilities that are necessary for carrying out the national military strategy of the United States.

(3) Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm demonstrated the complementary nature of those capabilities and the substantial degree to which the Army and the Marine Corps can effectively coordinate their activities and cooperate with each other.

(4) The availability of future Federal budget resources for the Army and the Marine Corps is likely to be significantly more limited than the Federal budget resources currently available for the Army and the Marine Corps.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—(1) It is the sense of Congress that the Army and the Marine Corps should intensify efforts to eliminate unnecessary duplication, to improve interservice coordination, and to specialize in areas in which each has a comparative advantage.

(2)(A) The Congress encourages the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to examine whether—

(i) the Army should provide the Marine Corps with armor and heavy fire support needed for mid-intensity and high-intensity combat; or

(ii) the Marine Corps should be equipped with the armor, heavy artillery, and other weapons and sustainability needed to engage in mid-intensity and high-intensity combat independent of the other military services.

(B) In conducting the examination, the Chairman should consider the following actions:

(i) Designating Army artillery battalions equipped with the Multiple Launch Rocket System to support Marine amphibious forces afloat.

(ii) Designating Army tank battalions to support Marine amphibious forces afloat.

(iii) Equipping Maritime Prepositioning Ships with Multiple Launch Rocket System launchers and M1 tanks to be manned by Army units in support of Marine forces.

(iv) Transferring management of all prepositioning shipping on behalf of all of the Armed Forces to the Marine Corps.

(v) Transferring Army shipping and lighterage to the Navy.

(C) In the consideration of the actions referred to in subparagraph (B), the Chairman should evaluate the logistics, training, and operational implications of each action.

(D) If the Chairman recommends that the Marine Corps be equipped with the armor, heavy artillery, other weapons, and sustainability necessary for engaging in mid-intensity and high-intensity combat independent of the other services, the Chairman should determine, as part of the examination under this paragraph, the following:

(i) What additional procurement requirements and costs are necessary to equip the Marine Corps to meet the demands of mid-intensity and high-intensity combat.

(ii) The adequacy of current prepositioning programs, mine warfare capability, naval fire support, and night fighting capability to meet the demands of mid-intensity and high-intensity combat.

(3) The Chairman should consider the matters set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2) and the options for streamlining the roles and missions of the Army and the Marine Corps in the performance of his responsibilities under section 153(b) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 913. NATIONAL GUARD AND RESERVE COMPONENT OPERATIONAL SUPPORT AIRLIFT STUDY.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall undertake a study of operational support airlift aircraft and administrative transport airlift aircraft operated by the National Guard and the reserve components.

(b) STUDY REQUIREMENTS.—The study required by subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) An inventory of all operational support airlift aircraft and administrative transport airlift aircraft that are operated by the reserve components.

(2) The peacetime utilization rate of such aircraft.

(3) The wartime mission of such aircraft.

(4) The need for such aircraft for the future base force.

(5) The current age, projected service life, and programmed retirement date for such aircraft.

(6) A list of aircraft programmed in the fiscal year 1994 future years defense program to be purchased for the reserve components or to be transferred from the active components to the reserve components.

(7) The funds programmed in the fiscal year 1994 future years defense program for procurement of replacement operational support and administrative transport airlift aircraft, and the acquisition strategy proposed for each type of replacement aircraft so programmed.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "future years defense program" means the multiyear defense program submitted to Congress pursuant to section 114a of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 914. CONTINUING REQUIREMENT FOR REPORTING ON OPERATIONAL ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 2 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 116 the following new section 117:

"§117. Continuing requirement for reporting on operational activities

"(a)(1) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives are fully and currently informed of all operational activities carried out by members of the armed forces or employees of the Department of Defense.

"(2) Matters covered by the War Powers Resolution (50 U.S.C. 1541 et seq.) shall be reported in accordance with the provisions of that resolution.

"(b) The head of any other department or agency (including the head of any independent establishment) of the Federal Government shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives any information requested by either such committee relating to any operational activity referred to in subsection (a)(1).

"(c) Information required to be submitted under subsection (a) or (b) may not be withheld from a committee referred to in such subsection on the grounds that such information would constitute the unauthorized disclosure of classified information.

"(d) In this section, the term 'operational activity' means an activity that involves the introduction of a unit or units of the armed forces into the territory, including the airspace and waters, of another country for other than traditional peacetime military activities or routine support of such activities.".

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 116 the following new item:

"117. Continuing requirement for reporting on operational activities.".

SEC. 915. LIMITATION REGARDING SUBMISSION OF THE ROLES AND MISSIONS REPORT OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF.

(a) LIMITATION.—Not more than 50 percent of the total amount appropriated pursuant to an authorization of appropriations contained in title I or II of this Act that is made available for a program referred to in subsection (b) may be obligated for such program until 60 days after the Secretary of Defense—

(1) has submitted to Congress the budget request for fiscal year 1994 for the Department of Defense; and

(2) has submitted to the congressional defense committees a copy of the first report on assignment of roles and missions of the armed forces that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff submits to the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 153(b) of title 10, United States Code, after January 1, 1992.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—Subsection (a) applies to the following programs:

(1) The F-22 Advanced Tactical Fighter program.

(2) The F-18E/F fighter program.

(3) The AX/ATA attack aircraft program.

(4) The Patriot Product Improvement Program.

(5) The Hawk Product Improvement Program.

Subtitle B—Drug Interdiction and Counter-Drug Activities

SEC. 921. ADDITIONAL SUPPORT FOR COUNTER-DRUG ACTIVITIES.

Section 1004 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 374 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking out "and 1993," and inserting in lieu thereof "1993, and 1994,"; and

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (b) the following new paragraphs:

"(9) Detection, monitoring, and communication of the movement of traffic at, near, and outside the geographic boundaries of the United States.

"(10) Linguist and intelligence analysis services.".

SEC. 922. MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION OF EQUIPMENT.

Section 374(b)(2)(A) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting "and land traffic at, near, and outside the geographic boundaries of the United States" before the period at the end.

SEC. 923. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER EXCESS PERSONAL PROPERTY.

Section 1208(c) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101-189; 10 U.S.C. 372 note) is amended by striking out "September 30, 1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1997".

SEC. 924. COUNTER-DRUG SENSOR MIX STUDY.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR STUDY AND REPORT.—The Secretary of Defense shall—

(1) conduct a study of the land-based, sea-based, and air-based systems used by the Department of Defense in carrying out activities relating to the reconnaissance, detection, and monitoring of drug traffic; and

(2) submit to Congress a report on the results of the study.

(b) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report shall include the following:

(1) An assessment of the capabilities, strengths, and weaknesses of the systems referred to in subsection (a).

(2) An evaluation of the feasibility and desirability of using airships to carry out the activities referred to in subsection (a).

(3) Recommendations regarding the optimal and most cost-effective combination of use of such systems to carry out such activities.

(c) LIMITATION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993 pursuant to an authorization of appropriations in this Act may be obligated or expended for the procurement or upgrading of a counter-drug reconnaissance, detection, and monitoring system, for research and development with respect to such a system, or for the lease or rental of such a system until the Secretary submits to Congress the report required under subsection (a).

(2) Paragraph (1) shall not prohibit obligations or expenditures of funds for any procurement, upgrading, research and development, or lease of a system that is necessary to carry out the study required under subsection (a).

SEC. 925. DEMAND REDUCTION PROGRAM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The flow of illegal drugs into the United States has not declined appreciably in recent years.

(2) While interdiction of illegal drugs helps to reduce the flow of such drugs into the United States, reduction of demand for such drugs in the United States is the most effective way to reduce that flow.

(3) Members of the Armed Forces have been more successful than persons in other segments of society in reducing their use of illegal drugs.

(4) The active and reserve components of the Armed Forces have conducted a successful outreach program to reduce demand for illegal drugs in the vicinity of military installations and National Guard facilities.

(5) It is in the interest of the United States that, to the maximum extent practicable, the outreach program be expanded to include regions beyond the vicinity of military installations and National Guard facilities and to focus on youths, in general, and inner-city youths, in particular.

(b) DEMAND REDUCTION ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct an outreach program in order to reduce demand for illegal drugs among youths. The Secretary shall conduct the program as follows:

(1) By providing travel and living allowances to members of the Armed Forces to permit such members to carry out the current demand reduction outreach program in areas beyond the vicinity of military installations and National Guard facilities.

(2) By establishing and operating camps for youths (including providing food and lodging) to provide programs and activities that encourage reduction in the demand by such youths for illegal drugs.

(3) By providing for opportunities in which appropriate personnel of the Armed Forces act as role models for youths.

(4) By providing self-worth, self-esteem, motivational, and basic skills training to youths.

(5) By providing substance abuse counseling and treatment services.

(6) By providing support for community drug treatment and prevention programs.

(7) By providing appropriate training to substance abuse counselors.

(8) By carrying out such other activities as the Secretary determines advisable to encourage the reduction in demand for illegal drugs among members of the civilian population of the United States.

(c) FUNDING.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds available to the Department of Defense for drug interdiction and counter-drug activities may be used for carrying out the program described in subsection (b).

TITLE X—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Financial Matters

SEC. 1001. TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

(a) AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER AUTHORIZATIONS.—(1) Upon determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in the national interest, the Secretary may transfer amounts of authorizations made available to the Department of Defense in this division for fiscal year 1993 between any such authorizations for that fiscal year (or any subdivisions thereof). Amounts of authorizations so transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes as the authorization to which transferred.

(2) The total amount of authorizations that the Secretary of Defense may transfer under the authority of this section may not exceed $1,500,000,000.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—The authority provided by this section to transfer authorizations—

(1) may only be used to provide authority for items that have a higher priority than the items from which authority is transferred; and

(2) may not be used to provide authority for an item that has been denied authorization by Congress.

(c) EFFECT ON AUTHORIZATION AMOUNTS.—A transfer made from one account to another under the authority of this section shall be deemed to increase the amount authorized for the account to which the amount is transferred by an amount equal to the amount transferred.

(d) NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Defense shall promptly notify Congress of transfers made under the authority of this section.

SEC. 1002. RESTATEMENT OF REQUIREMENT FOR MISSION BUDGET.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Section 114a of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) MULTIYEAR MISSION BUDGET.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a multiyear budget for the Department of Defense with the budget submitted pursuant to section 1105 of title 31. The multiyear budget shall be consistent with the multiyear defense plan required under subsection (a). In the multiyear budget the military programs within the Department of Defense shall be organized on the basis of major roles, missions, or forces of the Department of Defense.

"(2) The requirement in paragraph (1) is in addition to the requirements in any other provision of law regarding the format for the presentation regarding military programs of the Department of Defense in the budget submitted pursuant to section 1105 of title 31.".

(2) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to the budgets submitted to Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for fiscal years after fiscal year 1993.

(b) CONFORMING REPEAL.—Section 1404 of the National Defense Authorization Act of Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 104 Stat. 1675; 10 U.S.C. 114a note) is repealed.

SEC. 1003. ADDITIONAL TRANSITION AUTHORITY REGARDING CLOSING APPROPRIATION ACCOUNTS.

Section 1405(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (31 U.S.C. 1551 note) is amended by inserting after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

"(8) OBLIGATIONS AND ADJUSTMENTS OF OBLIGATIONS FOR EXPIRED BUT NOT CLOSED ACCOUNTS.—(A) Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), in the case of an appropriation account for a fiscal year before fiscal year 1992 for which the period of availability for obligation has expired but which has not been closed under the provisions of section 1552(a) of title 31, United States Code, or paragraph (4) of this section, an obligation and an adjustment of an obligation may be charged to any current appropriation account of the Department of Defense that is available for the same purpose as the expired account if—

"(i) the obligation would have been properly chargeable to the expired account before the end of the period of availability of that account; and

"(ii) the obligation is not otherwise properly chargeable to any current appropriation account of the Department of Defense.

"(B) The total amount charged to a current appropriation account under subparagraph (A) may not exceed an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(i) one percent of the total amount of the appropriations for that account; or "(ii) one percent of the total amount of the appropriations for the expired account.

"(C) No obligation or adjustment of an obligation may be charged pursuant to the provisions of this paragraph until the congressional defense committees are notified of the intent to make such a charge and a period of 30 days elapses after the notification is submitted.".

Subtitle B—Supplemental Authorization of Appropriations for Operation Desert Storm

SEC. 1011. EXTENSION OF SUPPLEMENTAL AUTHORIZATIONS.

Sections 101, 102(c), and 106 of Public Law 102-25 (105 Stat. 78) are each amended by striking out "fiscal years 1991 and 1992" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "fiscal years 1991, 1992, and 1993".

SEC. 1012. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1992.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1992 in accordance with subsection (a) of section 101 of Public Law 102-25 (105 Stat. 78), to be available under subsection (b)(1) of such section, the sum of $429,000,000 for military personnel as follows:

(1) ARMY.—For the Army, $399,000,000.

(2) NAVY.—For the Navy, $30,000,000.

(b) INCREASED LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY FOR TRANSFER OF FISCAL YEAR 1992 AUTHORIZATIONS.—The total amount of the transfer authority provided for the Secretary of Defense for fiscal year 1992 in Public Law 102-190 or any other Act is increased by the amounts of the funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) that are transferred to fiscal year 1992 appropriations accounts pursuant to sections 101 and 102(c) of Public Law 102-25, as amended by section 1011.

SEC. 1013. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1993.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1993 in accordance with subsection (a) of section 101 of Public Law 102-25 (105 Stat. 78), to be available under subsection (b) of such section, the sum of $87,700,000 for military personnel as follows:

(1) ARMY.—For the Army, $29,300,000.

(2) NAVY.—For the Navy, $35,300,000.

(3) MARINE CORPS.—For the Marine Corps, $3,100,000.

(4) AIR FORCE.—For the Air Force, $20,000,000.

(b) INCREASED LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY FOR TRANSFER OF FISCAL YEAR 1993 AUTHORIZATIONS.—The amount of the transfer authority provided in section 1001 is increased by the amounts of the funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) that are transferred to fiscal year 1993 appropriations accounts pursuant to sections 101 and 102(c) of Public Law 102-25, as amended by section 1011.

SEC. 1014. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER AUTHORIZATIONS.

The authorizations of appropriations in sections 1012 and 1013 are in addition to the amounts otherwise authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1992 and for fiscal year 1993 by any other provision of this Act or by any other Act enacted before the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle C—Defense Maritime Logistical Readiness

SEC. 1021. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that it is in the national security and economic interests of the United States for the United States to have a strong and economically viable industry of commercial oceangoing and intermodal transportation that uses privately owned and operated merchant vessels documented under the laws of the United States.

SEC. 1022. TRANSPORTATION OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE CARGOES BY WATER.

(a) USE OF PRIVATELY OWNED UNITED STATES FLAG VESSELS.—Chapter 157 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out section 2631;

(2) by striking out the item relating to that section in the table of sections for such chapter;

(3) by inserting above the table of sections the following:

"SUBCHAPTER II—MISCELLANEOUS"; and

(4) by inserting below the chapter heading the following:

"Subchapter	Sec.
"I. Transportation of Cargoes by Water	2631
"II. Miscellaneous	2632

"SUBCHAPTER I—TRANSPORTATION OF CARGOES BY WATER

"Sec.
"2631. Purposes.
"2631a. Definitions.
"2631b. Procurement regulations and practices.
"2631c. Contingency planning.
"2631d. Vessels used.
"2631e. Transportation contracts.
"2631f. Logistics readiness agreements.
"2631g. Charges.

"§ 2631. Purposes

"The purposes of this subchapter are—

"(1) to clarify when it is necessary for privately owned and operated United States flag vessels to be used for transporting Department of Defense cargoes by water;

"(2) to establish standards for the procurement and pricing of services for the transportation of Department of Defense cargoes by water and for the distribution of the cargoes so transported;

"(3) to reduce to a minimum the number of cargo transportation vessels owned, chartered, controlled, or operated by or for the United States Government that are used for transporting Department of Defense cargoes in peacetime in competition with privately owned and operated commercial vessels;

"(4) to encourage and promote the development and maintenance of a financially strong, privately owned and operated fleet of United States flag merchant vessels;

"(5) to make the greatest practicable use of the transportation capacity and services of operators of privately owned United States flag merchant vessels for the transportation of Department of Defense cargoes by water; and

"(6) to limit the acquisition, for ownership by the United States Government, of cargo vessels that would duplicate the shipping capacity of the privately owned United States flag merchant vessels.

"§ 2631a. Definitions

"In this subchapter:

"(1) The term 'Department of Defense cargo' means any supplies, goods, or other cargo owned, leased, or provided to, for, or by the armed forces that are transported by water or by intermodal service including a water segment, except that such term does not include military cargo designated by the Secretary of Defense as sensitive when private contractors proposing to carry such cargo do not have the security clearances necessary for carrying such cargo.

"(2) The term 'supplies', with respect to transportation, means all property, except land and interests in land, that at the time of transportation is readily identifiable for eventual use by the armed forces. Such term includes public works, buildings and facilities, ships, floating equipment, and vessels of every character, type, and description (together with parts, subassemblies, accessories, equipment, machine tools, and related material), stores of all kinds, and end items.

"(3) The term 'goods' includes property of armed forces personnel and items intended for eventual sale within a commissary or exchange store.

"(4) The term 'other cargo' includes any item that is provided by, arranged by, donated by, sold at less than market value by, or funded or purchased on credit provided or guaranteed by, or for which the transportation is funded or financially supported by, the Department of Defense for any other department or agency of the Federal Government, any foreign government, any international organization, or any person.

"§ 2631b. Procurement regulations and practices

"The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations (including procedures) and establish practices for the procurement of transportation by water and related distribution services for Department of Defense cargoes. The regulations and practices shall carry out section 2631 of this title and the purposes set forth in that section. The Secretary shall administer the implementation of the regulations and the required practices.

"§ 2631c. Contingency planning

"(a) CONSIDERATION OF PRIVATE CAPABILITIES.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that all studies and reports of the Department of Defense, and all actions taken in the Department of Defense, concerning sealift and related intermodal transportation requirements take into consideration the full range of the transportation and distribution capabilities that are available from operators of privately owned United States flag merchant vessels.

"(b) PRIVATE CAPACITIES PRESENTATIONS.—The Secretary shall afford each operator of a vessel referred to in subsection (a), not less often than annually, an opportunity to present to the Department of Defense information on its port-to-port and intermodal transportation capacities.

"(c) PRIVATE PARTICIPATION IN STUDIES AND REPORTS.—The Secretary shall ensure that each operator of a vessel referred to in subsection (a) is afforded an opportunity to participate in the development of studies referred to in that subsection and the preparation of reports referred to in that subsection.

"(d) CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall submit to the Secretary of Transportation, not less often than annually, a certification of compliance with the requirements of subsections (b) and (c).

"§ 2631d. Vessels used

"(a) PROHIBITION.—Except in time of war, in time of a national emergency declared by the President or Congress, or as provided in subsection (b)(3), vessels owned by the United States may not be operated in competition with privately owned United States flag commercial merchant vessels.

"(b) VESSELS TO BE USED.—(1) Department of Defense cargoes shall be transported on privately owned and operated United States flag commercial merchant vessels whenever such vessels are available with reasonable timeliness.

"(2) A privately owned United States flag merchant vessel under time charter or voyage charter to, or engaged under a contract of affreightment by, the United States may be used for the transportation of a Department of Defense cargo to the extent that vessels described in paragraph (1) are not available with reasonable timeliness.

"(3) A United States flag vessel owned, demise chartered, or otherwise controlled by the United States Government may be used for the transportation by water of Department of Defense cargoes to the extent that vessels described in paragraphs (1) and (2) are not available with reasonable timeliness.

"(4) Foreign flag vessels may be used for the transportation of Department of Defense cargoes to the extent that vessels described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) are not available with reasonable timeliness or when operated as a feeder ship in conjunction with a privately owned and operated United States flag liner vessel.

"(5) The availability of vessels with reasonable timeliness shall be determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

"§ 2631e. Transportation contracts

"(a) PROHIBITED CONTRACT PROVISIONS.—(1) A contract for the transportation of Department of Defense cargoes by water, or for intermodal service that includes transportation by water, by a common carrier may not include terms or conditions which impair the ability of the contractor to own or operate foreign flag vessels in addition to the United States flag merchant vessels.

"(2) Except as provided in section 2631f(a) of this title and except in time of war or in time of a national emergency declared by the President or Congress, the contract may not include terms or conditions which interfere with the contractor's ability to meet its common carrier obligations to the general public.

"(b) INAPPLICABILITY OF FEE LIMITATION.—Section 2306(d) of this title shall not apply to contracts referred to in subsection (a).

"§ 2631f. Logistics readiness agreements

"(a) AGREEMENTS REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall enter into logistics readiness agreements with the contractors holding contracts referred to in section 2631e(a) of this title. The agreement with a contractor shall contain the terms and conditions under which the contractor shall, in time of war, national emergency, or foreign crisis, provide services to meet the transportation requirements projected under subsection (d). The agreement may also include provisions for the contractor to meet surge or other transportation requirements.

"(b) CAPACITY PROCURED.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall enter into logistics readiness agreements for capacity equal to at least the entire requirement projected under subsection (d).

"(2) The total capacity covered by logistics readiness agreements may be less than the capacity required by paragraph (1) to the extent that the contractors referred to in subsection (a) do not offer sufficient capacity to meet the entire requirement.

"(c) REQUIRED PROVISIONS.—A logistics readiness agreement shall contain the following provisions:

"(1) The basic terms for providing transportation and distribution services for Department of Defense cargoes.

"(2) The capacity and services guaranteed, including—

"(A) vessel transportation, intermodal services, and shoreside services; and

"(B) computer-tracking capabilities.

"(3) Provision for the negotiation, as needed, of additional terms and specific rates and charges for transportation and distribution services that become necessary to meet specific conditions of a war, national emergency, or foreign regional crisis.

"(d) COORDINATION OF POST-SURGE TRANSPORTATION REQUIREMENTS WITH THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Secretary of Transportation at least annually the Department of Defense projections of weekly post-surge requirements, in excess of normal peacetime requirements, for the transportation of Department of Defense cargoes to meet logistic and war fighting requirements in the event of war or other national emergency or in response to foreign regional crises.

"§ 2631g. Charges

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, freight charges and other charges for services under a contract referred to in section 2631e of this title or a logistics readiness agreement referred to in section 2631f of this title shall be earned upon tender to and acceptance of the cargo by the contractor. If such amounts are not paid within 30 days after the submission of the contractor's invoice to the Department of Defense, a late payment charge shall accrue beginning on the thirty-first day after the date of the submission. The late payment charge shall accrue at the rate then in effect for interest payments under section 12 of the Contracts Disputes Act of 1978 (41 U.S.C. 611).".

(b) TRANSITION REQUIREMENT.—Within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall commence negotiations with contractors holding contracts referred to in subsection (a) of section 2631e of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), for the purpose of entering into logistics readiness agreements referred to in section 2631f of such title (as added by subsection (a)). Within 180 days after that date, the Secretary shall enter into such agreements as are mutually acceptable to the Secretary and the contractors concerned. Each agreement entered into pursuant to this subsection shall be for an initial term of not less than 5 years.

SEC. 1023. MODERNIZING OTHER PROGRAMS.

(a) REQUIRED ACTIONS.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Transportation shall promptly take such actions as are appropriate to modernize, update, revise, or eliminate the current Sealift Readiness Program consistent with this subtitle and the amendments made by section 1022(a).

(b) PROHIBITED ACTIONS.—No agency of the United States Government may require a party to a logistics readiness agreement referred to in section 2631f of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 1022(a)), to enter into or remain enrolled in the Sealift Readiness Program or any similar program as a condition for being awarded a contract to provide transportation or distribution services, whether or not such contract is covered by section 2631e of such title.

Subtitle E—Miscellaneous Matters

SEC. 1041. REPORT ON THE UNITED STATES STRATEGIC POSTURE IN THE MIDDLE EAST AND PERSIAN GULF REGION.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT.—Not later than February 1, 1993, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the United States strategic posture in the Middle East and Persian Gulf region.

(b) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report shall include a description of the following matters:

(1) The adequacy of United States power projection forces, strategic lift, forward deployed forces, prepositioned materiel, and force sustainability capabilities for protecting United States strategic interests in the Middle East and the Persian Gulf region and to ensure the security of Israel, Egypt, and Persian Gulf states friendly to the United States.

(2) United States policy, plans, and programs for ensuring Israel's military and technological superiority over potential threats.

(3) United States capabilities for assisting Israel in a military emergency and the adequacy of United States military assistance and technology transfer for ensuring that Israel has the capability to deter war and to defend its territory with minimal risk and loss of life.

(4) The state of strategic cooperation between the United States and Israel, including—

(A) a thorough assessment of options for prepositioning in Israel appropriate defense articles for use by the United States in the region; and

(B) an assessment of United States policies, plans, and programs for ensuring that maximum advantage is taken of Israel's strategic location and Israel's ability to provide unique options regarding military technologies and production.

(5) The adequacy of United States power projection forces, military assistance, arms transfers, and cooperation arrangements for ensuring that Egypt, as the leading Arab democracy and a key partner in the Camp David accords, is secure against outside threats and can play a major role in regional security efforts with the United States.

(6) The adequacy of United States power projection forces, military assistance, and arms transfers for protecting the Gulf Cooperation Council States.

(7) The adequacy of the capabilities of the United States and countries friendly to the United States for deterring and defending against long-range missile threats and the use of weapons of mass destruction in the Middle East and the Persian Gulf region.

(c) INTELLIGENCE ASSESSMENT.—As part of the report submitted pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall provide a military threat assessment for the Middle East and Persian Gulf region. The intelligence assessment shall include a description of—

(1) the overall military threat to United States strategic interests in the Persian Gulf region;

(2) the overall military threat to Israel and the military threats to Israel from individual countries, including an assessment of the Arab-Israeli military balance and a discussion of the changes taking place in that balance;

(3) the military threats to Egypt;

(4) the military threats to the Gulf Cooperation Council States; and

(5) the threats to United States interests and to regional States friendly to the United States that result from the proliferation of long-range missiles and weapons of mass destruction.

(d) FORM OF REPORT.—The report may be submitted in classified and unclassified forms.

SEC. 1042. STUDY OF PROVIDING FORWARD PRESENCE OF NAVAL FORCES DURING PEACETIME.

(a) ANALYSIS REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct an analysis of options for providing forward presence of naval forces during peacetime. The analysis shall include an evaluation of the following considerations:

(1) The requirements of the commanders of the combatant commands for providing naval forces for forward peacetime presence.

(2) The capacity of alternative groups of naval forces, including aircraft carriers, large amphibious ships, and large surface combatants, to fulfill the forward presence mission.

(3) Potential locations and associated costs for homeporting additional aircraft carriers or other naval forces overseas.

(4) Estimated operations cost differentials for supporting forward naval operations.

(5) Estimated investment cost differentials for supporting forward naval operations.

(6) Potential availability of facilities for supporting forward naval operations.

(7) Potential host nation support or other offset contributions.

(b) REPORT.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the analysis required by subsection (a). Funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1994 may not be obligated for the aircraft carrier replacement program until the Secretary of Defense submits the report to the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 1043. PROHIBITION ON CONTRACTING WITH SUPPORTERS OF THE SECONDARY ARAB BOYCOTT OF ISRAEL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 141 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by section 1032, is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2410h. Prohibition on contracting with supporters of the secondary Arab boycott of Israel

"(a) Under section 3(5)(A) of the Export Administration Act of 1979 (50 U.S.C. App. 2402(5)(A)), it is the policy of the United States to oppose restrictive trade practices or boycotts fostered or imposed by foreign countries against other countries friendly to the United States or against any other United States person.

"(b)(1) Consistent with the policy referred to in subsection (a), no Department of Defense prime contract in excess of the small purchase threshold, as defined in section 4(11) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(11)), may be awarded to a foreign person, foreign company, or other foreign entity unless that person, company, or entity certifies to the Secretary of Defense that it does not comply with the secondary Arab boycott of Israel.

"(2) The Secretary of Defense may waive the prohibition in paragraph (1) in specific instances when the Secretary determines that the waiver is necessary in the national security interests of the United States. Within 15 days after the end of each calendar quarter, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report identifying each contract for which a waiver was granted under this paragraph during such quarter.

"(c) Subsection (b) does not apply to contracts for consumable supplies, provisions, or services that are intended to be used for the support of the United States or of allied forces in a foreign country, or to contracts pertaining to the use of any equipment, technology, data, or services for intelligence or classified purposes, or to the acquisition or lease of any such equipment, technology, data, or services, by the United States Government in the interests of national security.".

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter, as amended by section 1032, is further amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2410d the following:

"2410h. Prohibition on contracting with supporters of the secondary Arab boycott of Israel.".

The report shall not be printed as a public document.

(n) RESERVATION OF RIGHT TO AMEND OR REPEAL CHARTER.—The right to alter, amend, or repeal this section is expressly reserved to the Congress.

(o) TAX-EXEMPT STATUS.—The corporation shall maintain its status as an organization exempt from taxation as provided in the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. If the corporation fails to maintain such status, the charter granted by this section shall expire.

(p) EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS TO NAMES.—The corporation shall have the sole and exclusive right to use the names "The Retired Enlisted Association, Incorporated", "The Retired Enlisted Association", "Retired Enlisted Association", and "TREA", and such seals, emblems, and badges as the corporation may lawfully adopt. Nothing in this subsection may be construed to conflict or interfere with rights that are established or vested before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(q) TERMINATION.—If the corporation fails to comply with any of the restrictions or provisions of this section, the charter granted by this section shall expire.

(r) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

SEC. 1048. PROGRAM TO COMMEMORATE WORLD WAR II.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense may, during fiscal years 1993 through 1995, conduct a program to commemorate the 50th anniversary of World War II and to coordinate, support, and facilitate other such commemoration programs and activities of the Federal Government, State and local governments, and other persons.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—During fiscal years 1993 through 1995, funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for operation and maintenance of Defense Agencies shall be available to conduct the program referred to in subsection (a).

(c) PROGRAM ACTIVITIES.—The program referred to in subsection (a) may include activities and ceremonies—

(1) to provide the people of the United States with a clear understanding and appreciation of the lessons and history of World War II;

(2) to thank and honor veterans of World War II and their families;

(3) to pay tribute to the sacrifices and contributions made on the home front by the people of the United States;

(4) to foster an awareness in the people of the United States that World War II was the central event of the 20th century that defined the postwar world;

(5) to highlight advances in technology, science, and medicine related to military research conducted during World War II;

(6) to inform wartime and postwar generations of the contributions of the Armed Forces of the United States to the United States;

(7) to recognize the contributions and sacrifices made by World War II allies of the United States; and

(8) to highlight the role of the Armed Forces of the United States, then and now, in maintaining world peace through strength.

(d) AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, authorize the manufacture, reproduction, use, sale, or distribution of logos, trademarks, seals, and similar items for the program referred to in subsection (a), and grant exclusive or nonexclusive licenses for such purposes.

(2) The Secretary may, in furtherance of the program referred to in subsection (a) and in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, grant exclusive or nonexclusive licenses for any copyrighted material for which the Secretary holds an exclusive license or owns the copyright as transferred through assignment, bequest, or otherwise. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any proceeds received as a result of these activities shall be deposited into the account established by subsection (e).

(e) ESTABLISHMENT OF ACCOUNT.—(1) There is established in the Treasury of the United States an account to be known as the "Department of Defense 50th Anniversary of World War II Commemoration Account" which shall be administered by the Secretary of Defense as a single account. There shall be deposited into the account all proceeds derived from activities described in subsection (d).

(2) The Secretary may use the funds in the account established in paragraph (1) only for the purpose of conducting the program referred to in subsection (a).

(3) Not later than 60 days after the termination of the authority of the Secretary to conduct the commemoration program referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary shall transmit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing an accounting of all the funds deposited into and expended from the account or otherwise expended under this section, and of any amount remaining in the account. Unobligated funds which remain in the account after termination of the authority of the Secretary under this section shall be held in the account until transferred by law after the Committees receive the report.

(f) PROVISION OF VOLUNTARY SERVICES.—(1) Notwithstanding section 1342 of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary of Defense may accept from any person voluntary services to be provided in furtherance of the program referred to in subsection (a).

(2) A person providing voluntary services under this subsection shall be considered an employee of the Federal Government for the purpose of chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code, relating to compensation for work-related injuries, and for the purpose of chapter 176 of title 28, United States Code, relating to tort claims. Such a person who is not otherwise employed by the Federal Government shall not be considered to be a Federal employee for any other purpose by reason of the provision of such services.

(3) The Secretary of Defense may provide for reimbursement of incidental expenses which are incurred by a person providing voluntary services under this subsection. The Secretary of Defense shall determine which expenses are eligible for reimbursement under this paragraph.

SEC. 1049. ELIMINATION OF REPORTS REQUIRED BY LAW.

(a) UNDER TITLE 10.—(1) Section 673(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(2) Section 2362 of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out subsection (c); and

(B) by redesignating subsections (d) and (e) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively.

(3) Section 2401 of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) The Secretary may make a contract described in subsection (a)(1) if—

"(1) the Secretary has been specifically authorized by law to make the contract; and

"(2) the Secretary determines that such a lease is warranted based on an analysis of the cost to the United States (including lost tax revenue) of any such lease or charter arrangement compared with the cost to the United States of direct procurement of the aircraft or naval vessel by the United States.";

(B) by striking out subsection (e); and

(C) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (e).

(4) Section 2672a(b) of such title is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(5) Section 2823 of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out subsection (b); and

(B) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (b) and (c), respectively.

(6) Section 2854 of such title is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by striking out "(a) Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "The Secretary"; and

(B) by striking out subsection (b).

(7)(A) Section 2861 of such title is repealed.

(B) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 169 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 2861.

(8) Section 2864(b) of such title is amended by striking out "after the 21-day period" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(9) Section 7308 of such title is amended by striking out subsection (c).

(10) Section 7309(b) of such title is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(b) REPEAL OF COMPARABLE BUDGETING REQUIREMENT.—(1) Section 2217 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 131 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 2217.

(c) UNDER TITLE 37.—Section 1008(a) of title 37, United States Code, is amended by striking out the last sentence.

(d) UNDER OTHER LAWS.—(1) Section 18(a) of the Military Selective Service Act (50 U.S.C. App. 468(a)) is amended by striking out ", except that no order" in the first sentence and all that follows through the end of the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(2) Section 112 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989 (Public Law 100–180; 101 Stat. 1037) is amended by striking out subsection (c).

(3) Section 1309 of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1989 (Public Law 100–456; 10 U.S.C. 113 note) is repealed.

SEC. 1050. LIMITATION ON USE OF EXCESS CONSTRUCTION OR FIRE EQUIPMENT FROM DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCKS IN FOREIGN ASSISTANCE OR MILITARY SALES PROGRAMS.

(a) LIMITATION.—Excess construction or fire equipment from the stocks of the Department of Defense may be transferred to any foreign country or international organization pursuant to part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.) or section 21 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2761) only if—

(1) no department or agency of the Federal Government other than the Department of Defense and no State submits to the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service a request for such equipment during the period for which the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service accepts such a request; or

(2) the President determines that the transfer is necessary in order to respond to an emergency for which the equipment is especially suited.

(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in subsection (a) shall be construed to limit the authority to transfer construction or fire equipment under section 2547 of title 10, United States Code.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "construction or fire equipment" includes tractors, scrapers, loaders, graders, bulldozers, dump trucks, generators, pumpers, fuel and water tankers, crash trucks, utility vans, rescue trucks, ambulances, hook and ladder units, compressors, and miscellaneous fire fighting equipment.

SEC. 1051. RESTRICTION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS FOR NEW MUSEUMS.

(a) PROHIBITION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS FOR CERTAIN NEW MUSEUMS.—Except as provided in subsection (b), funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1992 may not be obligated for the purposes of—

(1) the construction or capitalization of—

(A) the National D-Day Museum;

(B) the Airborne and Special Operations Museum; or

(C) the Naval Undersea Museum; or

(2) the renovation of the submarine U.S.S. Blueback for the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry.

(b) EXCEPTION.—The funds referred to in subsection (a) may be obligated for the purpose specified for a museum referred to in that subsection if, with respect to that museum, the Secretary of Defense certifies to Congress that—

(1) the use of Department of Defense funds for that museum is of a higher priority than the use of such funds for the expansion of any existing Department of Defense museum;

(2) in authorizing construction of a new Department of Defense museum, the Secretary would select that museum as one of the Secretary's first four choices for the construction of such a new museum; and

(3) the use of Department of Defense funds for that purpose would make a unique contribution to the mission of the military departments.

SEC. 1052. ARMY MILITARY HISTORY FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 401 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 4316. Military history fellowships

"(a) FELLOWSHIPS.—The Secretary of the Army shall prescribe regulations under which the Secretary may award fellowships in military history of the Army to the persons described in subsection (b).

"(b) ELIGIBLE PERSONS.—The persons eligible for awards of fellowships under this section are citizens and nationals of the United States who—

"(1) are graduate students in United States military history;

"(2) have completed all requirements for a doctoral degree other than preparation of a dissertation; and

"(3) agree to prepare a dissertation in a subject area of military history determined by the Secretary.

"(c) REGULATIONS.—The regulations prescribed under this section shall include—

"(1) the criteria for award of fellowships;

"(2) the procedures for selecting recipients;

"(3) the basis for determining the amount of a fellowship; and

"(4) the total amount that may be awarded as fellowships during an academic year.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding after the item relating to section 4315 the following:

"4316. Military history fellowships.".

SEC. 1053. TRANSFER OF CERTAIN VESSELS.

The Secretary of the Navy shall transfer to the Department of Transportation the following vessels, to be assigned as training ships to Texas A&M University at Galveston, Texas, and to the Maine Maritime Academy at Castine, Maine, on the date of the decommissioning of such vessels:

(1) The U.S.N.S. Chauvenet (T–AG–29).

(2) The U.S.N.S. Harkness (T–AG–32).

SEC. 1054. REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF COMBATANT AND ESCORT VESSELS IN NAVY YARDS.

(a) REPEAL.—Subsection (a) of section 7299a of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—Subsections (b), (c), and (d) of section 7299a of title 10, United States Code, are redesignated as subsections (a), (b), and (c), respectively.

SEC. 1055. COOPERATIVE MILITARY AIRLIFT AGREEMENTS.

(a) LIQUIDATION OF CREDITS AND LIABILITIES.—Section 2350c(a)(2) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking out all after "liquidated" and inserting in lieu thereof "as agreed upon by the parties. Liquidation shall be either by direct payment to the country that has provided the greater amount of transportation or by the providing of in-kind transportation services to that country. The liquidation shall occur on a regular basis, but not less often than once every 12 months.".

(b) COUNTRIES ELIGIBLE FOR COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—Section 2350c(e)(1) of such title is amended by striking out "or New Zealand" and inserting in lieu thereof ", New Zealand, Japan, and the Republic of Korea".

SEC. 1056. SPECIAL OPERATIONS FORCES.

(a) GRADE FOR CERTAIN COMMANDERS.—Section 1311(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987 (10 U.S.C. 167 note) is amended by inserting after "the United States Pacific Command," the following: "the United States Southern Command, the United States Central Command,".

(b) REPEAL OF DUPLICATIVE PROVISIONS.—Subsections (c), (d), and (e) of section 9115 of Public Law 99–500 and subsections (c), (d), and (e) of section 9115 of Public Law 99–591 are repealed.

SEC. 1057. PERMANENT AUTHORITY TO PAY CERTAIN EXPENSES OF PERSONNEL OF DEVELOPING COUNTRIES FOR ATTENDANCE AT BILATERAL OR REGIONAL COOPERATION CONFERENCES.

Subsection (e) of section 1051 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

SEC. 1058. UNITED STATES COURT OF MILITARY APPEALS AMENDMENTS.

(a) UNIFIED FEDERAL RETIREMENT FOR JUDGES.—(1) Section 945 (article 145) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i)(1) A person appointed as a judge of the United States Court of Military Appeals shall be subject to the Federal Employees' Retirement System as of the date of the appointment.

"(2) Section 302 of the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986 (5 U.S.C. 8331 note) shall apply to a judge of the United States Court of Military Appeals who is subject to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability System on the day before the date on which the judge becomes subject to the Federal Employees' Retirement System under this section. In the application of section 302 of that Act to such judge, the judge shall be treated as having made an election under section 301 of that Act to become subject to the Federal Employees' Retirement System effective as of that date.

"(3) In this section:

"(A) The term 'Federal Employees' Retirement System' means the provisions of chapter 84 of title 5.

"(B) The term 'Civil Service Retirement and Disability System' means the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5.".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to persons who are appointed as judges of the United States Court of Military Appeals on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3)(A) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall also apply in accordance with this paragraph to judges of the United States Court of Military Appeals who served in regular active service as such on or after November 29, 1989, and before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), a judge referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be subject to the Federal Employees' Retirement System as of the later of November 29, 1989, or the date of the judge's appointment as a judge of the United States Court of Military Appeals.

(C) A judge referred to in subparagraph (B) who, on the day before the date as of which the judge would become subject to the Federal Employees' Retirement System under that subparagraph, was subject to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability System may elect to continue to be subject to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability System instead of the Federal Employees' Retirement System. A judge making that election shall submit the election in writing to the Director of the Office of Personnel Management within 10 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. The election is irrevocable.

(D) A judge who does not make an election pursuant to subparagraph (C)—

(i) shall receive a lump sum refund from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund equal to the difference between the total amount deducted and withheld from the pay of the judge under section 8334 of title 5, United States Code, during the service as a judge of the court on and after November 29, 1989, and before the date of the enactment of this Act and the total amount that would have been deducted and withheld from the pay of the judge under section 8422 of such title during that service if the judge had been subject to the provisions of chapter 84 of that title during such service; and

(ii) may, within 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, deposit in the Thrift Savings Fund any amount not exceeding the difference between the total amount that the judge could have contributed to the Fund under section 8432(a) of title 5, United States Code, during the service referred to in clause (i) and the amount, if any, that was contributed to the Fund by the judge under section 8351 of such title during that service.

(E) A lump sum contribution shall be made to the Thrift Savings Fund in accordance with section 8432(c) of title 5, United States Code, for a deposit made by a judge pursuant to subparagraph (D)(ii). The amount of the contribution shall be equal to the total amount of the contribution that would have been made under that section during the service covered by the deposit if the total amount deposited had been deducted and withheld from the pay of the judge for contribution to the Thrift Savings Fund under section 8432(a) of that title in equal amounts monthly during that service. The lump sum contribution shall be made out of funds available for the pay of judges of the United States Court of Military Appeals for the fiscal year in which the deposit is made.

(F) Amounts deposited in the Thrift Savings Fund pursuant to subparagraphs (D)(ii) and (E) shall be deemed not to cause the contributions made to that Fund by or for a judge in the year of the deposit to exceed any limitation referred to in section 8432(d) or 8440(a)(3) of title 5, United States Code.

(G) In this paragraph:

(i) The term "Federal Employees' Retirement System" means the provisions of chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code.

(ii) The term "Civil Service Retirement and Disability System" means the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 83 of such title.

(b) CHIEF JUDGE.—(1) Section 943(a) (article 143(a)) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) CHIEF JUDGE.—(1) The chief judge of the United States Court of Military Appeals shall be the judge of the court in regular active service who is senior in commission among the judges of the court who—

"(A) have served for one or more years as judges of the court; and

"(B) have not previously served as chief judge.

"(2) In any case in which there is no judge of the court in regular active service who has served as a judge of the court for at least one year, the judge of the court in regular active service who is senior in commission and has not served previously as chief judge shall act as the chief judge.

"(3) Except as provided in paragraph (4), a judge of the court shall serve as the chief judge under paragraph (1) for a term of 5 years. If no other judge is eligible under paragraph (1) to serve as chief judge upon the expiration of that term, the chief judge shall continue to serve as chief judge until another judge becomes eligible under that paragraph to serve as chief judge.

"(4)(A) The term of a chief judge shall be terminated before the end of 5 years if—

"(i) the chief judge leaves regular active service as a judge of the court; or

"(ii) the chief judge notifies the other judges of the court in writing that such judge desires to be relieved of his duties as chief judge.

"(B) The effective date of a termination of the term under subparagraph (A) shall be the date on which the chief judge leaves regular active service or the date of the notification under subparagraph (A)(ii), as the case may be.

"(5) If a chief judge is temporarily unable to perform his duties as a chief judge, the duties shall be performed by the judge of the court in active service who is present, able and qualified to act, and is next in precedence.".

(2) For purposes of section 943(a) of title 10, United States Code, as amended by paragraph (1)—

(A) the person serving as the chief judge of the United States Court of Military Appeals on the date of the enactment of this Act shall be deemed to have been designated as the chief judge under such section; and

(B) the 5-year term provided in paragraph (3) of such section shall be deemed to have begun on the date on which such judge was originally designated as the chief judge under section 867(a) or 943 of title 10, United States Code, as the case may be, as that provision of law was in effect on the date of the designation.

SEC. 1059. AMENDMENTS TO THE UNIFORM CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE.

(a) JURISDICTION.—Section 803(a) (article 3(a)) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Subject to section 843 of this title (article 43), a person who is in a status in which the person is subject to this chapter and who committed an offense against this chapter while formerly in a status in which the person was subject to this chapter is not relieved from amenability to the jurisdiction of this chapter for that offense by reason of a termination of that person's former status.".

(b) CERTAIN ADJUDICATIONS AND POSTPONEMENTS OF SENTENCES.—(1) Section 857 (article 57) of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) In any case in which a court-martial sentences a person referred to in paragraph (2) to confinement, the convening authority may postpone the service of the sentence to confinement, without the consent of that person, until after the person has been permanently released to the armed forces by a State or foreign country referred to in that paragraph.

"(2) Paragraph (1) applies to a person subject to this chapter who—

"(A) while in the custody of a State or foreign country is temporarily returned by that State or foreign country to the armed forces for trial by court-martial; and

"(B) after the court-martial, is returned to that State or foreign country under the authority of a mutual agreement or treaty, as the case may be.

"(3) In this subsection, the term 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, a Territory, and a possession of the United States.".

(2) Section 863 (article 63) of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out "imposed" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "approved"; and

(B) by inserting "approved" in the third sentence after "the pretrial agreement, the".

(c) OFFENSES.—(1)(A) Section 911 (article 111) of such title is amended to read as follows:

"§911. Art. 111. Drunken or reckless operation of a vehicle, aircraft, or vessel

"Any person subject to this chapter who—

"(1) operates or physically controls any vehicle, aircraft, or vessel in a reckless or wanton manner or while impaired by a substance described in section 912a(b) of this title (article 112a(b)), or

"(2) operates or is in actual physical control of any vehicle, aircraft, or vessel while drunk or when the alcohol concentration in the person's blood or breath is 0.10 grams of alcohol per 100 milliliters of blood or 0.10 grams of alcohol per 210 liters of breath, as shown by chemical analysis, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.".

(B) The item relating to section 911 in the table of sections at the beginning of subchapter X of chapter 47 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"911. 111. Drunken or reckless operation of a vehicle, aircraft, or vessel.".

(2) Section 918(3) (article 118(3)) of such title is amended by striking out "others" and inserting in lieu thereof "another".

(3) Section 920(a) (article 120(a)) of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out "with a female not his wife"; and

(B) by striking out "her".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply with respect to offenses committed on or after that date.

SEC. 1060. CIVIL-MILITARY COOPERATIVE ACTION PROGRAM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Many of the skills, capabilities, and resources that the Armed Forces have developed to meet military requirements can assist in meeting the civilian domestic needs of the United States.

(2) Members of the Armed Forces have the training, education, and experience to serve as role models for United States youth.

(3) As a result of the reductions in the Armed Forces resulting from the ending of the Cold War, the Armed Forces will have fewer overseas deployments and lower operating tempos, and there will be a much greater opportunity than in the past for the Armed Forces to assist civilian efforts to address critical domestic problems.

(4) The United States has significant domestic needs in areas such as health care, nutrition, education, housing, and infrastructure that cannot be met by current and anticipated governmental and private sector programs.

(5) There are significant opportunities for the resources of the Armed Forces, which are maintained for national security purposes, to be applied in cooperative efforts with civilian officials to address these vital domestic needs.

(6) Civil-military cooperative efforts can be undertaken in a manner that is consistent with the military mission and does not compete with the private sector.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF CIVIL-MILITARY COOPERATIVE ACTION PROGRAM.—Chapter 20 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by adding at the end the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER II—CIVIL-MILITARY COOPERATION

"Sec.

"410. Civil-Military Cooperative Action Program.

"§410. Civil-Military Cooperative Action Program

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish a program to be known as the 'Civil-Military Cooperative Action Program'. Under the program, the Secretary may, in accordance with other applicable law, use the skills, capabilities, and resources of the armed forces to assist civilian efforts to meet the domestic needs of the United States.

"(b) PROGRAM OBJECTIVES.—The program shall have the following objectives:

"(1) To enhance individual and unit training and morale in the armed forces through meaningful community involvement of the armed forces.

"(2) To encourage cooperation between civilian and military sectors of society in addressing domestic needs.

"(3) To advance equal opportunity.

"(4) To enrich the civilian economy of the United States through education, training, and transfer of technological advances.

"(5) To improve the environment and economic and social conditions.

"(6) To provide opportunities for disadvantaged citizens of the United States.

"(c) ADVISORY COUNCILS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall encourage the establishment of advisory councils on civil-military cooperation at the regional, State, and local levels, as appropriate, in order to obtain recommendations for projects and activities under the program and guidance for the program from persons who are knowledgeable about regional, State, and local conditions and needs.

"(2) The advisory councils should include officials from relevant military organizations, representatives of appropriate local, State, and Federal agencies, representatives of civic and social service organizations, business representatives, and labor representatives.

"(3) The Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to such councils.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations governing the provision of assistance under the program. The regulations shall include the following:

"(1) Rules governing the types of assistance that may be provided.

"(2) Procedures governing the delivery of assistance that ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that such assistance is provided in conjunction with, rather than separate from, civilian efforts.

"(3) Procedures for appropriate coordination with civilian officials to ensure that the assistance—

"(A) meets a valid need; and

"(B) does not duplicate other available public services.

"(4) Procedures for the provision of assistance in a manner that does not compete with the private sector.

"(5) Procedures to minimize the extent to which Department of Defense resources are applied exclusively to the program.

"(6) Standards to ensure that assistance is provided under this section in a manner that is consistent with the military mission of the units of the armed forces involved in providing the assistance.

"(e) CONSTRUCTION OF PROVISION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as authorizing—

"(1) the use of the armed forces for civilian law enforcement purposes; or

"(2) the use of Department of Defense personnel or resources for any program, project, or activity that is prohibited by law."; and

(2) by inserting below the chapter heading the following:

"SUBCHAPTER I—HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE".

SEC. 1061. NATIONAL GUARD CIVILIAN YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES PILOT PROGRAM.

(a) PROGRAM AUTHORITY.—During fiscal years 1993 through 1995, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau may conduct a pilot program to be known as the "National Guard Civilian Youth Opportunities Program".

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the pilot program is to provide a basis for determining—

(1) whether the life skills and employment potential of civilian youth who cease to attend secondary school before graduating can be significantly improved through military based training provided by the National Guard; and

(2) whether it is feasible and cost effective for the National Guard to provide military based training to such youth for the purpose of achieving such improvements.

(c) CONDUCT OF PROGRAM IN 10 NATIONAL GUARD JURISDICTIONS.—The Chief of the National Guard Bureau may provide for the conduct of the pilot program in any 10 of the States, the Territories, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the District of Columbia.

(d) PROGRAM AGREEMENTS.—(1) To carry out the pilot program in a State, a Territory, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the District of Columbia, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall enter into an agreement with the Governor of the State, Territory, or Commonwealth or with the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard, as the case may be.

(2) Each agreement shall provide for the Governor or, in the case of the District of Columbia National Guard, the commanding general to establish, organize, and administer a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program.

(3) The agreement may provide for the Chief of the National Guard Bureau to reimburse the State, Territory, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the District of Columbia, as the case may be, for civilian personnel costs attributable to the use of civilian employees of the National Guard in the conduct of the program.

(e) ELIGIBLE PARTICIPANTS.—(1) Persons referred to in subsection (b)(1) shall be eligible to participate in a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program under the pilot program.

(2) The Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall prescribe the standards and procedures for selecting the participants from among applicants for the program.

(f) AUTHORIZED BENEFITS FOR PARTICIPANTS.—To the extent provided in an agreement entered into in accordance with subsection (d) and subject to the approval of the Chief of the National Guard Bureau, the persons selected for training in a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program under the pilot program may receive the following benefits in connection with that training:

(1) Allowances for travel expenses, personal expenses, and other expenses.

(2) Quarters.

(3) Subsistence.

(4) Transportation.

(5) Equipment.

(6) Clothing.

(7) Recreational services and supplies.

(8) Other services.

(9) A temporary stipend upon the successful completion of the training, as characterized in accordance with procedures provided in the agreement.

(g) PROGRAM PERSONNEL.—(1) Personnel of the National Guard of a State, a Territory, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the District of Columbia in which a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program is conducted under the pilot program may serve on full-time National Guard duty for the purpose of providing command, administrative, training, or supporting services for that program. For the performance of those services, any such personnel may be ordered to duty under section 502(f) of title 32, United States Code, for not longer than the period of the program.

(2) Personnel so serving may not be counted for the purposes of—

(A) any provision of law limiting the number of personnel that may be serving on full-time active duty or full-time National Guard duty for the purpose of organizing, administering, recruiting, instructing, or training the reserve components; or

(B) section 524 of title 10, United States Code, relating to the number of reserve component officers who may be on active duty or full-time National Guard duty in certain grades.

(3) A Governor participating in the pilot program and the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard (if the District of Columbia National Guard is participating in the pilot program) may procure by contract the temporary full-time services of such civilian personnel as may be necessary to augment National Guard personnel in carrying out a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program under the pilot program.

(4) Civilian employees of the National Guard performing services for such a program and contractor personnel performing such services may be required, when appropriate to achieve a program objective, to be members of the National Guard and to wear the military uniform.

(h) EQUIPMENT AND FACILITIES.—(1) Equipment and facilities of the National Guard, including military property of the United States issued to the National Guard, may be used in carrying out the pilot program.

(2) Activities under the pilot program shall be considered noncombat activities of the National Guard for purposes of section 710 of title 32, United States Code.

(i) STATUS OF PARTICIPANTS.—(1) A person receiving training under the pilot program shall be considered an employee of the United States for the purposes of the following provisions of law:

(A) The Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(B) Title II of the Social Security Act (relating to Federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits).

(C) Subchapter I of chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code (relating to compensation of Federal employees for work injuries).

(D) Section 1346(b) and chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, and any other provision of law relating to the liability of the United States for tortious conduct of employees of the United States.

(2) In the application of the provisions of law referred to in paragraph (1)(C) to a person referred to in paragraph (1)—

(A) the person shall not be considered to be in the performance of duty while the person is not at the assigned location of training or other activity or duty authorized in accordance with a program agreement referred to in subsection (d), except when the person is traveling to or from that location or is on pass from that training or other activity or duty;

(B) the person's monthly rate of pay shall be deemed to be the minimum rate of pay provided for grade GS-2 under the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code; and

(C) the entitlement of a person to receive compensation for a disability shall begin on the day following the date on which the person's participation in the pilot program is terminated.

(3) A person referred to in paragraph (1) may not be considered an employee of the United States for any purpose other than a purpose set forth in that paragraph.

(j) FUNDING.—(1) To the extent provided in appropriations Acts, funds described in paragraph (2) shall be available for the pilot program.

(2) The funds referred to in paragraph (1) are as follows:

(A) Funds appropriated for pay, allowances, clothing, subsistence, gratuities, travel and related expense for personnel of the National Guard while on active duty or full-time National Guard duty.

(B) Funds appropriated for the National Guard for operation and maintenance.

(k) SUPPLEMENTAL RESOURCES.—(1) To carry out a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program under the pilot program, the Governor of a State, a Territory, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard, as the case may be, may supplement any funding made available pursuant to subsection (j) out of other resources (including gifts) available to the Governor or the commanding general.

(2) The provision of funds authorized to be appropriated for the pilot program shall not preclude a Governor participating in the pilot program, or the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard (if the District of Columbia National Guard is participating in the pilot program), from accepting, using, and disposing of gifts or donations of money, other property, or services for the pilot program.

(l) REPORT.—(1) Within 90 days after the end of the 1-year period beginning on the first day of the pilot program, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the design, conduct, and effectiveness of the pilot program during that 1-year period. The report shall include an assessment of the matters set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b).

(2) In preparing the report required by paragraph (1), the Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall coordinate with the Governor of each State, Territory, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in which a National Guard civilian youth opportunities program is carried out under the pilot program and, if such a program is carried out in the District of Columbia, with the commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard.

(m) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms "Territory" and "full-time National Guard duty" have the meanings given those terms in section 101 of title 32, United States Code.

(n) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 301, $50,000,000 shall be available for the pilot program for fiscal year 1993.

SEC. 1062. UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING AND ENFORCEMENT REPORT.

(a) REPORT REQUESTED.—Not later than the date on which the President submits to Congress the budget for fiscal year 1994 under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the President shall transmit to Congress a report on the proposals of the Secretary General of the United Nations contained in his report to the Security Council entitled "Preventive Diplomacy, Peacemaking and Peacekeeping", dated June 19, 1992.

(b) CONTENT OF PRESIDENT'S REPORT.—The President's report shall contain a comprehensive analysis and discussion of the proposals of the Secretary General, including, in particular, the following:

(1) The proposal that contributions for peacekeeping and related enforcement activities be funded out of the National Defense function of the budget rather than the "Contributions to International Peacekeeping Activities" account of the Department of State.

(2) The assignment of responsibilities within the Executive branch if such contributions are funded, in whole or in part, out of the National Defense function.

(3) The proposal that the United States and other member states of the United Nations negotiate special agreements under Article 43 of the United Nations Charter to provide for those states to make armed forces, assistance, and facilities available to the Security Council of the United Nations for the purposes stated in Article 42 of that Charter, not only on an ad hoc basis but on a permanent on-call basis for rapid deployment under Security Council authorization.

(4) The proposal that member states of the United Nations commit to keep equipment specified by the Secretary General available for immediate sale, loan, or donation to the United Nations when required.

(5) The proposal that member states of the United Nations make airlift and sealift capacity available to the United Nations free of cost or at lower than commercial rates.

(6) Such other information as may be necessary to inform Congress on matters relating to the Secretary General's proposals.

SEC. 1063. CLARIFICATION OF SCOPE OF AUTHORIZATIONS.

No funds are authorized to be appropriated under this Act for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

TITLE XI—DEMILITARIZATION OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION

Subtitle A—Short Title

SEC. 1101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Former Soviet Union Demilitarization Act of 1992".

Subtitle B—Findings and Program Authority

SEC. 1111. DEMILITARIZATION OF THE INDEPENDENT STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

The Congress finds that it is in the national security interest of the United States—

(1) to facilitate, on a priority basis—

(A) the transportation, storage, safeguarding, and destruction of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction of the independent states of the former Soviet Union;

(B) the prevention of proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and destabilizing conventional weapons of the independent states of the former Soviet Union, and the establishment of verifiable safeguards against the proliferation of such weapons;

(C) the prevention of diversion of weapons-related scientific expertise of the former Soviet Union to terrorist groups or third countries; and

(D) other efforts designed to reduce the military threat from the former Soviet Union;

(2) to support the conversion of the massive defense-related industry and equipment of the independent states of the former Soviet Union for civilian purposes and uses; and

(3) to expand military-to-military contacts between the United States and the independent states of the former Soviet Union.

SEC. 1112. AUTHORITY FOR PROGRAMS TO FACILITATE DEMILITARIZATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President is authorized, in accordance with this title, to establish and conduct programs described in subsection (b) to assist the demilitarization of the independent states of the former Soviet Union.

(b) TYPES OF PROGRAMS.—The programs referred to in subsection (a) are limited to—

(1) transporting, storing, safeguarding, disabling, and destroying nuclear, chemical, and other weapons of the independent states of the former Soviet Union, as described in section 212(b) of the Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty Implementation Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-228);

(2) establishing verifiable safeguards against the proliferation of such weapons;

(3) preventing diversion of weapons-related scientific expertise of the former Soviet Union to terrorist groups or third countries;

(4) facilitating the conversion of military technologies and capabilities and defense industries of the former Soviet Union into civilian activities;

(5) establishing science and technology centers in the independent states of the former Soviet Union for the purpose of engaging weapons scientists and engineers previously involved with nuclear, chemical, and other weapons of mass destruction in productive, nonmilitary undertakings; and

(6) expanding military-to-military contacts between the United States and the independent states of the former Soviet Union.

(c) RESTRICTIONS.—United States assistance authorized by subsection (a) may not be provided unless the President certifies to the Congress, on an annual basis, that the proposed recipient country is committed to—

(1) making a substantial investment of its resources for dismantling or destroying such weapons of mass destruction, if such recipient has an obligation under treaty or other agreement to destroy or dismantle any such weapons;

(2) forgoing any military modernization program that exceeds legitimate defense requirements and forgoing the replacement of destroyed weapons of mass destruction;

(3) forgoing any use in new nuclear weapons of fissionable or other components of destroyed nuclear weapons;

(4) facilitating United States verification of any weapons destruction carried out under section 212 of the Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty Implementation Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-228);

(5) complying with all relevant arms control agreements; and

(6) observing internationally recognized human rights, including the protection of minorities.

Subtitle C—Administrative and Funding Authorities

SEC. 1121. ADMINISTRATION OF DEMILITARIZATION PROGRAMS.

(a) FUNDING.—(1) In recognition of the direct contributions to the national security interests of the United States of the activities specified in section 1112, funds transferred under sections 108 and 109 of Public Law 102-229 (105 Stat. 1708) are authorized to be made available to carry out subtitle B.

(2) Section 221(a) of the Soviet Nuclear Threat Reduction Act of 1991 (title II of Public Law 102-228; 105 Stat. 1695) is amended—

(A) by striking "fiscal year 1992" and inserting "fiscal years 1992 and 1993"; and

(B) by striking out "$400,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$650,000,000".

(3) Section 221(e) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "for fiscal year 1992 or fiscal year 1993" after "under part B";

(B) by inserting "for that fiscal year" after "for that program"; and

(C) by striking out "for fiscal year 1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "for that fiscal year".

(b) TECHNICAL REVISIONS TO PUBLIC LAW 102-229.—Public Law 102-229 is amended—

(1) in section 108 (105 Stat. 1708), by striking out "contained in H.R. 3807, as passed the Senate on November 25, 1991" and inserting in lieu thereof "(title II of Public Law 102-228)"; and

(2) in section 109 (105 Stat. 1708)—

(A) by striking out "H.R. 3807, as passed the Senate on November 25, 1991" and inserting in lieu thereof "Public Law 102-228 (105 Stat. 1696)"; and

(B) by striking "of H.R. 3807".

Subtitle D—Reporting Requirements

SEC. 1131. PRIOR NOTICE OF OBLIGATIONS TO CONGRESS.

Not less than 15 days before obligating any funds made available for a program under subtitle B, the President shall transmit to the Congress a report on the proposed obligation. Each such report shall specify—

(1) the account, budget activity, and particular program or programs from which the funds proposed to be obligated are to be derived and the amount of the proposed obligation; and

(2) the activities and forms of assistance under subtitle B for which the President plans to obligate such funds.

SEC. 1132. QUARTERLY REPORTS ON PROGRAMS.

Not later than 30 days after the end of the last fiscal year quarter for fiscal year 1992 and each fiscal year quarter for fiscal year 1993, the President shall transmit to the Congress a report on the activities carried out under subtitle B. Each such report shall set forth, for the preceding fiscal year quarter and cumulatively, the following:

(1) The amounts expended for such activities and the purposes for which they were expended.

(2) The source of the funds obligated for such activities, specified by program.

(3) A description of the participation of all United States Government departments and agencies in such activities.

(4) A description of the activities carried out under subtitle B and the forms of assistance provided under that part.

(5) Such other information as the President considers appropriate to fully inform the Congress concerning the operation of the programs authorized under subtitle B.

SEC. 2702. EFFECTIVE DATES.

Titles XXI, XXII, XXIII, XXIV, XXV, and XXVI shall be in effect as of October 1, 1992, or the date of enactment of a Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993, whichever is later.

TITLE XXVIII—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Military Construction Program and Military Family Housing Changes

SEC. 2801. AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT ENERGY CONSERVATION CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Section 2865 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection (d):

"(d) The Secretary of Defense may carry out a military construction project for energy conservation not previously specifically authorized by law if funds previously authorized to be appropriated for military construction were authorized to be made available for such project. Such project shall be carried out using funds appropriated or otherwise made available for military construction projects.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Subsection (e) of such section, as so redesignated, is amended by striking out "Beginning with fiscal year 1991 and by no later than December 31, 1991, and of each year thereafter," and inserting in lieu thereof "Not later than December 31 of each year,".

SEC. 2802. CLARIFICATION OF AUTHORITY TO LEASE NON-EXCESS PROPERTY.

Section 2667(b)(4) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting ", in the case of the lease of real property," after "shall provide".

SEC. 2803. INCREASED THRESHOLD FOR MINOR CONSTRUCTION CARRIED OUT WITH OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE FUNDS.

(a) INCREASED THRESHOLD.—Subsection (c) of section 2805 of title 10, United States Code, is amended in paragraph (1) by inserting "or for any unspecified military construction project commenced in fiscal year 1993, 1994, or 1995, not more than $1,000,000" before the period at the end.

(b) REPORT RELATING TO CONSTRUCTION.—Such subsection is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Not later than January 15 of the year following each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Congress a report on any military construction projects carried out under this subsection during the preceding fiscal year whose cost exceeded $300,000.".

SEC. 2804. MORATORIUM ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS FOR CONSTRUCTION OR ACQUISITION OF MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING.

(a) RESTRICTION.—None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available to a military department in fiscal year 1993 may be expended for contracts referred to in subsection (b) until the Secretary of that military department has solicited bids for the following:

(1) Contracts for the lease of military family housing units under section 2835 of title 10, United States Code, for—

(A) projects authorized under section 2207 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102–190; 105 Stat. 1519); and

(B) projects authorized under section 2307 of such Act (105 Stat. 1526).

(2) Military housing rental guarantee agreements under section 2836 of such title, for—

(A) projects authorized under section 2107 of such Act (105 Stat. 1512);

(B) projects authorized under section 2208 of such Act (105 Stat. 1520); and

(C) projects authorized under section 2308 of such Act (105 Stat. 1527).

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The limitation in subsection (a) applies to contracts for the construction, acquisition, or lease of military family housing (other than contracts for the replacement of existing Government-owned housing or the renewal of an expiring lease) that are entered into on or after October 1, 1992.

SEC. 2805. AUTHORITY TO CONSTRUCT REPLACEMENT FAMILY HOUSING UNITS.

(a) AUTHORITY TO CONSTRUCT REPLACEMENT UNITS.—Section 2825 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(2) by adding after subsection (b) the following new subsection (c):

"(c)(1) The Secretary concerned may construct a replacement for a single family housing unit if—

"(A) the improvement of that housing unit has been authorized by law;

"(B) the Secretary determines that the improvement is no longer cost-effective by reason of a change in circumstances or in requirements relating to the unit; and

"(C) a period of 21 days elapses after the date on which the Secretary submits to the committees referred to in subsection (b)(1) a notice of the determination of the Secretary under subparagraph (B) and an economic analysis demonstrating that the construction under this subsection will be cost effective.

"(2) The amount that may be expended to construct a replacement unit under this subsection may not exceed the amount that is otherwise available to carry out the previously authorized improvement of the unit.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 2822(b) of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) Housing units constructed under section 2825(c) of this title.".

Subtitle B—Defense Base Closure and Realignment

(A) by inserting "(A)" after "(2)";

(B) by redesignating subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) as clauses (i), (ii), and (iii), respectively;

(C) by amending clause (ii), as so redesignated, to read as follows:

"(ii) any funds that the Secretary may, subject to approval in an appropriation Act, transfer to the Account from funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for any purpose or funds contained in the Department of Defense Base Closure Account established by section 207(a)(1) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (10 U.S.C. 2687 note); and"; and

(D) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The Secretary shall transmit written notice of, and justification for, each transfer under subparagraph (A)(ii) to the congressional defense committees.".

(2) Section 2906(b)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "2905(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "2905".

(3)(A) Section 2906(c)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out "after the termination of the Commission" and inserting in lieu thereof "after the termination of environmental restoration, community economic adjustment assistance, and disposal of property at bases selected for closure under this part".

(B) Section 2906(c)(3) of such Act is amended by striking out "after the termination of the Commission" and inserting in lieu thereof "after the termination of the activities referred to in paragraph (2)".

SEC. 2822. USE OF PROCEEDS OF THE TRANSFER OR DISPOSAL OF COMMISSARY STORE AND OTHER FACILITIES AND PROPERTY.

(a) BASE CLOSURES UNDER 1988 ACT.—Section 204(b)(4)(C) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (Public Law 100-526; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(C)(i) If any real property or facility acquired, constructed, or improved (in whole or in part) with commissary store funds or nonappropriated funds is transferred or disposed of in connection with the closure or realignment of a military installation under this title, a portion of the proceeds of the transfer or other disposal of property on that installation shall be deposited in a reserve account established in the Treasury to be administered and used by the Secretary for the purpose of acquiring, constructing, and improving—

"(I) commissary stores; and

"(II) real property and facilities for nonappropriated fund instrumentalities.

"(ii) The amount deposited under clause (i) shall be equal to the depreciated value of the investment made with such funds in the acquisition, construction, or improvement of that particular real property or facility. The depreciated value of the investment shall be computed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

"(iii) As used in this subparagraph:

"(I) The term 'commissary store funds' means funds received from the adjustment of, or surcharge on, selling prices at commissary stores fixed under section 2685 of title 10, United States Code.

"(II) The term 'nonappropriated funds' means funds received from a nonappropriated fund instrumentality.

"(III) The term 'nonappropriated fund instrumentality' means an instrumentality of the United States under the jurisdiction of the Armed Forces (including the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, the Navy Resale and Services Support Office, and the Marine Corps exchanges) which is conducted for the comfort, pleasure, contentment, or physical or mental improvement of members of the Armed Forces.".

(b) BASE CLOSURES UNDER 1990 ACT.—Section 2906(d) of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) DISPOSAL OR TRANSFER OF COMMISSARY STORES AND PROPERTY PURCHASED WITH NONAPPROPRIATED FUNDS.—(1) If any real property or facility acquired, constructed, or improved (in whole or in part) with commissary store funds or nonappropriated funds is transferred or disposed of in connection with the closure or realignment of a military installation under this part, a portion of the proceeds of the transfer or other disposal of property on that installation shall be deposited in the reserve account established under section 204(b)(4)(C) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

"(2) The amount so deposited shall be equal to the depreciated value of the investment made with such funds in the acquisition, construction, or improvement of that particular real property or facility. The depreciated value of the investment shall be computed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

"(3) The Secretary may use amounts in the account (in such an aggregate amount as is provided in advance in appropriation Acts) for the purpose of acquiring, constructing, and improving—

"(A) commissary stores; and

"(B) real property and facilities for nonappropriated fund instrumentalities.

"(4) As used in this subsection:

"(A) The term 'commissary store funds' means funds received from the adjustment of, or surcharge on, selling prices at commissary stores fixed under section 2685 of title 10, United States Code.

"(B) The term 'nonappropriated funds' means funds received from a nonappropriated fund instrumentality.

"(C) The term 'nonappropriated fund instrumentality' means an instrumentality of the United States under the jurisdiction of the Armed Forces (including the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, the Navy Resale and Services Support Office, and the Marine Corps exchanges) which is conducted for the comfort, pleasure, contentment, or physical or mental improvement of members of the Armed Forces.".

SEC. 2823. AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER FUNDS TO HOMEOWNERS ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

Section 2832(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), and notwithstanding subsection (i) of section 1013 of the Act referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense may transfer to the fund established pursuant to subsection (d) of such section 1013 any funds available for obligation from—

"(A) the Department of Defense Base Closure Account established by section 207 of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (Public Law 100-526; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note); and

"(B) the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990 established by section 2906 of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

"(2) Any funds transferred under this subsection shall be available for obligation and expenditure for the same purposes that funds appropriated to the fund established under subsection (d) of such section 1013 are available.

"(3) Amounts may be transferred under paragraph (1) only after the date on which the Committees on Armed Services and the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives receive from the Secretary written notice of, and justification for, the transfer.".

SEC. 2824. DEMONSTRATION PROJECT FOR THE USE OF A NATIONAL RELOCATION CONTRACTOR TO ASSIST THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) USE OF NATIONAL RELOCATION CONTRACTOR.—Subject to the availability of appropriations therefor, the Secretary of Defense shall enter into a 1-year contract with a private relocation contractor operating on a nationwide basis in order to test the cost-effectiveness of using national relocation contractors to administer the Homeowners Assistance Program.

(b) REPORT ON CONTRACT.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Secretary of Defense enters into a contract under subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report containing the Comptroller General's evaluation of the effectiveness of using the national contractor for administering the program referred to in subsection (a). The report shall compare the cost and efficiency of such administration with the cost and efficiency of (1) the program carried out by the Corps of Engineers using its own employees, and (2) the use of contracts with local relocation companies at military installations being closed or realigned.

SEC. 2825. REVISION OF REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO BUDGET DATA ON BASE CLOSURES.

(a) COVERED FUNDING REQUESTS.—(1) Subsection (a) of section 2822 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-190; 105 Stat. 1546; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended—

(A) by striking out "each military construction project" and inserting in lieu thereof "military construction relating to the closure or realignment of the installation"; and

(B) by striking out "the cost of such project" and inserting in lieu thereof "the cost of such construction".

(2) Subsection (b) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "of a military construction project" and inserting in lieu thereof "of military construction relating to the closure or realignment of an installation"; and

(B) by striking out "the project" and inserting in lieu thereof "the construction".

(b) INVESTIGATION BY INSPECTOR GENERAL.—Subsection (c) of such section is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "each military construction project" and inserting in lieu thereof "the military construction"; and

(B) by striking out "the project" and inserting in lieu thereof "such construction"; and

(2) by striking out paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraph (2):

"(2) The Inspector General shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report describing the results of each investigation conducted under paragraph (1).".

SEC. 2826. CHANGE IN DATE OF REPORT OF COMPTROLLER GENERAL TO CONGRESS AND DEFENSE BASE CLOSURE AND REALIGNMENT COMMISSION.

Section 2903(d)(5)(B) of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended by striking out "May 15 of each year" and inserting in lieu thereof "April 15 of each year".

SEC. 2827. TREATMENT OF PROPOSALS RELATING TO THE DEFENSE FINANCE AND ACCOUNTING SERVICE UNDER BASE CLOSURE LAWS.

The Secretary of Defense and the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission may not, with respect to any military installation, recommend a realignment of functions and personnel of the Defense Finance and Accounting Service under section 2903 of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note). The Secretary may provide for such a realignment in accordance with section 2687 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 2828. ANNUAL REPORT RELATING TO OVERSEAS MILITARY FACILITY INVESTMENT RECOVERY ACCOUNT.

Section 2921 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) REPORT ON SPECIAL ACCOUNT.—(1) Not later than January 15 of each year, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the operations of the Department of Defense Overseas Military Facility Investment Recovery Account during the preceding fiscal year. The report shall include the following:

"(A) The amount of each deposit in the Account during that fiscal year, and the source of the amount.

"(B) The balance in the Account at the end of that fiscal year.

"(C) The amounts expended from the Account by each military department during that fiscal year.

"(D) With respect to each military installation for which money was deposited in the Account as a result of the release of real property or improvements of the installation to a host country during that fiscal year—

"(i) the total amount of the investment of the United States in the installation, expressed in terms of constant dollars of that fiscal year;

"(ii) the depreciated value (as determined by the Secretary of a military department under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense) of the real property and improvements that were released; and

"(iii) the explanation of the Secretary for any difference between the amount paid to the United States for the real property and improvements and the depreciated value (as so determined) of that real property and improvements.

"(2) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations to carry out this subsection.".

Subtitle C—Land Transactions

SEC. 2831. MODIFICATION OF LAND EXCHANGE, SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA.

Section 837 of the Military Construction Authorization Act, 1985 (Public Law 98-407; 98 Stat. 1529) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by striking out "or the San Diego Energy Recovery Project, a joint powers agency of the city and county of San Diego (hereinafter in this section referred to as 'SANDER'),";

(2) by striking out subsection (c);

(3) by redesignating subsections (d) and (e) as subsections (f) and (g), respectively;

(4) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsections:

"(c)(1) In lieu of the conveyance of the 120 acres of land referred to in subsection (b) as consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Navy may permit the City—

"(A) to convey to the Secretary other real property suitable for use, as determined by the Secretary, for military family housing;

"(B) to pay the Secretary an amount sufficient to satisfy the requirement referred to in the first sentence of subsection (d); or

"(C) to make both the conveyance described in subparagraph (A) and a payment described in subparagraph (B).

"(2) The Secretary may permit the alternative conveyance under paragraph (1) only if the Secretary determines that the City will use the 120 acres of land for purposes associated with the clean water program of the City that are compatible with the mission and operations of the adjacent Naval Air Station, Miramar.

"(d) The total value of the consideration provided to the United States under subsections (b) and (c) shall be at least equal to the fair market value of the lands conveyed under subsection (a), as determined by the Secretary. The City shall pay any difference to the United States.

"(e)(1) The Secretary may use any amounts received under this section solely for the purpose of acquiring in the area of San Diego, California, a suitable site for military family housing or for the purpose of constructing or acquiring by direct purchase not more than 200 units of military family housing in that area.

"(2) Any funds received by the Secretary under this section and not so used within 30 months after receipt shall be deposited into the special account established pursuant to section 204(h) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 485(h)),"; and

(5) in subsection (e), as redesignated by paragraph (3), by striking out "or SANDER or by the City and SANDER".

SEC. 2832. LAND ACQUISITION AND EXCHANGE, MYRTLE BEACH AIR FORCE BASE AND POINSETT WEAPONS RANGE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

(a) LAND CONVEYANCE.—The Secretary of the Air Force may convey to the State of South Carolina all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 3,744 acres and comprising the Myrtle Beach Air Force Base, South Carolina, or any portion of that parcel, together with any improvements thereon.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the State of South Carolina shall—

(A) convey to the United States all right, title, and interest of the State of South Carolina in and to the parcels of land (together with any improvements thereon) described to in paragraph (2); and

(B) pay to the United States an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the land conveyed under subsection (a) exceeds the fair market value of the land conveyed under subparagraph (A).

(2) The parcels of land referred to in paragraph (1) are the following:

(A) The Poinsett Weapons Range, a parcel consisting of approximately 8,358 acres that is located in Sumter County, South Carolina, and is currently leased by the Air Force from the State of South Carolina.

(B) Other parcels contiguous to the Poinsett Weapons Range that—

(i) are owned by the State of South Carolina, including parcels acquired by the State of South Carolina for the purposes of satisfying the requirements of this subsection; and

(ii) the Secretary determines are necessary for the Air Force to improve or enlarge the configuration of the Poinsett Weapons Range to suit the needs of the Air Forces as a bombing range.

(c) DETERMINATIONS OF FAIR MARKET VALUE.—The Secretary shall determine the fair market value of the parcels of real property to be conveyed pursuant to subsections (a) and (b)(1)(A). Such determinations shall be final.

(d) USE OF FUNDS.—Any funds paid to the Secretary under subsection (b)(1)(B) shall be deposited in the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990 established under section 2906 of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note)) and shall be available for use in accordance with subsection (b) of such section 2906.

(e) RESERVATION FOR HARVESTING FOREST PRODUCTS.—The Secretary may accept the conveyance of the parcel of real property referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) subject to a reservation permitting the harvesting of forest products on the parcel by the South Carolina State Forestry Commission. A reservation granted under this subsection shall be subject to such conditions as the Secretary may prescribe.

(f) DESCRIPTIONS OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreages and legal descriptions of the parcels of real property to be conveyed pursuant to subsections (a) and (b)(1)(A) shall be determined by surveys that are satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of such surveys shall be borne by the State of South Carolina.

(g) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—The major portion of the land to be conveyed by the State of South Carolina under subsection (b)(2) was originally conveyed to the South Carolina State Forestry Commission by the United States under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act (50 Stat. 522; 7 U.S.C. 1000 et seq.), subject to reservation of mineral rights and subject also to a reversion of title if the State ceased to use such properties for public purposes. The conveyance of such land to the United States under subsection (b)(2) shall be deemed to be in compliance with the public purpose covenants imposed upon conveyance to the South Carolina State Forestry Commission.

(h) AUTHORITY TO ACQUIRE ADDITIONAL LAND.—Subject to section 2662(a) of title 10, United States Code, and to the extent provided in appropriations Acts, the Secretary may acquire such additional parcels of land in the vicinity of Poinsett Weapons Range, South Carolina, as the Secretary determines are necessary to enhance the usefulness of the Poinsett Weapons Range as a bombing range.

(i) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require any additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances under this section that the Secretary determines appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2833. MODIFICATION OF LAND EXCHANGE, BURLINGTON, VERMONT.

Section 2387 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 104 Stat. 1800) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by striking out "the Burlington, Vermont, area" and inserting in lieu thereof "the State of Vermont";

(2) in subsection (c)(1)(A), by striking out "$800,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$600,000, with such payment to be made (before the date of the conveyance authorized by subsection (a)) in a lump sum, in yearly installments, or under such other terms and conditions as the Secretary determines to be in the interest of the United States";

(3) in subsection (c)(2), by striking out "January 1, 1993," and inserting in lieu thereof "June 1, 1995,"; and

(4) by adding at the end of subsection (c) the following new paragraph:

"(3) The Secretary may permit the City of Burlington, Vermont, to make alterations or improvements to the property referred to in subsection (a) before the Secretary conveys the property to the City. The making of such alterations and improvements pursuant to this paragraph shall be subject to terms and conditions that the Secretary determines to be appropriate and shall be subject to the prior approval of the Secretary.".

SEC. 2834. LEASE OF PROPERTY, NAVAL SUPPLY CENTER, OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA.

(a) LEASE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may lease to the Union Pacific Railroad Company (in this section referred to as the "Company") not more than 15 acres of real property, together with improvements thereon, located at the Naval Supply Center, Oakland, California.

(b) TERM OF LEASE; RESTRICTIONS ON USE.—The lease (1) shall be for an initial period of not more than 25 years, (2) shall contain an option for the Company to extend the lease for an additional period of not more than 25 years, and (3) shall contain the restriction that the Company use the leased property only for freight transportation purposes.

(c) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the lease of the real property under subsection (a), the Company—

(A) shall pay to the Navy the long-term fair market rental value of the leased property; and

(B) may be required to furnish additional consideration as provided in paragraph (2).

(2) The Secretary may require that the lease include a provision for the Company—

(A) to pay the Navy an amount (as determined by the Secretary) for the costs of replacing at the Naval Supply Center, Oakland, California, the facilities vacated by the Navy on the leased property or to construct the replacement facilities for the Navy; and

(B) to pay the Navy an amount (as so determined) for the costs of relocating Navy operations from the vacated facilities to the replacement facilities.

(d) USE OF FUNDS.—(1) Section 2667(d) of title 10, United States Code, shall apply to amounts paid under subsection (c)(1)(A) of this section.

(2) The Secretary may use amounts received under subsection (c)(2) to pay for constructing new facilities, or making modifications to existing facilities, that are necessary to replace facilities vacated by the Navy on the leased property and for relocating operations of the Navy from the vacated facilities to the replacement facilities.

(e) AUTHORITY TO DEMOLISH.—The Secretary may authorize the Company to demolish existing facilities on the leased property and, consistent with the restriction required by subsection (b)(3), construct new facilities on the property for the use of the Company.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the lease authorized under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2835. AUTHORITY TO LEASE PROPERTY AT NAVAL SUPPLY CENTER, OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA.

(a) LEASE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may lease to the City of Oakland, California, or the Port of Oakland, California (in this section referred to as the "City" and the "Port", respectively), not more than 195 acres of real property, together with improvements thereon, located at the Naval Supply Center, Oakland, California.

(b) TERMS OF LEASE; RESTRICTION ON USE.—The lease (1) shall be for an initial period of not more than 25 years, (2) shall contain an option to extend the lease for an additional period of not more than 25 years, and (3) shall contain the restriction that the City or the Port (as the case may be) use the leased property in a manner consistent with Navy operations conducted at the Naval Supply Center.

(c) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the lease of the real property under subsection (a), the City or the Port (as the case may be)—

(A) shall pay to the Navy the long-term fair market rental value of the leased property; and

(B) may be required to furnish additional consideration as provided in paragraph (2).

(2) The Secretary may require that the lease include a provision for the City or the Port (as the case may be)—

(A) to pay the Navy an amount (as determined by the Secretary) for the costs of replacing at the Naval Supply Center, Oakland, California, the facilities vacated by the Navy on the leased property or to construct the replacement facilities for the Navy; and

(B) to pay the Navy an amount (as so determined) for the costs of relocating Navy operations from the vacated facilities to the replacement facilities.

(d) LIMITATION ON ENTRY INTO LEASE.—The Secretary may not enter into the lease authorized by subsection (a) until 21 days after the date on which the Secretary submits to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing an explanation of the terms of the proposed lease and a description of the consideration that the Secretary expects to receive under the lease.

(e) USE OF FUNDS.—(1) Section 2667(d) of title 10, United States Code, shall apply to amounts paid under subsection (c)(1)(A) of this section.

(2) The Secretary may use amounts received under subsection (c)(2) to pay for constructing new facilities, or making modifications to existing facilities, that are necessary to replace facilities vacated by the Navy on the leased property and for relocating operations of the Navy from the vacated facilities to the replacement facilities.

(f) AUTHORITY TO DEMOLISH.—The Secretary may authorize the City or the Port (as the case may be) to demolish existing facilities on the leased property and, consistent with the restriction required by subsection (b)(3), construct new facilities on the property for the use of the City or the Port.

(g) ADDITIONAL TERMS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the lease authorized by subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(h) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED AUTHORITY.—Section 2338 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989 (Public Law 100-180; 101 Stat. 1225) is repealed.

SEC. 2836. GRANT OF EASEMENT AT NAVAL AIR STATION MIRAMAR, SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA.

(a) AUTHORITY TO GRANT EASEMENT.—Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary of the Navy may grant to San Diego Gas and Electric Company (in this section referred to as "SDG&E") an easement on a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 120 acres that is located in the northeast portion of Naval Air Station Miramar, California (in this section referred to as the "Air Station"). The purpose of the easement is to enable SDG&E to construct, operate, and maintain an electric transmission substation and associated electric transmission lines.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—(1) In consideration for the grant of an easement to SDG&E under subsection (a), SDG&E shall pay to the United States an amount that is not less than the fair market value of that easement, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may accept from SDG&E, in lieu of payment of up to 50 percent of the agreed consideration, the following:

(A) The establishment of an alternative source of 12 kilovolts of electric power for the Air Station.

(B) Such improvements to the electrical distribution system of the Air Station as the Secretary designates for the purposes of this paragraph.

(c) USE OF PROCEEDS.—(1) The amounts of consideration paid under subsection (b) shall be deposited in the special account established for the Department of the Navy under section 2667(d)(1)(A) of title 10, United States Code.

(2) To the extent provided in appropriations Acts, of the sums in such account—

(A) there shall be available for facility maintenance and repair and for environmental restoration by the Department of the Navy the amount equal to 50 percent of the total agreed consideration for the grant of the easement under subsection (a); and

(B) there shall be available for facility maintenance and repair or environmental restoration of the Air Station, the amount equal to the excess (if any) of 50 percent of such total consideration over the amount equal to the sum of—

(i) the total cost incurred by SDG&E for the establishment of the alternative power source pursuant to subsection (b)(2)(A); and

(ii) the total cost of the improvements made by SDG&E pursuant to subsection (b)(2)(B).

(d) LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property subject to the easement granted under this section shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by SDG&E.

(e) ADDITIONAL TERMS.—The Secretary may require any additional terms and conditions in connection with the grant of an easement under this section that the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2837. LAND CONVEYANCE, NAVAL RESERVE CENTER, SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA.

(a) CONVEYANCE.—The Secretary of the Navy may convey to the City of Santa Barbara, California (in this section referred to as the "City"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property consisting of approximately one acre, including improvements thereon, the location of the Santa Barbara Naval Reserve Center.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the City shall pay to the United States an amount equal to the lesser of—

(1) $2,400,000; or

(2) the cost incurred by the Secretary in constructing a naval reserve center to replace the naval reserve center conveyed under subsection (a).

(c) Conditions of Conveyance.—The conveyance authorized under subsection (a) shall be subject to the following conditions:

(1) That the City enter into an agreement with the Secretary of Transportation for the City—

(A) to permit, at no cost to the Federal Government, the Coast Guard to remain in the space currently occupied by the Coast Guard in the facility referred to in subsection (a); or

(B) to provide the Coast Guard, at no cost to the Federal Government, with space in a facility acceptable to the Secretary of Transportation that is sufficient to replace the space referred to in subparagraph (A) from which the Coast Guard is displaced by the City.

(2) That the City enter into an agreement with the Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration for the City—

(A) to permit, at no cost to the Federal Government, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (in this section referred to as "NOAA") to remain until May 1, 1993 (or a later date agreed to by the City and the Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration), in the space currently occupied by NOAA in the facility referred to in subsection (a); or

(B) to provide NOAA until such date, at no cost to the Federal Government, with space in a facility acceptable to the Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration that is sufficient to replace the space referred to in subparagraph (A) from which NOAA is displaced by the City.

(3) That the City enter into an agreement with the Secretary of the Navy for the City to permit the Navy to use, at no cost to the Federal Government, the naval reserve center referred to in subsection (a) until the replacement facility to be constructed in accordance with subsection (d) is suitable for occupancy by the Navy, as determined by the Secretary.

(d) Replacement Center.—The Secretary of the Navy shall use the amount paid by the City under subsection (b) to construct a naval reserve center to replace the naval reserve center conveyed pursuant to subsection (a). Such replacement center shall be constructed at the Naval Construction Battalion Center, Port Hueneme, California, or at another location determined by the Secretary to be suitable for such a center.

(e) Description of Property.—The exact acreage and legal description of the property to be conveyed under this section shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary of the Navy. The cost of such survey shall be borne by the City.

(f) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary of the Navy may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance and agreements under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2838. CONVEYANCE OF WASTE WATER TREATMENT PLANT, FORT RITCHIE, MARYLAND.

(a) In General.—The Secretary of the Army may convey to the Washington County, Maryland, Sanitary District (in this section referred to as the "Sanitary District") all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 4.5 acres, including a waste water treatment facility and other improvements located thereon, located at Fort Ritchie, Maryland.

(b) Consideration.—As consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a) the Sanitary District shall provide the Army with disposal services, waste water treatment services, and other related services at the facility. The value of the services provided the Army shall be equal to the fair market value of the property conveyed pursuant to subsection (a), as determined jointly by the Secretary and the Sanitary District.

(c) Conditions.—The conveyance authorized under subsection (a) shall be subject to the following conditions:

(1) That the Sanitary District reserve 70 percent of the operating capacity of the waste water treatment facility referred to in subsection (a) for use by the Army in the event that such use is necessitated by a realignment of, or change in the operations of, the Army at Fort Ritchie, Maryland.

(2) That the Sanitary District ensure the compliance of the waste water treatment facility with applicable environmental laws, including the construction of any improvement and the satisfaction or any permit or license requirements that may be necessary to ensure such compliance.

(3) That the cost of the construction of the improvements referred to in paragraph (2) be borne by the Sanitary District and the Army according to the pro rata share of the operating capacity of the waste water treatment facility reserved to the Army and the Sanitary District, respectively.

(d) Description of Property.—The exact acreage and legal description of the property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the Sanitary District.

(e) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2839. ACQUISITION OF INTERESTS IN LAND, NAVAL RADIO STATION, JIM CREEK, WASHINGTON.

(a) Authority To Acquire.—The Secretary of the Navy may acquire all right, title, and interest (including timber rights) of any party in and to a parcel of land consisting of approximately 225 acres, or any portion of the parcel, located in Snohomish County, Washington, and comprising a portion of Naval Radio Station, Jim Creek, Washington.

(b) Consideration.—(1) As consideration for an interest acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the authority in subsection (a), the Secretary—

(A) shall pay the person conveying that interest, out of funds available to the Secretary for the acquisition of interests in real property (including funds available for the Legacy Resource Management Program), the amount determined under paragraph (2);

(B) shall, with the consent of that person, convey to such person all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a quantity of merchantable timber at the Naval Radio Station, Jim Creek, determined under paragraph (2); or

(C) shall, with the consent of such person, make such a payment and such a conveyance to that person.

(2) The total of the amount paid a person pursuant to paragraph (1)(A), if any, and the fair market value of the quantity (to the extent of the interest) of merchantable timber conveyed to that person pursuant to paragraph (1)(B), if any, shall be equal to the fair market value of the property interest acquired from that person under subsection (a).

(c) Option To Purchase.—The Secretary may purchase an option to purchase a property interest authorized to be acquired under subsection (a). The Secretary may use funds referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) for the purchase of such an option.

(d) Determinations of Fair Market Value.—The Secretary shall determine the fair market value of the property interests acquired under subsection (a) and the merchantable timber, if any, conveyed under subsection (b). Such determinations shall be final.

(e) Description of Property.—The exact acreage and legal description of each parcel of real property an interest in which is acquired under subsection (a) or conveyed under subsection (b) shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary and is conducted at no cost to the United States (except that the Secretary shall bear such cost in the case of a gift to the United States).

(f) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary may require any additional terms and conditions in connection with the acquisitions authorized under subsection (a) and the conveyances, if any, authorized under subsection (b) that the Secretary determines necessary to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2840. LAND CONVEYANCE, WILLIAMS AIR FORCE BASE, ARIZONA.

(a) In General.—(1) The United States may acquire by condemnation or otherwise—

(A) all right, title, and interest of the State of Arizona (including any mineral rights) in and to the trust lands of the State of Arizona described in paragraph (2); and

(B) any trust mineral estate of the State of Arizona located beneath the surface estates of the United States in the lands described in paragraph (3).

(2) The trust lands referred to in paragraph (1)(A) are as follows:

(A) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 81,121 acres located in the Goldwater Aerial Gunnery Range, Yuma County and Maricopa County, Arizona, and used by the Air Force for activities relating to aerial gunnery and bombing practice.

(B) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 7,563 acres located in the Yuma Test Station, Yuma County, Arizona, and used by the Army for activities relating to field artillery testing.

(C) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 1,537 acres located in the Fort Huachuca East Range, Cochise County, Arizona, and used by the Army for activities relating to field training exercises.

(D) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 133 acres located in Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Tucson, Arizona.

(E) A parcel consisting of approximately five acres located in section 14, T4N, R3E of the State of Arizona, Phoenix, Arizona, and used as part of the Arizona National Memorial Cemetery.

(3) The lands referred to in paragraph (1)(B) are as follows:

(A) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 50,355 acres located in the Goldwater Aerial Gunnery Range, Arizona.

(B) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 12,781 acres located in the Yuma Test Station, Arizona.

(C) A parcel or parcels consisting of approximately 12,943 acres located in the Fort Huachuca East Range, Arizona.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the acquisition by the United States of Arizona trust lands under paragraph (1)(A) of subsection (a) and any mineral rights under paragraph (1)(B) of that subsection, the Secretary of the Air Force shall convey to the State of Arizona all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property located at Williams Air Force Base, Arizona, together with any improvements thereon, that is approximately equal in fair market value to the fair market value of the property and mineral rights acquired under that subsection.

(c) CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of the Air Force may make the conveyance described in subsection (b) only if—

(1) the fair market value of the real property and mineral rights acquired by the United States under subsection (a) is at least equal to the fair market value of the property conveyed by the Secretary of the Air Force under subsection (b);

(2) the conveyance of the Secretary of the Air Force to the State of Arizona under subsection (b) is accepted as full consideration for the conveyance of property and mineral rights to the United States under subsection (a) and terminates all right, title, and interest of all parties other than the United States in and to the property and mineral rights conveyed to the United States under subsection (a); and

(3) the Secretary of the Air Force has complied with all environmental protection, remediation, and restoration laws that are applicable to the disposal of the real property at Williams Air Force Base, Arizona, that is conveyed to the State of Arizona under subsection (b).

(d) RESTRICTION ON USE OF CERTAIN PROPERTY.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall use as a cemetery any property referred to in paragraph (2)(E) of subsection (a) that is acquired by the United States under that subsection. Such use shall be subject to the provisions of chapter 24 of title 38, United States Code.

(e) LIMITATION ON CONVEYANCE AUTHORITY.—The conveyance of real property described in subsection (b) may not be made until adequate prior opportunity has been provided for the disposition of such property as provided in section 2905(b) of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note), except the requirement for disposition by public advertising.

(f) DETERMINATIONS OF FAIR MARKET VALUE.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall determine the fair market value of the parcels of real property to be acquired pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(A), the mineral rights to be acquired pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(B), and the parcel of real property to be conveyed pursuant to subsection (b). Such determinations shall be final.

(g) DESCRIPTIONS OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreages and legal descriptions of the parcels of real property to be acquired pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(A), the parcels of real property referred to in subsection (a)(1)(B), and the parcels of real property conveyed pursuant to subsection (b) shall be determined by surveys that are satisfactory to the Secretary of the Air Force and the State of Arizona. The cost of such surveys shall be borne by the State of Arizona.

(h) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of the Air Force may require any additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance and acquisitions under this section that the Secretary determines appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2841. REAL PROPERTY CONVEYANCE, NAVAL STATION PUGET SOUND, EVERETT, WASHINGTON.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy may convey to any person all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the parcels of land described in paragraph (2).

(2) The parcels of land referred to in paragraph (1) are the following parcels of land located in the State of Washington:

(A) A parcel of land consisting of approximately 68 acres and comprising the naval family housing area at Paine Field, Snohomish County, Washington, together with improvements thereon.

(B) A parcel of land consisting of approximately 11 acres and comprising a portion of the naval family housing area at Pier 91, Seattle, Washington, together with improvements thereon.

(C) A parcel of land consisting of approximately 1 acre and comprising a portion of the naval family housing area at Pier 91, Seattle, Washington, that is not contiguous to the parcel referred to in subparagraph (B), together with improvements thereon.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—(1) In consideration for the conveyance of a parcel of land authorized in subsection (a), the person accepting the conveyance shall—

(A) pay the Secretary an amount equal to the fair market value of the parcel and any improvements located thereon; or

(B) convey to the United States of all right, title, and interest of the person in and to a parcel of land, together with any improvements thereon, located in the area of the Naval Station Puget Sound, Everett, Washington, that the Secretary determines to be suitable for family housing for Naval Station Puget Sound and, if the fair market value of the parcel conveyed by the United States exceeds the fair market value of the parcel conveyed to the United States, pay to the Secretary the amount equal to such excess.

(2) The Secretary shall determine the fair market value of the parcels of land conveyed pursuant to subsection (a)(1) and the parcels of land, if any, conveyed pursuant to paragraph (1)(B).

(c) NOTICE TO COMMITTEES.—The Secretary may not enter into a conveyance or sale of real property, as the case may be, under this section until the Secretary has notified the congressional defense committees of the details of the proposed conveyance or sale, as the case may be, and a period of 21 days has elapsed following the day on which the committees receive the notification.

(d) USE OF FUNDS.—(1) To the extent provided in appropriations Acts, the Secretary shall use any amounts paid to the Secretary under subsection (b)(1) for the following purposes:

(A) Acquiring in the vicinity of Naval Station Puget Sound land that is suitable (as determined by the Secretary) for family housing for Naval Station Puget Sound.

(B) Acquiring or constructing not more than 350 units of family housing for Naval Station Puget Sound.

(2) If amounts referred to in paragraph (1) remain unexpended after the acquisition or construction of the family housing referred to in that paragraph, the Secretary shall deposit such unexpended amounts in the account established under section 204(h)(2) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act (40 U.S.C. 485(h)(2)).

(e) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal descriptions of the parcels of land conveyed pursuant to this section shall be determined by surveys satisfactory to the Secretary.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2842. CONVEYANCE OF HASTINGS RADAR BOMB SCORING SITE, NEBRASKA.

(a) CONVEYANCE.—The Secretary of the Air Force may convey to Central Community College, Hastings Nebraska (in this section referred to as the "College"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to three parcels of property located in Hastings, Nebraska, which have served as a support complex for the Hastings Radar Bomb Scoring Site.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—In consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the College shall pay to the United States an amount equal to the fair market value of the land conveyed under subsection (a), as determined by the Secretary.

(c) USE OF PROCEEDS.—The Secretary shall deposit the proceeds of the sale of property authorized by this section in the special account established pursuant to section 204(h) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 485(h)).

(d) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the property conveyed under this section shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of such survey shall be borne by the College.

(e) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2843. LAND CONVEYANCE, ABBEVILLE, ALABAMA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the City of Abbeville, Alabama, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of land consisting of approximately 4 acres, together with improvements thereon, the site of a proposed Army Reserve Center, Abbeville, Alabama.

(b) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the City of Abbeville, Alabama.

(c) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require any additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under this section that the Secretary determines appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

Subtitle D—Transfer of Jurisdiction of Rocky Mountain Arsenal

SEC. 2851. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle:

(1) The term "Arsenal" means the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in the State of Colorado.

(2) The term "hazardous substance" has the meaning given such term in section 101(14) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601(14)).

(3) The term "refuge" means the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge established pursuant to this subtitle.

SEC. 2852. TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION OVER ROCKY MOUNTAIN ARSENAL.

(a) MANAGEMENT PENDING TRANSFER.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Interior shall enter into a memorandum of understanding under which—

(1) the Secretary of the Army shall transfer to the Secretary of the Interior, without reimbursement, all responsibility to manage for wildlife and public use purposes the real property comprising the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in the State of Colorado, except the property and facilities described in subsection (c) or designated for disposal under section 2855; and

(2) the Secretary of the Interior shall establish and manage the real property described in paragraph (1) as a unit of the National Wildlife Refuge System.

(b) TRANSFER UPON COMPLETION OF REMEDIATION MEASURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon the certification of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency that the cleanup and remediation measures required at the Arsenal under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) have been completed (except for operation and maintenance associated with the measures), the Secretary of the Army shall transfer to the Secretary of the Interior jurisdiction over the real property comprising the Arsenal, except the property and facilities described in subsection (c) or designated for disposal under section 2855.

(2) COST.—The transfer shall be made without cost to the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) IMPROVEMENTS.—The transfer shall include any improvement on the property made by the Secretary of the Army if the Secretary of the Interior requests in writing that the improvement be transferred for refuge management purposes.

(4) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property subject to transfer under this subsection shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Interior. The Secretary of the Army shall bear any costs related to the survey.

(c) PROPERTY AND FACILITIES EXCLUDED FROM MEMORANDUM AND TRANSFER.—

(1) PROPERTY REQUIRED TO BE RETAINED BY THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Army shall retain jurisdiction, authority, and control over all real property at the Arsenal used for water treatment, the disposition of hazardous substances, or other purposes related to cleanup and remediation activities at the Arsenal.

(B) CONSULTATION WITH SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.—The Secretary of the Army shall—

(i) consult with the Secretary of the Interior regarding the identification and management of all real property retained under this paragraph; and

(ii) ensure that activities carried out by the Department of the Army on that property are, to the extent practicable, compatible with the wildlife and public use purposes of the real property at the Arsenal managed by the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) DISPOSITION FOR COMMERCIAL, HIGHWAY, OR OTHER PUBLIC PURPOSES.—The Secretary of the Army shall dispose of real property designated in subsection (a) of section 2855 in the manner provided for in such section.

(3) CONTINUATION OF LEASE OF PUBLIC FACILITIES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this subtitle shall affect the validity or continued operation of leases of the Department of the Army in existence on the date of enactment of this subtitle that involve the real property at the Arsenal described in subparagraph (B).

(B) PROPERTY.—The property referred to in subparagraph (A) is—

(i) a parcel consisting of approximately 12.08 acres containing the South Adams County Water Treatment Plant and described in Department of the Army lease No. DACA 45-1-87-6121; and

(ii) a parcel consisting of approximately 63.04 acres containing a United States Postal Service facility and described in Department of the Army lease No. DACA 45-4-71-6185.

SEC. 2853. CONTINUATION OF JURISDICTION AND LIABILITY OF THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY FOR ENVIRONMENTAL REMEDIATION.

(a) JURISDICTION OVER CLEANUP AND REMEDIATION ACTIVITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the memorandum of understanding required under section 2852(a), the Secretary of the Army shall retain jurisdiction, authority, and control over the management of the real property at the Arsenal that is subject to the memorandum for purposes of conducting cleanup and remediation activities relating to environmental remediation of that property under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) and other applicable laws.

(2) MANAGEMENT OF REFUGE.—The management by the Secretary of the Interior of the refuge established pursuant to section 2854 shall be subject to any cleanup and remediation activities relating to the environmental remediation of the property carried out by the Secretary of the Army under the laws referred to in paragraph (1).

(b) RESPONSIBILITY TO CONDUCT CLEANUP AND REMEDIATION ACTIVITIES.—Nothing in this subtitle shall relieve, and no action may be taken under this subtitle to relieve, the Secretary of the Army or any non-Federal party from any obligation or other liability to carry out or provide for the environmental remediation of the Arsenal under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) and other applicable laws. Nothing in this subtitle is intended to restrict or define the level of cleanup on the Arsenal to be carried out under applicable laws.

(c) ADMINISTRATION OF UNITED STATES LIABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—All liability of the United States under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) and other environmental laws for existing conditions, both known and unknown, at the Arsenal as of the date of enactment of this subtitle shall be the sole responsibility of those Federal agencies that had operations on the Arsenal resulting in the introduction of hazardous substances before the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) AFTER FINAL TRANSFER.—After final transfer under section 2852(b), the Secretary of the Army shall retain environmental liability as set forth in this section and shall be accorded all easements and access as may be reasonably required to carry out obligations arising out of the liability.

(d) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out environmental remediation activities with respect to the Arsenal, the Secretary of the Army shall consult with the Secretary of the Interior to ensure that the remediation is carried out in a manner consistent with the purposes for which the refuge is established under section 2854(c).

SEC. 2854. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN ARSENAL NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall establish a national wildlife refuge, to be known as the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge, that consists of the real property required to be transferred under section 2852(b).

(2) NOTICE.—The Secretary of the Interior shall publish a notice of the establishment of the refuge in the Federal Register.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Interior shall manage the refuge in accordance with the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966 (16 U.S.C. 668dd et seq.) and other applicable laws.

(2) CONSULTATION.—In developing plans for the management of fish and wildlife at, and public use of, the refuge, the Secretary of the Interior shall—

(A) consult with the head of the Colorado Department of Natural Resources and the heads of units of local government adjacent to the refuge; and

(B) provide an opportunity for public comment on the plans.

(c) PURPOSES OF THE REFUGE.—The refuge shall be established for the purposes of—

(1) conserving and enhancing populations of fish, wildlife, and plants within the refuge, including populations of waterfowl, raptors, passerines, marsh and water birds, and species presently or in the future listed as threatened or endangered;

(2) providing maximum fish and wildlife oriented public uses at levels compatible with the conservation and enhancement of wildlife and wildlife habitat;

(3) providing opportunities for compatible scientific research;

(4) providing opportunities for compatible environmental and land use education;

(5) conserving and enhancing the land and water of the refuge in a manner that will conserve and enhance the natural diversity of fish, wildlife, plants, and their habitats;

(6) protecting and enhancing the quality of aquatic habitat within the refuge; and

(7) fulfilling international treaty obligations of the United States with respect to fish and wildlife and their habitats.

(d) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) CLEANUP AND REMEDIATION ACTIVITIES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The management of the refuge by the Secretary of the Interior shall be subject to those cleanup and remediation activities relating to the environmental remediation of the Arsenal that are carried out by the Secretary of the Army under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) and other applicable laws.

(B) EFFECT OF ESTABLISHMENT OF REFUGE.—The establishment of the refuge shall not limit, restrict, or modify in any way the ongoing environmental remediation conducted pursuant to applicable law at the Arsenal and surrounding areas, including—

(i) the substance or performance of any remedial investigation and feasibility study or endangerment assessment;

(ii) the contents and conclusions of any remedial investigation and feasibility study or endangerment assessment report; and

(iii) the selection of remedial actions for the Arsenal and surrounding areas.

(2) PROHIBITION AGAINST ANNEXATION.—Notwithstanding section 4(a)(2) of the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966 (16 U.S.C. 668dd(a)(2)), the Secretary of the Interior shall not permit the annexation of lands within the refuge by any unit of general local government.

(3) PROHIBITION AGAINST THROUGH ROADS.—Public roads may not be constructed through the refuge.

SEC. 2855. DISPOSAL OF CERTAIN REAL PROPERTY AT THE ARSENAL FOR COMMERCIAL, HIGHWAY, OR OTHER PUBLIC USE.

(a) PROPERTY DESIGNATED FOR DISPOSAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The areas of real property at the Arsenal that are described in paragraph (2) are designated for disposal under this section for commercial, highway, or other public use purposes.

(2) PROPERTY.—The areas referred to in paragraph (1) are—

(A) a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 815 acres located at the Arsenal, the approximate legal description of which is section 9, T3S–R67W, the W2W2 of section 4 and the W4E2W2 of section 4, T3S–R67W, and the SW4SW4 of section 33, the W4E2W2 of section 33, and the W2NW4 of section 33, T2S–R67W, except for—

(i) a parcel consisting of approximately 63.04 acres containing a United States Postal Service facility and described in Department of the Army lease No. DACA 45-4-71-6185, which shall be subject to section 2852; and

(ii) the water wells located in buildings 385, 386, and 387 at the Arsenal and associated facilities and easements necessary to operate and maintain the water wells, which shall be subject to section 2852; and

(B) to permit the widening of existing roads, a parcel of real property of not more than 100 feet inside the boundary of the Arsenal on—

(i) the Northwest side of the Arsenal adjacent to Colorado Highway No. 2;

(ii) the Northern side of the Arsenal adjacent to 96th Avenue; and

(iii) the Southern side of the Arsenal adjacent to 56th Avenue.

(b) DISPOSAL.—

(1) DETERMINATION.—Not later than 180 days after the completion of remedial design for the Arsenal, the Secretary of the Army, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Interior and after providing an opportunity for public comment, shall determine which parcels, if any, within the real property described in subsection (a)(2) shall be retained by the Secretary for cleanup and remediation measures.

(2) DISPOSAL.—After making the determination described in paragraph (1), the Secretary of the Army shall dispose of the remaining parcels in the manner provided for in this section. As cleanup and remediation measures on the retained parcels are completed, the Secretary of the Army shall dispose of the retained parcels in the same manner.

(3) NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary of the Army shall notify the State of Colorado and appropriate units of local government, including the City of Commerce City, Colorado, of the proposed and final determinations made under this subsection.

(c) TRANSFER FOR HIGHWAY PURPOSES.—The Secretary of the Army shall convey those parcels of real property described in subsection (a)(2)(B) and available for disposal under subsection (b) to the State or the appropriate unit of general local government at no cost in order to allow for the improvement of public roads in existence on the date of the enactment of this subtitle or for the provision of alternative means of transportation.

(d) TRANSFER FOR SALE.—The Secretary of the Army shall transfer to the Administrator of General Services those parcels of the area of real property described in subsection (a)(2)(A) and available for disposal under subsection (b). The transferred property shall be sold in advertised sales as surplus property under section 203 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 484), except that the provisions of such section relating to reduced-cost or no-cost transfers to other governmental entities shall not apply to the property.

(e) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) PERPETUAL RESTRICTIONS.—The disposal of real property under this section shall be subject to perpetual restrictions that—

(A) are attached to any deed to the property; and

(B) prohibit—

(i) the use of the property for residential or industrial purposes;

(ii) the use of groundwater located under, or surface water located on, the property as a source of potable water;

(iii) hunting and fishing on the property, except for hunting and fishing for nonconsumptive use subject to appropriate restrictions; and

(iv) agricultural use of the property, including all farming activities such as the raising of livestock, crops, or vegetables, but excluding agricultural practices used as part of environmental remediation activities or erosion control.

(2) DISPOSAL IN ACCORDANCE WITH ENVIRONMENTAL LAWS.—The disposal of property under this section shall be subject to the requirements of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.).

(f) USE OF PROCEEDS.—Notwithstanding section 204(h)(2) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 485(h)(2)), any amounts realized by the United States from the sale of property as described in subsection (d) shall be transferred to the Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service to be used, to the extent provided for in appropriations Acts, to supplement the funds otherwise available for the construction of a visitor and education center at the refuge.

Subtitle E—Miscellaneous

SEC. 2861. ENERGY SAVINGS AT MILITARY INSTALLATIONS.

Section 2865(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (A);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) may, subject to paragraph (4), authorize the Secretary of a military department having jurisdiction over a military installation to enter into agreements with gas or electric utilities to design and implement cost-effective demand and conservation incentive programs (including energy management services, facilities alterations, and the installation and maintenance of energy saving devices and technologies by the utilities) to address the requirements and circumstances of the installation."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4)(A) If an agreement under paragraph (3)(C) provides for a utility to advance financing costs for the design or implementation of a program referred to in that paragraph to be repayed by the United States, the cost of such advance may be recovered by the utility under terms no less favorable than those applicable to its most favored customer.

"(B) Subject to the availability of appropriations, repayment of costs advanced under subparagraph (A) shall be made from funds available to a military department for the purchase of utility services.

"(C) An agreement under paragraph (3)(C) shall provide that title to any energy-saving device or technology installed at a military installation pursuant to the agreement vest in the United States. Such title may vest at such time during the term of the agreement, or upon expiration of the agreement, as determined to be in the best interests of the United States.".

SEC. 2862. NAVY MINE COUNTERMEASURE PROGRAM.

(a) EVALUATION.—(1) Not later than December 31, 1992, the Secretary of the Navy shall submit to the congressional defense committees and the Comptroller General of the United States a detailed report on actions and plans of the Navy for consolidation and centralization of control over forces assigned to the mine countermeasure mission. The report shall evaluate all facets of the mine countermeasure mission, including—

(A) proposed location of vessels, helicopters, and explosive ordinance detachment units;

(B) proposed command structure;

(C) proposed training policies; and

(D) proposed vessel procurement policies.

(2) The Comptroller General shall evaluate the report submitted under paragraph (1) and, not later than 30 days after the date of the submittal of the report, submit to the congressional defense committees an evaluation of the report.

(b) EVALUATION OF HOMEPORTS FOR MINE COUNTERMEASURES PROGRAM.—The report under subsection (a)(1) shall include a detailed evaluation and analysis of the use of Ingleside, Texas, as the planned homeport for all mine warfare ships, and a comparison of various alternative homeports for mine warfare ships (including an evaluation of the use of bases on the Atlantic Coast and the Pacific Coast as homeports for such ships).

(c) SUSPENSION OF CERTAIN ACTIVITIES PENDING RECEIPT OF REPORT.—The Secretary of the Navy may not take any action to relocate the functions and personnel of the Mine Warfare Command, the Fleet Mine Warfare School, the Mine Warfare Training Center, or any mine countermeasure helicopter squadron until 90 days after the date of the submittal of the report required under subsection (a)(1).

SEC. 2863. PROHIBITION ON EXPANSION OF CERTAIN MILITARY OPERATIONS AREAS.

In designating expanded military operations areas for training operations of aircraft of the Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve under training airspace modification initiatives implemented after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Air Force shall provide for such military operations areas within the geographic boundaries of areas that have been approved for tactical training on such date.

Project 92-D-126, replace emergency notification systems, various locations, $10,900,000.

Project 91-D-127, criticality alarm and production annunciation utility replacement, Rocky Flats Plant, Golden, Colorado, $6,300,000.

Project 90-D-102, nuclear weapons research, development, and testing facilities revitalization, Phase III, various locations, $50,120,000.

Project 90-D-126, environmental, safety, and health enhancements, various locations, $9,200,000.

Project 88-D-104, safeguards and security upgrade, Phase II, Los Alamos National Laboratory, Los Alamos, New Mexico, $1,000,000.

Project 88-D-106, nuclear weapons research, development, and testing facilities revitalization, Phase II, various locations, $34,400,000.

Project 88-D-122, facilities capability assurance program, various locations, $87,100,000.

Project 86-D-130, tritium loading facility replacement, Savannah River Plant, South Carolina, $4,865,000.

Project 85-D-105, combined device assembly facility, Nevada Test Site, Nevada, $3,610,000.

(c) CAPITAL EQUIPMENT.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for capital equipment not related to construction for weapons activities that is necessary for national security programs in the amount of $219,535,000.

(d) ADJUSTMENTS.—The total amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to this section is the sum of the amounts specified in subsections (a) through (c) reduced by—

(1) $73,000,000 for reductions in weapons requirements;

(2) $78,200,000 for prior year balances; and

(3) $9,350,000 for departmental administration.

SEC. 3102. NEW PRODUCTION REACTORS.

(a) OPERATING EXPENSES.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for operating expenses incurred in carrying out new production reactor activities necessary for national security programs in the amount of $141,510,000.

(b) PLANT PROJECTS.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for plant projects (including maintenance, restoration, planning, construction, acquisition, modification of facilities, and the continuation of projects authorized in prior years, and land acquisition related thereto) that are necessary for national security programs and are associated with new production reactor activities for which appropriations are authorized under subsection (a), as follows:

Project 88-D-154, new production reactor capacity, various locations, $149,290,000.

(c) CAPITAL EQUIPMENT.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for capital equipment not related to construction for new production reactor activities that is necessary for national security programs in the amount of $6,000,000.

(d) ADJUSTMENTS FOR SAVINGS.—The total amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to this section is the sum of the amounts specified in subsections (a) through (c) reduced by—

(1) $125,000,000 for prior year balances; and

(2) $1,722,000 for departmental administration.

SEC. 3103. ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION AND WASTE MANAGEMENT.

(a) OPERATING EXPENSES.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for operating expenses incurred in carrying out environmental restoration and waste management activities necessary for national security programs in the amount of $4,108,452,000, to be allocated as follows:

(1) For corrective activities—environment, $2,431,000.

(2) For corrective activities—defense programs, $7,386,000.

(3) For environmental restoration, $1,448,427,000.

(4) For waste management, $2,252,037,000.

(5) For technology development, $330,700,000.

(6) For transportation management, $19,335,000.

(7) For program direction, $48,136,000.

(b) PLANT PROJECTS.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for plant projects (including maintenance, restoration, planning, construction, acquisition, modification of facilities, and the continuation of projects authorized in prior years, and land acquisition related thereto) that are necessary for national security programs and are associated with environmental restoration and waste management activities for which appropriations are authorized under subsection (a), as follows:

Project GPD-171, general plant projects, various locations, $83,285,000.

Project 93-D-172, electrical upgrade, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $1,000,000.

Project 93-D-174, plant drain waste water treatment upgrades, Y-12 Plant, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $1,800,000.

Project 93-D-175, industrial waste compaction facility, Y-12 Plant, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $2,200,000.

Project 93-D-176, Oak Ridge reservation storage facility, K-25, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $4,000,000.

Project 93-D-177, disposal of K-1515 sanitary water treatment plant waste, K-125, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $1,500,000.

Project 93-D-178, building 374 liquid waste treatment facility, Rocky Flats Plant, Golden, Colorado, $2,700,000.

Project 93-D-180, environmental monitoring-RCRA groundwater monitoring installation, Richland, Washington, $8,700,000.

Project 93-D-181, radioactive liquid waste line replacement, Richland, Washington, $350,000.

Project 93-D-182, replacement of cross-site transfer system, Richland, Washington, $4,495,000.

Project 93-D-183, multi-tank waste storage facility, Richland, Washington, $10,300,000.

Project 93-D-184, 325 facility compliance/renovation, Richland, Washington, $1,500,000.

Project 93-D-185, landlord program safety compliance, Phase II, Richland, Washington, $849,000.

Project 93-D-186, 200 area unsecured core area fabrication shop, Richland, Washington, $1,000,000.

Project 93-D-187, high-level waste removal from filled waste tanks, Savannah River, South Carolina, $2,000,000.

Project 93-D-188, new sanitary landfill, Savannah River, South Carolina, $2,000,000.

Project 92-D-171, mixed waste receiving and storage facility, Los Alamos National Laboratory, Los Alamos, New Mexico, $3,000,000.

Project 92-D-172, hazardous waste treatment and processing facility, Pantex Plant, Amarillo, Texas, $1,900,000.

Project 92-D-173, nitrogen oxide abatement facility, Idaho Chemical Processing Plant, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $7,000,000.

Project 92-D-177, tank 101-AZ waste retrieval system, Richland, Washington, $3,000,000.

Project 92-D-180, inter-area line upgrade, Savannah River, South Carolina, $3,170,000.

Project 92-D-181, fire and life safety improvements, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $8,000,000.

Project 92-D-182, sewer system upgrade, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $3,700,000.

Project 92-D-183, transportation complex, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $5,860,000.

Project 92-D-184, Hanford infrastructure underground storage tanks, Richland, Washington, $3,700,000.

Project 92-D-185, road, ground, and lighting safety improvements, 300/1100 areas, Richland, Washington, $6,500,000.

Project 92-D-187, 300 area electrical distribution, conversion, and safety improvements, Phase II, Richland, Washington, $1,724,000.

Project 92-D-188, waste management, ES&H, and compliance activities, various locations, $1,000,000.

Project 92-D-402, sanitary sewer system rehabilitation, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, California, $5,500,000.

Project 92-D-403, tank upgrades project, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, California, $10,100,000.

Project 91-EM-100, environmental and molecular sciences laboratory, Richland, Washington, $28,500,000.

Project 91-D-171, waste receiving and processing facility, module 1, Richland, Washington, $21,800,000.

Project 91-D-172, high-level waste tank farm replacement, Idaho Chemical Processing Plant, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $57,530,000.

Project 91–D–173, hazardous low-level waste processing tanks, Savannah River, South Carolina, $15,300,000.

Project 91–D–175, 300 area electrical distribution, conversion, and safety improvements, Phase I, Richland, Washington, $981,000.

Project 90–D–103 environmental, safety, and health improvements, various locations, Los Alamos National Laboratory, Los Alamos, New Mexico, $6,315,000.

Project 90–D–174, decontamination laundry facility, Richland, Washington, $7,442,000.

Project 90–D–175, landlord program safety compliance–I, Richland, Washington, $4,753,000.

Project 90–D–176, transuranic (TRU) waste facility, Savannah River, South Carolina, $5,000,000.

Project 90–D–177, RWMC transuranic (TRU) waste characterization and storage facility, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $41,700,000.

Project 89–D–122, production waste storage facilities, Y–12 Plant, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $4,200,000.

Project 89–D–172, Hanford environmental compliance, Richland, Washington, $44,950,000.

Project 89–D–173, tank farm ventilation upgrade, Richland, Washington, $7,000,000.

Project 89–D–174, replacement high-level waste evaporator, Savannah River, South Carolina, $15,795,000.

Project 89–D–175, hazardous waste/mixed waste disposal facility, Savannah River, South Carolina, $7,900,000.

Project 88–D–173, Hanford waste vitrification plant, Richland, Washington, $81,471,000.

Project 87–D–181, diversion box and pump pit containment buildings, Savannah River, South Carolina, $1,904,000.

Project 87–D–180, burial ground expansion, Savannah River, South Carolina, $8,800,000.

Project 86–D–103, decontamination and waste treatment facility, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, California, $2,755,000.

Project 83–D–148, nonradioactive hazardous waste management, Savannah River, South Carolina, $10,330,000.

Project 81–T–105, defense waste processing facility, Savannah River, South Carolina, $32,600,000.

(c) CAPITAL EQUIPMENT.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for capital equipment not related to construction for environmental restoration and waste management activities that is necessary for national security programs in the amount of $153,198,000, to be allocated as follows:

(1) For corrective activities—defense programs, $1,120,000.

(2) For waste management, $132,749,000.

(3) For technology development, $16,200,000.

(4) For transportation management, $465,000.

(5) For program direction, $2,664,000.

(d) ADJUSTMENTS FOR SAVINGS.—The total amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to this section is the sum of the amounts specified in subsections (a) through (c) reduced by $13,137,000 for program savings and departmental administration.

(e) USE OF FUNDS.—From funds authorized to be appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) to the Department of Energy for environmental restoration and waste management activities, the Secretary of Energy may reimburse the cities of Westminster, Broomfield, Thornton, and Northglen, in the State of Colorado, $40,000,000 for the cost of implementing water management programs. Reimbursements for the water management programs shall not be considered a major Federal action for purposes of 102(2) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)).

SEC. 3104. DEFENSE MATERIALS PRODUCTION AND OTHER DEFENSE PROGRAMS.

(a) OPERATING EXPENSES.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for operating expenses incurred in carrying out nuclear materials production and other defense programs necessary for national security programs as follows:

(1) For defense materials production, $1,375,475,000.

(2) For verification and control technology, $250,215,000.

(3) For nuclear safeguards and security, $96,837,000.

(4) For security investigations, $58,289,000.

(5) For Office of Security evaluations, $5,150,000.

(6) For nuclear safety, $25,490,000.

(7) For naval reactors development, including enrichment materials, $711,400,000.

(8) For education programs, $22,400,000.

(b) PLANT PROJECTS.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for plant projects (including maintenance, restoration, planning, construction, acquisition, modification of facilities, and the continuation of projects authorized in prior years, and land acquisition related thereto) that are necessary for national security programs and are associated with new nuclear materials production activities and other defense programs for which appropriations are authorized under subsection (a), as follows:

(1) For defense materials production:

Project GPD–146, general plant projects, various locations, $32,260.

Project 93–D–147, domestic water system upgrade, Phase I, Savannah River, South Carolina, $1,000,000.

Project 93–D–148, replace high-level drain lines, Savannah River, South Carolina, $800,000.

Project 93–D–152, environmental modification for production facilities, Savannah River, South Carolina, $2,000,000.

Project 93–D–153, uranium recovery hydrogen fluoride system upgrade, Y–12 Plant, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $2,400,000.

Project 92–D–140, F and H canyon exhaust upgrades, Savannah River, South Carolina, $12,500,000.

Project 92–D–141, reactor seismic improvement, Savannah River, South Carolina, $5,000,000.

Project 92–D–142, nuclear material processing training center, Savannah River, South Carolina, $11,700,000.

Project 92–D–143, health protection instrument calibration facility, Savannah River, South Carolina, $8,000,000.

Project 92–D–150, operations support facilities, Savannah River, South Carolina, $4,100,000.

Project 92–D–153, engineering support facility, Savannah River, South Carolina, $3,500,000.

Project 90–D–141, Idaho chemical processing plant fire protection, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $1,553,000.

Project 90–D–149, plantwide fire protection, Phases I and II, Savannah River, South Carolina, $39,685,000.

Project 90–D–150, reactor safety assurance, Phases I, II, and III, Savannah River, South Carolina, $4,210,000.

Project 89–D–140, additional separations safeguards, Savannah River, South Carolina, $13,104,000.

Project 89–D–148, improved reactor confinement system, Savannah River, South Carolina, $4,240,000.

Project 86–D–149, productivity retention program, Phases I, II, III, IV, V, and VI, various locations, $11,651,000.

Project 86–D–152, reactor electrical distribution system, Savannah River, South Carolina, $5,647,000.

Project 85–D–145, fuel production facility, Savannah River Site, South Carolina, $17,000,000.

(2) For verification and control technology:

Project 90–D–186, center for national security and arms control, Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, New Mexico, $10,000,000.

(3) For nuclear safeguards and security:

Project GPD–186, general plant projects, Central Training Academy, Albuquerque, New Mexico, $2,000,000.

(4) For naval reactors development:

Project GPN–101, general plant projects, various locations, $8,500,000.

Project 93–D–200, engineering services facilities, Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory, Niskayuna, New York, $2,200,000.

Project 92–D–200, laboratories facilities upgrades, various locations, $7,500,000.

Project 90–N–102, expended core facility dry cell project, Naval Reactors Facility, Idaho, $13,600,000.

Project 90–N–103, advanced test reactor off-gas treatment system, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, $500,000.

Project 90–N–104, facilities renovation, Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory, Niskayuna, New York, $2,900,000.

(c) CAPITAL EQUIPMENT.—Funds are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for capital equipment not related to construction for nuclear materials production and other defense programs that is necessary for national security programs as follows:

(1) For defense materials production, $80,900,000.

(2) For verification and control technology, $11,500,000.

(3) For nuclear safeguards and security, $5,327,000.

(4) For naval reactors development, $60,400,000.

(d) ADJUSTMENTS.—The total amount that may be appropriated pursuant to this section is the sum of the amounts specified in subsections (a) through (c) reduced by—

(1) $400,000,000 for recovery of overpayment to the Savannah River Pension Fund;

(2) $27,082,000 for anticipated savings;

(3) $70,000,000 for reductions in production requirements; and

(4) $2,341,000 for departmental administration.

SEC. 3105. FUNDING USES AND LIMITATIONS.

(a) INERTIAL CONFINEMENT FUSION.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for operating expenses and plant and capital equipment, $220,300,000 shall be available for the defense inertial confinement fusion program.

(b) FIRE PROTECTION AND COOLING OR REFRIGERATION SYSTEMS.—None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 may be obligated for the design, purchase, or installation of any fire protection system or cooling or refrigeration system that utilizes Class I chlorofluorocarbons (as listed under section 602(a) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C.

7671a(a)) unless the Secretary of Energy determines that an alternative system meeting the operational requirements of the Department of Energy is not commercially available.

(c) RECONFIGURATION OF NONNUCLEAR ACTIVITIES.—(1) None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of Energy for fiscal year 1993 may be obligated for the implementation of the reconfiguration of any nonnuclear activities of the Department of Energy until—

(A) the Secretary of Energy submits a report to the congressional defense committees that—

(i) contains an analysis of the projected costs and benefits of the proposed reconfiguration and any proposed alternatives to such reconfiguration (including the alternative of not reconfiguring such activities); and

(ii) sets forth an analysis of (I) the lifecycle costs and benefits of the reconfiguration, and (II) the discounted cash flow of such proposed alternatives;

(B) the Secretary certifies to the congressional defense committees that a discounted cash flow analysis demonstrates that the closure of each Department of Energy nonnuclear defense facility or activity identified for closure and each transfer of a nonnuclear activity is cost effective;

(C) the Secretary certifies to the congressional defense committees that the reconfiguration of nonnuclear activities of the Department of Energy will not increase technological, environmental, safety, or health risks relating to the operation of the nuclear weapons facilities of the Department; and

(D) 60 days have elapsed after the later of—

(i) the date of the submittal of the report under subparagraph (A); and

(ii) the date of the certification under subparagraph (B).

(2) This subsection may not be construed to prohibit the obligation of funds for the purpose of conducting any study or analysis that the Secretary determines necessary for assessing the cost-effectiveness, practicability, or feasibility of reconfiguring the activities of the Department of Energy to nonnuclear purposes.

Subtitle B—Recurring General Provisions

SEC. 3121. REPROGRAMMING.

(a) NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this title—

(A) no amount appropriated pursuant to this title may be used for any program in excess of the lesser of—

(i) 105 percent of the amount authorized for that program by this title; or

(ii) $10,000,000 more than the amount authorized for that program by this title; and

(B) no amount appropriated pursuant to this title may be used for any program which has not been presented to, or requested of, the Congress.

(2) An action described in paragraph (1) may not be taken until—

(A) the Secretary of Energy has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report containing a full and complete statement of the action proposed to be taken and the facts and circumstances relied upon in support of such proposed action; and

(B) a period of 30 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received by the committees.

(3) In the computation of the 30-day period under paragraph (2), there shall be excluded any day on which either House of Congress is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 calendar days to a day certain.

(b) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OBLIGATED.—In no event may the total amount of funds obligated pursuant to this title exceed the total amount authorized to be appropriated by this title.

SEC. 3122. LIMITS ON GENERAL PLANT PROJECTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Energy may carry out any construction project under the general plant projects provisions authorized by this title if the total estimated cost of the construction project does not exceed $1,200,000.

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—If, at any time during the construction of any general plant project authorized by this title, the estimated cost of the project is revised because of unforeseen cost variations and the revised cost of the project exceeds $1,200,000, the Secretary shall immediately furnish a complete report to the congressional defense committees explaining the reasons for the cost variation.

SEC. 3123. LIMITS ON CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), construction on a construction project may not be started or additional obligations incurred in connection with the project above the total estimated cost, whenever the current estimated cost of the construction project, which is authorized by sections 3101, 3102, 3103, and 3104, or which is in support of national security programs of the Department of Energy and was authorized by any previous Act, exceeds by more than 25 percent the higher of—

(A) the amount authorized for the project; or

(B) the amount of the total estimated cost for the project as shown in the most recent budget justification data submitted to Congress.

(2) An action described in paragraph (1) may be taken if—

(A) the Secretary of Energy has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report on the actions and the circumstances making such actions necessary; and

(B) a period of 30 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received by the committees.

(3) In the computation of the 30-day period under paragraph (2), there shall be excluded any day on which either House of Congress is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 calendar days to a day certain.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any construction project which has a current estimated cost of less than $5,000,000.

SEC. 3124. FUND TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

Funds appropriated pursuant to this title may be transferred to other agencies of Government for the performance of the work for which the funds were appropriated, and funds so transferred may be merged with the appropriations of the agency to which the funds are transferred.

SEC. 3125. AUTHORITY FOR CONSTRUCTION DESIGN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Within the amounts authorized by this title for plant engineering and design, the Secretary of Energy may carry out advance planning and construction design (including architectural and engineering services) in connection with any proposed construction project if the total estimated cost for such planning and design does not exceed $2,000,000.

(2) In the case of any project in which the total estimated cost for advance planning and design exceeds $300,000, the Secretary shall notify the congressional defense committees in writing of the details of such project at least 30 days before any funds are obligated for design services for such project.

(b) SPECIFIC AUTHORITY REQUIRED.—In any case in which the total estimated cost for advance planning and construction design in connection with any construction project exceeds $2,000,000, funds for such planning and design must be specifically authorized by law.

SEC. 3126. AUTHORITY FOR EMERGENCY PLANNING, DESIGN, AND CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITIES.

(a) AUTHORITY.—In addition to funds authorized to be appropriated for advance planning and construction design under sections 3101, 3102, 3103, and 3104, the Secretary of Energy may use any other funds available to the Department of Energy to perform planning, design, and construction activities for any Department of Energy defense activity construction project that, as determined by the Secretary, must proceed expeditiously in order to protect public health and safety, meet the needs of national defense, or protect property.

(b) LIMITATION.—The Secretary may not exercise the authority under subsection (a) in the case of any construction project until the Secretary has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report on the activities that the Secretary intends to carry out under this section and the circumstances making such activities necessary.

(c) SPECIFIC AUTHORITY.—The requirement of section 3125(b) does not apply to emergency planning, design, and construction activities conducted under this section.

(d) REPORT.—The Secretary of Energy shall promptly report to the congressional defense committees any exercise of authority under this section.

SEC. 3127. FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR ALL NATIONAL SECURITY PROGRAMS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.

Subject to the provisions of appropriation Acts and section 3121, amounts appropriated pursuant to this title for management and support activities and for general plant projects are available for use, when necessary, in connection with all national security programs of the Department of Energy.

SEC. 3128. AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.

When so specified in an appropriation Act, amounts appropriated for operating expenses, plant, or capital equipment may remain available until expended.

Subtitle C—Miscellaneous

SEC. 3131. USE OF FUNDS FOR PAYMENT OF PENALTY ASSESSED AGAINST FERNALD ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PROJECT.

The Secretary of Energy may pay to the Environmental Protection Agency, from funds appropriated to the Department of Energy for environmental restoration and waste management activities pursuant to section 3103, a stipulated civil penalty in the amount of $100,000 assessed under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) against the Fernald Environmental Management Project.

SEC. 3132. PROHIBITION ON ENTRY INTO CERTAIN CONTRACTS FOR ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION AND WASTE MANAGEMENT.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Energy may not enter into a contract or other agreement for the performance of environmental restoration or waste management activities with any person who has been convicted of, has pleaded guilty to, or has otherwise been determined by a court of competent jurisdiction to have committed a criminal violation in connection with activities at a Department of Energy facility of any of the following laws:

(1) The Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.).

(2) The Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6901 et seq.).

(3) The Safe Drinking Water Act (42 U.S.C. 300f et seq.).

SEC. 3133. REQUIREMENT OF ANNUAL AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FUNDS FOR CERTAIN DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NATIONAL SECURITY ACTIVITIES.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Chapter 9 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2121 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 93. ANNUAL AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(a) No funds may be appropriated for any fiscal year to or for the use of the Department of Energy for national security programs of the Department, and no funds appropriated to or for the use of the Department of Energy for such programs may be obligated or expended for—

"(1) procurement of goods or services,

"(2) research, development, test or evaluation, or procurement or production related thereto,

"(3) nuclear weapons testing,

"(4) construction,

"(5) operation and maintenance of any defense nuclear facility, or

"(6) operation of the Department of Energy central office, unless funds therefor have been specifically authorized by law.

"(b) In this section, the term 'defense nuclear facility' means—

"(1) a production or utilization facility under the control or jurisdiction of the Secretary of Energy that is operated for national security purposes, other than a facility that does not conduct atomic energy defense activities;

"(2) a nuclear waste storage or disposal facility under the control or jurisdiction of the Secretary; and

"(3) a nuclear weapons research facility under the control or jurisdiction of the Secretary (including the Lawrence Livermore, Los Alamos, and Sandia National Laboratories).".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 92 the following new item:

"Sec. 93. Annual authorization of appropriations.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply to fiscal years after fiscal year 1992.

SEC. 3134. FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR OVERSIGHT.

Of the funds available to the Secretary of Energy for fiscal year 1993 for program management, including travel, $150,000 shall be available only for the purposes set forth in section 1108(g) of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 3135. DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY CITIZEN ADVISORY GROUPS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Energy shall establish a citizen advisory group for each Department of Energy defense nuclear facility.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—Each advisory group shall be composed of the following members:

(1) Five or more members appointed by the Secretary of Energy, of whom—

(A) at least one shall be an individual who lives in a community near the facility for which the advisory group is established;

(B) at least one shall be a member of an affected Indian tribe;

(C) at least one shall be a representative of a nationally recognized environmental organization;

(D) at least one shall be a representative of an environmental organization from the area in which the facility is located; and

(E) at least one shall be an individual having technical expertise in environmental restoration, waste management, or health care matters related to such restoration or waste management.

(2) Two members appointed by the Governor of the State in which the facility is located.

(3) Two members appointed by the Governor of any other State which is located within 50 miles of the facility.

(c) DUTIES.—Each advisory group shall, with respect to the Department of Energy defense nuclear facility for which it is established—

(1) review and evaluate the performance by the Department of Energy of environmental restoration, waste management, and health-related activities at the facility, including the adherence of the Department with any milestones or deadlines with respect to such activities that were agreed to by the Secretary of Energy in interagency agreements entered into with other Federal agencies;

(2) review and evaluate the adequacy of any oversight activities carried out with respect to the facility by the Environmental Protection Agency, the environmental agency of the State in which the facility is located, and other appropriate Federal and State agencies, including the adequacy of—

(A) any actions taken by such agencies to ensure the adherence of the Department of Energy with any milestones or deadlines that were agreed to by the Secretary in interagency agreements entered into with other Federal agencies;

(B) any actions taken by appropriate Federal and State agencies to ensure compliance by the Department of Energy with Federal or State laws requiring the performance of relevant health-related activities at the facility; and

(C) any existing or on-going health-related activities undertaken by the Department of Energy and other Federal and State agencies with respect to the facility;

(3) provide, at least once annually, to the Secretary of Energy, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the heads of other appropriate Federal and State agencies—

(A) an evaluation of the policy and technical considerations of any significant decisions made by such agencies with respect to environmental restoration, waste management, and health-related activities at the facility, including decisions on the selection of waste management treatment technology, the selection of cleanup remedies for environmental restoration, and the design and conduct of health assessments; and

(B) recommendations on policy and technical matters with respect to the facility based upon the evaluation conducted under subparagraph (A);

(4) provide to the Secretary of Energy, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Governor of the State in which the facility is located the views of persons in communities and regions located near, or effected by, the facility on the environmental restoration, waste management, and health activities conducted at the facility;

(5) submit annually to the Governor of the State in which the facility is located and to Congress a report on the activities of the advisory group during the preceding year, including the findings, assessments, and conclusions of the advisory group, and any recommendations of the advisory group on policy or technical matters based upon such findings, assessments, and conclusions; and

(6) perform any other activity the advisory group considers necessary to carry out its duties under this section.

(d) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary of Energy shall provide funding to each advisory group to permit the group to hire the technical, advisory, and support staff that the group determines necessary to carry out its duties under this section. The amount of such funding in any year may not exceed $250,000 per group.

(e) FUNDING.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated in fiscal year 1993 for the Department of Energy for national security programs, $5,000,000 may be used to carry out this section.

(f) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "Department of Energy defense nuclear facility" means—

(1) a production or utilization facility under the control or jurisdiction of the Secretary of Energy that is operated for national security purposes, other than a facility that does not conduct atomic energy defense activities;

(2) a nuclear waste storage or disposal facility under the control or jurisdiction of the Secretary; and

(3) a nuclear weapons research facility under the control or jurisdiction of the Secretary (including the Lawrence Livermore, Los Alamos, and Sandia National Laboratories).

SEC. 3136. NUCLEAR WEAPONS COUNCIL MEMBERSHIP.

Section 179(a)(1) title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.".

SEC. 3137. REVISED OFFSET FOR PAYMENTS FOR INJURIES BELIEVED TO ARISE OUT OF ATOMIC WEAPONS TESTING PROGRAM.

(a) REVISED OFFSET.—Section 6(c)(2)(B) of the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (42 U.S.C. 2210 note) is amended by striking out the following: "The amount of the offset under this subparagraph with respect to payments described in clauses (i) and (ii) shall be the actuarial present value of such payments.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to claims filed pursuant to section 4(a) of the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3138. REPORTS ON THE DEVELOPMENT OF NEW PRODUCTION REACTOR CAPACITY.

(a) REPORT BY THE SECRETARY OF ENERGY.—(1) The Secretary of Energy shall annually submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the new production reactor program of the Department of Energy.

(2) The annual report shall include the following:

(A) An estimate of the date by which new production reactor capacity will be necessary in order to maintain the active and reserve stockpile of nuclear weapons of the United States.

(B) An estimate of the date on which construction of such capacity should begin in order to maintain the active and reserve stockpile.

(C) An assessment of the technical adequacy of the methods available for the production of tritium, including an assessment of the risk that each method may fail to produce tritium on a reliable basis within the period necessary for meeting the requirements of the United States.

(D) An assessment of the capability of the potential industrial suppliers of new production reactor capacity to design and construct such capacity by the date estimated pursuant to subparagraph (A).

(3)(A) The Secretary shall submit the annual report in 1993 and each year thereafter until the construction of the new production reactor is completed. The Secretary shall submit the report not later than 60 days after the date on which the President submits the budget to Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code.

(b) PROGRAM OFFICE.—The Secretary shall maintain a program office for the new production reactor program until the new production reactor capacity becomes operational.

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the technology chosen for new production reactor capacity shall be the technology that has the highest probability of successfully sustaining operation, the lowest risk of operational failure, and the lowest cost of construction and operation (including any revenues accruing to the United States from such operation).

SEC. 3139. TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER.

(a) EXPEDITED REVIEW OF AGREEMENTS WITH SMALL BUSINESSES.—Section 12(c)(5) of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a(c)(5)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C)(i), by striking out "Any agency" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subparagraph (D), any agency"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D)(i) Any non-Federal entity that operates a laboratory pursuant to a contract with a Federal agency shall submit to the head of the agency any cooperative research and development agreement that the entity proposes to enter into with a small business firm and the joint work statement required with respect to that agreement.

"(ii) A Federal agency that receives a proposed agreement and joint work statement under clause (i) shall review and approve, request specific modifications to, or disapprove the proposed agreement and joint work statement within 30 days after such submission. The agreement and joint work statement shall provide a 30-day period within which such action must be taken beginning on the date of the submittal of the agreement and joint work statement to the head of the agency.

"(iii) In any case in which an agency which has contracted with an entity referred to in clause (i) disapproves or requests the modification of a cooperative research and development agreement or joint work statement submitted under that clause, the agency shall transmit a written explanation of such disapproval or modification to the head of the laboratory concerned.".

(b) TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER TO SMALL BUSINESSES.—(1) The Secretary of Energy shall establish a program to facilitate and encourage the transfer of technology to small businesses and shall issue guidelines relating to the program not later than May 1, 1993.

(2) For the purposes of this subsection, the term "small business" means a business concern that meets the applicable size standards prescribed pursuant to section 3(a) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632(a)).

(c) PROVISION OF INFORMATION ON COOPERATIVE RESEARCH.—The Secretary of Energy and the Secretary of Defense shall provide appropriate federally funded technology transfer centers with information on cooperative research and development agreements or other arrangements entered into with respect to laboratories of the Department of Energy and other departments and agencies of the Federal Government. The Secretaries shall provide such information within 60 days after the date on which such agreements are received and within 60 days after such agreements become effective.

(d) FUNDING.—Funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy and made available for laboratory directed research and development shall be available for cooperative research and development agreements or other arrangements applicable to laboratories of the Department of Energy and other departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

SEC. 3140. EXPANSION OF AUTHORITY TO LOAN PERSONNEL AND FACILITIES.

(a) AUTHORITY TO LOAN PERSONNEL.—Subsection (a)(1) of section 1434 of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1989 (Public Law 100-456; 102 Stat. 2074) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after "(1)";

(2) in the first sentence, by striking out "or construction management at the Hanford Reservation, Washington," and all that follows through the period, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "or construction management—

"(i) at the Hanford Reservation, Washington, to loan personnel in accordance with this section to the community development organization known as the Tri City Industrial Development Council serving Benton and Franklin Counties, Washington; and

"(ii) at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho, to loan personnel in accordance with this section to any community-based organization."; and

(3) by striking out the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(B) Any loan under subparagraph (A) shall be for the purpose of assisting in the diversification of the local economy by reducing reliance by local communities on national security programs at the Hanford Reservation and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.".

(b) FUNDING.—Subsection (a)(3) of such section is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "In each of fiscal years 1993 and 1994, the Secretary of Energy may not obligate or expend for loans of personnel under this section more than $250,000 with respect to the Hanford Reservation and more than $250,000 with respect to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.".

(c) AUTHORITY TO LOAN FACILITIES.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended by inserting "or the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Idaho," after "Hanford Reservation, Washington,".

(d) DURATION OF PROGRAM.—Subsection (c) of such section is amended by striking out "September 30, 1992" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1994".

Subtitle D—Defense Nuclear Work Force Restructuring

SEC. 3151. DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY DEFENSE NUCLEAR FACILITIES WORK FORCE RESTRUCTURING PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Subject to subsections (b) through (e) and not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Energy shall develop, issue, and commence implementation of a plan for the restructuring of the employee work force at Department of Energy defense nuclear facilities described in paragraph (2).

(2) The plan shall apply to—

(A) each Department of Energy defense nuclear facility the primary mission of which changes from weapons production and related activities to environmental restoration and waste management; and

(B) each Department of Energy defense nuclear facility that is scheduled for closure.

(b) PLAN REQUIREMENTS.—In developing and implementing the plan referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary shall provide—

(1) that any changes in the functions or missions of facilities referred to in subsection (a)(2)(A) and any closures of facilities referred to in subsection (a)(2)(B) be carried out by means that minimize the economic effects of such changes or closures on Department of Energy employees at such facilities, including the provision of notice of such changes or closures not later than 120 days before the commencement of such changes or closures to such employees and the communities in which such facilities are located and the use of retraining, early retirement, attrition, and other similar means to minimize the number of terminations of employment that result from such changes or closures;

(2) that the employees whose employment in positions at such facilities will be terminated as a result of the restructuring plan receive first preference in any hiring by the Department of Energy (consistent with applicable employment seniority plans or practices of the Department of Energy and with section 3152 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101-189; 103 Stat. 1682)) after the issuance of the plan;

(3) that such employees be retrained as necessary and in a timely fashion for work in environmental restoration and waste management activities at such facilities or other facilities of the Department of Energy;

(4) that the Department of Energy provide relocation assistance to such employees who are transferred to other Department of Energy facilities as a result of the plan;

(5) that, in the case of any employee who expresses in writing an intent to seek employment outside the Department of Energy, the Department of Energy provide appropriate employment retraining, education, and reemployment assistance (including employment placement assistance) to such employee before the terminations of the employee's employment with the Department of Energy; and

(6) that the Department of Energy provide local impact assistance to communities that are affected by the restructuring plan and coordinate the provision of such assistance with—

(A) programs carried out by the Department of Labor pursuant to the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.);

(B) programs carried out pursuant to the Defense Economic Adjustment, Diversification, Conversion, and Stabilization Act of 1990 (division D of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2391 note)); and

(C) programs carried out by the Department of Commerce pursuant to title IX of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3241 et seq.).

(c) PLAN UPDATES.—Not later than 1 year after issuing the plan referred to in subsection (a) and on an annual basis thereafter, the Secretary shall issue an update of the plan. Each updated plan under this subsection shall—

(1) satisfy the requirements set forth in subsection (b), taking into account any changes in the function or mission of the Department of Energy defense nuclear facilities and any other changes in circumstances that the Secretary determines to be relevant;

(2) contain an evaluation by the Secretary of the implementation of the plan during the year preceding the report; and

(3) contain such other information and provide for such other matters as the Secretary determines to be relevant.

(d) CONSULTATION.—(1) In developing the plan referred to in subsection (a) and any updates of the plan under subsection (c), the Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of Labor, labor organizations or other appropriate representatives of local and national collective-bargaining units of Department of Energy employees, appropriate representatives of departments and agencies of State and local governments, appropriate representatives of State and local institutions of higher education, and appropriate representatives of community groups in communities affected by the restructuring plan.

(2) The Secretary shall determine appropriate representatives of the units, governments, institutions, and groups referred to in paragraph (1).

(e) SUBMITTAL TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit the plan referred to in subsection (a) to Congress.

SEC. 3152. PROGRAM TO MONITOR DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY WORKERS EXPOSED TO HAZARDOUS AND RADIOACTIVE SUBSTANCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Energy shall establish and carry out a program for the identification and on-going medical evaluation of current and former Department of Energy employees who are subject to significant health risks as a result of the exposure of such employees to hazardous or radioactive substances during such employment.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION OF PROGRAM.—(1) The Secretary shall, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Health and Human Services, issue regulations to implement the program. Such regulations shall permit the Secretary of Energy, to the extent practicable, to—

(A) identify the hazardous substances and radioactive substances to which current and former Department of Energy employees may have been exposed as a result of such employment;

(B) determine the levels of exposure to such substances that present such employees with significant health risks;
